$25,000 Fund For Engineering Fellowship

The American Institute of Electrical Engineers announced today that the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company has set up a $25,000 trust fund to provide graduate fellowships in electrical engineering.

Known as the Charles LeGeyt Fortescue Fellowship, the educational trust was established as a memorial to Doctor Fortescue "in recognition of his valuable contributions to the electric power industry." His outstanding achievements were his development of symmetrical co-ordinates, his work on transformer design, and his theories of lightning behavior.

Doctor Fortescue was graduated from Queens University, Kingston, Ontario, in 1898, as the school's first electrical engineer. Prior to his death December 4, 1936, he was the recipient of 185 patents for electrical inventions achieved during his thirty-eight-year association with the Westinghouse Company.

Beginning in 1940, the Fellowship Committee of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers will annually select the "most promising candidates" to receive the Fortescue awards, which provide a minimum allowance of $500 each. The committee is also empowered to grant additional allowances. The 1940 awards will be made before April 1.

Prof. D. F. Miner of Carnegie Institute of Technology, is secretary of the Fellowship Committee.

Any student of electrical engineering who has received a bachelor's degree from an accredited college is eligible for a fellowship, provided he does not hold other fellowships which carry a stipend greater than the tuition required by the institution at which he proposes to undertake his graduate work.

Fun Night Saturday A Success

After two weeks of intensive study, the student body relaxed Saturday and celebrated the end of mid-years with a history-making, rejuvenated razz dazz.

The Vermont Christian Association planned and executed the first combination fun night and dance, Saturday evening, January 27, at Southwick. K. Hoffman '40 was chairman. In the gym there was roller skating and badminton and chess, checkers, ten pins and ping pong were played in the various social rooms, while Terpsichore held her court in the dimly lighted ballroom. Co-eds and their escorts danced to Glenn Miller and Artie Shaw recordings selected by W. M. Colehammer '41, musical director. There were "ladies' choices" and round dances, climaxed by an exhibition square dance executed by four couples. H. Thurber '43 sold the thin-dime tickets and K. Johnson '41, publicity manager, did the announcing.

Mrs. Bickford, Southwick's social director, cooperated with the V. C. A. in making the affair a success and special thanks are tendered her. Prof. and Mrs. Holden Bickford and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Marvin chaperoned.

Many more "rejuvenated razz dazzes" are in store, if they meet with the approval of the folks who live on the hill.

Washington, D. C. (ACP)—The American Student Union is a "communist front" organization, the American Youth Congress is not.

That is the contention of the Dies congressional committee investigating un-American activities in the United States. The branding of the one organization and the whitewashing of the other were contained in the report to Congress on the work of the committee.

The American Student Union was listed with those organizations that the committee alleged are controlled by communist leadership that is boring from within to revise the United States system of government.

Post-Exam Wailings !

A few things seem rather strange to us at the moment. First of all, it's rather pleasant to be writing something and not having to bother first with writing our name, the name of the course, the professor's name, and the date. Secondly, it's rather dismal thinking of the increased business of the Rutland and C. V. Railroads out of Burlington these past few days. And last of all, we're somewhat surprised that a school like ours, located in the center of the best winter sports country in the East, has no hockey team and a ski team that is not awarded even a minor letter. A few weeks ago a petition was circulated by Boots Lawrence in an effort to ascertain exactly how many students in the University would try out for a hockey team. The size of the list was astounding. However, nothing, as far as we know, has come of this. Rumor also has it that Dick Salmon, Bill Murphy, George Babits, Whizzer White, Bob Paterson and Boots himself all play a better-than-average game of hockey. At any rate, there are certainly enough good hockey players in this school to form a nucleus for a fairly good team. In addition there are a number of small schools in this section that have hockey teams and who would be glad undoubtedly to add Vermont to their schedules.

We failed to mention above the established fact that a large number of the men in U. V. M. come from small Vermont towns where they learned to skate almost as soon (and as efficiently) as they learned to walk. Our second gripe of the week is the failure of the school to award letters to members of the ski team. (Perhaps we should first acquaint you with the fact that Vermont does have a ski team.) The letter situation probably can be traced directly to the lack of jurisdiction by the Athletic Council, for the ski team surprisingly enough is in reality not the University of Vermont ski team but the Outing Club's. Now the Outing Club handles its team in a most creditable manner, as some small fortune is being spent this year in ski instruction which naturally will raise the caliber of the team and, also, there are a number of meets in the offing. However, this is not getting recognition for those men who have the slopes back of Centennial Field or Underhill every day and if the Athletic Council will not or cannot take over control of this team the very least it can do is assure those men of a V.

Professor Pattee on Leave in Washington

Rio Piedras, P. R. (I. P.)— Richard Pattee, professor of history in the University of Puerto Rico and president of the Ibero American Institute since its foundation, is on leave in Washington at the request of the Department of State to assist in the vast Pan-American program of Cultural Relations.

The Ibero American Institute of the University of Puerto Rico, organized in 1933, has for its purpose the establishment in Puerto Rico of a center of Inter-American studies, with especial emphasis laid on the contributions of the Iberian nations to the civilization and culture of the New World. The University of Puerto Rico, with its privileged geographical position at the crossroads of the Americas, offers usual advantages and possibilities for the accomplishment of its program.

The creation of an Ibero American Library has been an immediate task of the Institute. After six years of unceasing effort, and extensive correspondence with universities, institutes, literary societies and ministries in Ibero-America, Spain and Portugal, the Institute can congratulate itself upon having accomplished a considerable part of its literary program. At present, a continuous inflow of books, pamphlets, magazines, and publications of all kinds is enriching the Institute's collection, installed on the first floor of the handsome new library of the University of Puerto Rico.

University Department Honored by Dr. Compton

University, N. D. (I. P.)—Notice that the department of chemical engineering at the University of North Dakota has been accredited was received by Pres. John C. West from the Engineers' Council for Professional Development. Chairman of the engineering organization is Dr. Karl Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The University of North Dakota department becomes the sixth west of the Mississippi River to be recognized by the E. C. P. D. The others are at the Universities of Washington, Iowa and Minnesota, Iowa State College and the California Institute of Technology. Out of nearly 100 departments in the United States only thirty-one were accredited last year.

College Freshmen Rate Low in English Courses

Kent, Ohio (I. P.)—From a survey taken in three mid-western teachers' colleges, a Kent State University professor found that college freshmen are fourth graders in English.

"As far as capitalization, punctuation and certain other mechanics are concerned, the first-year college student is hardly beyond the fourth grade in English," Dr. W. L. Garnett, professor of English, says.

Doctor Garnett's survey of English composition by college students was taken as part of her work for her Ph.D., and is contained in the abstract of her doctor's dissertation.

The survey also indicates that the status in English composition of sophomores, juniors and seniors was similar to that of freshmen. In points of English, a large percentage of the students surveyed missed on tests and compositions, points which should have been taught in the elementary school.

Concluding her survey, Doctor Garnett said that many were going out from teachers' colleges "poorly prepared for the high art of teaching the basic skills in written English."

Double Victory By Vermont Courtmen

Middlebury Routed 56-27; Frosh Win Over G. M. J. C.

Belardinelli sunk 20 points. Ace Healy played brilliantly. Vermont was on. The result—a decisive 56-27 Vermont victory over Middlebury.

Leading 25-15 at the half, the Cats took the floor for the second half and completely routed Middlebury. The Sabo men's passing was perfect; their shooting deadly; and their guarding, superb. Middlebury was no match for the Cats that night.

Ace Healy, starting in place of Bill Pye, was the star of the night. His floor play was remarkable. Time and again he set up his teammates, was everywhere at once, and himself dropped in 9 points.

Frosh Win Too

Fuzzy Evans' Kittens proved an incentive for their varsity big brothers. In the preliminary game they walked all over G. M. J. C. as they hung up a 43-3[illegible] victory.

High scorer for this game was Norm Beaulieu at the pivot spot. Kaufman and Doherty, right and left forwards respectively, each scored 12.

Harvard and Vermont To Join in Concert

the President, the Cardinal Archbishop of Paris, and many contemporary musicians. At each of the cities visited the club was honored at municipal and public receptions. Newspaper commendation of the club's singing appeared in newspapers in Paris, Strasbourg, Venice, and Geneva. As another result of the trip, several eminent French composers offered to write music for the club's use, and several such compositions have been completed and used.

Dr. Archibald T. Davison, then leader of the Glee Club, was decorated with the Academic Palm, an award for distinction in the field of education, and a very high honor, by M. Milhaud, acting on behalf of the French government.

Undistinguished Songs Omitted

The long career of the Harvard Glee Club since, in 1919, it decided to devote all its time to good music, deserting the pleasant but undistinguished songs up to then popular with glee clubs, has received praise from music critics in newspapers of many cities of the United States. Boston, New York, Washington, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, and Worcester have been among those critics to pay tribute to the club's artistry.

With a membership of about 250, made up for the most part of men of average musical ability, most of whom have not had serious musical training, the Harvard Glee Club depends for its success on expert leadership, now supplied by Mr. G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor. Mr. Woodworth has been accompanist and assistant conductor of the Glee Club, and in 1934 he succeeded Doctor Davison as its conductor. He is an assistant in the Division of Music at Harvard, and is also director of the Radcliffe Choral Society.

About 350 men try out for the Harvard Glee Club every fall—more than come out for the college football team. The full membership of 250, after cuts have eliminated those who fail to measure up to the organization's standards, is too large for all to participate in all concerts. About fifty-five of the top ranking members will come to Burlington for the February concert.

STUDENTS PARTICIPATE IN DARTMOUTH POLICIES

Hanover, N. H. (ACP)—For the first time in the long history of Dartmouth College, undergraduates this fall are actively participating in the determination of the institution's academic policies.

In a new plan designed to give students a greater interest in their own education, juniors and seniors will discuss with their instructors the requirements, curricular problems and departmental mechanics of their courses. Economics, sociology and political science are the first three courses to be included in the new plan.

Dartmouth's administrators feel that if members of the student body are eligible for election to committees on which they will work with faculty members, an actual concern for the affairs of the department will be developed in the individual students. They feel that this will raise the educational standards of the college.

THE BANDWAGON

His style was not the technical wild style of many of the current hot men.

Bix's style was as simple, as sweet, as sentimental, as hauntingly beautiful as a mellowed old folksong. Bix's ravishing tone can in the picture only be noted from the softness of the eyes.

His eyes are just as much the expression of his soul as his music. The eyes are the man, Bix. Through them I have been able to look into the heart of Bix. In looking into his heart and innermost feelings I feel a little in awe and ashamed for what I am necessarily stealing away.

"It is as impossible to describe the work of Bix as to describe the warmth of the noonday sun, the color of beauty, or the warmth and sympathy of a mother's embrace.

"There is no illusion around Bix. He is not dead. He is immortal!"

But the arrangement is unfinished and I have a column to write. My cigarette is just a row of cold gray ashes scarring the surface of the deep blue ash tray.

A direct connection between intelligence and electrical conditions in the brain has been discovered by Cornell University scientists.

What a Difference Four Months Makes

We Are Not Alone

By "Pooh"

We stand in a mournful circle around the casket, and salt tears trickle down our respective cheeks in quick succession. Yay and verily, we weep. (YAY is right!) Perhaps a damask handkerchief is yanked out of a pocket here and there—but I'm too busy weeping to bother with one. In short, we are all rather preoccupied.

Finally it is all over. The willing earth thuds loudly on a coffin top—and there is a hollow sound (like my head). Great are the sounds of rejoicing; aye, oft is the mead-hall filled with revelry, now that our enemy is vanquished! Oft are our heads heavy—but not from care. Oft are our eyes misty—but not from tears.

Sometimes, in the gray dawn, a little troupe of mourners (the professors) trudges up the winding trail to the Happy Hunting Ground, to stand a while and gaze upon a marker. Mind you, a small marker. And wet are their eyes. Through blinding tears (still salty) the lettered epitaph shimmers in ghostly mistiness. The words hit their eyes with the precision of a mallet.

"Rest in Peace"

Aye, and heavy is their laundry with handkerchiefs; large white handkerchiefs. And great is the dearth of black cloth in the city of Burlington.

But that's not our quarrel! Let us be gay! Let us frolic lightsomely! (This is what comes of reading too much English literature.) Let us mob certain centers of merriment; in fact, let us cast all discretion (and other such lifeless things) to the winds; to wit: the North Wind, the South Wind, the East Wind, and the West Wind. The South Wind will probably carry them to Alaska, and cast them in the winter's supply of blubber, thereby spoiling it. The North Wind will undoubtedly carry them to Little America, where they will cling to the inside of Byrd's stove pipe, causing all survivors to smother. The West Wind will carry its share to Stalin's breakfast table, whereupon his appetite will shortly leave him. And who knows but the East Wind might carry its share to San Francisco and start a measles epidemic. Only time will tell! So let's wait patiently.

QUOTABLE QUOTES

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"For the moment the attitude of our academic youth seems to be so largely self-centered that one doubts whether the form in which pacifism was brought to them during these years was the best for their spiritual health. The young men today seem to be largely concerned with safety first and the old men with $30 every Thursday. Peace that is not the crown of justice and liberty is a peace that cannot last, and it would have been more inspiring if our young men and women today had been more concerned with justice and liberty than with their own safety." President-emeritus William Allan Neilson of Smith College chides collegians for their stand on the affairs of the day.

COLLEGES EXEMPLIFY DEMOCRACY SAYS CHACE

New York City—(ACP).—In a democratic state, universities and colleges must provide an example of democracy and diffuse a high level of intelligence as well as perform their job of training leaders.

This a candid opinion of Dr. Harry Woodburn Chace, chancellor of New York University, who recently gave his annual report to the university council.

"Higher education in America," Doctor Chace affirmed in his report, "has been learning to live with a new set of facts and outlooks with which it has not as yet altogether come to terms. Fundamentally our thinking has had to be conditioned by the enormously increased public interest in what we are about and a curiously mixed attitude it is.

"On the one hand it is reflected in what I believe to be a permanent step taken in American thought, namely, that colleges and universities are called on not only to train leaders but to see to the diffusion of a high level of intelligence. There is a deep public conviction that they are the broadest of the open roads to opportunity; there is a widespread faith, inarticulate, sometimes almost pathetic, in their power.

"On the other hand, there has been all along a curious fear about what higher education does to people. It is spoken of as 'unsettling,' 'radical,' 'irreligious'; utterances of individuals are regarded as official expressions of the philosophy of whole institutions by people who forget that universities in a democratic state must themselves exemplify the processes of democracy. In the years which lie ahead the recognition of this function of our universities is essential to the preservation of democracy itself."

Egyptian Room Trimmed With Bright Blue Paint

Color is invading more and more of the display rooms in the Fleming Museum at the University of Vermont, in keeping with modern standards of museum decoration. Bright blue backgrounds for display cases in the Egyptian section of the ethnology room are now being arranged by the museum staff. The base of the display platform where the museum's Egyptian girl mummy rests has been painted the same blue, a color particularly appropriate to the life and times of ancient Egypt. Brilliant colors were used inside the ancient Egyptian tombs, so this new use of color with the Egyptian displays is appropriate. A vital color which draws the eye, the blue background adds to the dynamic appeal of the material exhibited.

Considerable rearrangement is going on while the refinishing work proceeds. When the redecorating is complete, several display cases of classical material from ancient Greece and Rome will be shown adjoining the Egyptian unit. Entering the next room, oriental displays will be seen. Thus examples of several different cultures will have individual exhibition space in close proximity to one another.

INTER-AMERICAN RELATION CONFERENCE HELD

Lubbock, Tex. (I. P.)—Part Texas Tech will play in the program seeking a better understanding between American countries is still in the formative stage, President Clifford B. Jones announced after his return from the conference on inter-American relations in Washington, D. C. Thirty college and university presidents were invited to the meeting by Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

"Emphasized in the education field was the fact that any program involving exchange of professors with Latin-American countries should include only the best from the United States," President Jones said. "For years, England, France and Germany particularly have been sending outstanding scientists and other educators to these countries and it is up to us to meet the same standard.

DARTMOUTH INTRODUCES RADIO WRITING COURSE

Dartmouth, N. H. (I. P.)—The English department at Dartmouth College has expanded its work this fall by introducing radio writing in two courses. This new field, supplementing the course in movie-script writing established last year, is being covered extensively in the short story course taught by Prof. Stearns Morse and to a lesser degree in the journalism course conducted by Prof. Eric P. Kelly. In connection with the special attention now given to radio writing Professor Morse has begun assembling a radio-script library similar to the Irving Thalberg Memorial Library of movie scripts at Dartmouth.

The motion picture course, which attracted wide interest when inaugurated last year with the aid of several Hollywood leaders, is again being restricted to ten men, half seniors and half juniors. Last year's motion picture class, under Prof. Benfield Pressey, wrote an original script, had it filmed by the college movie photographer, and played all the rôles in the melodrama which ended with the villain being tossed off the Tuck School bridge.

QUOTABLE QUOTES

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"A knowing kind of citizenry do not fall for the same old shibboleths. If the majority of the people are ruled by hate or intolerance or blind impulse, democracy will destroy itself. Obviously, the collective wisdom can rise no higher than the education and character of the individuals who make up the state." Dean John T. Madden of New York University believes that the individuals of the nation should possess greater knowledge and the capacity to act on that knowledge.

"The alert and well-balanced student in this extraordinary era should live at once in the past, the present and the future, because he has a better chance for real perspective than almost anyone else." Robert Moses told Union College students they balance present events against the strong lessons of historical events.

Barse Miller to Start Advanced Art Course

Barse Miller, the California artist who came to Vermont last summer to teach advanced art in the summer session of the University of Vermont, will return for this summer also. Mr. Miller's class, which reached capacity last year, has already exceeded the limit set, according to advance reports, for this summer, and the demand is expected to be such that another artist will be needed to share the instruction duties. It is being rumored that another distinguished artist has been approached by the University, and that negotiations are going forward to secure this artist for the second teaching post.

Several of Barse Miller's students of last summer who have visited exhibitions in New York City where his work is being shown have found his Vermont pictures in great demand. One evidence of this is his recent sale of a picture painted in Shelburne, Vt., to the Metropolitan Museum of Modern Art in New York. Mr. Miller's work appears constantly in exhibitions throughout the country, and he is the recipient of many awards for painting. His work has been pictured in Life, and articles concerning it have frequently appeared in the New York Times and other metropolitan papers.

EDUCATORS FORESEE NEW SCHOOL SYSTEM

Chicago, Ill.—(ACP)—Neither dwindling enrollments nor lack of public support face the colleges and universities of the country in the immediate future, in the judgment of leading educators who participated in the fourteenth annual Institute for Administrative Officers of Higher Institutions at the University of Chicago.

Summarizing the conclusions of the educational authorities on the program, Dr. John Dale Russell, director of the Institute, said the expert opinion indicated these developments:

A shift toward the 6-4-4 system of educational organization, providing six years of elementary school, four years of junior high school, and four years of "college" combining the last two years of the present high school with the first two years of the present college.

Major increase in enrolments of colleges during the next twenty-five years because of increasing unemployability of youths under the age of 20.

Coordination of administration of publicly supported institutions of higher learning within states, and increasing co-operation between private institutions to eliminate wasteful overlapping of programs and costly recruiting of students.

"Despite the depression experiences of the last decade, when privately supported institutions felt the decline of income from endowment because of reduced interest rates, and publicly supported institutions had reduced appropriations, the administrators are in general agreement that there is an era of growth ahead," Doctor Russell said.

"They believe that the experience of the immediate past indicates that so long as their institutions maintain a service vital to our society, society will support them properly with funds and students."

Pre-Medical Society Organized at U.V.M.; New Officers Chosen

Society to Provide Closer Relationships For Undergraduates

The organization of a society for Pre-medical students on the University of Vermont campus, a movement initiated by University Pre-medical students prior to the Christmas recess, has been approved by the University Council. Officers for this society have been elected by senior, junior, and sophomore pre-medical students in a general meeting and are as follows: Vice-chairmen—E. L. Davis '40, J. P. Mahoney '41, and S. J. Foti '42; Secretary—M. Catherine Bodette '41. Provisions have been made for a rotating chairmanship to be filled by senior members of the society.

Much valuable benefit, it is felt, will be derived from the meetings of such an organization through lectures by members of the University faculty and others, and through discussions by the students concerning topics of interest and importance to the pre-medical student. The aims and purposes of such a society have been expressed in the preamble of a constitution drawn up by senior, junior, and sophomore representatives and later approved by senior, junior, and sophomore pre-medical students in a general meeting. This preamble reads:

"We the undergraduate students of the University of Vermont who are preparing for medicine, hereby organize ourselves into a society to be known as the Pre-Medical Society of the University of Vermont, in order to:

1. Provide academic and scientific benefits to its members and,

2. Provide a closer interrelationship between its members and the Medical College."

The Pre-Medical Society will serve to provide a closer relationship between the pre-medical student and the Medical College, thus giving the student a broader and more full survey of the medical field.

Provisions for membership, meetings, officers, their election and duties have been included in the Constitution of the Pre-Medical Society, reprinted here for those interested in the Society.

The Constitution of the Pre-Medical Society of the University of Vermont.

W. A. A. Council Elects New Representatives

On Wednesday evening, January 31, about twenty-five members of the W. A. A. council-at-large and of the campus managers of sports held a special meeting at Southwick. The meeting was opened with the singing of "Champlain."

Each campus manager of sports gave a report of the activity which she manages. These reports included skiing, badminton, archery, basketball, ping-pong and swimming.

Three new members were elected to fill vacancies in the council-at-large. They are: Ethel Shippee '42, Martha Baker '41 and Edith Libbey '43.

Harvard-Vermont Glee Club Concert

Student Tickets Priced At Twenty-five Cents

One of the highlights of the musical season in this city to which music lovers are eagerly looking forward is the Harvard-Vermont Glee Club joint concert which will be given at the Memorial Auditorium, Friday evening, February 9.

The program will include selections from Bach, Vittona, Germaninoff, Mozart, Purcell, Brahms and Sir Arthur Sullivan sung by two of the finest college glee clubs in New England.

Both groups have built enviable artistic reputations, and Harvard's is world renowned due to the magnificent impression they made on music circles of the old world on their European concert tour during the summer of 1921. Their appearance in Paris, Nancy, Dijon, Verdun, Coblenz, Venice, Milan and Geneva was a series of triumphs which will long be remembered and which has had a lasting effect.

Change in Harvard's Policy

Dr. Archibald T. Davison, in 1919, inaugurated a revolutionary policy when he announced that in the future the Harvard Glee Club would only sing the world's best music. By this act he pulled the college glee club's musical offerings out of the realm of "Bulldog on the Bank" fare. Six years later, Professor Bennett, head of the music department at Vermont, revised U. V. M.'s policy and followed Doctor Davison, with the result that since that time the Vermont group's fame has spread for their fine repertoire, consistently, beautifully rendered.

The Harvard Glee Club has thrilled Symphony Hall audiences when they sing annually with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Serge Koussevitzky. Their concerts with prominent assisting artists like Mary Garden, Fritz Kreisler and Harold Bauer reap critics' richest praises at every performance. Of the 300 men who appear at tryouts each fall, about 250 survive the tests, and usually about seventy men who have received high grades are permitted to go on tours under the brilliant direction of G. Wallace Woodworth, Doctor Davison's successor, who has carried on his predecessor's policies admirably.

This year Prof. H. G. Bennett is on a sabbatical leave and his place is filled by Prof. W. G. Kirby, who directed the choir and orchestra in the memorable Christmas concert and who is responsible for many of the excellent musical offerings presented at the chapel this year.

Tickets will be on sale shortly, and students will be able to purchase them for twenty-five cents. Everybody will be going, so buy your tickets early.

New Vermonters to Furnish Rhythm At Annual Sophomore Hop Friday

New Vermonters

Prof. and Mrs. R. A. Hall To Act as Chaperones At Colorful Affair

The Hotel Vermont will be the scene of the gala "Sophomore Hop" Friday evening from nine to one. Cliff Agnew's "New Vermonters" will render their versatile music. Those in charge promise that this will not be the annual "Sophomore Flop," but one of the best dances of the year.

Semi-formal is to be the dress, new, exciting and novel are to be the decorations, and bigger and better is to be this important social event. Why not give those rusty feet an opportunity to "jive" again? Why not get "in the mood" for the excitement and swing of Kake Walk?

The supply of tickets is limited and so one should buy early for the great event.

Prof. and Mrs. R. A. Hall are to be chaperons and C. A. Shortle, Jr., '42, is chairman.

With the Vermont roof as the setting, with Vermont's leading college band giving out and with all the brilliance and color of a dance—does not this entice all you lovers of music to celebrate the end of exams and enjoy yourself?

Prof. Fulton of Yale Lectures at U. V. M.

Lecture Sponsored by By Sigma Xi Society

Speaking before a large and appreciative audience last evening (Thursday) in the Fleming Museum Auditorium, Prof. John Farquhar Fulton, M.D., Ph.D., of the Yale School of Medicine outlined recent experimental studies of the relations of the frontal lobes of the brain to intelligence and learning, emotional life, and the motor functions of conduct or behavior. The lecture was based upon experimental work with monkeys, chimpanzees, and men, and showed the effects of stimulation and also of the removal of the lobes partially or wholly. Professor Fulton illustrated and emphasized his points with still slides and motion pictures.

Doctor Fulton has had a notable career in the field of medicine and physiology. Graduating from Harvard in 1921 he received a Rhodes scholarship at Oxford. Later he was appointed demonstrator in physiology at Oxford and became a fellow of Magdalen College. Taking his Ph.D. in 1925, and his M.D. in 1927, at Harvard, he was associated for a short period with the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston. Since 1930 he has been Sterling professor of physiology at Yale.

Author of many scientific works, his "Psychology of the Nervous System," published in 1938, has attracted wide attention and aroused considerable controversy over disputable points therein contained.

Professor Fulton was brought to the University through the joint efforts of Prof. A. R. Gifford, chairman of the Committee on University Lectures and the national and local society of Sigma Xi. This society, organized on a national scale for the promotion of reseach in science, has a local membership of thirty-five.

Colleges Initiate Joint Broadcast

Vermont Represented On Columbia Program

The New England network of the Columbia broadcasting company has inaugurated an intercollegiate radio program, "Campus of the Air" at which time the highlights of the campus activities of thirty New England colleges will be featured. It is presented by a staff of college editors, most of whom are from colleges in the Boston area as the program originated in that city, and devoted to depicting a slice of college life. Significant college figures, campus "celebrities," and students groups will be "given the air"; with timely news items, spotlighted; and athletics playing a stellar rôle.

Contributing editors from each of the participating colleges were appointed by the administration office in collaboration with the college publicity office and paper. Vermont's contributing editor is Mary Nelson, a senior, managing editor of CYNIC, member of Mortar Board and recently elected to Phi Beta Kappa. She selects the salient features of the week's news on the hill and sends it to the Production Staff composed of William Tyng, editor of the Harvard-Crimson; Alfred Symonds, editor of Tufts College Weekly; and Arnold Daum, chief of the Northeastern News, who prepare it for broadcasting.

The program is on the air for half an hour from 5.30 to 6.00 p.m. Saturdays. Watch your local paper for the station and tune in!

Collegium

Prof. B. F. Ladd will speak to Collegium at the College Street Congregational Church Sunday night, February 4. Professor Ladd, chairman of a club in Burlington for underprivileged boys, will discuss the recent movement to begin the organization of this club.

EDITORIALS

Metamorphosed Cynic

CYNIC readers will find many changes in the make-up of today's issue. These changes are conservative efforts on the part of the staff to improve the paper and increase its "readability." Some of the more apparent changes are a change in the type face employed, a variation in the technic of writing headlines and the practice of placing the date of the issue on each of the several pages.

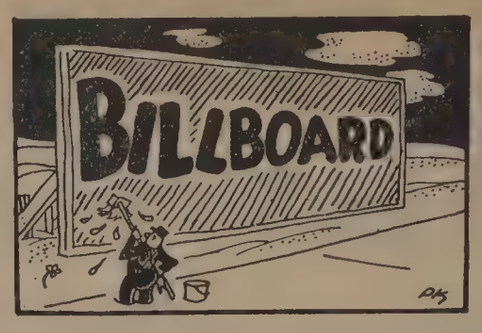
In the past the type face predominantly in use was from the Metro family. It was easy to read but tended to make a spotty page and, because it was fairly broad, limited the flexibility of the headlines. The type face now in use is from the Bodoni family, its exact name being Bodoni Bold Condensed. Bold signifies that it is fairly heavy; Condensed means that the letters are rather narrow, thus permitting more units or letters per line.

Readers in the past have been confronted with but three kinds of headlines for the most part. Occasionally a hand-set double or three column head was seen. From now on a larger variety of heads will be used. These will include not only the hand set variety formerly in use but also five other kinds of headlines. The size of the headline used for each story is, as might be expected, dependent upon the length and importance of the story itself.

Previously the words "THE VERMONT CYNIC" have been centered on each page and Arabic numerals have been employed. Now each page will have "THE VERMONT CYNIC" placed toward the inside of the page and will be followed by the date of the issue, while the number of the page will be spelled out in its entirety and placed in the top outside corner, at the fingertips of the reader.

The size of the letters used in the upper decks (the top lines in a headline) is larger than that used in the past, twenty-four point rather than eighteen. The lower deck (the lower lines in a headline) have also been increased in size. However, insead of limiting the number of lines in the two decks to but two lines as was customary in the past, three lines may now be used if necessary. This enables the reader to get a better idea of the content of the story without delving directly into the body of the story.

The practice of using heads made up of capital letters alone has been practically discontinued and such heads are now replaced by headlines made up of upper and lower case letters—that is, capital and small letters. This was also done in an attempt to increase the "readability" of the page and diminish eye strain on the part of the reader.



Readers who are especially observing will also notice other minor changes such as the indenture of the lower decks, the changed indenture style in the Billboard column and a different type of dash between stories.

Previously the lower decks were set exactly the same as the upper decks without any indenture. Now the lower deck has an indenture of one em. This small space allows the reader to grasp the content of the line more quickly.

The Billboard heretofore was indented on both sides but this has also been changed; now it is indented only on the left side of the column while the first line is set flush, that is, without any indention.

Formerly the breaks between stories were stern straight lines, rather unpleasing to the eye. Now such breaks are thick in the center but tapering on both ends. The new break, known as the Scotch break, adds symmetry to the page design.

Considerable research was done before any of the changes contemplated were actually executed and the criterion used in every case was "Will it facilitate the effort of the reader?" Any comment or criticism would be welcome.

Scribes will hold its second meeting of the new year Friday, February 2, 7.45 p.m., at Southwick. Everyone and anyone is welcome. If you have just written a short story, an essay, a poem—bring it along. If you haven't, come anyway.

"The American position on academic freedom has brought to our universities men of great distinction whose race or whose views are held to disqualify them from carrying on the search for truth in certain other countries. Orchid of the Week

Presented to Mary LaPage

The CYNIC presents its orchid of the week to Mary E. LePage '41, the first University of Vermont co-ed to make a solo flight. She is the only woman student enrolled in the flying course under the Civil Aeronautics Authority at Burlington Airport.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Orchid of the Week will be a regular feature of each Friday's CYNIC. Its purpose is not to give recognition to the most prominent people on campus but rather to recognize merit in any form, regardless of the task performed. The task need not be large nor difficult but its execution must be of sterling quality.

Any reader may suggest the name of any person connected with the University whom he considers deserving of the honor. All suggestions should be addressed to Miss Elizabeth L. Watts, Picture Editor VERMONT CYNIC, Alpha Chi Omega House, Burlington, Vermont.

Just Plain Ramblings

Cogito ergo sum with apologies to a gentleman by name of Descartes who, we have decided after deep meditation, is slightly doused in moisture as far as we are concerned. For hours (more or less) we have pondered (more or less), (yes, we used that phraseology before!) over what to write in this column. And we have thought of the grand total of nothing which brings us to the conclusion that Descartes' saying "I think, therefore I am" was definitely not referring to us for we think and are still without anything to write about. Therefore, knowing that a column must be written and knowing that we know nothing to write about we have decided to set down on paper our thoughts—the more impersonal ones. So here goes. It's night time and we're alone except for a package of cigarettes. Look out of the window. Marvelous night for skiing. Can't see a moon but there must be one. Which doesn't make us think of skiing. . . . But speaking of skiing, we still think that the ski team should be awarded letters. . . . Not only do the members merit such recognition, but perhaps such action would arouse more interest in the unit and therefore attract more men to participate. . . . There certainly must be a few good skiers in school not on the team. . . . Even if there aren't too many people still in school. . . . Too bad Hank Beauchemin cannot play basketball this semester. . . . Would he ever come in handy. . . . It was an awful long time ago but we still remember the way Anso was hooping 'em in against the bewildered Panthers a number of Sattidy nights ago. . . . We also remember Ace Healey providing the necessary spark that suddenly transformed the Vermont club into a smooth-working outfit. . . . Hope it lasts. . . . We shall see come St. Michael's next week. . . . Kaufman on the frosh club is one good basketball player. . . . Some ambitious day we are going to figure out the winning percentage that the frosh football, basketball and baseball clubs have enjoyed since Fuzzy Evans took over the reins. . . . We're inclined to think that it's remarkably high. . . . Competition in the bowling league is beautifully intense. . . . The Delts, Sig Phis and Phi Sigs are holding a battle royal for first place. . . . We'd still like to know the story on hockey here at Vermont. . . . It seems that there are a great number of people who want to play hockey. . . . So why not. . . . If the school will not furnish the necessary mazuma maybe some benevolent soul will contribute half a buck for a puck. . . . *Tempus fugit. . . . Nihil faciendum. . . . Nihil scribiendum. . . . Museum Sponsors Classroom Film Pool

Schools Throughout State Use Pictures

I wonder how many of us realize to how great an extent the Fleming Museum benefits not only our University but the whole State of Vermont. One phase of its service that few U. V. M. students are aware of is the Classroom Film Pool.

If you've ever been in the projection room of the Museum auditorium you've probably noticed that the walls are literally lined with tins containing rolls of moving picture films on almost any subject imaginable. Every Saturday morning huge stacks of these films are sent out to various schools and organizations all over the state and returned the following week to be sent out again to more members of the pool.

The only requirements for membership are that the group which wishes to join has a projector, pays a yearly fee of five dollars for postage and five dollars for handling, and buys one film which is deposited at the Museum and sent out for other groups to see.

Scores of public and private schools and such organizations as the Vermont Tuberculosis Association and the Better Films Council of Burlington have joined this wonderful Classroom Film Pool and have received as many as sixty to seventy-five films, both silent and sound, during one year.

Many other state universities provide a similar state-wide service, but few at such a nominal fee. Indeed, it is not uncommon for some to charge two or even five dollars for a single program.

In addition to films, the museum sends traveling exhibits to schools all over the state—exhibits so vitally interesting that they are in as constant demand as the pictures. Often Doctor Perkins or Mr. Eldred go personally to visit schools that are members of the Pool and frequently speak to the children themselves.

Not content with pictures and talks, parties often come from schools 100 miles around to see the museum—sometimes as many as four or five groups a day.

This is but one of the many services our museum renders, but like all the others it is a priceless one to all those who benefit by it.

There is a new exhibit in the Fleming Museum Art Gallery, consisting of thirty-four water colors done by three eminent contemporary artists and valued at many thousands of dollars.

Women's Ski Team to Compete in Durham Meet

The women's ski team of the University left Burlington Thursday afternoon, Februray 1 for Durham, N. H., where they will compete in the meet to be held there. They received an invitation to contest in this meet from the women of the University of New Hampshire.

The members of the team, Dorothea Smith '41 of Burlington; Barbara E. Burns '43 of Rutland; and Sara Peters '42 of Schenectady, will compete in the downhill run and the slalom. They were chosen from the eight girls who make up the Ski Club, the members of which have been receiving instruction from Otto Hollaus at Stowe.

The Ski Club has been formed under the auspices of the W. A. A. which has made it possible for its members to take lessons from Mr. Hollaus.

BASEBALL TO START LAST OF FEBRUARY

Coach Larry Gardner said today that he expects to call the first battery practice of the season some time during the week of the 24th of February. The February practices will merely consist of cage work. Expected back this year are pitchers Belardinelli, Pesarik, Hart, Akely, Zellinger and Shaw. On the receiving end will be Corbett, Spasyk and Boucher.

Many Wisconsin Students Helped by Cash Loans

MADISON, Wis. (I.P.)—About 1,400 emergency cash loans were granted from the university's loan fund to University of Wisconsin students "to tide them over loan financial periods" during the last year, according to Curtis Merriman, registrar and chairman of the committee on loans and undergraduate scholarships.

The loan funds, amounting to about $100,000 at present, are administered by the committee on loans and undergraduate scholarships on a revolving basis as emergency loans. The general policy of the committee is to arrange for the loans to be repaid by the opening of the year following the school year in which the loan is made. This plan keeps the funds in constant circulation so that the $50 to $100 amounts reach the largest number of needy students.

Loans are granted on the basis of financial need, scholastic record, and the personal character of the candidates. While they are frequently extended beyond the original loan period, there are few actual defaults on the principal, with the students keeping up the interest payments regularly.

Frosh Hoopsters Face G.M.J.C. Tues.

Poultney Game Should Be Close Contest

The freshman basketball team will face the Green Mountain Junior College five for the second time this season, at the G. M. J. C. gym at Poultney, Tuesday night. The first contest with Green Mountain resulted in an easy 43-36 victory for Vermont.

However, Tuesday night's game is expected to trouble the Kittens more than the first. The game, usually held in Rutland, is this year to be played in Poultney. The Poultney floor is much smaller than the U. V. M. gym floor. This will be a disadvantage to the visitors who are used to a larger playing area. It is also probable that Coach Evans' group will be hindered by the absence of a first string player—victim of curricula activities.

It is assumed that the floor being quite small, the Vermonters will stick to a zone defense, which is best suited for that condition. If the Green Mountain boys have not improved, if the zone defense holds, and if all first string men are eligible, Tuesday's game will probably show U. V. M.'s second win over G. M. J. C.

The probable lineup is:

Kaufman, r.f.
Doherty, l.f.
Grosvenor, c. or West, c.
Lankton, r.g.
Chesarone, l.g.

Ticket Offer For Princeton League

Hanover, N. H., Feb. 2—Dartmouth's defending championship basketball and hockey teams will return to league competition here tomorrow night against two strong Princeton athletic representatives.

At seven o'clock in the Davis rink Coach Eddie Jeremiah's sextet will attempt to annex its second straight Quad encounter of the winter and also its fourteenth consecutive Quad tilt in three seasons of hockey. The Tiger six will be making its 1940 début in Quad hockey after an exceptional record to date in non-league games.

Big Gus Broberg, whose last appearance on the Alumni gymnasium floor resulted in his establishing a new Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League high-scoring record of 29 points against Pennsylvania in an encounter packed with excitement from start to finish, will lead the Big Green quintet against a Tiger court five that has been the sensation of the league in its two opening contests against Cornell and Yale.

Both contests will be of the utmost importance to Dartmouth as defeats in either tilt will drop the Indians out of their current first place positions and possibly out of the struggle for title honors won last year by the two Green teams.

The Dartmouth Athletic Council has made a special ticket offer of $1.25 for both contests. Combination tickets will be on sale at the Davis rink. Tickets to either contest will also be on sale prior to game time.

The University of North Dakota has thirty-three nationalities represented in its student body.

Call for New Discus And Hammer Throwers

Weightmen, vaulters, jumpers, and discus throwers are urged to come out now. Boys of not too diminutive stature who are interested in throwing the hammer and putting the shot would greatly profit by coming out now on Tuesdays and Thursdays from four to six. This includes freshmen, sophomores and upperclassmen regardless of their previous experience, who are willing to devote time and energy to their task, because it takes about four years to develop a good hammer thrower. Coach Post now has the time to aid the candidates with more individual instruction than will be possible during the regular track season, so why not take advantage of it?

Let's see a big turnout. Classes are held in the cage.

A Collegian's Broadway

Safari

The other night—we think you ought to know—we made a trek to East Orange, N. J., just to see how things were at that fabulous tavern operated by Tony Galento.

It would be wonderful to report that the spheroid slugger grabbed us by the arm, showered solicitude about our well-being, piloted us toward the bar and there lined up a spot of something to fortify us against the wintry blasts.

Mostly Mr. Galento looked as sullen as he does in the ring. He made no overtures at all. Finally, after we had quaffed three ales, we sidled up to Tony hoping to lure him into a conversation. It wasn't easy. Finally we mentioned his natty blue suit with double pencil stripes.

"Wonderful garment," Tony chirped. "I got the idea from a pal of mine, Noel Coward. An English guy. He writes things. Naw, I never read 'em. I'm busy."

Which is about all we could get out of Tony. You'll forgive us for letting you down.

Oh yes, he says, "If you wanna make some big dough, lay your dough on Tony when I fight next. I'll moider the bum."

This, apparently, would be Maxie Baer.

Sharps and Flats

One of the last local frontiers for collegiate swing addicts is the Terrace Room of the Hotel New Yorker where Bob Crosby's brasses blare all night long, virtually, for the die-hard jitterbugs.

Bulk of the Gotham collegians deserted rug-cutting many moons ago, and if you can trust reports from the collegiate hinterlands, swing is getting the go-by on these fronts. None of which has made the dance maestri mad. They chuckle in their cellos knowing that as the campus goes, so goes the country, which means swing dies a-bleeding.

Meanwhile the rhumba-tango-conga craze has assumed such proportions that such zilphy bistros as the Havana Madrid, La Conga, Mon Paris and the Cuban Casino are giving free lessons with cocktails of a Wednesday and Saturday.

Capitalistic Forethought

Mr. Roosevelt's "Bourbons," the capitalists, aren't the worst lads in the world.

John D. Rockefeller started it when he began putting up Radio City and now all important construction projects here in town go to no little trouble for kibitzers.

The Rockefellers emblazoned a huge coat-of-arms on the board-wall which they put up as a barricade to keep passers-by from falling into an excavation. Over it was written "Die Beste Stuurlui Staan an Waal," Dutch for "The best pilots stand on the shore." Then they went ahead and gimleted holes in the boardwall so that the curious could watch the progress. Interest reached such fever pitch that industrial barons waited impatiently for the transient unemployed to relinquish a hole so that they could watch for a spell.

Indiana University has an eternal blaze in a Union building fireplace to symbolize the institution's "fire of hospitality."

Basketball Team to Play St. Michael's

Game Tomorrow Should Be Close Contest

The basketball team of the University of Vermont, emerging from a two-week hibernation with mid-year examinations, sets out on the final leg of its journey this week Saturday night when it meets St. Michael's in a return contest.

Vermont, a victor over the Mikemen in the first meeting, will find the going rough on Saturday night as the two teams apparently top the state circuit. Vermont has taken two out of three of its state engagements to date, defeating St. Michael's and Middlebury and losing to Norwich, which in turn was beaten by St. Michael's.

While the varsity is on the move against St. Michael's the freshman outfit will be playing Green Mountain Junior College in Poultney.

Following the St. Michael's game the Vermont team meets Springfield and Norwich in Burlington, New York State Teachers and Colgate away, and Trinity at Burlington. The Trinity game will be one of the features of Kake Walk homecoming.

Annual Registers

The first examination of this type last year worked so successfully in recruiting a desirable group of young professional workers that it is expected these examinations will be given annually. Many Civil Service registers are kept open for several years, but in this examination a new register will be formed each year.

Last year the register of eligible applicants was exhausted for veterinarians and engineers. Demand for this grade of professional workers is expected to continue in 1940.

Copies of the announcement should be available at the deans' offices. Further information may be obtained from and applications should be mailed to the Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

The Romance and Tradition Of the Kake Walk Festival

By Myrna French

Did you know that our tradition of Kake Walk originated 'way back in 1893? It was in that year that one Frederick T. Sharpe, with the aid of his classmates, conceived the idea of Kake Walk as a result of disappointment over a promised Military Ball which did not materialize. Thus was the origin of a great tradition which has come down through the years with much improvement and many additions.

Whereas we now plan for several months in advance for this event, back in the 1890's, the preparations usually began the Friday noon before the performance Saturday evening, and on Saturday morning a poster would be put up on the bulletin board reading, "Kake Walk in the Drill Hall Tonight. Everyone welcome!" According to all available accounts, the affair, which was strictly informal with no attempt at fancy dress, was very well attended, although it is said that the antiquated professors cast suspicious eyes upon it. Believe it or not, the entertainment consisted of dancing the Virginia Reel and other similar dances to the accompaniment of a three-piece orchestra.

In Old Mill

The next year, Kake Walk was held in the loft above the chapel in the Old Mill, and it is said that a keg of beer was donated by a personage named McCarthy, proprietor of "one of those Establishments." Some of the details of this early Kake Walk have come down to us, and although they have probably been stretched a bit, they still are most amusing. One interesting sidelight to this affair (according to report) is that the students celebrated hilariously after the performance, throwing various articles of furniture through various windows, and staining up the walls with what beer they didn't drink. As a result of this scandalous behavior, Ted Randall, then the editor of the Cynic, was summoned to the office of President Buckham and requested to remonstrate with the students through an editorial. Randall, embarrassed, confessed that he, too, had been a member of the misdoers, so felt that it would be a bit unorthodox to upbraid the others. The President, evidently possessing a sense of humor, replied, "Well, you can condemn property damage, can you not?" All of which may or may not have been an actual and authentic happening, but at least it shows the wild and embryonic stages of our present-day event in an amusing light.

As a result of this second Kake Walk, it was outlawed as "an activity unbecoming to college students" by faculty members, and was not renewed for two years. Then from 1896 to 1904, Kake Walk was held annually in the Armory and the Old Opera House. During these years, the program consisted mostly of minstrel shows and satires on personalities of the Faculty. At one of these events it is extremely interesting to note that our own President Bailey took an active part, and with others dressed as chorus girls he danced a routine popular in those days. In 1904, the scene of Kake Walk shifted to the University gymnasium, where it was held until a year ago. At this time, "Walkin' fo' de Kake" come into prominence, the prize for the winning couple being a cake from the kitchen of the Marshall "Hash House." The stunts were put on by classes rather than fraternities. Later, Greek letter fraternities became the competing parties.

Many New Features

With the passing of years, Kake Walk became a highly refined art requiring a maximum of efficiency and practice. A ruling was made that each stunt must be timed; that is, each fraternity must set up their stage properties in darkness, present their skit, and then remove their properties in darkness, all in a specified amount of time.

"The Grand Peerades" were instituted not very long ago, and represent the height of originality. It is amazing what the collegiate mind can conceive in the way of characterizations, devices and contraptions.

Back in 1922, one whole issue of the Cynic was devoted to Kake Walk and included such startling news as the account of the faculty crap team trimming the Vermont Club Rollers and an advertisement of the College Book Store to sell ten bottles of "ye old brew" at a moderate price. The issue, printed in glaring red ink, was headed by the caption, "All the news that's fit to print, and much that isn't."

A new innovation was introduced in 1934, the choosing of the Kake Walk King and Queen, who reign over the Masquerade on Friday night and the main event on Saturday night. This popular election of the two reigning dieties culminates a strenuous campaign on the part of the business managers of the candidates.

There are two co-directors of Kake Walk, one in charge of production and one of finance. These directors are selected on the basis of their ability shown while scrubbing Kake Walk during their first three years in college, and share the entire responsibility of the event.

In 1937, special trains from New York and Boston brought alumni to Burlington and various banquets, breakfasts and teas were held. In 1938, the scene of Kake Walk was shifted to the Memorial Auditorium because of its advantage in seating capacity.

Kake Walk really has three great motives—it furthers the good will and spirit of the students, it has a financial significance in that it partially makes possible the southern baseball trip, and it has a great and respected traditional background which is dear to students and alumni alike.

Harvard, Vermont Sing Together Friday Night

Joint Concert to Precede Dinner And Dance

When the Harvard Glee Club and the University of Vermont Glee Clubs and Choir meet in their first joint concert at the Memorial Auditorium, Friday, February 9, the Vermont group will sing under the baton of Prof. William G. Kirby, a Harvard alumnus who was also accompanist for the Harvard Glee Club for four years. Mr. Kirby, substituting for Prof. Howard Bennett during his year's sabbatical leave, displayed his excellent qualities both as a musician and conductor, when he conducted the Christmas concert and he has already begun to train the Glee Clubs, Choir and Orchestra for the Brahm's "Requiem" which they will sing Sunday, April 28, at the Ira Allen Chapel. This presentation will replace the usual Easter concert and spring opera given by the music department. H. F. Fitzgerald '40 of Bennington, Alta Plumb '40 of Springfield, are managers of the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs, respectively. The accompanists, Nora Hill of Lyndon Center and S. R. Pike, Jr. of Burlington, have distinguished themselves on more than one occasion, and the entire student body has at some time or other enjoyed their fine performances. Miss Natalie Marston and Jane Slater will also play with the Vermont chorus.

Outstanding Conductor

G. Wallace Woodworth, "Woody" to the Harvard men, directs the Harvard Glee Club. Mr. Woodworth has also been their accompanist, and while Doctor Davison was head of the music department, was assistant conductor. The Radcliffe Choral Society is now directed by him, and he has won much praise for the fine performances of major works the Radcliffe and Harvard groups have given with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. To quote a press comment from the Boston Transcript, in a review of a performance he directed "The conception of his music is a thoroughly mature one, plastic and well considered." The glee club rehearses three times a week and "Woody" holds his men in the palm of his hand. He makes good music vital to his singers. They love it, and therein lies the reason for the excellence for their performances. Dean W. Morse is manager of the Harvard group, and Robinson Murray, Jr., assistant manager. They will be accompanied by William G. Austin and Ralph Renwick, Jr.

Entertaining Program

The Harvard men will be entertained by the Harvard Club of Vermont at a buffet supper at the Ethan Allen Club on Friday and a reception and dance in their honor will be given by Mortar Board and Boulder Societies at Southwick, following the concert.

With the excellent skiing conditions at Underhill and Stowe and the lake sufficiently frozen for skating and ice boating, it is expected that a number of them will stay for the week-end and enjoy Vermont's winter sports.

The concert program, which will be released in the next issue of the CYNIC, includes such selections as two of the most delightful choruses from the "Mikado"; music by Brahms; Italian and Czecho-slovakian Folk Songs; "Credo" by Gretchaninoff; and Bortaniansky's "Glory to the Lord in Zion." This is one concert no one is going to miss, so buy your tickets early. They go on sale Saturday, February 3 at the Book Store for 25 cents.

Rev. Max H. Webster of Burlington will conduct the Chapel service Wednesday, February 7.

As Secretary of the State Conference and having had many interesting experiences in traveling, Reverend Webster will be a most worthwhile speaker.

Early Tutoring Urged By Bureau

Phi Betes know that in order to swing a course it is necessary to start from the simplest basic fundamentals, gradually working up. Therefore, it has been advised that anyone who is low in a subject or especially anyone who is taking a make-up exam in April and needs tutoring, should apply to Mortar Board at once by calling Betty Myers '40 at the Alpha Chi house. By doing this early, it will be easier to find the right tutor and there will still be plenty of time to cover the material adequately instead of craming it all in at the last moment. If anyone feels himself slipping now, he should ask for help immediately so that he can start the semester with all work caught up instead of carrying that "sinking" feeling around with him all semester.

If there is any student especially good in a subject who would like to tutor, he should get in touch with Betty Myers and any bills for the tutorial bureau for the time on previous tutoring should be given to Betty Myers.

Judges Eliminate All But Six Kake Walk Skits

Scenarios by Sigma Phi, Tau Epsilon Phi, Lambda Iota, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Nu and Sigma Alpha Epsilon Survive Preliminary Elimination

Six of the ten Kake Walk scenarios submitted for the preliminary elimination were selected last night by the judges chosen in the Graduate Manager's office for this purpose. Every fraternity on the hill submitted a complete written description of their skit and the fraternities which survived this first elimination were Sigma Phi, Tau Epsilon Phi, Lambda Iota, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Nu, and Sigma Alpha Epsilon. The remaining four skits were eliminated by the judges who were Prof. L. W. Dean, Prof. F. Tupper, and Prof. W. B. Pope.

The judges expressed the opinion that the fraternities should spare no effort to further improve their skits by injecting more humour into them. Certain scenes were censored in some of the skits and the judges added what comments they felt necessary for the improvement of the scenarios.

Fraternities will be permitted to make such changes as they feel will improve their stunts provided such changes are approved by the judges named above.

The skits together with the comments, criticism, and censorship of the judges may be obtained this afternoon in the Graduate Manager's Office at 4 o'clock.

Women's Ski Team Places at Durham

Technically U. V. M. Girls' Score Tops

The women's ski team, sponsored by W. A. A., has suddenly jumped to one of the most important positions in this athletic organization. Starting from a group of skiers on Centennial hill, a selection was made and a Ski Club formed with six of these girls as members. Three from this club, Dorothea Smith '41, Sally Peters '42, and Barbara E. Burns '43, were chosen to participate in the ski meet at the University of New Hampshire in Durham, N. H. Girls' teams from University of New Hampshire, Middlebury, Radcliffe and Vermont competed in the downhill and slalom races. Our girls did outstanding work, Dorothea Smith placing second in the downhill event, Sally Peters fourth and Barbara Burns fifth, and Barbara came in second in the slalom and Sally fourth. Considering the amount of preparation—less than a week's drill under Otto Hollaus and Sepp Ruschp at Stowe, these girls deserve unlimited praise. Their training will continue at Stowe, in preparation for the Middlebury meet on February 16 and 17, in which two girls will compete.

Dance To Be Held For Both Glee Clubs

Semi-Formal Affair To Honor Harvard

On Friday night the University of Vermont is going to extend a welcome to the members of the Harvard Glee Club who will be in Burlington to sing in a joint concert with the Vermont Glee Club at the Memorial Auditorium. The climax of the evening is to be a reception and dance at Southwick immediately following the concert to which couples in semi-formal dress will be admitted on their concert tickets. No additional admission will be charged and everyone is welcome.

There will be a receiving line for a short while followed by light refreshments and dancing until one o'clock to the rhythm of our own Catamounts. Novel dances are being planned, and the whole affair will take on a festive party atmosphere.

It is the sincere wish of Professor Kirby that the Glee Club will return to Harvard with that pleasant feeling of having been warmly received and shown a wonderful time at U. V. M.

Stepping definitely out of the "Sophomore Flop" class, the Sophomore Hop held Friday evening at the Hotel Vermont was a decided success. Though the affair was billed as semi-formal, occasional "tuxes" were noted as Joe College and Betty Co-ed frolicked to the fast tunes of Cliff Agnew and his New Vermonters.

Prof. and Mrs. R. A. Hall chaperoned and C. A. Shortle '42 was in charge.

Aggies Make Radio Debut

Three Men Speak Over Station WGY

Station WGY of Schenectady, N. Y., featured an agricultural topics program on January 22 in which Ralph Evans '41, Harry Ketcham '40, and Hugh Ripper '40, all of the Agricultural College took part. The program which is sponsored by the Sheffield Farms Company, Inc., and goes by the name of the "Weekly Milk Bulletin" is one devoted to discussion of topics of interest in the field of Agriculture. Each of the boys described his experiences in farm work.

Mr. Evans gave some interesting comments on dairy herd improvement. He has been a tester for the Caledonia Dairy Herd Improvement Association and is specializing in dairy manufacturing and vocational agriculture.

Harry Ketcham, well known on the campus as captain of the cross-country team, stated that maple sugaring was the feature of Vermont farming that he liked the best. His description of the sugaring process was very clear and interesting.

Last of the trio to come to the mike was Hugh Ripper who was born in England and later came to Burlington to live. While in Massachusetts one year he earned money digging clams. He is now a senior in the University majoring in dairy manufacturing.

Nationwide Benefits for Finnish Relief

The courageous defense which the Finnish people are putting up for their country, their ideals, and their people has brought to them the moral support of the entire world and material aid from many sources. Under the threat of Russian invasion and the ruthless policy of aggression which that nation is attempting to take, their troops have shown a strategy, bravery and spirit which is unrivalled in the world today. Such intrepid courage as this shows that there are those who still continue to fight for all they hold dear.

The national chairman of the "Bridge of Finland" committee of the Finnish Relief Fund is Hendrick William Van Loon, well known writer of fascinating history and geography. A few days ago, Mr. Van Loon asked American University students, college groups, and other organizations throughout the country to hold benefit bridge parties during the following two weeks. The money from these benefit parties will go directly to the Finnish Relief Fund either through the local Fund headquarters, through the newspapers accepting contributions, or sent directly to headquarters, Graybar Building, New York City.

In making the appeal in this country, the well known lecturer and writer stated: "Clubs, organizations, and individuals in communities everywhere are finding that bridge benefits are a natural and entertaining way of raising money for the suffering women and children of Finland, and I feel that there are many college students who would like to participate in this way."

Dr. Van Loon stressed the fact that anyone could give a benefit card party or other affair during these two weeks and charge the players any admission fee or donation. He stated that although he expected the major response to come from different clubs and groups, he also believed that there would be a considerable number of parties sponsored by different individuals.

The attitude of the people in more fortunate countries of the world can have an effect on the morale of a courageous people who are fighting under exceedingly difficult conditions.

What the eventual outcome of all this will be we are only able to guess, but the sincere endeavors of people like Mr. Van Loon, who are working through national committees for Finnish relief deserve our praise and commendation.

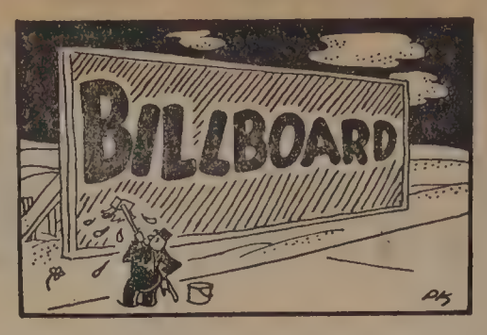
Yearly Headaches



Students have recently been heard to complain bitterly because of the fact that the work of the second semester begins so soon after the mid-year exam period.

It does seem that there should be a breathing spell, so to speak, but there is more to the matter than that which meets the eye. Obviously, the students are not the only ones who are busier than usual because of exams. The faculty must also put in long hours, not writing or studying, but correcting the exams. They must also feel that a few days of rest would indeed be welcome.

Why, you well may ask then, does this condition exist? The answer is a simple one.

A few years ago commencement exercises were not completed until late in June. It was felt then that the college year was too long and steps were made to shorten it. The result is the calendar in use at present. So we must console ourselves with the thought that, although the present calendar has some faults, it is the best answer to a difficult problem.

INTRAMURAL DAY PLACED FOR MARCH

The tradition of Intramural Day inaugurated four years ago will go forward this year on a larger scale than ever before. The day which is usually a day during the latter part of March is set aside to honor those teams and individuals who during the course of the year, March, 1939, to March, 1940, have proved themselves champions in various intramural sports. In recognition of their skill these teams and individuals are awarded the trophy which signifies excellence and superiority in the sport in which they won their championship.

The awards are made in the auxiliary gym in the afternoon and will include such sports as baseball, badminton, bowling, basketball, touch football, tennis, wrestling, golf, skiing, and relays. The managerial emblems which are to be accompanied by sweaters will also be awarded on this day.

As is usually the case the physical education department will arrange the schedules so that at least two intramural sports will be concluded on that day. Those chosen will probably include the interfraternity relays, and the intramural wrestling competition.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (ACP)—Student pilots in United States colleges and universities are careful and take no chances.

That's the conclusion that must be drawn from the report of the Civil Aeronautics Authority that collegians have flown more than 35,000 hours without a serious accident.

Begun in August, 1939, the C. A. A. pilot training program now has 9,310 participants. Exactly 1,200 of these have reached the solo stage of their training program.

The book being used is on review in the library.

A meeting will be called soon by Shirley Gray '41 for all who signed up for settlement work. The meeting will be held at the new Settlement House.

There will be also be a meeting soon of the Rock Point girls.

The Band Wagon

By Bob Johnson

Teddy Wilson

Once again it's a real treat to swing fans to see America's—the world's—A-1 pianist. A well-rounded, blended outfit featuring Ben Webster on tenor as well as Teddy on the ivories. Most of you will remember the band as it was at the Bay last summer.

Bunny (but terrific) Berigan is to give the Queen City and college cats a boot the following week—so the story goes. If you've caught this band on its broadcasts from the "Beantown" you've been raving about the new Berigan.

Surprise of the Week

Finding Jimmy Bennett and his trombone playing with Ken Lonegan. You've heard us rave about this trombone before—positively the most delightful these ears have caught outside of the big time. Russ Muirhead is also featured on tenor, and there's some good trumpet. We feel the band will go over bigger as soon as they can become accustomed to the rather difficult atmosphere.

Sonny Keefe and his Knights on the air lanes thrice weekly. Ray Blood has apparently returned to the fold—with a resulting tremendous trumpet. Sonny sends from the keyboard. "Romie" dittoes with his lick-stick and Tommy rocks along on drums with many good solo spots.

Orchids

To columnists Dotty Kilgallen (Cosmopolitan) and Paul Bowles (Modern Music) for their work in attempting, with restrictions and limitations, to educate two different sets in the matter of swing—yes swing—not the "Late Paramount news reel style."

Also to Carleton Smith (Esquire), who is equally at home with swing or the classics. His very versatility is delightful. By the by . . . . for an interesting slant on Artie Shaw see Smith's feature in the October issue of "The man of the goggle eyes—who comes around—and gets around."

Looking Around

Casa Loma, and plenty of others, greatly saddened over the death of Frankie Zullo, beloved mighty mite of their trumpet section.

Sonny Dunham, trumpet and trombone of the aforementioned ork, preparing to form another band after two unsuccessful ventures.

The Onyx Club—cradle of swing—closed.

Pet Gripes

Novelty tunes seem to be coming around in too fast a cycle—clever—commercial—drivel.

Why can't people feel the urge behind a solo? It's there in any form of art—that urge—and most of us are too blind to see it or more correctly to feel it.

After falling so flat last week we'll stick to this sort of thing. It seems—oh well! See you at Wilson—in the meantime here I am fast asleep under two tables looking for a waitress to hold up my feet. Your "Hopping John" signing off and saying it wouldn't happen at the Savoy—people clapping on the down beat.

Scribes Organize For Discussion

To Consider Many Phases of Writing

The Scribes have really finished organizing and have come into their own as a non-honorary, co-ed, democratic and informal literary group. But this does not necessarily mean that one who attends has to have an artistic grip on the pen; anybody who enjoys talking over the varied phases in the line of literature is more than welcome on every other Friday evening at 7.45 up in the Southwick supper room. The next gathering will be on the 16th of this month.

There is no business meeting and the chairman, who is elected every two meetings, arranges for any speakers and presides in a comfortable manner and position. F. Bardossi is the present chairman. Plans are being made to have different Vermont professors join in on the discussions. Miss Kathrina Storms has especially given in aiding the progress of Scribes and is the permanent advisor.

A file of all original material is being kept by Doris Jarecki, secretary, and it is hoped that all magazines on the campus will benefit from it.

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (ACP)—Priscilla Lane, cinema star, is the ideal mate. That is the unanimous opinion of the 27 male members of Dr. John J. Harton's class in psychology at Arizona State Teachers College here.

The men in the class, after answering detailed questionnaires, selected entertaining, friendly, beautiful, cheerful, considerate, helpful, honest, and intelligent (in that order) as the adjectives most applicable to the perfect wife.

After choosing the desired traits, it was the decision of the group that the embodiment of these characteristics is Miss Lane.

Hoop Hammerings

In a few hours the University of Vermont basketball team will play its third away game of the year. It's rather strange but the team in reality travels no further than it would if the game tonight were a home game for the St. Michael's clash this evening will be played in the Memorial Auditorium as are all the Vermont home games. The only difference being that ticket books will not be quite so useful. That game this evening is important as it should give some indication of how the remainder of the season should shape up. If the Cats work smoothly and efficiently tonight it will demonstrate that their performance against Middlebury was not just flash-in-the-pan calibre. On the other hand, should the game tonight prove disappointing we can all go back to our musings concerning the various and sundry failings of the University of Vermont basketball team.

Much Ado About Skiing

Both the men's and women's ski teams went traveling into the White Mountains this past week-end. The men hampered by poor ski conditions and a talent for losing themselves on the various trails were able to place no better than fifth in six-team competition. The women, on the other hand, fared much better at New Hampshire. We don't know what their standing was as a team as there is some rather incomprehensible talk about competing as individuals instead of as a team. In the downhill, Dot Smith placed second while the other two members, Sara Peters and Barbara Burns took fourth and fifth places respectively. In the slalom, Barbara Burns and Sara Peters placed second and fourth. Which all in all constitutes a most successful week-end. A. D. W.

Frats Complete Winter Sports List

The interfraternity winter sports competition which consisted of three skating races, a half-mile ski dash, a half-mile ski relay, a cross-country ski run, a slalom race, and a downhill race was concluded Sunday with Delta Psi annexing first honors, and S A E a close second.

The cross-country ski run which took place Friday over a grueling two-mile course was won by Frank Taylor of S A E in 19:30.4. Whalen of Sigma Nu and Wanig of Delta Psi followed in 20:45.0 and 20:52.4 respectively. The course was run over ground on and adjacent to the Country Club and the participants had to be competent skiers.

The slalom race took place at 10.00 a.m. Sunday on the practice slope at Underhill. Each man made two runs and the lowest total time obtained the victory. Oakes of Sigma Phi took first place with 74.2. Taylor (S A E), McClelland (Sigma Nu), Otis (Delta Psi), and Hunt (Kappa Sigma), finished in that order. The B team of the Outing Club also ran times in the slalom. The finished: Sutton (71.2), Stanley (77.1), Stockwell (89.5), and Hoyt (1:42.3). In all twenty-five men competed in this event.

At 1.30 a.m. on Sunday the downhill race took place on Stevens' Trail. The finish was extremely tight with Taylor's time of 2:30.4 eclipsing that of Oakes' by but two-tenths of a second. Hunt of Kappa Sigma was third and Small of Delta Psi was fourth. Fifth place remained a tie between Otis and Flagg, both of Delta Psi. Thirty-one men competed in this down mountain run.

Snow conditions were excellent for Sunday's events and they were run off smoothly and on time. Also there were no injuries which made the day of competition a perfect one.

Final standing of the fraternities:

	Pts
Delta Psi	28
Sigma Alpha Epsion	21
Sigma Phi	11
Sigma Nu	7
Phi Sigma Detla	4

New Educational System At Univ. of Buffalo

BUFFALO, N. Y. (ACP)—Showmanship and the techniques of the theater are coming into their own in the educational system—at least they are here at the University of Buffalo.

And, of all places, it has invaded the economics classroom, where this university's professors are teaching the ins and outs of the economic system to freshmen by posing as financiers, legislators, salesmen or laymen in acting out the lessons of the day.

With plots that are devised before classtime, the professors enact typical scenes from the world of business, government and finance.

The advantages of this new kind of teaching procedure are summed up by one of the professors in these words: "This technique keeps the subject alive. Every three or four lines there is a change of voice and a change of pace. We aim for a balanced presentation. But even if the scholarly analysis were not incisive, the mere mechanics of the presentation would keep an audience awake."

Ladd Originates Local Boys Club

Hobby Develops Into Great Social Service

by Jean Young

Thirteen years ago Prof. Benjamin Ladd came to the University of Vermont to teach German, and soon found that the city of Burlington had no recreational-supervisory agency which took small boys off the streets. Investigation proved that there was a real need for such a foundation, and several years later, Professor Ladd decided to rent a lake-front store and found a boys club. He was told that a large organization was planning to do the very same thing, on a more extensive basis, and so he relinquished his plan thinking that it would benefit the community more to have a stronger, richer group fostering this movement. But nothing happened, and the plans which had been made, failed to materialize. So Professor Ladd took up his drive where he left off. This fall, letters were sent to 100 different clubs, fraternal orders, and other prominent societies, asking them to send representatives to an important meeting at which time an important subject would be discussed, one that concerned them all. And every representative endorsed heartily this plan which was laid before them. Chief Thalacker, Chief of Police, was introduced to Professor Ladd by Mr. Olney Hill, a prominent Burlingtonian and U. V. M. Alumnus, and this meeting subsequently resulted in the close cooperation of the police officials and Professor Ladd, in attempting to organize the club. As this article goes to press (Monday night), there is an aldermanic meeting in progress at which the purpose and value of establishing such an organization, aided by the city government, and not dependent on private charity is being discussed.

Result of Hobby

That, in brief, is what has happened. On being interviewed, Professor Ladd said that he had been a member of the Boys Club in his childhood in New Haven, and the influence the college students had, as the leaders of the group, proved to be a lasting one. Later, as a student at New York University, he was connected with the College Settlement of New York—"College Settlement" being the name of the Boys Club in practically every college town of any size, where students interested in social service or Christian work can put theory into practice. Subsequently, this work has become Professor Ladd's chief hobby.

In a recent radio address, he traced the interest in aiding the underprivileged in this community to a trend of national importance, and showed that the agitation to reform conditions in Burlington is a part of a great movement which has invaded every city and town in the country.

Friendly Influence

This enlightened humanitarian stated in another address, that there is no such thing as a bad boy, and in planning the organization of the club, decided that any infraction of rules would be judged by a group of the members of the organization, with an advisor, sitting as a court, and only as a last resort would the authority of the juvenile delinquent court be invoked. There will be a library corner, games room, art table, music room for band and choral groups and a homework corner where help in school work will be given by a college student. This Boys Club is to be a friendship agency for character education. That is its purpose, and its chief means of attaining it will be through the inspired leadership of men and women who will open the doors of opportunity to the small boy, especially the one who is forced to live in a sinister environment, not conducive to proper growth.

On being questioned about the opposition this plan is encountering, Professor Ladd said, "I feel that everyone concerned is heartily in favor of the objective involved in this enterprise. There may be only a difference in procedure which can be overcome by cooperation."

Playwright Maxwell Anderson edited the University of North Dakota yearbook in 1912.

Mass. State Starts Officials' Course

AMHERST, Mass. (I.P.)—Eighteen students are being trained in the duties of officiating in football, basketball, soccer, and skiing in a unique course at Massachusetts State College.

The course, part of the major in physical education, gives students actual practice in officiating in addition to study of theory and blackboard talks on method. Students have officiated already this fall at numerous high school and prep school football games throughout the western part of the state.

At the completion of the course students will take examinations to become approved football officials and may take examinations for approved officials rating in other sports as well.

Sabomen To Face St. Michael's Tues.

Vermont to Tackle Strengthened Saints

After a three weeks' layoff the varsity basketball team returns to the wars once more on Tuesday, February 6, at Memorial Auditorium, where they oppose a St. Mike's team which has vastly improved since they last met and were defeated by the Catamounts.

With this game, the U. V. M. courteers enter upon the second half of their schedule, listing six games, which will present some stiff opposition. Included in the slate of future games are Norwich, Colgate, and Trinity, everyone of which is a sticker.

The Sabomen will probably lineup as previously with Corley and Taylor in the forecourt, Anse Belardinelli at center, and Pye and Maley covering the backcourt..

The Saints are certainly going to present some real competition and will go all out to break the Green and Gold jinx which has persistently dogged them. In the last encounter with Vermont, the Cats eked out a three-point victory. The Mikemen have been practicing intensively for the past week following their mid-year exam period, so as to be in good shape for this contest.

If the Vermont hoopsters continue where they left off before mid-years, they should be able to knock off the Purple once more. In the last start the U. V. M. boys played inspired ball to soundly trim a mediocre Middlebury team.

On Saturday of this week the gymnasts of Springfield invade Memorial Auditorum for their first encounter of the year with Vermont. This should prove to be a thrilling contest.

The Vermonters have been doing some real drilling this past week and should be in fine shape to again take up the fight. The results of the coming games will brand this year's team either good or mediocre.

The World Front

With the Finn-Russian war so far advanced (or stalemated, according to how you look at it), it may seem futile and redundant to analyze some major factors in Russia's thus far disastrous campaign. Yet we have come across some interesting statistics which seem to explain quite a few things that are happening today in the Karelian Peninsula and adjacent points.

General Purge

When Russia and France were negotiating a short while ago, the French Second Bureau or Secret Service and the French Army and Navy Intelligence found out quite a few things in regard to the Russian Army. Most revealing are their statistics on the purge in the Red Army.

According to the French report one body of the leading men in the Soviet Army were victims of the purge. Seventy-five out of eighty men in the Superior War Council disappared. Nine-tenths the political commissions of the army were removed. Sixty-two generals and special commissars were shot or imprisoned. Thirteen out of nineteen army commanders were victims. Fifteen out of eighty-five corps commanders were ditto. One hundred ten out of 195 division commanders were liquidated. In all, continues the report, 349 out of 754 men higher than regimental command succumbed to the purge. The lower ranks of the army suffered a similar loss. Replacements were rushed to fill the gaps. Often the replacements were of mediocre ability. Very few possessed great skill in warfare or technical knowledge. This lack of knowledge was well illustrated in the Spanish War when Russian officers fighting for the Loyalists made blunder after blunder.

Air and Sea

Turning to the air force a similar confusion exists, or so the report we are quoting indicates. Lindbergh's statement concerning the inadequacy of the Russian air force is brought in as supporting testimony. Russia's navy ranks high in submarines but in all other respects it cannot be counted on as a powerful factor in a war. In short, due to a lack of trained leaders the army is not the great force it is cracked up to be, the air force is weak in quality of machines, the navy is important chiefly because of its submarines. Whether the above report can be trusted all the way we don't know, but it is a good indication of conditions in the Russian military machine. Furthermore, most observers declare that though the Soviets boast a force of 14,000,000 the country could support no more than 1,000,000 men in a prolonged campaign on any frontier.

Now if we consider the opposite side of the ledger one thing stands out—this army is the best-equipped in Russian history. Guns and ammunition are not lacking. The campaign in Russia has been disastrous but as yet not a very great number of men have been employed. The leadership is no worse than that of previous Russian armies. Last of all, Russia is a rich country.

Reasons for Resistance

An analysis of the Finnish postion is one that at once impresses and depresses. The Finns are well-organized. There is a high morale among the soldiers. The terrain and climate of Finland are especially suited to an army on the defensive. Its 65,000 lakes, granite boulders and thick pine woods make it easy to defend. The scarcity of roads and entire absence of railroads on the frontier create a problem of transportation for the invaders. Last of all the Mannerheim Line is an artificial barrier hard to take. All in all the Finns seem to be fairly well prepared. But the question is can they hold out long?

Come Spring—and After?

Finnish survival is dependent on three factors: 1. Outside aid; 2. continued Russian bungling; 3. German inaction. By spring the Finns will be in a desperate situation. The military oddments thus far sent her by other countries are not enough. She needs artillery, ammunition of all kinds, planes and anti-tank equipment. Unless England and France can speed her aid Finland appears doomed. It is well to remember here that the Allies are vitally interested in Finland because the longer the war lasts there, the less aid can Germany receive economically from Russia.

Therefore we see the Finnish position as far from comfortable. Will she be the first to block the long series of aggressions that have been going on in Europe the last ten years or is she merely a small helpless object in the path of conquest? Only time can tell. But the factor of chance, of sudden reversals so common to post-war (or pre-war) events. A sudden change in the West may have far-reaching consequences. Finland banks on this slim yet tangible thread of possibility.

Quotable Quotes

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"The modern university in a democracy must be thought of as a true lighthouse which illumines the path of those who may travel in any land. An outstanding tragedy of the years through which we are now living is the disappearance of the true university in countries where it has long been of most distinguished and well-recognized competence." Columbia University's Pres. Nicholas Murray Butler mourns the loss of academic freedom abroad.

"We hold that in the battle against the super-state, against state control of thought and political control of education, it is valuable to have alongside the state universities a system of colleges not beholden, not subsidized, not so quickly amenable to political interference. The day will come when the sturdy independence of endowed colleges may help to save the others from political strangulation." Pres. Ralph C. Hutchinson of Washington and Jefferson College points to the nation's need for strong endowed colleges.

Outing Club

Twenty-one Outing Clubbers enjoy the trip on the ski bus to Underhill Sunday. The light snow Saturday night made the skiing excellent. The intramural downhill and slalom races were also seen by the group. Because of the continued success of these weekly trips a bus may be run to Stowe. If any students are interested in such a bus, they are asked to see Frances Abel '42. The Underhill bus will leave next Sunday promptly at 9.30 o'clock.

Kemp Addresses Pre-Med. Society On Applications

Freshmen Selected On Three-Fold Basis; Class Limited to 32

Dean Hardy A. Kemp of the College of Medicine addressed a well attended meeting of the newly organized Pre-Medical Society Tuesday evening at the Fleming Museum. In a brief business meeting preceding Dean Kemp's address, H. J. Rulfo of Barre, Vt., was elected junior vice-chairman to fill the vacancy left by J. P. Mahoney of Stoneham, Mass.

Dean Kemp was introduced to the pre-medical students by E. L. Davis '40, chairman of the meeting. Dean Kemp spoke primarily of the selection of the class of medical students and the factors involved therein. These he mentioned with regard to the new application forms that are being used by the University medical college this year. Since there are many more applicants for the medical college than there are places, and since it is necessary to consider applications more fully this year, a formal means of application has been devised. Dean Kemp enumerated the items that such a form of application would entail and explained the benefit of each as concerns both the college and the student. These items included family background; a record of the applicant's antecedence in the state; his school activity; a passport size photo for purposes of identification; whether financial aid would be needed and whether the applicant was worthy of aid and trust; whether the student planned to work his way through medical college (divided interests, Dean Kemp felt, were impossible in a medical college); personal health, for the best interests of the individual; whether the applicant has been afflicted with any long illness of lungs or chest, for the best interests of both the individual and his associates; and whether the applicant has had a nervous breakdown, for purposes of guarding mental health.

Class Limited to 32

The freshman medical class at Vermont is limited to 32—partially due to the fact that modern medicine is not taught from a textbook, and providing sufficient clinical material for teaching proves a problem. It is therefore necessary to limit the class, and this elimination occurs somewhat along the law of the "survival of the fittest." Dean Kemp stressed the keen competition that exists among students for places in medical colleges today.

Selection Based on Three-Fold Plan

Selection of students for the University Medical College, Dean Kemp stated, is based on scholarship, medical aptitude, and a personal interview with preference given to those students whose domicile is in Vermont (this latter more completely defined as students whose parents' homes are in Vermont). In conclusion Dean Kemp urged honesty in its deepest and broadest sense with due consideration of service on the part of each pre-medical student, particularly with regard to his reason for wishing to study medicine.

Bluestockings Meeting Held Tuesday Evening

Festivities Graced By Ruling Monarchs

King-Queen Featured Since 1934 Kake Walk

Although the Kake Walk itself dates back forty-seven long years when a group of students guzzled beer in the Old Mill loft, and the crowning of a king was with a can of beer, the legitimate selection of the Kake Walk monarchs was not introduced until 1934. At this date the student poll was for King only. The ladies, it seemed, had not collected enough courage to throw their hats into the political ring.

The following year (1935) the students thought a Queen should reign with the King, and so Jerry Kipp was chosen as the first Kake Walk Queen. Thus a new custom was established, and since then there has been close competition for the honor of King and Queen.

Last year amid terrific opposition Claire Rock and Clark Nichols emerged as King and Queen of Kake Walk.

Thus far contestants for this year's royal couple have not yet been announced.

W.A.A. Plans Novel Valentine Party

On St. Valentine's Day, Wednesday next, the W. A. A. will have a fun night, entertaining the Women of the Faculty. Everyone, whether a member of W. A. A. or not, is invited to come in costume, the only admission being an appropriate valentine! Prizes will be awarded for the best costume, and they promise to be unique and comical, judging from past years, when the faculty women came dressed in the attire of their days in college.

A basketball game between the W. A. A'ers and the faculty women will be a hilarious one with the old-fashioned gym suits sometimes (!) impeding the speedy foot work, we fear. Other games will be played, too.

So everyone come out to Southwick next Wednesday, pick your valentine, and stay from 7.15 to 10.00.

Rev. Max Webster Is Chapel Speaker

The Rev. Max Webster brought to mind the challenge of the most impressive words of the Lord's prayer, "now and forever," in his chapel service speech Wednesday, February 7.

In the light of the present and the future, as we bear the scrutining of eternity, the purposes, aims and vocations of our everyday lives assume a new importance. Decisions are made as the individual launches out independently to stand by himself for a great purpose. The deep challenge of these words, "now and forever," comes to one in the quietness of his inner heart.

Museum to Feature "Three-Artist" Water-Color Display

Modern Trend Marks Work of P. Kaiser, E. Way, and A. Healy

"A three-man show" is being exhibited throughout the entire month in the Art Gallery located on the top floor of the Fleming Museum. It is interesting to consider that although this exhibition is called a three-man show it consists of the works in "water colors" of one man and two women: Arthur Healey of Middlebury, Martha Way of Salisbury and head of the art department of the University of Ohio in Athens, Ohio, and Peggy Kayser of England.

Healy Masculine Element

Arthur Healey, whose water colors have received national appreciation, contributes the masculine viewpoint in this show. His paintings are largely landscapes represented in the most realistic manner of the group and handled in a masterly way. The fact that he has exhibited here before makes his work doubly interesting. A vast improvement in his work is evident in this, his biggest exhibition.

Martha Way has painted for a number of years and is steadily gaining success and recognition. Like Mr. Healey, she has entered many of her works in exhibitions held in the foremost cities of the country, and received from them many prizes for her masterly work.

English Guest Artist

Miss Way's work differs greatly from Mr. Healey's, since she approaches every subject from the standpoint of design and color, producing brilliant effects which are more popular in the galleries of great centers than those of small towns. Burlington must not class itself as a member of the latter group as its inhabitants appreciate and understand her type of work as well as that of other great artists. Miss Way's subjects generally deal with the great industries from New York to California.

The guest artist of the month is Peggy Kayser of England, whose work is represented by four small water colors of varying subject matter and technique. A newcomer in the field of art, Miss Kayser has already won recognition in numerous English galleries which is only the beginning of a brilliant career.

The collection of these three artists, which total forty paintings, offers an opportunity to spend a pleasant hour in the art gallery, becoming familiar with varying techniques in the delightful field of water colors.

DISCUSSION GROUPS SPONSORED BY YWCA

A series of discussion groups among women students of the University of Vermont, which is intended to examine the problems of "Christian and Unchristian Society and Its Relation to Modern Life" has been announced, to start this Thursday, February 8, at the Southwick Building. The Rev. Percy C. Ladd, pastor of the College Street Congregational Church in Burlington, will lead the discussions, and all women students are invited to attend them. Source of some of the material to be considered in the discussion series is a book, "Christians in an Unchristian Society," available in the University library, which interested students are being advised to read. This book, one of the Hazen series, was written especially for the viewpoint of youth by youth, the authors being college Christian study groups.

U. V. M. Musical Groups To Sing With Harvard

Mortar Board-Boulder Reception at Southwick Following Concert in Honor of Visiting Glee Club

Tonight marks the joint Harvard-Vermont Glee Club concert, that long-awaited event which will mark a highlight in the musical fare of several seasons. Burlington has been fortunate in securing some of the greatest names in the musical world of two continents, and tonight, another group of international fame, the Harvard Glee Club, sings with one of New England's finest collegiate musical organizations, the U. V. M. Glee Clubs and Choir. This concert has received attention throughout the State, and tickets have been reserved for many people from a wide radius, indicating how interested the public is.

This afternoon at 4.25 o'clock the Harvard men arrive on the Rutland, and after leaving their baggage at the Hotel Vermont, will go to the Memorial Auditorium where they will rehearse with the Vermont Glee Clubs and Choir.

The Harvard Club of Vermont will be hosts at a dinner at the Ethan Allen Club for the visitors, and at 8.00 they will be in their places in the Auditorium. After the concert there will be a reception and dance at Southwick, given by the senior men and women's honor societies, Boulder and Mortar Board.

Hostesses Chosen

Approximately forty women of the University have been chosen to be hostesses at the affair after the concert, which, incidentally, is strictly a semi-formal occasion, and will entertain the Harvard students. They have been assigned to different duties, with one group taking them through the receiving line, and another, entertaining. Mrs. Holden Bickford has assumed the responsibility of teaching the co-eds a few tricks that students at women's colleges take as a matter of course—cutting in, and asking that tall-dark-and-handsome Greek god for the next dance.

This concert marks the first public appearance of the Vermont Glee Clubs this season, and while preparing for this event, Prof. W. G. Kirby has been rehearsing his three groups, the glee clubs and the choir, for the spring offering which will take the place of the traditional Easter concert and spring opera, Brahm's "Requiem." The Harvard chorus is scheduled to give this same work with the Wellesley College choir at Wellesley College, March 17. The first week in April the Harvard men start on their spring tour, and their itinerary includes a series of concerts in New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. They will also sing at Boston Symphony Hall with the Boston Philharmonic Symphony under the direction of Serge Koussevitsky.

Student Tickets 25c

This concert is not one which anyone will want to miss, and for this reason student tickets are only 25 cents; and that includes all students from the different schools in the city as well as the folks on the hill. Other seats are on sale for 50 cents, $1.00 and $1.50. You will be hearing the group who will sing to a packed house in Town Hall, New York City, where the lowest price seats will probably be more than the front-row reserved section will be here in Burlington, and it's a musical treat that will long be remembered.

Health Council Dance February 17

Girls Take Initiative At Poverty Ball

As the month of February rolls into full swing, comes the Health Council Poverty Dance, which eases everyone's pocketbook and the usual distress over the clothes problem. It offers a casual, easy-going, but enjoyable dance in preparation to the strenuous and hilarious Kake Walk week which follows close behind.

The dance—Saturday night, February 17, at Southwick, with the New Vermonters gladly offering swing for a few pennies from 8.30 to 12.00.

The costume—any old thing, flashy or dull, torn or just holey, in which you can feel at ease. A prize will be awarded for the most unique one.

The admission—girls, if you bring a date, it's 99 cents; if you decide to battle the mob alone, 59 cents.

So come one, come all, to the Poverty Dance.

Committees Chosen For Sugar Party

Annual Affair Held To Honor Dean Hills

The U. V. M. Aggie Club met in Morrill Hall, Wednesday, February 7, at 7.15. Plans were started for Dean Hills' annual sugar party to be held March 8. Chairmen of the various committees were elected. Manager (general) G. Page '40; snow, C. Lafley '40; syrup, J. Rogers '40; publicity, F. Nye '41; entertainment, R. Evans '41; finance, H. Ketcham '40.

Following this Doctor Ellenberger showed pictures of the dairy products and stock-judging teams at Eastern States Exposition. For the first time in the history of the University, keys were presented to the members of the judging teams. It was through the efforts of the Aggie Club that these keys were received. Members of the dairy cattle judging team are H. Nelson '40, R. Dana '40, H. Ketcham '40, and M. Wells '40, alternate. Members of the dairy products judging team are J. Whitworth '40, G. Pitman '40, G. Page '40, and J. Rogers '40, alternate.

Pictures were then shown of the new dairy barn in the process of construction, winter scenes around Burlington, and of a trip which Doctor Ellenberger took in the West a few years ago.

The meeting was adjourned, after which refreshments of chocolate milk and cookies were served.

Prof. Nuquist to Address Faculty Research Club

Mr. A. E. Nuquist of the political science department is going to speak at the monthly meeting of the Faculty Research Club on Tuesday, February 20. His subject will be "Chinese Legal Codes as Causation and Effect of Chinese Political Theory." The Research Club is a faculty organization which gives the members the opportunity of presenting papers on various subjects. These subjects are then thrown open to discussion.

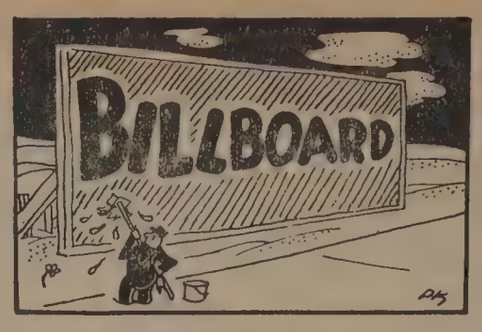
Registrars' Despair

Mid-year examinations have come and gone, leaving in their wake a group of potential Phi Betes on the one hand and on the other a band of dispirited students. A certain percentage of the student body always emerge from this period with a fine record and at the same time a certain unfortunate lot falls by the wayside. The remainder of the student body are scattered between these two extremes. This, of course, is only another evidence of the existence of the curve of normal probability.

Every college student is aware of the existence of such a curve and it is not a difficult task to account for its existence. In any large group we can be fairly sure of a certain number of naturally gifted people who have better than average intelligence. In this same group will be found a number of people of less than average intelligence. The remainder, composing the majority of the total group, will be found in between the two extremes and we can safely assume that they are possessed of average intelligence.

This whole discussion leads up to a topic which is annually brought to the fore at this particular time of the year. One constantly hears people trying to account for the large number of fatalities after the exam period. Undoubtedly the points already brought out above account for many of the results of those hectic two weeks but the solution is not as simple as that.

Many students, aware of the existence of the normal probability curve, are still unsatisfied with that as an answer. They have been heard to remark: "I can't imagine how so-and-so flunked out; he worked pretty hard and was certainly far from stupid." We too at times are surprised to hear that certain students have left school because of low scholastic ratings.



The whole matter has caused us to cogitate more than a little over the perplexing problem. We have attempted to find a solution and comments heard on campus of late lead us to believe that we have found one of the major reasons for some of the seemingly unaccountable failures.

Not all, but a good deal, of the trouble can be traced to the difficulties arising out of a poorly arranged examination schedule. We do not say this with the thought that those who make out the schedule have deliberately attempted to make as difficult a schedule as possible for the students. We are cognizant of the difficulties which must attend this undertaking. Many students, because of a change of curriculum, cause unforeseen conflicts to arise.

However, we do feel that there is a case for the student who is following his curriculum closely, taking those courses which are required of him each year. He should be shown more than a little consideration but at present in many cases he is not.

We feel that the majority of the student body must be following their curriculum rather closely. True, there are probably a goodly number of them who are not but they are definitely in the minority. If anyone should suffer—if anyone must be faced with a schedule of closely grouped exams—it should be students in the latter category.

We know of several cases in which students, following their curriculum exactly, have had several exams grouped together in quick succession. It seems to us that something could be done to remedy this situation. Possibly there would not be quite as many empty seats in the classrooms at the beginning of the second semester if this situation were remedied. We petition the powers that be to take steps to improve our next schedule of exams.

Free Leap Year Skating Party Will Be Feb. 29

Skating to music on the University of Vermont rink will furnish leap year entertainment for students on the day that comes only once in four years, February 29. The rink will be open to students free of charge, with music provided and hot refreshments on sale.

Other February events sponsored by the University Outing Club are to be a Valentine's Day sleigh ride, with Prof. H. A. Prentice, head of the men's physical education department, chaperoning, and a program of ski movies February 8. The movies will be shown at the Southwick Memorial Building, and Dorothea Smith of Burlington, manager of the women's ski team, is in charge.

The Outing Club is also sponsoring a series of bus trips to the Underhill skiing center on Sundays in order to provide convenient and cheap transportation for ski-minded students.

Guess Who?

Who am I? Well, that shouldn't be hard to guess. After all, I can always be spotted around campus anytime; like many seniors, I have practically become a tradition at U. V. M. Everyone knows me, and to know me is to love me, so figure it out for yourself.

What do I look like? I'm definitely the attractive type, with blue eyes and red hair which I wear in a page-boy and I'm five feet four in my stocking feet.

I like extremes, having been born in Jacksonville, Florida, and now living in Farmington, Maine (nowhere near Portland incidentally).

I am 21 (can now vote and marry without consent), am the only child and the daughter of a doctor who graduated from U. V. M.

My distinguishing characteristic is eating maple nut sundaes at Brown's, take care of children (15c an hour and no tax—and the kiddies love it), and used to play the violin, which is something in common with Jack Benny, any way. I also talk in my sleep, but have only been known to mutter; never to commit myself by answering questions. Oftentimes I sleep, study or knit. I haven't the slightest idea what I'll do next year, but I'm very interested in social service.

What—you still don't know? Well, I've heard say I'm a sucker for a bargain (but I never get stung!). I take social science, am a member of W. A. A., John Dewey Club, a sorority (that would be giving it away); have been on the dean's list for three years, am taking the new recreational course and I was on the Junior Prom committee.

I love to bowl, play badminton (at which I am very good), and swim (which is very hard in the winter because it costs too much). U. V. M. also rates tops with me, with steak, blond fellows, football games (and I really know what it's all about; listen to me yell some time).

The name Freddie appeals to me; I never miss the funnies in the Boston Herald, and think the Kappa Sigs are extremely—well, extremely! Like most college students, I love all kinds of music and since everyone else prefers Glenn Miller, why be different?

I'm dying to go to Bermuda, like Harvard Law, and I adore exploring old houses, and intensely dislike tripe, although I have never tasted it. Lastly, I am an excellent cook (no advertising intended) and have no specialties, although I boil eggs very well.

So this is the story of Mademoiselle X. If you don't know me now, you never will.

Good guessing!

Indian Baby Cradle Display At Museum

How a Seneca Indian mother made sure that her baby was always safe and prevented from getting into trouble while she was busy is shown in an exhibit appearing in one of the special display cases in the entrance hallway of the Fleming Museum, University of Vermont. In this exhibition a model Indian baby is shown strapped into his cradle board in the traditional fashion used by the Senecas.

According to the explanatory material which is furnished with the display, a Seneca Indian mother did not have to worry about her baby swallowing sticks or sucking his thumb because of this device which allowed her to keep him always close at hand, often strapped to her back, and always fastened snugly on to his cradle board with his hands and feet bound close. Strangely enough, say students of Indian life, the babies didn't seem to mind, and it has often been said that as a result they grew into straight and stalwart people.

A picture showing a Seneca warrior, perhaps similar to the baby's father, is included with the display. The Seneca Indians were one of the "Five Nations" which made up the powerful federation of the Iroquois in New York. This federation sided with the English in the wars against the French. Otherwise, the historians point out, a great deal of our continent might have been under French rule.

Over 3,000 Seneca Indians still live on the Indian reservation of New York State. The cradle board shown, and the beaded bindings which fasten the b to it, were made by some of these dians under the Federal Indian Art P ect and are loaned to the Fleming M seum by the Rochester Museum of A and Sciences. The "baby" shown modeled by Marion Guild of Burlingt a member of the Federal Art Project Vermont, and was cast in wax in Fleming Museum.

Second Half Spurt Wins for St. Mike's As Corley Nets 25

Paul's Shooting Gives Vermont Midway Lead; Winners' Moriarty Hurt

The little college from Winooski came through to down the Catamounts 61-56 at Memorial Auditorium Tuesday night. A goal of seven years' standing was attained. At last a Vermont scalp was annexed. The Mikemen by virtue of this victory went into a tie with Norwich for the Green Mountain Conference lead, and also avenged a 42-39 Vermont licking taken in December.

Paul Corley Scores 25

Both teams took turns getting hot during the first half and the lead see-sawed back and forth six times. Paul Corley, who parted the netting twelve times from the floor and once from the foul line for a total of 25 points, bolstered the

PAUL CORLEY '41

U. V. M. offense in the first period by dropping in 15 of the Catamount 31 points. The Green and Gold led at half time 31-28.

The first part of the second period was but a continuance of the first period action as the lead changed hands seven times. The Mikemen were using their man to man defense with good effect, and the Catamounts were being forced to take shots from the side and one-handers going away. While tying up their opponents the royal Purple took advantage of every break and passed and shot with deadly accuracy.

Fitzgibbons Enters Fray

With both teams deadlocked at 43-all, Fitzgibbons, substitute center, entered the fray and collected three hoops and a foul shot in quick succession. This was all the encouragement the Ryanmen needed. Their defense grew even tighter, and Pro Herbert and Jules Pequignot took turns sparking the offense. After they finished their evening's work Herbert had 15 points to his credit and Pequignot was but one point behind him.

Cats Fight Back

The Cat offense was sluggish in spots, but during the last few minutes of play they staged a brilliant drive in which Healy and Corley combined to cut down the 13-point lead which St. Michael's had established. They had only time to chop it to a five-point lead, however, before the final gun sounded. They were aided greatly in this attempt by Belardinelli, who played his usual good game against the Mikemen. Anse was responsible for 13 points and set up many more.

Moriarty Suffers Injury

Blackie Moriarty, veteran St. Mike's guard, collided with Frank Taylor during the first period and suffered a bad cut on his left ear and loss of consciousness for a time. He recovered very soon and an examination revealed that his injury was not serious.

Kappa Sigma, Sigma Nu Advance in Hoop Play

Kappa Sigma and Sigma Nu fives triumphed in Wednesday's interfrat basketball twin-bill at the gym, both quintets prolonging undefeated records to keep abreast of the pace-setting Delta Psi club. The Kappa Sigs romped over Phi Delta Theta, eliminating the College Streeters, who had bowed once previously, from the tourney. Sigma Nu rallied in the closing minutes to edge out Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 36 to 30. It was the first loss for the rangy S. A. E.'s, who had rolled up huge scores in two earlier games and were regarded as the team to beat.

Gymnast Dribblers Beaten But Once

Springfield College, perennial top-rank team in New England collegiate hoop circles, moves into Burlington today from Middlebury, where the Gymnast five played Ben Beck's Panthers last night. Springfield collides with St. Michael's at Winooski Park tonight and engages Vermont tomorrow night at Memorial Auditorium.

Beaten only once this season, the Maroon boasts a nucleus of the same club which whipped Vermont at Springfield a year ago. St. John's of Brooklyn handed Springfield its only setback, 42-39, and was extended to the limit in doing so. The Gymnasts turned in a convincing triumph over highly touted Boston University the other night.

Catamount Coach Johnny Sabo hopes his boys will not lose heart over their defeat at the hands of St. Michael's Tuesday. The Vermont mentor commended his team for the performance it gave against an outfit that had an inspired night.

Sabo will probably maintain his regular starting line-up, which has Paul Corley and Dick Healy in the forecourt, Anse Belardinelli at center, and Capt. Frank Taylor and Don Maley at guards. The versatile Bill Pye will see copious service.

FOOTBALL FACTS

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

Intercollegiate football — greatest crowd-attractor of all collegiate sports—closed its 1939-40 season in a grand sports banquet of bowl games—a year that hung up many new records of one sort or another.

Here are interesting facts and figures on the gridiron season just closed:

Field-goals and points after touchdown provided the margin of victory in 209 intercollegiate pigskin battles. This is 60 more than last year.

There were 184 tie games in the season.

Attendance at college games rose one per cent over the previous season. Greatest gains were in the south (11 per cent) and in the Rocky Mountain area (19 per cent).

With a record of more than 400,000 home-game paid admissions, U. C. L. A. had the largest "gate" in the nation.

There was a drop of 25 per cent in football fatalities since last year.

Green Mountain Trips Frosh Five, 37-31, At Poultney

Junior College Quintet's Drive Gains Revenge For Earlier Setback

Playing with a juggled line-up, the Vermont freshmen could not keep up the pace set by the "Neighborhood Gang" of Green Mountain Junior College and were downed by a score of 39-31.

This contest proved the loss of the freshmen's star pivot man, Norm Beaulieu, was a costly one.

At the half the score was 22-21, but in the second half the Greenies pulled away.

The high scorer of the evening was Doherty, who tossed in 16 points in a vain attempt to give the Kittens their second straight victory over G. M. J. C. Pagores and Webster pulled the Green Mountain attack by scoring 21 points between them.

Quizzical Quiz

If Professor Quiz ever became a college president, he'd turn things upside down, literally. He'd make the students teachers, and have the teachers bring the apples. The professor has a theory that college students are brighter than the people who teach them. What's more, he can prove it.

The professor, heard with Bob Trout on CBS, has made several personal tours around the country, running informal quizzes at a number of colleges. In fifteen quiz contests between students and faculty, students have won fifteen times. The faculty is doing great when its number one man scores as high as the lowest student.

The professor explains that this happens because students know less, and as a result have more limber minds, easily adapted for quizzing. He likes college students on his program. To get on the show, and maybe win $25, write him care of CBS.

High school students are his real problem, though. They know still less and consequently their minds are more limber—altogether too limber, in fact, because they answer so many questions correctly that the other contestants just look silly.

Can't Happen Here

This summer a fellow from St. Michael's took a deep breath. And what is more important he managed to gulp out—all on that one breath—that St. Mike's would defeat Vermont one game in basketball this winter. He didn't believe it any more than we believed that the Catamounts were so many points better than Tennessee or somebody in football as was neatly figured out on paper. Nevertheless we'll bet that he became slightly inebriated last Tuesday night when the unexpected happened and the Winooski boys emerged victorious on the long end of a 61 to 56 count. He had reason to. For the past five years St. Michael's has served no other purpose than to augment the Vermont winning percentage. But now the underdog has arisen. And what an uprising! The game that those boys played will probably be entered in the annals of the St. Michael's Hall of Fame. Teams have played better basketball before but we doubt if a team has ever been so far above its collective head. Still more praise should be given the victors for it is undeniable that Vermont was also playing heads-up basketball that night. Any team that scores 56 points in 40 minutes of basketball is far from off-form. Definitely not Paul Corley who tossed in 25 points. Incidentally against the Panthers a few weeks ago Paul was second high scorer with 14 points. His sudden high-scoring spree gives the remainder of this season a slightly rosier hue and perhaps will garnish next year's schedule in a brilliant manner. Speaking of next year, authenticity has it that Vermont definitely will not compete against Fordham in Madison Square Garden next winter. It seems that such a game was never scheduled and the rumor that it was planned was hushed about to too many people. . . . Incidentally, Tuesday's CYNIC will contain something of an innovation. The game against Springfield College tomorrow night will be decided for you by a student in the school who definitely knows his basketball—presenting Hank Beauchemin. . . . Point of interest—the women's ski team which competed individually at New Hampshire last week-end did compile sufficient points to run off with first place honors. . . . Moreover, we have recently ascertained the reason why the women's ski team competes individually and we find the reason a creditable one. In team competition there is the ever-present tendency to give of one's all for the glory and stuff of the team while in individual competition the competition is under no such strain. This system places the emphasis upon the sport itself, not upon victory, yet it keeps the spirit of competition keen.

Weather Note: Education took a holiday recently at Connors (Okla.) State Agricultural College—not because it wanted to but because it was frozen out of house and home.

When a sudden cold wave descended, all water pipes in the college buildings were frozen, students and boilers didn't have water—so classes were dismissed until the first thaw. "Thaw, thaw, stay away," was the students' chant for several days.

Dorothy Dix Note: Most unorthodox was a query received recently by an Ohio State University faculty office: "Can you tell me the approximate cost of loving per month for a couple?" Needless to say, the question was not answered as written.

Color Note: Superstitions come and superstitions go, claims the University of Idaho's psychologist Allan C. Lemon, but one that college students stick with is this: Blondes are less trustworthy than brunettes.

Correspondence Note: Believed the longest personal telegram in history, Alabama Polytechnic Institute students despatched a 7,000 word wire to Bandman Kay Kyser inviting him to play on their campus. The wire was signed by every member of the student body.

New Course Offered In Administration

Prof. A. E. Nuquist to Teach Public Affairs

The nature and development of administrative agencies and services in our national, state and local governments are being studied by political science students of the University of Vermont who have enrolled for a new course, given for the first time this college year at the University. In the work of this course in public administration, particular attention is given to the new governmental agencies, which exercise quasi-legislative and quasi-judicial functions. Budget, merit, purchasing and accounting systems are analyzed and evaluated with reference to the public interest. The course meets three times a week, and students who take it are required to have completed the elementary course in political science which is given as a foundation for other studies in this field. Dr. Andrew E. Nuquist is the instructor.

Prof. Daniel B. Carroll, head of the political science department, states that the introduction of this course at the University of Vermont is consistent with a trend throughout the country. Many new courses in the field of public administration, he stated, are being given in schools and colleges throughout the United States, in order to keep education in pace with the great expansion of the administrative agencies in local, state and national governments.

Massachusetts State College has the only two-year hotel stewarding course in the country.

A special course for the college maids and porters has been announced by Bryn Mawr College.

Syracuse Appoints Gov't Correlative Committee

SYRACUSE, N. Y. (ACP)—Designed to give students a voice in the conduct of their courses and the method of presentation of subject matter, a five-man student committee has been appointed by the men's student government of Syracuse University to hear and correlate all suggestions, inquiries, and complaints and present them to the proper administrative authorities.

Suggestions for improvement of subject matter or classroom presentation and complaints against texts or instructors will be handled by the committee, to be known as the suggestion and inquiry committee. Petty or insincere complaints will be disregarded. Students must submit their suggestions or complaints in writing to the committee. All communications must be signed, but the signatures will not be made known to any but the committee. Material will go to the deans of the respective colleges, or to administrative officers, unsigned, according to the plan.

Quotable Quotes

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"Viewed in the large, research in the social sciences has become of transcendent importance if we are to know how to guide society into safer ways. History must come first so that we know how we have behaved and perhaps why." Pres. Ray Lyman Wilbur of Stanford University asks historians to chart our past life as a guide to our future activities.

"The institution where women study must make careful provision for the stimulation of interest of permanent rather than passing value. It must excite in young women an interest in books, so that their lives will be refreshed by good reading; it must encourage them to cultivate a hobby to which they can turn when perhaps their children are grown. It must also give them an intelligent appreciation of art and music, not as 'female accomplishments' but as vigorous interests for a lifetime." Wilson College's President Paul S. Havens lucidly outlines the aims of the woman's college.

B. Brown Revealed As Flood Operator

WIMFL Builder Radioed Mid-West Flood News

It was during the tragic flood a few years ago that, in an area most severely hit by hurricane and flood waters, communications with the outside world were irreparably damaged, the roads blocked, and the situation acute. In the midst of all the desolation, as a last resort, the only radio operator in the area began sending his messages across the miles of destruction and tragedy, hoping against hope, that someone would pick up his calls. The people waited, and continued to wait, without being rewarded. Then something happened. A young man, sitting at his set in Denver, Colo., caught the desperate signals, and for two days and nights, as lists of the dead and rescued came through, received and retransmitted them. That was the dramatic story I was told—briefly—unassumingly—as I sat in the University's short wave radio station, the home of W1MFL, and it reconstructed itself as Mr. Brown of Denver, Colo., contacted a gentleman from Indiana, and for the next half hour, the president of Munsey conversed with him over hundreds of miles as though they were talking over the backyard fence. It was a neighborly chat, and I was told that it was possible to do that anywhere in the world. Lingual difficulties have been solved by the use of an International Morse Code, otherwise known as "Q" Signals; consequently, communicating with Japan, South Africa or Zanzibar is no more difficult than it is to contact the amateur operator from Indiana. Eavesdropping on others' conversation is, in this instance, ethical, as well as entertaining, and although most of the conversation is along technical lines, a limitless range of topics occupy the air-waves.

Smallest Ants Used In N. Dakota Laboratory

GRAND FORKS, N. D. (ACP)—Floating in a test tube on the desk of Dr. Neal Weber, University of North Dakota associate professor of biology, are eight of the smallest ants in the world.

So small that 12 of them together would be the size of one pinhead, the tiny insects were discovered by Dr. Weber last summer in central African jungle near the Belgian Congo border in the Sudan. The professor's specimens have proved to be 25 per cent smaller than any other ants known to man.

50,000 Amateur Sets

WIMFL is one of the 50,000 sets in the United States at present, and there is both a key and microphone for transmission. It seems very simple to say that when the sound filters into the microphone it is transmitted to the speech amplifier and relayed to the radio-frequency transmitter where, after being superimposed on the radio frequency, it is conducted out onto the antenna which sends the sound around the earth. But when you have seen the equipment which Mr. Burton P. Brown, the tall engineering research fellow, with a delightful sense of humor and a western drawl, has constructed, one marvels, even in this age of science, at the potentialities of the instrument, and is awed at the realization of what has already been accomplished.

"Hams" Widespread

Amateur operators, scattered through the length and breadth of this sphere, have a common interest which binds them, thus forming a virtual brotherhood which neither distance nor differences in language can weaken. Through mutual cooperation they are pushing back the frontier of the unknown in the radio world, and are steadily hurdling barriers which heretofore have seemed insurmountable.

Officials to be Elected for Coming Important Events

Junior, Senior Week Committees Chosen This Week and Next

Officials for Junior Week, a social high spot on the calendar of the University of Vermont, occurring in May, and Senior Week, closing the regular academic year in June with commencement activities, will be nominated early next week and elected a week later, according to an announcement made public by the secretary of the University Council, Dean Elijah Swift. The seniors of the class of 1940 will hold a meeting to make nominations for the chairman and business manager of Senior Week Tuesday, February 13. Elections for these offices will be held February 20.

Juniors of the class of 1941 met Monday, February 12, for the purpose of nominating candidates for chairman and business manager of Junior Week. The class will elect its choices for these positions Monday, February 19.

The University Council specifies that all meetings for nominations will be held in Room 27, Science Hall, at 4.00 p.m., and all elections will take place in the office of the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences from 9.00 to 12.00 a.m. and 2.00 to 4.30 p.m. Additional nominations, it is announced, may be made by petition signed by at least fifteen qualified voters of the class concerned and presented to the Committee on Student Elections at least three days in advance of the election. Prof. Daniel B. Carroll, head of the political science department, is chairman of the Committee on Student Elections.

Reception Held For Harvard Glee Club

U. V. M. and Harvard Honored After Concert

Following the joint concert of the Harvard Glee Club and the University of Vermont Glee Clubs and choir, Mortar Board and Boulder societies sponsored a semi-formal dance at Southwick on Friday evening, February 9. The dance was in honor of the Harvard undergraduates who participated in the concert.

Approximately 125 couples were present. The Harvard students were entertained by forty Vermont co-eds. The Campus Catamounts furnished the music. The stage was lighted with softly blended orchid blue and punch was served in an adjoining room to those desiring.

In the receiving line were Dean Simpson, Dean and Mrs. Swift, Dr. and Mrs. A. T. Davison, Mr. G. Wallace Woodworth, Miss Freda M. Harris, Prof. W. G. Kirby and members of Mortar Board and Boulder.

The dance followed the concert at Memorial Auditorium in which all musical organizations taking part showed themselves of remarkable training. The visitors were excellent in every rendition and their accompanists should receive special note, particularly for the artistry shown in the "Tarantella."

An appreciative audience attended the concert and was highly gratified by an outstanding performance.

CORRECTION—John Dewey Club will meet Thursday, February 15 instead of the 26th of the month, as originally printed.

Poverty Dance Set For Saturday Night

Ladies Choose Escorts; Old Clothes in Order

This is leap year, and University of Vermont girls are being offered the chance of taking advantage of it at bargain rates, with a Poverty Dance which is also a Ladies' Choice scheduled for Saturday evening, February 17. If University students are feeling poverty-stricken after the holidays and if they have been overtaken by mental poverty following mid-year examinations, they may spend an economical evening dancing, at ninety-nine cents a couple. Clothes don't matter at these affairs, and any piece of hopsacking which the students can furbish up will do very well. In fact, ragged costumes are at a premium for this affair.

Further reductions in admission prices for the benefit of leap-year-minded girls allow one to attend the dance stag for only fifty-nine cents. Women who choose to pay their fifty-nine cents will find it perfectly all right to cut in on any man they fancy.

The affair will be held at Southwick from 8.30 to 12.00 and the admission—easy to remember (you always get a penny's change whether you take a date or not) is either 99 cents or 59 cents.

Prof. and Mrs. J. H. Perry and Prof. and Mrs. L. S. Rowell will chaperone the affair.

Mary Arms '40 and Betty Taylor '40 have been in charge, and the dance has all the appearances of being very successful, so come one, come all! See you Saturday night.

Rev. Jones Chapel Speaker

The Rev. C. S. Jones of the First Congregational Church of Burlington will be the chapel speaker on Wednesday, February 14.

Reverend Jones is well known to many college students and always has a very worthwhile message.

Naval Reserve Offers Flight Training Course

Representatives from the U. S. Naval Reserve Aviation Base at Boston, Mass., will be at the University of Vermont on Thursday, February 15, from 10.00 a.m. on to interview students interested in enrolling in the Naval Reserve for flight training. Men who have had two years of college training, including a course in mathematics and one in physics, are eligible to apply for this training.

John Dewey Club To Meet Thursday

There will be an important meeting of the John Dewey Club on Thursday evening, February 15, at 8.00 at Southwick. At this time there will be initiation of any who wish to join if they are eligible by having received a B for one semester in either Psychology or Philosophy. In making out the Ariel list we find it necessary to drop from the membership roll all those members who failed to pay their dues last year or first semester this year. Heath Riggs '40 will accept any dues between now and Thurday night. The dues are reduced to 25 cents a semester. In case there are any who are debarred from membership by non-payment of dues, but who wish to stay in the Club, please notify either Heath Riggs, treasurer, or Doris Kinsley, secretary, before Thursday night, or the names will be dropped.

The speaker for the coming meeting is to be Rev. E. A. Parkhurst from Williston, and he takes for his subject "Principles of Social Philosophy." Any who heard him in Chapel some weeks ago will be assured of his qualifications as a stimulating speaker. Refreshments and an informal discussion will follow the speaker.

Social Philosophy Subject of Meeting

The John Dewey Club will meet Thursday, February 15, at Southwick. Reverend Parker will speak on "Social Philosophy."

Rules Announced For Annual Kake Walking

Judges to Make Awards on the Basis of Carriage, Position, Teamwork, Smoothness; Eighty Percent of Judgment on Walking

Kendall F. Beaton, chairman of the 1940 Kake Walking Committee, has released the list of rules which will govern the walking this year. These rules are as follows:

1. Each fraternity and the Independents will be allowed to enter one couple.

2. Each couple will be allowed two minutes of walking. A warning bell will be sounded one-half minute before the time is up.

(3) To be eligible for competition in the stunts, each fraternity must enter a pair of kake walkers. A drawing to determine the position of the walkers will be held a short time before Saturday, February 24. You will receive notice of the drawing at a later date.

The judges' awards will be based on the following:

(1) Carriage, position of head and shoulders, knee action, position of toes—30 percent.

(2) Teamwork and smoothness—30 percent.

(3) Grace—20 percent.

(4) Costuming—15 percent.

(5) Stunts—5 percent.

You will please note that special steps, etc., will count only 5 percent. Eighty percent of the judgment will be based on straight kake walking, (1), (2) and (3).

As soon as you have definitely selected the entrants for your fraternity, please inform Kendall F. Beaton (phone 4748). Be sure to have costumes ordered in plenty of time.

The band will be at the gymnasium Thursday afternoon, February 22, at 4.00 o'clock. At that time each fraternity's walkers will be allowed a reasonable amount of time to practice.

Kake Walk Royalty Candidates Listed

Seven Students to Start Campaigning

With the annual mid-winter festival of Kake Walk less than two weeks away, the students at U. V. M. have been frantically wondering who will be the candidates for the royal crown of Kake Walk. Tradition at Vermont rules that the festive occasion be presided over by a king and queen. The royal couple always lend a majestic atmosphere to the occasion, and the evening's performance is presided over with great dignity.

H. V. Middleworth '40, chairman of the King and Queen Committee, has announced that the following students have made known their candidacy for the coveted honor. For Queen, Sally Rome '42 and Laura Hawley '43 are campaigning. For King, there promises to be a battle royal among Mark K. O'Toole '42, Thomas K. Malone, Jr., '41, A. D. MacDonald '40, Hugh S. Ripper '40 and Norman D. Tucker '42. The student body can expect a barrage of campaigning and high-pressure salesmanship to begin shortly. See Friday's CYNIC for further details on the new war of propaganda and possibly a statement of platforms from some of the would-be royalty.

Parents and Alumni To Visit Kake Walk

Mid-Summer Holiday Awaited Reunion

Kake Walk will be observed at the University of Vermont on the week-end of February 23 and 24.

Two major events will feature the festivities. These are the Kake Walk Masquerade dance on Friday evening and the competitive stunts and kake walking on Saturday evening. Other events on the program include the winter meeting of the alumni council, which will be held at 9.30 Saturday morning; the basketball game with Trinity at 4.00 in the afternoon, and the Father-Son-Mother-Daughter banquet at 6.00. The Kake Walk proper opens at 8.15.

Kake Walk, celebrated at this Vermont college for nearly fifty years, now ranks as one of the oldest traditional events in the college life of the country. During the fifty years of its existence it has seen some variations, but two features have persisted—the interfraternity competitive skits and the interfraternity competitive kake walking. Numerous cups and cakes are awarded to the successful contenders in these events.

Of late years the attendance has grown so large that last year the events were moved from the University gymnasium to the city Memorial Auditorium. This year each of the fraternities making its way into the final competition will be allowed $40 toward properties and costuming, and the winning fraternity, for the first time, will receive a $50 cash prize. In addition will be the usual cakes and cups.

W. A. A. Fun Night To Be Wednesday

Students and Faculty To Frolic at Southwick

The W. A. A. Fun Night with the Women of the Faculty promises to be one of the most successful parties on the W. A. A. social calendar this year. It will be held tomorrow night at 7.15 at Southwick. The party will be carried on in true St. Valentine's style, with everyone dressed in kiddy costume, hair ribbons, and anklets, bringing a valentine.

Games will be played during the evening and attractive prizes will be awarded. The high spot of the sport activities is the basketball game between the Women of the Faculty and the W. A. A. girls. This will be rather hilarious and exciting if it follows the course of former years, and rousing support is expected on both sides.

Refreshments will be served later in the evening, when everyone haunts the valentine post-master for the mail.

Miss Constance Brown is chairman of the Women of the Faculty's committee, assisted by Miss Barbara Crowe, Miss Mary Sullivan, Miss Anna Smith and Miss Elida Fairbanks. Jean Butler '40 has charge of W. A. A. participation and is assisted by Gratia Pearl '42 and J. Metcalf '42.

A large crowd is expected, and everyone is welcome. Snatch a valentine, hop into a kiddy car, and roll out to Southwick for an evening of fun.

All sophomores interested in scrubbing business side of Ariel please contact D. W. Thayer or R. O. Slack immediately.—Don Thayer, Bus. Mgr. 1941 Ariel.

Abraham Lincoln

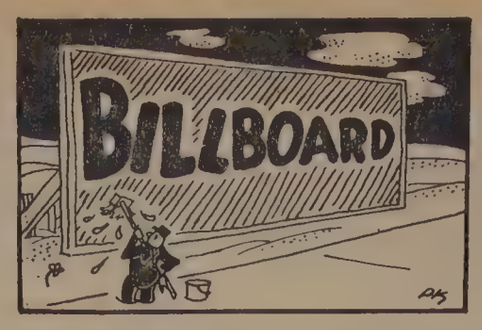
Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. What school boy has not thrilled to hear these and the remaining words of Abraham Lincoln's famous Gettysburg address? And who has not paused to admire the amazing simplicity, honesty and tolerance of the man? Who is there who is not aware of the humble beginnings of Honest Abe, of his persistence in the face of seemingly insurmountable obstacles and of his unfortunate passing? All of these facts are indelibly stamped on the mind of each of us. The figure of Washington alone stands out more prominently in the history of our nation.

As boldly as these facts stand out in the minds of countless school children, in the hustle and bustle of our fast-moving years, too many of us want to forget the achievements of Lincoln.

We were told that in any great crisis a competent leader will arise and, as if inspired, solve the difficulties of the situation whether this is true, does not concern us here. It is a fact that, at a time when the very existence of our country was threatened, Lincoln appeared to masterfully handle the task of preserving the Union.

Our chief concern here is to pay tribute to the man. There are many who have forgotten the achievements of the rail splitter. Let him stop with us now to consider again his work in the interest of humanity. One hundred and thirty years have passed since his birth. May he survive forever in the hearts of those who are so indebted to him.

School Spirit Still



We thought the matter was settled once and for all, but now we see that it demands our attention again. Yes, that's school spirit. It may or may not be present here at Vermont, but no one who could guess its existence after witnessing the battle in the Auditorium Saturday night. The crowd did cheer. Yes, indeed, but not as a crowd of loyal college students should cheer.

There were no cheerleaders in the audience to lead them in a concentrated effort to cheer their team on to victory. The battle was a close one. Vermont has had many such during the present season.

It seems to us that at such moments when a victory or defeat hangs by the slender thread a demonstration of support by the student body might tilt the balance in our favor.

We are not complaining that the team is not giving its all. Everyone present Saturday night knows that a Vermont team played its very heart out in an effort to stem the Springfield tide.

But we do know that in similar instances a little encouragement has supplied the inspiration necessary to turn defeat into victory. If it was true once, it will work again. How about getting behind the team? They supply the skill, cunning, brawn and muscle for the game. Will you supply the inspiration?

The Band Wagon

By BOB JOHNSON

Wilson

Teddy and crew playing before a very small gate made up principally of musicians really kicked. For this scribe it is the band of Burlington's winter season. The arrangements (done by Teddy and Buster Harding), are especially fine. Jean Eldridge, grand chanteuse, is beautifully relaxed somewhat after the manner of Holliday. Harold Baker's conceptions on trumpet are different and he possesses a tone unequalled by most get-off men. Brady's trombone furnished its share of boots. Hurd's drums—in fact the entire rhythm section—plenty solid. Pete Clark (ex-Louis Armstrong), played some fine sepian clarinet after the manner of his side-kick, Al Nicholas.

Surprise—seeing Tab Smith (altoist par excellence, with Millinder) now playing tenor—doing a fine job but not approaching Webster (now on alto with the Duke). Rudy Powell plays a fine lead alto. Doc Cheatham (ex-Calloway) is one of the finest and most underrated of lead brassmen. Teddy's piano is exquisitely, hauntingly beautiful—always refreshing, thrilling and relaxed.

This band we feel is a comer, yet the fates are breaking just opposite. Burlingtonians who missed them, missed plenty. The spirit of the band is grand—a swell bunch of guys and a gal. Don't forget—they were plenty handicapped by the small crowd.

New Bands vs. Old

New bands often have no style but they make themselves popular with their anxiety to please their public. This necessary commercialism is excusable perhaps. There are often new ideas and new soloists in new bands. As a whole they seldom stack up. Years on the road, living together, are only two things which help make the older, established bands better—at least in most cases.

On Campuses

Tony Pastor playing at New Hampshire.

Teddy Wilson playing for the hepper Williams men.

Jack Teagarden giving for the Norwich kay-deltes.

Tommy Reynolds playing at several school proms as well as our own.

Bunny Berigan

Due to the lack of support of the Teddy Wilson venture, the management found it necessary to cancel the engagement of Bunny (he can get started) Berigan. This means not only that Berigan will not be heard here but that probably no name bands will reach Burlington during the rest of the winter and spring.

Swing fans start groaning—Burlington will soon lose its reputation of "Hep Town No. 1 of New England."

By the way, Bunny gets more exciting as time goes on—and what a tone. Who's the new tenor man?

Looking Around

We see—

Harry James really knocking audiences out.

The usual changes in personnel in most of the large bands. Frank Ryerson (arranger and trumpet) leaving Al Donahue for Casa Loma. Frank will be remembered for his Mal Hallett, Vincent Lopez Whiteman days . . . an exceptional musician.

Peck Kelly—Southwest's pianist, becoming less of a myth in last week's Colliers.

Personality of the Week

A toss up between Jean Eldridge, Buster Harding and Pete Clarke.

Jean has enjoyed some success with Duke Ellington . . . is a Pittsburgh girl . . . not related to Roy of the torrid trumpet . . . a really hep chick . . . charming . . . friendly . . .

Buster—an unassuming personable young man—a fine pianist—an excellent arranger with different ideas (we're not tearing Teddy down—but the spot is already focused on him)—above all—a 'Fine Fellow."

Pete Clarke—a better than average clarinetist (really something for a sepian saxist)—trim moustache—a real kick to just watch his face light up—an Al gent.

Batting 'Round the Local Leagues

Harry Harris—back in town—which to us means more Rooey Abbott trumpet.

The Catamounts returning to Lake Placid to the exclusive Northwood School over this week-end.

Dave Carter, tenor saxist and arranger of no mean ability is currently in school on the west coast and playing with Jack Kelly.

'Til next time—your 3-star screwball signing off on the down beat.

This Collegiate World

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

Prof. Robert Balk, a Mount Holyoke College geology and geography teacher, recently wanted to do a little tax remapping for the state of Massachusetts—and therein lies a tall story.

To his recent income tax payment, the professor added another check for $23.92, with this explanation: "In my opinion both the federal and state income tax rates are too low. I, for one, would be glad if this small amount be added to the income of the state."

And, believe it or not, the state refused—the tax commissioner said there's no legal way the state could accept the money!

Like their modern descendants, students didn't pass in the Biblical days either! And if you don't believe it, give a once-over to the following quotations gathered for you by an industrious reporter on the staff of the Pioneer, student newspaper at Whitman College:

"Thou shalt not pass."—Numbers 20:18.

"Suffer not a man to pass."—Judges 3:28.

"The wicked shall no more pass."—Nahum 1:15.

"None shall pass."—Isaiah 34:10.

"This generation shall not pass."—Mark 13:30.

"There shall no strangers pass."—Amos 3:17.

"Beware that thou pass not."—2nd Kings 6:9.

"Neither any son of man pass."—Jeremiah 51:43.

"No man may pass through because of the beasts."—Ezekiel 14:15.

"Though they roar, yet they can not pass."—Jeremiah 5:22.

Rehearsals Scheduled

Rehearsals for the Brahm's "Requiem" concert will begin on Tuesday night, February 13, in the Music Building at 7 o'clock. Everyone who signed up to participate should be at the first rehearsal.

Orchestra rehearsals will go on regular schedule again this week; the chapel orchestra meeting on Tuesday nights at 8 o'clock and the University orchestra meeting on Thursday nights at 8 o'clock.

Eight Out of Eleven

The University of Vermont basketball team chalked up its eighth defeat of the season last Saturday night when one of the scrappiest and fightingest teams to appear on the Auditorium surface this year bottled up the Vermont offense completely and penetrated the Catamount defense as if it were a seive with a hole in the middle. The only way in which we can account for the Springfield score being held down was that most of the physical culture lads seemed to be having an off night at the hoop. That is, all except a fellow named Munro, who wore number five on his jersey and a couple of yards of tape on his shoulder. Mr. Munro didn't play all of the game, probably because of his shoulder and finally he left the game via the excessive foul route. Nevertheless, in the time that he did compete Mr. Munro led a five-man game of interception, time and again clutching the ball out of waiting Vermont hands or leaping high into the air to grab a pass postmarked Vermont. Just before he was removed from the game Munro tossed in three one-handed flips in rapid succession from outside the foul circle and thereby quelled the usual late Vermont uprising.

The defeat, incidentally, was Vermont's seventh in its last eight attempts, which is probably somewhat of an unenviable record. If the Catamounts win their four remaining games, which is very doubtful, in as much as two of the clashes are against Colgate and Trinity, their winning percentage will not even be .500. And Vermont is usually a good basketball school. Of course, the defeat by Springfield is mildly excusable as that team is supposedly one of the better small college teams in the East and has lost only something like two out of fourteen games. Nevertheless, Vermont was originally supposed to be one of the better small college teams.

Invitation-Less

Shifting the subject to skiing, we find it most surprising that the University of Vermont ski team was tendered no invitation to the Dartmouth Winter Carnival this past week-end. Of course, we are all aware that Vermont is a small school and has not too much of a draw for a commercialized venture like the Carnival. Nevertheless, a brief survey of the records shows that our green-capped and letterless skiers ranked fifth in skiing last year and fourth the year before—which is quite high for a ski team that is not really recognized as the school's own.

"Where Vermont Men Meet"

Narrow Margin For Springfield Team In Furious Game

Speedy Gymnasts Field Two Teams; Vermont Close to Victory

Holding a one-point lead with two and one-half minutes left to play, the University of Vermont varsity refused to play safe and try to protect its slim margin. With Vermont still trying to score, Springfield's fresher players obtained the ball and Mortenson scored with a one-handed toss from the foul line and Redding threw in a follow-up to give the Massachusetts club its third successive victory of its Vermont invasion.

Vermont led throughout most of the first half until Munro threw three quick baskets to put his Club in front 21-19 at half time. Springfield stayed ahead until Pye's conversion and Healy's pivot-shot gave Vermont the lead but they were unable to hold it.

Munro Stars

The game started fast with both teams missing several easy shots. Schmidt opened the scoring with a gift toss after he was fouled by Corley. Munro then threw in the first two of his nine baskets while Healy put Vermont into the scoring column with a foul conversion followed by two baskets by Belardinelli. Taylor scored two hoops along with a pretty shot from the side by Maley and another basket by Anso to keep Vermont in the lead until near the end of the half when Munro took things in his own hands.

Maley Stars on Defense

Vermont stayed within striking distance for the first part of the second half due to some heroic defense measures by Don Maley and three pretty left-hand tosses by Corley followed by a miraculous under-hand short by Ace Healy.

Maley committed his fourth foul at this point and was replaced by Bill Pye. Springfield's big guns, Redding and Munro, then got together and fashioned five successive baskets before big Anso threw in two rebounds followed by a shot from the center by Taylor. Healy then put the home team ahead, but Mortensen's only basket of the night followed by Redding's step-shot clinched the game for the visitors.

The box score.

Side Shots

Although the game was very fast and rough, the referees, Bill Coyle and Tarro, kept things well in hand.

This game was Springfield's third in three days but they were still able to go at top speed by using the entire squad of eleven men, thus giving each man time to rest.

Springfield made 8 of their 12 foul shots while Vermont made 15 out of 27.

Taylor was awarded 12 foul shots during the ball game

Corley's luck in the first half was the exact opposite to that which he enjoyed last Tuesday.

Even in defeat Vermont played much better than they have in some of their previous games.

Coach Hickox of Springfield told me that Vermont offered more opposition than he expected during the rest of his season which includes C. C. N. Y. and Providence College.

Campus of the Air Changed to 5 P.M.

"The Campus of the Air," intercollegiate broadcast of the New England branch of the Columbia network, is now heard from 5.00 to 5.30 p.m. on Saturdays, half an hour earlier than was previously announced. The University of Vermont is one of thirty colleges participating in this program. Not only are news items of the various colleges presented at this time, but student groups and campus celebrities broadcast from time to time. The editors in charge of the program have invited persons or groups from the University who may be in Boston on any Saturday to participate in the broadcast. Of course, they must be notified in advance in order to plan for it.

Guess Who?

To Mademoiselle X of the Guess Who Column.

My Dear Mademoiselle X.

Shucks, that wasn't very hard to guess, especially for me who is in the guessing game professionally. But let's see how good a guesser you are. You say you are a senior and a U. V. M. tradition. Well, so am I, but sorry, I am no tradition. Everyone knows you but not very many know me so that ought to be a pretty good puzzle for you to work out as well as for those who are experts in guessing who's who. To know you is to love you, you say. Mademoiselle X you really are romantic. And speaking about extremes you remind me of a certain Petite Parisienne I met in the Quartier Latin seven years ago in Paris. She didn't have the heart to come out in the open and tell me she loved me so she had my landlady hire me as her English tutor. We really took the Paris rendevous by storm. While still on the subject of extremes, get a load of this. I was born in the county of Cook, Chicago, Illinois, moved to Detroit, Michigan, and began school in the kindergarten at Lowell, Mass. From there moved to Athens, Greece, where I saw Acropolis, the Parthenon, Byron's signature carved in a tree trunk and was filled with classical education to the very marrow. From Greece I moved to Italy, France, Canada and back to the good U. S. A. Went to school again in Chicago, Illinois, again in Lowell, Massachusetts, and finally ended in Burlington, Vermont and U. V. M.

I am 24, the son of an honest immigrant. I am five feet six and dark complexioned. At times I have been mistaken for Eddie Cantor upon which I have very handsomely capitalized at various occasions with surprising results. I answer to the name of A—— and hope to crash in the consular branch of the American Foreign Service.

If these clues are not enough here are some more. I am nuts about Spanish (and this everyone knows). Besides Spanish I also speak fluently English, French and Greek (both classical and modern) and I can hold my own in Italian and Portuguese. Right now I am studying Russian and Polish. Languages are my hobby.

I also enjoy dancing, Fox trot, and Rhumba, are O. K. but I always prefer a perfect Argentinian Tango. I only like to listen to waltz music.

I have no singing voice but I have a collection of practically every popular modern song that has been sung in Spain, Latin America, and United States for the last ten years.

David Niven, William Powell, Loretta Young, and Myrna Loy are my favorite actors and actresses. I like such pictures as "Dawn Patrol," "Eternally Yours," "Men With Wings," and "Goodbye Mr. Chips."

Yep, Glenn Miller tops the list with me, too. And what about Teddy Wilson and Artie Show? Not bad, eh?

Strangely enough I like the name Mary. I don't mean you of course my dear Miss X. My mother's name is Mary and I hope her name will be (oh forget it).

I enjoy a well-cooked meal especially a seasoned cornedbeef and cabbage (and I am no Irishman).

Instead of Brown's I visit a certain dancing spot down street, in fact I work there. (I have Sunday nights off.)

I am one of the male members of the French Club. Am a social science student, member of the I. R. C. Interested in military, while a sophomore I was leader of the Independent crack drill squad.

I don't like Bermuda, I like Puerto Rico where I intend to do graduate study in Spanish next year on an exchange student fellowship.

My ideal of a girl is a U. V. M. co-ed. She may be a redhead, blonde, or brunette. I get along with all of them. When it comes to a choice I prefer distinguished brunettes.

Your particular initials Mademoiselle X are M. A., address Pi Beta Phi House, you are '40 social science, tel. no. 3083 (you have to be in by 11.15).

You take history on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays the first hour. And you study with a distinguished friend of yours on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at the Billings Library the last hour in the morning.

Am I not right? Now who am I?

Who started this guessing game anyway, but anyhow I love it. So let's go.

Mr. X

Museum Shows Water Colors

The exhibition of water colors currently showing in the art gallery of the Fleming Museum is a typical group portraying the modern trend in art, and it is only with a little understanding of this trend that we can appreciate such works as those of Edna Way, Arthur Healy and Peggy Kaiser. To the casual glance or to one who knows little of art appreciation, these paintings may seem incomplete or perhaps even not well done. And yet we know that these three are competent, widely recognized artists.

Miss Way is head of the art department at Ohio State University and her paintings have appeared in the Southern Vermont Artists' Exhibition and with the National Society of Women Artists at several New York art galleries. Mr. Healy, a well-known architect as well as artist, is a graduate of Princeton University and has studied at Fontainebleau. He holds membership in the New York and Philadelphia Water Color Clubs and the Art Students' League in New York, and has twice won the Labriskie prize at the American Water Color Society exhibit. When Mrs. Kaiser was graduated from the Royal College of Art in England, she received prizes for life drawing and architecture, and is now an associate of that institution. Twice she has exhibited at the Royal Academy, and in the Royal College of Art in South Kensington, England, is one of her murals.

The secret of appreciating these modern paintings lies in realizing that modern art tends toward the impressionistic rather than the actual. Today grass is represented in a picture by a few strokes of the brush, leaving a mass of green on the canvas; fifty years ago an artist would probably have put in practically every blade. Modern painters instead of trying to reproduce a scene exactly, seek to create an impression—to make others who see the picture feel the emotion that inspired him to paint it. In this way these water colors may be likened to a modern symphony or poem, appealing to the emotions rather than to logic.

Novel Test at Louisiana

New Orleans, La.—(ACP)—"The truth doesn't hurt" seems to be the policy of Mr. William P. Carr, instructor in economics at Loyola University.

In a recent accounting class, Mr. Carr advised his pupils that part of their test would consist of true and false questions. Then he instructed them to bring the following with them when they come to take the exam:

1. A bluebook. 2. Mental facilities. 3. A coin.

The purpose of the first two is obvious. But the coin? Mr. Carr said that it's for the students to flip in answering the true and false questions.

Radio Creates New Effects of Sound

Ingenuity Needed To Create Reality

"I knew that was a good idea," said Walter Peirson, sound-effects chief for the Columbia Broadcasting System, "the minute I laid my ears on it."

"No," Mr. Pierson continued in answer to an impertinent question, "I'm not being quaint. We sound-effects men lay our ears on things, not our eyes. We give a listen, not a look. That's more than just a funny lingo. It reveals our way of thinking.

"To be a successful sound-effects man you have to be more than just double-jointed, although that helps. You've got to have a dramatic sense, a feeling for rhythmic effect, and training in sound and radio engineering. You must be a rather special kind of inventor. But more than anything else, you have to have the kind of mind that associates things with their sounds more than the way they look."

Machines Create Effects

The dexterity of sound men is something that all visitors to Columbia's studios remember—the way one of the men juggles with trains, ambulances, fire engines, and automobile crashes, while his assistant gives the impression of running feet and shoots blank cartridges with both hands. People remember also the special machines used to create particular effects—the hinged pegs on a wooden frame that sound like marching men, the broom-straws that crackle like a fire. But, Mr. Pierson points out, this is hardly the most important part of the sound-man's world.

"Let's see how a sound-man gives the listener a picture of a man opening a door, walking down a hallway to a second door, opening that, and entering an office. What does the sound-man start with? A notation in a script. What kind of doors are these? What kind of shoes will the character be wearing? How big is he? Will he be hopeful or angry, depressed or defiant? The way he closes the doors will reveal his mood. Will the sounds have meaning to an audience? Some sounds, like the plop-plop of a swinging door shifting on its hinges are meaningless unless verbally identified, and the sound-man must decide what sounds will paint the author's picture.

Building Important

"Next the sound-man must decide what equipment must be used to create the effects demanded. Usually, he can find the equipment in Columbia's extensive sound laboratories. But he must be inventor enough to devise apparatus for unusual effects.

"But his most important job is still to come—building, with his sound effects, a three-dimensional setting for the dramatic action. This is done by the arrangement of effects. Take our man walking down the hall. Suppose we want to imply that the listener is standing in the office. We start, then, with footsteps off-mike, sounding far away, with the first door also off-mike and dead—reverberations muffled so that they seem to be in a closed space: a hallway. We move the footsteps toward the mike—the second door opens on-mike, and live. If we want the mike to travel with the walker, as though the listener were accompanying him, we have a different problem. But it can be solved by a different arrangement of sounds.

"People always associate sounds with their correlatives in daily life. By a process of conditioning, the sound alone can make the listener visualize the thing with which he associates it. Taking advantage of this psychological fact, radio's sound-men build a visual world of space, solidity, and color, through the auricular sense alone."

Students Attend Spiritual Seance

About forty college students attended the mid-week prayer and billet message seance which was held last Wednesday evening in the American Legion Hall on Church Street. The Rev. Helen Graham, spiritual medium, conducted the service. Mrs. Graham is the pastor of the local Spiritualist Church.

Another message service will be held this Wednesday evening at 7.30 in the same hall. The faculty and students of the University are welcome regardless of religious preference. Both spiritual and material messages will be given. Those who wish to ask a question will write it plainly on a small piece of paper and sign their initials for identification. Questions will be collected in a basket at the door. A free-will offering will be taken.

Of the nation's ten largest educational institutions, five are members of the Big Ten.

Cedarville College's new president is William Smith Kilpatrick, who is just twenty-six years old.

Wishing Well at Texas

Austin, Texas—(ACP)—Pennies dropped into the "wishing well" at the University of Texas may not bring the wisher his wish, but they add to the mounting pile of coins university librarians are saving to "buy something nice for the rare book room."

The "wishing well" in this instance is a fifteenth century marble well-head, brought to this country from Italy and given to the university. It stands on the roof garden just outside one of the nation's outstanding rare book collections, on the fourth floor of the skyscraper main building.

Cynic News Editors Meet

A short meeting of the news editors of the CYNIC staff was held at Southwick on Thursday evening, February 8. Mary Nelson '40, managing editor for the CYNIC, presided. She described and explained the new types of heads to be used in the make-up of future CYNICS. Suggestions were also made covering candidates for the "Orchid of the Week." Plans for contacting new talent for the CYNIC through the English department were also discussed. After considering several other small matters of business, the meeting was adjourned.

THIS WEEK AT SOUTHWICK

Tuesday night there will be a dancing class from 7 to 10 o'clock. This class is for all those who have attended the last several classes, for either the first or second-year pupils. Please try to be prompt, even if you cannot stay the whole time.

All those interested in a beginners' class in dancing, please notify Mrs. Bickford. She may be reached at 4476-M between 12.30 and 2 o'clock any day. This class would be for those who have danced before as well as for beginners.

Committees Are Announced For 1941 Kake Walk

Co-Directors Appoint Three Men to Manage Next Year's Carnival

The Directors of Kake Walk, C. H. Schofield '40 and R. W. Robinson '40, have announced the names of the committee members who will assist them.

An innovation this year will be the addition of a third director. Instead of a director of production and a director of finance, next year's Kake Walk will have co-production directors and a director of finance. The co-production directors will be R. P. Kenney '41 and J. R. Royer '41. W. I. Pye '41 will act as director of finance. Kenney is a member of Delta Psi, a track man and Office Manager of the CYNIC. Royer is a member of Kappa Sigma, freshman manager of football, and Advertising Manager of the CYNIC. Pye is a member of Sigma Nu, was captain of this year's football team, and is a member of the basketball team.

Chairman of Masquerade: H. A. Allen, Jr., '40.

Father-Son-Mother-Daughter Banquet: M. Phyllis McGovern, chairman.

Health Council To Sponsor A Dance

The Health Council will hold its annual Poverty Dance this Saturday, February 17, with bigger and better plans. Girls will certainly take advantage of this one night at least to prove that leap year has come to U. V. M. campus, and call up their secret (or not too secret) passions for a date, which promises to be a great success.

For once the clothes problem is a minor detail. Come in anything—overalls, slacks, or neatly patched cast-offs—and dance to the swingy rhythm of the New Vermonters Quintet. You may reap the coveted prize with no effort at all for the most unique costume.

Will Speak on Europe

The next in the series of lectures sponsored by the University will take place on March 5th. The lecturer will be S. K. Ratcliffe, of London, whose talk will be entitled "What Next in Europe?" During the twenty-five years of Mr. Ratcliffe's stay in the United States he has made three previous visits to our campus.

Final Peerade of Walkers

Nominations Made At Class Meetings

Juniors and Senior Week Officials to be Elected

Looking ahead to the big social events of the spring, Junior Week, occurring in May, and Senior Week, at the close of the academic year, candidates have been nominated to head the activities of each respective week.

The class of 1941 met on Monday, February 12, and nominated the following for committee chairman: W. I. Pye, Sigma Nu, of Pittsford; P. E. Corley, Kappa Sigma, of Burlington; and E. A. Guilbert, S A E, of Waterbury, Conn. To act as business manager of the event, one of the following will be elected: R. O. Slack, Delta Psi, of Randolph Center; F. M. Taylor, S A E, of Brattleboro; and D. W. Maley, Kappa Sigma, of Great Barrington, Mass. Junior elections will be held in the office of the Dean of the Arts College from 9.00 a.m. to 12.00 noon and 2.00 to 4.30 p.m. on Monday, February 19.

Seniors Nominate

The senior class made its nominations on Tuesday, February 13, and will hold elections on Tuesday, February 20, at the same place and hours mentioned above. For committee chairman of Senior Week activities, the following have been nominated: G. S. Noonan, Delta Psi, of Vergennes; and M. J. Boucher, Phi Delta Theta, of White Plains, N. Y. Candidates for business manager are: H. A. Allen, Jr., Kappa Sigma, of Burlington; and E. R. Thomas, A T O, of Westport, N. Y.

Chairmen Appoint Committee

Each chairman will appoint his own committee directly after next week's elections. Additional nominations may be made by petition signed by at least fifteen qualified voters of the class concerned and presented to the Committee on Student Elections at least three days in advance of elections. Prof. Daniel B. Carroll, head of the political science department, is the chairman of this committee.

This year's affairs promise to be superior to all previous ones, as the committees will be functioning a good two weeks ahead of last year's schedule.

Mr. Nuquist Speaks At Rotary Meeting

Mr. Andrew E. Nuquist of the political science department spoke at the meeting of the Rotary Club in Burlington on Monday, February 12, on "American Neutrality."

John Dewey Club Initiates Members

Last night there was an important meeting of the John Dewey Club at Southwick. Reverend E. A. Parkhurst from Williston spoke on "Principles of Social Philosophy." Initiation was held for those who had received a B for one semester in either Psychology or Philosophy. Refreshments were served and an informal discussion followed the meeting.

Kake Walk Candidates Announce Platforms

Prospective Royalty To Speak Sat. Five Campaigners for King and Two for Queen Promise Festivity

Promising to carry the fight to the bitter end, five men and two women, prospective wearers of the regal robe, have thrown their respective hats into the ring, and the battle royal for King and Queen of Kake Walk is on. The candidates who have thus far announced their platforms have made known their intentions of keeping the campaigns clean, and of eliminating "all corrupt practices of slander, slams, and mud-slinging which have been a growing tendency of the past few years."

The women candidates, Sally Rome '42, of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., one of the Ariel beauty queen contestants of last year, and Laura Hawley '41, of New Rochelle, N. Y., and Kappa Alpha Theta, are, strangely enough, as yet silent, but they promise to let loose in their Saturday speeches. Sally Rome has announced that Georgianna Steinman '41, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and a member of Delta Phi Epsilon, will serve as her campaign manager.

Norman Tucker '42, of Fitchburg, Mass., and Sigma Phi, prefers to hold the student body in "complete suspense" until the campaign speeches tomorrow, and reports that he will have co-managers, though he has not yet made his final choice.

Thomas Keeshon Malone, Jr., '41, better known to the student body as "Gus," of Burlington and Sigma Alpha Epsilon, likewise is withholding his platform until Saturday, but the prominent campus tenor promises that it will be "one of the biggest things ever to hit the Vermont campus."

The other three candidates, however, have released their platforms for publication. Allan Dale MacDonald '40, of Hardwick and Alpha Tau Omega, announces Jim Diforio '41 and Harry Noyes '41 as his managers. They are pleading with the student body to "Vote for Dimples MacDonald's Time for Play Party." They present the following platform for their candidate:

1. Classes twice a week—Monday morning from 11.00 to 12.00, and Monday afternoon from 2.00 to 2.30.
2. Skyhooks for restless students to aid them in disappearing.
3. Free bus system for students downtown.
4. Megaphones at the Coffee Corner to place your order.
5. Love seats in the library.
6. Cocktail hour during chapel.
7. Buzzers to ring for chorus girls during boring lectures.
8. Girls to have 10.00 o'clock nights five nights a week and all night leave Saturday.
9. Cashier Bruce to finance fellows for dates.
10. Vote for MacDonald and see those dimples flash.

Mark Kinsley O'Toole '42, of Leominster, Mass., and Kappa Sigma, with Bill Murphy '42 as manager, released the following communiqué:

Follow the School and Vote for O'Toole

Never before in the history of Kake Walk has there been such little interest displayed in the campaign carried on by the candidates for Kake Walk King. There must be some reason for this lack of interest, and it appears to me that the other candidates do not care to have the distinction of being crowned King of Kake Walk. The other candidates are very fine men, and I admire and respect each one of them. It is true, as far as the men are concerned, that I have appeared to be somewhat dormant, in my own campaign; but should you inquire from the opposite sex you will find that I have

Announcement of Judges For Skits

Goodreds, Coates And Eckhard Chosen

One of the most important tasks resting upon the shoulders of the Kake Walk directors is the selection of six capable judges for the kake walking and the skits. The three judges for the skits are Prof. V. Spencer Goodreds of Middlebury College, Walter John Coates of North Montpelier, and Dean Eckhard of U. V. M.

Prof. V. Spencer Goodreds received his degree of Bachelor of Arts from the University of Buffalo and his degree of Master of Arts from Middlebury College. Before going to Middlebury to become the head of the department of drama and public speaking in 1928, he was director of the Lafayette Community House and the Lafayette Play Producers in Buffalo. He was also director of dramatics at the University of Buffalo, and activities director for the Buffalo Board of Education. Professor Goodreds' articles on drama have appeared in several magazines including Drama, Education, and Players.

Walter J. Coates, of North Montpelier, is the publisher of Driftwind, a poetry magazine which he sets by hand. Mr. Coates, who writes poetry himself, started this magazine primarily with the view of encouraging Vermont writers. Mr. Coates graduated from St. Lawrence University in Canton, N. Y., and last year he received an honorary degree from the University of Vermont. Mr. Coates was president of the League of Vermont Writers, for which he has done a great deal. He and Professor Tupper were once co-editors of an anthology of Vermont verse, a book of biographies and ballads.

The third judge of the skits, Dean Eckhard, is dean of the College of Engineering of U. V. M. and is professor of structural engineering.

The judges of kake walking will be announced later.

U. V. M. Ski Team Attend Carnivals

From Northfield to Middlebury, with stops between at Burlington, University of Vermont skiers spent a week crammed with ski practice, to culminate in the winter carnival at Middlebury College this week-end. The ski team practiced on the slopes at Middlebury Wednesday. Tuesday drove to Northfield for jumping practice there, in anticipation of the Norwich Carnival coming the week following Middlebury's; and yesterday they packed their skis and set off for the Middlebury meet.

Middlebury expects to entertain skiers from eighteen colleges, with Dartmouth, New Hampshire, Middlebury, Williams, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Renssaelaer Polytechnic Institute, Amherst, Yale, and the University of Vermont sending men's teams.

The University of Vermont is sending a two-girl ski team, which will enter in competition with women from Radcliffe, Wheaton, Jackson, Connecticut State,

A Plea for Neatness

Again the campus launches itself on that highlight of highlights—the annual campaigning for King and Queen of Kake Walk. Eager candidates, who have long awaited this carnival time, are pouring out their platform plans to any and all who will listen.

It is a gala time—this Kake Walk week-end and the few weeks preceding it. The fraternities and, in fact, the whole campus, burn with activity. Everyone is occupied with his plans for the festivities.

A good deal of the color and excitement of Kake Walk is furnished by the royal candidates and their "parties." Their construction work on their platforms is entertaining indeed.

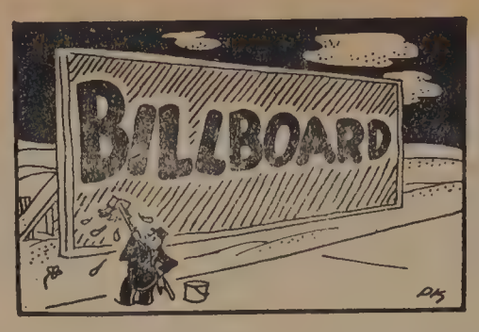
Unfortunately, in years past, in spite of all that the campaigns have contributed to the festivities, one objection has been raised in opposition to them. It is unfortunate that this was so but we feel that the objection was a legitimate one.

It seems that in the heat of campaign battles, past candidates have been rather free with their campaign stickers. They have posted them here, there, and everywhere without stopping to consider the consequences. Corridors, desks, doors, and buildings have been plastered indiscriminately with the gummed announcements.

We believe candidates make a big mistake when they paste their stickers on school property but they make even a bigger mistake if they leave them there after elections. They might be forgiven for pasting them up if the stickers are carefully removed after elections but they show a decidedly poor spirit if they leave them up—unsightly reminders of their campaigns.

It seems to us that they could post notices on the bulletin boards and, if this is not sufficient, fasten other announcements in other places with Scotch tape. By making use of these methods it would be a simple matter to remove all evidence after the elections and there would be no objection raised.

This writer has had the opportunity and pleasure of visiting many other campuses of New England colleges but has yet to view a campus more beautiful than ours. Let us take a little pride in this fact—let's cooperate in this matter and keep the Vermont campus as beautiful as ever.



More on the Same

The problem discussed above has called to mind another situation as appalling and distasteful as the first. Each situation is distinctly separate from the other but there is some similarity between the two. Both have to do with the matter of cleanliness and with our pride in the University of Vermont.

We speak now of the practice many students have of littering the corridors of the university buildings. Almost all of the buildings suffer but the Old Mill is by far the worst of the lot.

Despite the excellent cleaning done daily by the janitor and his staff, one is constantly confronted by messy, littered hallways. Pop bottles, napkins, milk bottles and newspapers make up the bulk of the mess. Cigarette butts and matches make up the remainder.

The University provides a goodly number of ash cans for such waste and there is a proper place for empty bottles. Why not take a little pride in our buildings and try to keep them looking a little neater?

SCRIBES will hold its third meeting since reorganization on next Friday, February 16, 7.45 p.m., in the dining room at Southwick. Anyone interested in writing, criticism, or discussion is invited to come. There are no regulations. If you've written anything lately, bring it along to read. Old members, as many of you as possible please try to come. There will be some important discussion regarding the petition.

CYNIC SCRUBS—Will those CYNIC scrubs who are assigned to regular beats come into the CYNIC office every few days to see if you have an assignments? Often the News Editors know of something they especially wish covering your particular beat.

There will be organ music this Sunday at the Ira Allen Chapel from 4 until 5.

BASEBALL PRACTICE — Battery to work out next week. All those interested get out and loosen up.—R. W. Robinson and C. H. Schofield, Co-managers.

ALL OLD AND NEW MEMBERS of the French Club are urged to come to 24 South College, Friday, February 16, at 4 p. m., for tryouts for the French Play. The play was chosen by Professor Doane of the French department and will be presented in the near future.

Unless a concert or lecture is suddenly planned for next Tuesday evening, there will definitely be a meeting of the French Club in the south lounge at Southwick, at 7.30 p.m. We humbly apologize for the error in last week's issue of CYNIC that sent club devotees to Southwick in the snow. At this meeting details of the play will be discussed.

TICKETS FOR KAKE WALK may be obtained at Hayes and Carney Store at the following prices: Reserved seats $1.75, $1.50 and $1.25; General Admission, $1.10; Student General Admission, $0.75. Masquerade Tickets are also obtainable there.—R. W. Robinson, Fin. Dir. Kake Walk.

ATTENTION KAKE WALK USHERS! Important meeting of all ushers at Southwick, Tuesday, 7.45 p.m. Attendance required.—J. B. Butler, Chairman.

Women students from any of the classes may join the group. Please be there promptly—Mary B. Sullivan.

Alpha Zeta Meets

At the regular meeting of Alpha Zeta on Wednesday, February 14, at Morrill Hall, it was reported that the invitation extended by Alpha Zeta to the Vermont Poultry Breeders' Association to hold its annual chick and egg show at the University in April, has been accepted. Harold Cushman was appointed chairman of the Local Arrangements Committee. Harold Cushman was also elected chairman of the Annual Initiation Banquet, which will be held some time in March. After the meeting refreshments were served.

This Collegiate World

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

Yes, football is a hero-worshipping business—and if you don't believe it, listen to this tale from the mid-west's Lincoln, Nebraska, where Biff Jones is the big boss of the University of Nebraska gridsters:

Said a Lincoln grade school teacher: "Name three of the greatest men in the world."

University of Richmond fraternity men have a new title for Sally Rand, and thereby hangs a story:

When the college administration ruled that all Greek groups must have housemothers, clever Kappa Sigmas wired the fan dancer:

Orchid of the Week

Presented to E. C. Bailey for his work on and for the U. V. M. ski team, which has been most active this season.

"Sorry to hear of your financial bust
But come on down and live with us.
We have to get a new house mother,
And we'd rather have you than any other."

Turn about is fair play: The University of Texas' newly-imported Spanish instructor had a difficult time learning American language. So one of the co-eds in his class is giving him regular lessons—and reports he's doing quite well, thank you.

Style prediction from a college columnist: This winter the fashionable co-ed will find the bustle a stern necessity.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology has begun a special course in the arts and materials of fine printing.

You'll find them in stores, eating places, gas stations along the highways—in all kinds of public places convenient for your use.

Nowhere else in the world is the distribution of telephones so general. And nowhere else can you get such fast, accurate, and friendly service at such low cost.

Why not telephone home often? Rates to most points are lowest any night after 7 P. M. and all day Sunday.

Another Kake Walk Coming Next Week At the Auditorium

Schofield, Robinson Promise Good Program Of Skits and Walking

The annual Kake Walk festival at the University of Vermont, which marks the highlight of the mid-winter season and the celebration of the end of mid-year examinations, will take place on February 23 and 24. Kake Walk time is also the occasion for the parents of students to visit the University, and see the college in a holiday mood, and for the University's alumni to come back again and view the scenes of their former triumphs.

This year, 1940, the directors, R. Walker Robinson and Carl H. Schofield, have promised a bigger and better Kake Walk. Work on this climax of University activity has been progressing all winter.

Parents and Alumni Coming

Programs and notices have been sent to parents and alumni, many of whom have not visited the hilltop campus in winter time. Old friendships and acquaintances are always revived at a festival like this, where both faculty and students at the University get excitement out of Kake Walk, and at the same time relax for a holiday.

Few who have attended the University of Vermont in the past forty years have forgotten the thrill of Kake Walk night, when, as the lights of the packed auditorium go out, there is a mysterious scurry of the dimly visible fraternity boys setting the scene for a stunt that may prove a bit of broad burlesque, a delightfully droll fantasy, or a brief bit of timely political, economic or scientific drama.

Disloyal, indeed, is the Vermont graduate who has lost the memory of the haunting strains of "Cotton Babes," or who cannot picture to himself the gaudily garbed black-faced kake walkers, stepping high in competition for a cup to decorate the fraternity mantel and a beautifully decorated cake to eat.

Winter Sports

Not least among the attractions of the University of Vermont Kake Walk is the opportunity for skiing and other winter sports activities which are offered at Underhill and Stowe. This is the center of Vermont's winter sports; and is becoming known as one of the playgrounds of the United States.

The first great event of Kake Walk is the Masquerade Ball, at which some "big-name" orchestra is chosen to play. This year the directors have been fortunate in securing Tommy Reynolds and his "Band of Tomorrow." Of course, Kake Walk is ruled by their imperial majesties, the King and Queen of Festivity, and last year her royal highness was crowned by Glenn Miller.

To give Kake Walk a good start, to make the 1940 holiday one of the best in history, and to give all who attend a fine time and a good impression of the University at play, all who are interested are urged to attend Vermont's Kake Walk.

Inferior Teaching

NEW YORK, N. Y. (I.P.)—"We have such an enormous area with 130,000,000 people in it, speaking one single language and finding little need of knowing any other language among themselves that our respect for foreign languages is not high and our methods of teaching foreign languages decidedly poor," according to Stephen Duggan, Director of the Institute of International Education, in an address before the sixth annual Foreign Language Conference.

"Because of the new status of our country among the nations of the world and because of the new situation that has arisen in the Western Hemisphere as a result of the war in Europe, it is most essential that increased attention be given to the place of foreign languages in the curriculum of our educational institutions and improved methods of teaching adopted. Now as a matter of fact, foreign languages are receiving a reduced place in the curriculum of our institutions. Educational authorities ought to be awakened to the importance of this unfortunate situation."

Political Science Hour Test Schedule

The regular monthly examinations in Political Science 1 will be held on the following dates during the second semester:

March 22

Make-up examinations will be held in 33 North College.

Each of the foregoing examinations (whether regular or make-up) will begin at 3:00 p. m. No one will be permitted to enter an examination after 4:00 p. m. and no one will be permitted to leave an examination prior to 4:01 p. m.

Arthur Hitchens to Speak February 15

Arthur P. Hitchens, Lieutenant Colonel, Medical Corps, United States Army, spoke before the Osler Clinical Society of the University of Vermont College of Medicine on Thursday, February 15, at 8.15 p.m. in the auditorium of the Fleming Museum. Colonel Hitchens' subject was "Medical Practice and the Converging Roads of Health and Welfare."

Colonel Hitchens at the present time is engaged in teaching the medical section of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, and is also professor of public health and preventive medicine at the same institution.

He is an authority on bacteriology and a member of the Society of American Bacteriologists. He is the author of a number of papers on military preventive medicine and the originator of many sanitary practices which have been adopted by the United States Army and the armies of many foreign countries. Colonel Hitchens is actively engaged in public health work. He has done public health work in China and the Philippine Islands, has been a delegate at numerous international public health meetings and is serving on several committees of the Public Health Association.

U. W. Students Benefit by New Dormitories

Madison, Wis. (Special)—Although the University of Wisconsin enrollment has not increased this year, the response for dormitories was so great that despite the fact that they were filled since August 15 "there is practically as large a waiting list this year as there was before the new dormitories were built," D. L. Halverson, director of the dormitories and commons, reported.

This fall five more units have been opened, making a total of eight new houses with approximately 640 students. The men's dormitories now have a student community of 1,180 living in twenty-four houses.

The students have a self-government organization, functioning under a new constitution this year. The governing body is known as the Dorm cabinet.

The eight new units, five of which have been opened for the first time this fall, each accommodate seventy-nine men and one fellow. All rooms in the new units are double. The rooms range in price from $270 to $305, including board, cafeteria style.

All of the new dormitories have been named by the board of regents after former outstanding members and scholars of the university.

Rollins College recently sponsored an economic conference for the leaders of the citrus industry.

Black-faced Ushers

U. V. M. Women Go Juvenile

Mrs. Johnson Wins the Prize for Best Costume

They all came trooping, from little tots scarce out of the cradle to gum-chewing fifth graders. They flocked up the steps of Southwick, ready to a brat for a Nite of Fun. A valentine gained admission for them.

W. A. A. was responsible for this influx of immature, or should one say regenerated, youth. The chairman of the Faculty Women's Committee was Miss Constance Brown. Miss Barbara Crowe, Miss Mary Sullivan, Miss Anna Smith and Miss Alida Fairbanks assisted her. In charge of student participation was Jean Butler '40. Her assistants were Gratia Pearl '42 and Joanna Metcalf '42.

Prizes for Costumes

The evening began with a series of snappy games. Then to music played by Flora Fifield on the accordion the merry children skipped around the ballroom two by two in a big circle and the judges selected the best costumes. Mrs. Johnson, house mother at Allen House, won the prize among the Women of the Faculty. She wore a sky-blue ribbon in her hair and a white chemise with pantaloons. Barbara Gallager '42 won the prize for the students. Her costume was a red and white play suit.

Next the party was divided into four groups, each equipped with supplies for making up, which included black stockings, kleenex, rouge, pins, eyebrow pencil. They were then instructed to impersonate first a diplomat and his wife. Miss Parker and Miss Fairbanks were judged the winners. One of the stockings made an impressive cane. A movie actor and actress next had to be concocted. The prize for this event was won by Joyce Bone '43 and Barbara Robinson '43, representing Sonia Henie and her partner very realistically. An ambassador and his family was well arranged and well done by Elizabeth Kulka '43. Elizabeth Roche '42 made an unwelcome night prowler in a black fur coat with a white stripe of kleenex down the back.

Basketball Game

After these brain-taxing maneuvers there was a general rush for the gym below in anticipation of the basketball game between faculty and students. To say the least, their gym suits were a bit out of style. The Faculty Women cheered loudly and robustly for them, led by Mrs. Willard, vigorously and efficiently chewing gum. The umpire was Miss Parker, who wore a black long-tailed suit and top hat. At the first half the Faculty led by a score of 4-0, but the game ended in a tie at 6-6. A swifter, surer game has seldom been seen in these parts. Time out had to be called a few times in order that a disabled player might have a suck from the milk bottle of Mrs. Bosworth, one of the youngest babies present. The rule book was referred to occasionally to make sure that the game was being played fairly. Audience and players were exhausted and heated from the strenuous game, except for Miss Crowe, who found it necessary to play bundled up in a thick white wool sweater.

This diversion done away with, the children tripped upstairs again and were served skippy cups from a tiny wagon drawn by Joanna Metcalf '42.

Charlotte Hall '40 acted as postman and handed out valentines to all the little misses. Then they reluctantly donned their coats and said good-bye to Fun Nite, but they'll all come trooping back next year.

N. Y. A. Students Spend $405 A Year

MADISON, Wis. (Special)—Questionnaires submitted to 429 of the University of Wisconsin students who received employment last year from the National Youth Administration, federal educational aid program, revealed that the average cost for NYA students for one year's attendance at the State University is approximately $455.

This figure corresponds closely to the $450 figure which the Student Employment Bureau and the Registrar's office of the State University considers an average minimum expenditure for the school year for a student whose home is in Wisconsin.

Of the group, 49 spent less than $350 for their academic year while 36 spent $600 or over. For the majority of the students, food and lodging comprised the major expenditures with the average cost of room $106, and $160 for food. Students reported individual expenditures for food from $15 to $320 and from $25 to $200 for lodging, with those who did their own cooking or received supplies from farm homes able to spend far less for food than the average.

Vermont Writers To Meet Tomorrow

A literary clinic, conducted by the University of Vermont and the League of Vermont Writers, will be held at Southwick, Saturday, February 17. This meeting presets an excellent opportunity for beginning authors to enhance their knowledge of various literary forms. They may bring their manuscripts for diagnosis and assistance which will be given by experienced authors and teachers.

The "clinics" to be held in the morning are: The Novel, under the supervision of Professor Merrick; Book Reviewing, Sanford Cobb; The Essay, Professor Lindsay; and Article Writing, Professor Dean.

After a conversation hour and luncheon the following will conduct the afternoon "clinics": Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Short Story; Arthur W. Peach, Poetry; Lillian M. Ainsworth, News Writing; and Dorothy Drohat, Contesting.

Rowland T. Robinson will be the speaker at the evening meeting, at which he will tell of his father's life. His father was a famous Vermont writer, whose characterizations of New England life are distinctly flavored by the Vermont style.

Anyone may attend these meetings whether he belongs to the League or is "just plain interested."

Fort Ticonderoga To Be Recaptured By Troops On Skis

U. V. M. Members of Co. K To Participate In Military Feat

On Sunday morning at eleven o'clock, February 18, the nineteen U. V. M. members of Company K, 172nd Infantry, Vermont National Guard, will depart from Hand's Cove with the rest of their company for Fort Ticonderoga, where they will relive the capture of that historic fortress by Ethan Allen and his Green Mountain Boys.

Unlike the original Green Mountain Boys, who crossed Lake Champlain from Hand's Cove by night in 1775, the modern company will make the attack on skiis, using the new streamlined formations of the United States Army. Upon reaching the fort, the company will take up the same formation that the Green Mountain Boys did on entering the fort. Capt. Arthur K. Tudhope, of the military and physical education department of U. V. M., will be greeted by Colonel Pell, in whose family this fortress has been since 1820. This meeting will take place at the very spot where the British commander, Capt. de la Place, surrendered to Ethan Allen 165 years ago.

After the ceremony the company will be taken on a tour of the grounds and will then assemble in the museum, where Colonel Pell will speak to them of the fort's early history.

The nineteen U. V. M. members of Company K are: D. H. Blanchard '43, N. J. Boyden '42, E. J. Burlando '42, H. F. Fitzgerald '40, W. A. Gage '41, D. A. Grady '40, J. S. Greene '41, M. A. Hawes '42, D. H. Harwood '42, B. W. Hill '41, T. R. Huntley '41, R. H. Iby '43, E. S. Irwin '40, D. R. Jones '40, C. A. Lafley '40, J. A. Root '41, D. E. Stowell '40, M. J. Wells '40, and W. H. Wood '43.

The company will return to Burlington in less than two hours, a trip of about fifty miles, which took Ethan Allen and his men two days to make.

Cats Again Yield To Norwich Cadets In Exciting Battle

Captain Mason Scores 18 Points; Belardinelli Leads for Vermont

The Green and Gold of Vermont bowed for the second time to the Norwich Cadets Tuesday night at the Memorial Auditorium 44-39. The Horsemen did it the hard way. They overcame a Vermont lead which persisted well into the last period and at one time expanded to an eight-point advantage. They cut holes through the Catamount zone defense, and held their opponents to a mere six foul conversions during the last ten minutes of play.

Ding Dong First Half

Vermont drew first blood as Corley grabbed the tap off, dribbled, shot and missed, and Belardinelli recovered to push the ball through the netting for the first score. Norwich raced up the floor, and fed the ball to Mason who shot and missed.

Don Maley

Defense Man

Frank Taylor recovered from the backboard, dribbled down the court and passed to Belardinelli who in turn chucked it to Corley. Paul parted the netting for the second score. The Cadets retaliated with two quick ones and the battle lapsed into a ding dong affair, both teams taking advantage of the fast break. This first period was fast and furious with spills occurring frequently and with both teams wrought to a high pitch. It ended in Vermont's favor 24-23.

Mason, who captains the Norwich quintet, kept his club in the running during the first period with twelve points. During the melee Referee Dressell got tangled up with a knot of players who clustered around a free ball, and emerged as the only casualty of the night. He suffered a broken pair of glasses.

Horsemen Outride Cats

Captain Mason opened hostilities in the second period with a skilful lay up shot, relinquished the ball to Maley for a score, then stole it and retaliated with a second tally. The Green and Gold now began to hit their stride. They loosed a barrage of five consecutive scores to soar into the lead 35-27. From this point on, however, the equestrians took over and denied their opponents any further scoring from the floor. Durkee flipped one from midcourt. Big Joe McCluskey picked himself up from the floor for about the twentieth time, and lumbered to the foul line to add another. Taylor dropped in a foul. Durkee again split the the netting from a difficult angle. McCluskey took a pass from Maynard, and after three attempts finally added another two points to the Norwich threat. Durkee who at this time was the hottest man on the floor grabbed a free ball and dribbled in for a sucker. He was fouled on the play, and converted to knot the count at 37-all. Taylor put U. V. M. in front again with a point from the foul line. Mason took the ball out for the Redmen and passed to Durkee, who swished one from midcourt and the Norwich held the whip. Healy knotted the count at 39-all with another foul conversion. This was Vermont's last score. Bob Henderson who had not done any previous scoring now stepped into the picture with a heave from mid-court which was good for two points. Vermont rushed up the floor determined to get back into the driver's seat. Joe McCluskey had other ideas, he plodded into the path of a Vermont pass, picked it up, and heaved it to Henderson from where it was delivered into the waiting arms of Mason, and Norwich scored again. Henderson was awarded a foul shot on the next play. He made the score 44-39 and ended the contest.

Wrestlers Compete In Tournament

Again as in previous years the Intramural department will present the opportunity for all men interested in wrestling to compete in the annual tournament. Two dates have been set aside namely March 19 and March 21, the preliminaries to be run off on the former date, while the latter will see the final bouts.

In order to secure a higher caliber of wrestling it has been deemed advisable to have all men wishing to compete to practice at least once a week, until tournament time, under the supervision of Coach Wietz. For that purpose, both wrestling mats now are located on one end of the gymnasium floor and are available for use, when other classes are not in session. For men who desire instruction there is now a class meeting at 4 on Tuesday and Thursday which is available to them.

Thursday night the team will take to the road to meet New York State Teachers College at Albany on Friday night of this week and Colgate on Saturday night.

Despite the fact that the team that has caused Dartmouth, Fordham and Springfield to exert themselves to win, the Vermonters have yet been unable to clinch more than three victories during the season. The team, threatening all comers and losing by slim margins, is a dangerous outfit, but somehow can't kick through.

V. J. C. Wins 37-25; Freshmen Outplayed Opponents At Last

Better Playing After Freshmen Switch to Man-to-Man Defense

Taking advantage of a 13-point lead piled up during the first half the Vermont Junior College five, paced by Bud O'Brien, defeated the frosh in a 37-25 victory at the Auditorium Tuesday night.

Breaking through an awkwardly employed zone defense, the visitors five times to Vermont's twice in the first quarter and added nine more points in the second quarter to Vermont's two. Prescott, Smith and O'Brien of V. J. C. monopolized the action in the first half.

The Montpelier lads were greatly slowed down in the second half when the Kittens switched to a man-to-man defense. This plus better shooting by the frosh showed V. J. C. outplayed in the last period. However, the 13-point lead over the Kittens insured a V. J. C. victory and the gun found them in front by twelve points.

High scorer of the game was O'Brien with thirteen points, next came Doherty with eleven, followed by Smith with ten and Prescott with eight. The absence of Beaulieu who left school after midyears was noticeable and despite the playing of Doherty and Kaufman the odds were five to two against the home team.

The frosh play their last game of the season February 20 when they meet the Dartmouth freshmen at Hanover.

Foreign Students On the Increase

SEATTLE Wash. (I.P.)—It may or may not be the war, but 1939 enrollment of foreign students at the University of Washington shows a seven per cent decrease over last year, although there are almost twice as many countries represented now as in 1938.

Figures compiled by Registrar Dean Newhouse show that there are 136 foreign students this year as compared with 147 in 1938. Nine countries are represented now with new students coming from Iceland, India, Sweden, and Tasmania.

Enrollment from most of the countries that had students at the university last year has fallen off. The number of students from Canada dropped from 111 to 107. Chinese registration showed the sharpest decline with 13 students attending last year and four this year. Enrollment from the Philippines fell from 20 to 16.

The only country showing an increase in the number of student representatives was Japan with four students enrolled this year as compared with two last year. Cuba has had one enrollee both years.

Sports Cast

Let's Fight for Vermont

"Now we remain to uphold the name
Of Vermont, strong and true,
So to keep all things we love at U. V. M.
It's up to each of you."

And so goes the introduction in part of "Vermont Victorious," Vermont's catchiest and fightingest fight song. We like the last line in particular. It comes right to the point without any superfluous verbosity (such as this). It's rather beautiful the way those few lines place the responsibility of upholding the tradition and spirit of Vermont upon your and our collective shoulders. Perhaps the beauty of it lies in its realism. But let's digress for a brief moment. There is an excellent possibility that in view of Tuesday's Sports Casts you think that there is a complete reversal of form. It is a despicable situation when it is muttered about that one is disloyal to his school. Worse insults are hard to imagine. Perhaps a defense is unnecessary for there is an old adage to the effect that your friends don't need it and your enemies won't believe it anyway. Nevertheless, we are of the opinion that there is no disloyalty in truth. It may hurt, but it still contains the redeeming virtue of honesty. We have always considered this column as a medium in which the sport panorama is presented from a personal angle to provide not so much enlightenment as awareness of situations. Our further sentiment is that there should be no regimentation in the situations discussed as long as fact is strictly adhered to. And we see no reason for attempting to live in a fool's paradise ignoring distasteful truth. An awkward analogy is provided by the contemporary publicized fight against syphilis. A few short years ago, people, unless directly affected, were kept in complete ignorance of this disease as it was considered one of the awful truths that must never be spoken of as it "tainted our civilization." Needless to say a general awareness of this social problem has brought forth remarkable results. A far-fetched analogy you may say but, nevertheless, it also is merely a presentation of truth—truth that hurts pride and self-esteem, but is still truth. Disloyalty? Maybe we're prejudiced in our own behalf, but we do not think so. The name and tradition and respect of Vermont is as deeply ingrained in us as in you. In fact, we like to think more so, as, in writing this column bi-weekly, we come in contact with it more often and perhaps, we hope, a little more of it has remained with us than with you. One last word on this subject. Think back to the various Sports Casts you may have casually perused during the past year. You will find that there is a decided predominance of praise as opposed to a decided paucity of reproof. We also know that the former is much more conducive to amelioration.

Now to hop off our tangent. It is an accepted fact that our basketball team is having a poor system. Nevertheless, while we believe in being aware of this fact and having no illusions of grandeur, we find that no reason for such a poor demonstration of vocal exercise that was witnessed at the Norwich clash. The deplorable lack of cheerleaders naturally made for disorganized and spontaneous cheering. However the disorganized cheering was much too disorganized and not spontaneous enough. The Vermont team running onto the floor before the game was greeted by only scattered applause. The same scattered enthusiasm greeted every Vermont coup. On the other side of the floor a handful of Norwich men faced by a gravel-voiced cheerleader made the Vermont rooters sound as if both of the latter were whispering. Obviously Vermont needs some cheering cheerleaders, but in addition it needs some students to remember that they are a vital part of this institution and that the support they give to their team is as vital as the way their team performs on the floor.

Basketball Teams Near Semi-Finals

On Saturday a vastly superior Independent basketball team handed the Phi Sigma Delta team a 35-11 drubbing. The high scorers for the Independents were Layden with 13 points and Dunn with 12 points.

On the same afternoon a spirited Faculty team knocked off the A T O's to the tune of a 35-26 score. Such former basketball stars as Archie Post, "Fuzzy" Evans and "Nick" Nicholson were seen in action. Roy Wietz's "tiny" form also graced the court. For the Faculty Ratledge was high scorer with 11 points and "Fuzzy" Evans followed up with 8 points. Noyes was high scorer for A T O with 11 points and Dorion pushed in 9 points.

Still another game on Saturday was the Kappa Sigma-S A E which proved to be a thrilling contest. The Kappa Sigs finally came out on the long end of a 24-23 score. In this game the score continually see-sawed with never more than two points difference. Horvath set the scoring pace for Kappa Sig with nine points. The S A E high scorer was Pullinen with eight points.

Tuesday's contest saw the Delta Psi's run off with a 31-23 score against the Independents. Carlson had a field night for the Delt's with sixteen points. Roby followed up with seven points. Willson led the Independent scoring with nine points.

A later contest on Tuesday resulted in the defeat of the Faculty 25-15 by the Kappa Sigs. Archie Post was the Faculty high man with six points. Horvath led the way for the Kappa Sigs with eleven points. An unusual feature of his scoring was that nine of his points were on foul shots.

In the semi-final contest of the intramural tournament on Thursday, February 23, the Delta Psi's oppose the Kappa Sigs. The winner of this contest meets the Sigma Nu team for the league championship.

Skidmore Plans for New $200,000 Library

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y. (I.P.)—Skidmore College has initiated a campaign for $200,000 to build a new library. The trustees, alumnae, faculty and students have organized to raise the necessary amount by early spring so that building may be started in time to complete the library for use during the new academic year.

The building will be of red brick Georgian in style to harmonize with other newer buildings on the campus, and will provide double the book capacity of the present library and accommodations for twice as many readers.

The plans call for a basement, one floor and mezzanine for stacks, and a third floor with general and reserve reading rooms. A feature of the new building will be thirty carrels for individual workers, ten on each floor.

The new building is planned to meet the library needs of a fast growing college and will lend itself to future expansion as needed. The space in Skidmore Hall, now occupied by the library, will be used for additional student rooms, making it possible for the entire senior class to live in Skidmore Hall.

This is the first time in 15 years that Skidmore has called upon alumnae and friends for financial support. In 1924 the college conducted a campaign raising $300,000 for general endowment to match the $100,000 of the General Education Board.

Maestro Reynolds Makes History

Famous For His Clarinet Solos

A new band with a difference—most of the difference being clarinet-playing maestro Tommy Reynolds, the spark that's sending the combination places in a hurry. Reynolds opened in Boston for an extended engagement on January 27, with plenty of major airings. Meaning especially valuable current plugs for his new Vocalion releases.

Discovered by the shrewd Shribman office, maker of many a band name, Reynolds has been brought along by judicious spotting in hotels and ballrooms throughout the East. Such places as Levaggi's in Boston, Mass., Casa Madrid, Louisville, Ky., Asbury Park Casino, Asbury Park, N. J., Hampton Beach Casino, New Hampshire, and State Promenade Ballroom in Boston have rocked to the solid rhythm of this colorful aggregation.

Star Clarinet Player

Crispness of execution and really bouncing tempos characterize the Reynolds band. High spot of each arrangement is the solo clarinet of the leader, flashing out in brilliant and breath-taking improvisations in front of choir voicings of brass and reeds. Here's a clarinet style which is really attention-getting and worthy of rank with any current star. Special note for the four-man sax section which has a truly remarkable blend and attack. Soloists, besides Reynolds, are rather subdued, with the maestro counted on for the "oomph" that makes record fans sit up and take notice.

Tommy Reynolds, twenty-five years old and hailing from Akron, Ohio, is another batoneer who belongs to the new school of ace instrumentalists. He could sing and play when he was five years old and was the youngest band conductor in the annals of scholastic history. Tall and good looking, he is a decided favorite with all types of fans.

Another Artie Shaw

Reynolds' career remarkably parallels that of Artie Shaw. Both play excellent clarinets and band styles are similar. In addition to that, Reynolds scored his biggest successes to date at Roseland State Ballroom in Boston, the very room which saw Shaw shoot to fame. Each had the same air-time, and to further follow out the story, Reynolds is rolling along piling up the same augmenting popularity reaction.

Tommy Reynolds, clarinet; Fred Conrad, Leo Pananam, Cab Goddard and Roy Atkins, saxophones; Charles Hill, Peter Abrams and Henry McGinnis, trumpets; Charles Hathaway and Don Cavanaugh, trombones; Fred Otis, piano; Earl Orton, drums; Jack Porcello, guitar; Eddie Griffin, bass. Vocalist, Patsy Parker.

Speech is Improved By Choral Speaking

TROY, N. Y. (ACP)—Russell Sage College is perfecting the oral reading as well as the general speech of its students by the introduction of choral verse speaking in all speech classes.

Particularly, the classes are aimed to improve the speech of freshmen and the foreign born.

To stimulate interest in the endeavor, a verse choir of 30 members has been organized by George-William Smith, professor of speech. While the fundamental aims of this activity are educational, its entertainment value will be utilized through the choir's appearance before area alumnae groups, literary clubs and college assemblies.

"Much is said today of the poor oral reading by the average college entrant," Professor Smith said. "The speech pattern is distorted and the thought is but vaguely communicated. Rich in its potentialities to remedy just this, choric verse speaking is rapidly gaining an important place in the educative process."

Although all types of defective speech are helped by this work, the foreign born and the stutterer perhaps receive the most benefit, Professor Smith pointed out. The foreign students or student of foreign born parents needs to learn and fix the very difficult tune of English speech, and the stutterer to establish in all expression the necessary kinetic rhythm.

To Play At Kake Walk

TOMMY REYNOLDS

Let's Listen In

There have been so many nickels rammed down my throat today that I'm beginning to get a stomach ache. You see, it was like this. Jane Smith was in terrible trouble. Tom asked her to go to the Masquerade wth him, and then he sort of took it for granted that she'd go to Kake Walk, too. He even had all the tickets. Tom's one of these one-gal men—an Aggie, comes from somewhere up in the north, and never saw anything in a plaid skirt and nail polish and silk stockings before he hit U. V. M. Jane was the first one he happened to bump into. It happened at the Freshman Mixer. He's been going around with her ever since. He still thinks she's got wings sprouting out of her shoulder blades, and she might as well be swathed in a long white gown, with a gold halo on her head, to watch him with her....Jane thinks he's pretty nice, too.

Well, I rang suddenly this morning, at about seven. Peg came tearing up in her bathrobe to answer me, and low and behold it was a long distance—for Jane. A deep booming voice came shivering through me from the other end of the line. "This is Dick," it said. Jane's hand—the receiver one—started to tremble. She got it up against the mouth piece by mistake, and it sounded like Morse code...This Dick fellow, it seems, was pretty anxious to come up next weekend (that's Kake Walk!). Well, Jane got all excited. She jumped up and down in the hall till she lost both her slippers somewhere in the fray, and in the meanwhile she told him, all sort of trembling with excitement, how glad she'd be to see him, and of course she'd love him to come. Then three minutes were up, and they had to say good bye... So there it was, all arranged. I could hear Jane running all over the house, banging doors and kicking her slippers all over (guess she always does that when she gets excited), and telling all the other girls about it....Around noon I heard her telling someone how she happened to meet Tom in Math class, and how petrified she was when she remembered Dick.

About this time Sally cut in on me—had a nice fiery fight with a fellow named Art. Sally's a red head, which gets me all on my toes. It seems like she went skiing Sunday for the first time in her life. Wants Art to take her again. He sounded sort of as if he didn't like the idea too much—had to spend the whole day pulling her out of snow banks and waiting while she went in to warm her toes....At this point Sally decided loudly that she wouldn't ever speak to him again, and slammed my receiver down so hard that it made my ear ache.

George rang me next. "Hello, Mary. I'll be over for you in a half hour. O. K.?" "Swell." "O. K. Swell. So long." "So long." That sounded promising.

Art was back again. The wires sizzled. "By God, you'll never find me taking a girl skiing again—unless it's Sonja Henie!"

WHAM—That was Sally.

"Hello..Give me long distance, please ....Yes, yes....that's right....Hello.. ..Dick, is that you? This is Jane. Dick, I've done an awful thing. I was so excited when you called up this morning that I didn't think. Tom asked me to Kake Walk last week....and I can't let him down. Oh, Dick, what'll I do? I want to cry. I want to see you so badly! ....You're sure you don't mind too horribly?....You're sure?....Oh, Dick.. ...I want to die!....Yes....I'll write you a long letter right away. There isn't time to say anything now. I feel horribly about it. You know I do. Can you ever forgive me?....All right. All right. Goodbye, Dick....I'll write you. Goodbye!...."

...."Jane? This is Tom....Say, Jane ....look. I've been doing a lot of thinking. Why don't you ask the other fellow to come, anyway? He sounds swell. I'd like to meet him. We could go everywhere together....I'll get extra tickets right away...." "Tom, you're wonderful! Oh, Tom! I'll call him up right away! Oh, Tom—you're too wonderful for words!"....

"Hello?" (Sally again) "Oh, hello, Art. (very frigid tones)....Yes, I can see your point. Of course. Naturally.... Well, you needn't bother. The captain of the ski team just asked me to go to Underhill with him next week....Yes, I think I can manage very well, without surplus assistance....Why, I might consider it. Week after next? Possibly I shall be able to manage it. One never knows about those things, does one? I might break a ski by that time. Which would probably make you happy no end ....A heater? For your car? Wheeeeee! That makes it quite a different problem! ....Sure I'll break the date for this weekend. You bet!....So long, Art! Say, you're all right!"

Ouch! My ears. Two more months of this shouting and glee, and I'll break under the strain. You have no idea how hard it is on the insignificant telephone.

Poverty Dance Informal Affair

Prize for Worst Rags

Do you plead poverty? Certainly, everyone does! Then, girls of the Green and Gold, rush over to Southwick Saturday evening, February 17, and plead the worst poverty possible with that boy friend of yours.

Yes, leap year brings you, the chance,
Come, bring that boy friend to the Dance.

The Poverty Dance issues the orders: no silks and satins—rags reign as queen (girls—just hunt up that dress the dog chewed and boys—that shirt that was yours some odd five years ago). Indeed, any clothes will do but don't let style cramp you.

Oh! It is rather embarrassing but there is an admission fee. It's for the benefit of the Health Council so no one ought to feel too badly about it—even if you are poverty stricken, you have to keep well, so—ninety-nine cents for the couple, fifty-nine cents for the stag. That's cheap and you know it—come, don't be stingy! Girls, think of the money you save on clothes for the evening and then grab or hunt for that ninety-nine cents and bring the boy.

Thus Southwick will open its doors wide Saturday evening, February 17 from 8:30 to 12:00 as the best of a haven for the poverty stricken crowd. A good time will and must be enjoyed by all with the help of the chaperones, Professor and Mrs. J. H. Perry and Professor and Mrs. L. S. Rowell. Also, we must give those who have been in charge, Mary Arms '40 and Betty Taylor '40 the best cooperation for a successful enterprise. Then—come you poor ones!

Quotable Quotes

"It is not at all essential that a college teacher should have reached the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in his university course of study. What is essential is that he should have a sound and scholarly comprehension of the subject matter of that which he is to teach, as well as skill and tact in its interpretation to younger and less developed minds. The high degree of specialization in study to which the doctor of philosophy has become accustomed is precisely that which is to be avoided in college teaching." Nicholas Murray Butler, famed president of Columbia University.

She Casts A Spell

When you met, the way she smiled, you knew that she was swell
For that Hawley girl has cast her spell
When you were with her just once, you saw that she was fun
For your Kake Walk Queen, Laura's the one.
She will never leave you flat, or leave you high and dry,
She'll keep all her promises, and brother, "that's no lie."
There you are, you've found the one, the one to fill the part,
And you'll make her Queen, if you are smart.

Platforms

been very much awake and have been waging a hard, clean fight in order that I might be elevated to that position which so rightfully belongs to me. Because I have been pressed for time, I have been unable to give much recognition to the men; but at the end of this week you men will hear plenty from me, and I will continue to plead for your support throughout the rest of the campaign.

Part of my platform is:

1. A studies committee composed of all students under warning.
2. Loans issued to all students at a negative rate of interest.
3. Late nights out every night except Sunday and then until 1.00 o'clock.
4. A dating bureau operated free of charge to insure everyone against dateless week-ends.
5. For each and every girl I promise a handsome and intelligent escort for Kake Walk.
6. Cigarette girls designed by Petty to patrol the Coffee Corner.
7. Automatic slide rules for all engineers.
8. A ski tow from the Sugar House to Converse Hall in operation at all times.

Hugh Ripper '40, of Burlington, with Reed Leonard '40 as manager, running on the R. I. P. ticket, opens his campaign as follows:

Ripper for King

The R. I. P. party in convention assembled on February 7, in the year of our Lord of 1940, after due consideration did duly appoint and nominate the Right Honorable H. J. P. Ripper, Esq., to represent the interests of the above-mentioned party and all other right-thinking students of the University of Vermont.

In view of the present deplorable conditions the R. I. P. party, which heretofore has only taken a passive interest in the election of the sovereign of our annual Kake Walk festivities, has decided to take direct and remedial action by placing before you a MAN, by eliminating from our campaign all corrupt practices of slander, slams and mud-slinging which has been a growing tendency of the past few years, and by instigating a new order based on the principles of wit and humor.

Disregarding the success which has been attained by certain unmentionable public officials by the use of gaudy, prolific, attractive and perfidious promises, we do hereby present a few practical substantial improvements which our candidate, when elected, will strive his utmost to attain.

We, the Royal Invincible Party, in the belief that all investors are entitled to return on their investment, do promise the following dividends for all votes invested in our cause:

1. Take the chapel clock "out from under a bushel" and put a light on it.
2. Research on "If chicken feed isn't fit for dogs to eat, why send dimes to the President?"
3. Free breakfasts to the ungodly during chapel period—spirits don't set well on an empty stomach.
4. More coal in the furnace and less out the chimney, appd., W. S. H.
5. Cinderless roads or cinder-proof shoes.
6. Take the bull out of economics.
7. Raise the student wages from 30 cents to 50 cents an hour. All work and no pay doesn't make jack.
8. At the Campus Ice Cream Parlor we demand service that brings "coke" before your beard gets long enough to drip.
9. Lectures by radio, that we may enjoy featherbed comfort.
10. More garbage to the pigs in "Little Italy," i.e., piggery.
11. Removal of the mustaches from all the chemistry professors. They're dangerous.
12. Fill up the shell holes of "no man's land" back of the Old Mill. "They" have been trying for 20 years.
13. Free airplane rides for co-eds.
14. Spontaneous quizzes and exams. We don't like um. We're agin' um.
15. A new breed of grasshoppers to hop on, and hop up to the fourth floor of the Sci. Hall.
16. A retirement program for professors before they reach the fossiliferous stage.
17. Food for thought for the faculty.
18. Automatic shut-offs on lectures when the period ends.
19. A comparative, constructive, contemplative, comprehensive criterion for contemporary, crucial, catastrophic constipation.
20. Abolish coercion system of required attendance before and after vacations.
21. Publicity for Kake Walk.
22. A course in air conditioning for janitors.
23. A New Mill instead of an old one. The gears are worn out.
24. Put about 500 feet on the library, seven stories high and 200 feet wide.
25. Abolition of some of the rules, now in effect, which were made in the "Victorian era."
26. A round room for Math professors to bring the lines to an end.
27. Lubrication for chalk that squeaks.
28. Solve the paradox of prohibited smoking in the only fireproof building on the campus.
29. A shorter route to Heaven by air.
30. Bigger and better laboratories.
31. Death to apple-polishing.
32. Don't treat students like children, if they are to be ladies and gentlemen.
33. An organized uniform class schedule for all colleges in the University.
34. Mud chokes no eels.
35. A method for changing suspended animation into animated suspension.
36. "Mademoiselle" and "Esquire" in the library.

This enactment, duly ratified by the R. I. P. party, is hereby submitted to the student VOTERS for approval.

R. I. P. Poem

There's an excellent clock in the chapel tower
Faithfully ticking away each hour,
Four faces to look at in broad daylight,
But nary a one can be seen at night.

Now as to the rule of "ten-fifteen,"
How can it be kept when the clock can't be seen?
How futile it is to rush home from a date
And arriving, discover you're ten minutes late.
Your gal gets campused and you get the gate,
All cause there's no light on the d—clock's pate.

How can we bring light to the heathen people,
When we can't see the clock on our own church steeple?
Who knows the good that could be done,
If a drunk could see two clocks instead of none?
And maybe we seekers of classical knowledge
Would not be so likely to bust out of college.
No man should be sentenced without a fair trial,
So give us a clock with a luminous dial!

Now aviator Ripper
Is no ordinary poke.
He'll even fly you co-eds
To where you'll cast your vote.

If a hen laid an orange, what would the chickens say?
"See the orange marmalade."

Handsome apples are seldom sour. Many people never wore a crown but are royal within.

Ripper Isn't Partial. Regal, Invincible, Popular, Righteous, Informed, Persevering, Romeo In Person is Rising In Popularity. With Realities In Ripper we Rest In Peace.

Prof. Evans Talks At Men's Club; War Strategy Subject

Doubts if Germans Attempt Frontal Attack on Maginot

Professor Evans, in an after-dinner talk before the College Street Church Men's Club, said that Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, has about one chance in twenty-five for success in bringing about peace on his trip to Europe.

His opinion is based on the belief that there are groups in both France and England who still favor early peace and appeasement for Germany, and that the Reich is not so confident as Hitler would make the world believe. He named Georges Bonnet, French minister for justice, as among those favoring an early peace on less than the officially announced terms. If Germany gave the proper guarantees the Allies might negotiate a peace with the Nazis.

Nazis Not Confident

He also declared his belief that the Nazis are probably not too confident. Due to the effect of the allied blockade the Reich materials from Russia are being poured into the Finnish campaign.

Discussing the probable course of the war, Professor Evans said if there is no peace before spring he believed the German move with the best chances of success would be a drive to the sea through Holland at the juncture of the Dutch-Belgium fortifications.

Once entrenched on the Dutch coast Nazi bombers would be in a position to bomb effectively the British mainland and allied shipping. Professor Evans expressed his opinion that Nazi bombings of England and allied shipping have been unsuccessful because German planes are unable to travel the long distances from their bases and still have sufficient fuel reserve in protection of the bombers when they reach their objective. The Germans might easily break through Dutch fortifications, especially if Belgium remained neutral, bringing them half the distance the present bases are from England.

No Drive on Oil Fields

Professor Evans does not believe the Allies would dare undertake a drive in the spring on the Russian oil fields because it would be extremely difficult from the military point of view, and it might precipitate a similar drive by the Germans down through the Ukraine from southern Poland. He said he doubted the Nazi dictatorship could stand the huge losses in life which would be involved in a frontal attack on the Maginot line.

Music Aids Students To Do Better Work

New York, N. Y. (I. P.)—Music hath charm to soothe not only the savage beast, but, according to Prof. George W. Eggers, Chairman of the City College Art Department, it also improves the work of art students.

By means of a radio and phonograph in the department office studio and an intradepartmental communication system, City College art students have been listening to all sorts of music while busy with sketching, painting, sculpture, lithography and photography. No longer do they whistle while they work, nor do they care to converse while their hands are busy. The soft strains of the music seem to ease nervous tension and the students accomplish more, in quantity at least, than formerly.

Professor Eggers was surprised at the high standard of the City College students' musical tastes. In choosing their programs, classical music is consistently favored, although "swing" is not altogether ignored. An intriguing possibility, Professor Eggers suggested, is the effect of music in classes in other subjects

No Women Wanted By Ohio State Men

Columbus, Ohio—(ACP)—Women, an institution hitherto regarded as a necessary factor in the building of happy home life, will have no place in—nay! are strictly prohibited from—the home of the Phi Kappa Tau fraternity—for one weekend a year at Ohio State University.

From the front of the fraternity house hangs a huge sign which proclaims in bold letters to the world that "Anti-Woman Week End" is in progress.

From Friday to Monday, the rules are simple and terse: "No dates, no shaves, no haircuts, no shirts, no ties or pressed trousers, and above all no communication with (and here is listed a classification without a loophole) any girl, maid, or woman."

All pictures of women are taken from the rooms and, following a solemn ceremony, deposited in a safe until Monday morning.

The World Front

To mention spring at a time like this, when near zero gales blow outside and the snow lies deep in the fields, may seem somewhat tactless, yet we can't help thinking of what spring will mean this year for us and what it will mean for Europe. The slightest signs of thaw in this country are greeted with joy, with eagerness. Any sign of spring means to us rebirth in nature, freedom from the confinement of winter, new pleasures, new sports, yes and even new clothes. Spring means batter-up, green fields, the ripple of icy water in thawing brooks and the symphony of birds and pines. So as the wind howls outside we curl up a little closer to the fire, content to wait for the spring.

They Wait and Hope

In Europe the cold numbs men waiting patiently in trenches. The cold checks the madness of war. The cold chills thousands of people waiting in line for provisions. In many places it falls upon homeless wanderers and weary exiles. In Europe, too, they wait. For what? Can it be the spring they await? Spring which will mean a new outburst of death and destruction. Spring—the poppies blooming in earth enriched by men's blood and brains and flesh; the song of the lark drowned in the mad rumble of guns; the bombs falling on helpless civilians; young men who should be romancing and singing going to a rendezvous with death. Can it be spring they await? Perhaps it is—for hope never dies in the human heart; men have a strange faculty for forgetting hours of sordidness and misery in a minute of beauty and joy. Yes, maybe they, too, await the spring with desperate hope in their heart—a hope that in the beauty of nature's rebirth men, too, may come groping out of the winter of their reason into a spring of understanding.

But it is more than spring that Europe needs today. It is a lasting peace. It is the freedom from perpetual dissension, from ever-threatening conflict. Perhaps this, too, the people await. Perhaps they are growing tired of waiting for a permanent peace that never comes. Perhaps they are wondering how long they will be called on to make useless sacrifices, how long power is to make of the world a shambles. Yes they are waiting for spring over there but they are waiting for something even bigger than that. They have waited a long time.

From This to Learn

Peace is a wonderful word, but today it seems to have lost its meaning. Peace seems to have been replaced by armistice. And yet the people wait. This war must end as all wars do. And when that end does come something different must be the result. We cannot have another Versaille, we cannot repeat our past mistakes. Victory will be a great responsibility for it is as much the duty of the victors to grant an equitable peace as it is the duty of the defeated to live up to it. Wars are futile but it would seem that we might learn something from them. We learned from the last war that peace can be built only on justice and understanding. The big test for humanity now is, whether or not we can apply that knowledge to the solving of our present problems. If we do not we are acknowledging our animal instincts, our blind misunderstanding.

Let us hope that the spring will not bring the turmoil that is predicted, but if it does come let us hope that out of it will come a lasting peace. Meantime we in this country can think of those across the waters when we contemplate our freedom; we can think of soldiers in trenches and exiles when we stop in wonder before a blazing sunset, a ghost-like birch. We can in our thoughts at least try to convey some of that freedom, some of that beauty to kindred hearts thousands of miles from us.

Editors Show Pictures Of University Life

Joining forces with the Kake Walk directors, Ira's Folly, pictorial magazine started by students at the University of Vermont last year, will publish its first issue of the current year in combination with the Kake Walk program. Editors are busy lining up an issue which will tell the Kake Walk audience what they want to know about the performance and something about the University as well. It will contain, in addition to data on the Kake Walkers and fraternity stunts which will make up the Kake Walk program Saturday, February 24, features on other parts of the University life told largely through pictures. Most of the photographs used will be the work of students. Lee B. Whitcomb, senior business student from St. Albans, has been the power behind Ira's Folly, sharing with Richard M. Story, Jr., of Yonkers, N. Y., a senior in mechanical engineering, in launching the pictorial last year, and continuing the undertaking this year. Whitcomb has visited advertisers, directed photographers, searched out news angles and coordinated the efforts of the various workers on the magazine. Story was the original photographer of the magazine, and this year two recruits, John H. Couture, Burlington, and Charles J. Katzew, Brockton, Mass., have joined in the task of recording campus events by camera. Prominent on the women's staff is Dorothea Smith of Burlington.

Key and Serpent Elect Officers

At the meeting of Key and Serpent, men's junior honorary society, held February 6 at Kappa Sigma House, the following officers were elected: President, W. I. Pye, Pittsford, Vt.; vice-president, H. H. Crossley, Gardner, Mass.; secretary, A. H. Becker, Burlington, Vt.; and treasurer, R. V. Slack, Randolph Center, Vt.

Dykstra Sees Need Of Great Faculty

Madison, Wis.—(I.P.)—"It has been said that a university will be a great institution in proportion as it has a great faculty," President C. A. Dykstra of the University of Wisconsin stated in the first report made by a president of the University since 1921.

"This is essentially true. The material with which a faculty works, however, is the student body plus the equipment for teaching and research. Of prime importance, therefore, is a thorough consideration of the student and his needs. He must have good teaching and academic leadership. He must have guidance in the fields of research investigation. He must be brought into stimulating contact with research opportunities and teachers who can direct his intellectual growth.

"It is imperative," President Dykstra declared, "if we are to have a healthful and sound growth that provisions be made for the recognition of outstanding faculty service. We cannot hope to keep all members of our staff who are sought by other universities which have so much more to offer by way of better opportunities and increased compensation.

"By proper recognition and a decent system of promotion, however, we can keep a properly balanced faculty of real distinction even with the inevitable shifting that comes about because of that competition among universities for competent scholars.

"We can encourage the younger members of the staff if we can give them the chance to do fine work and a reasonable compensation so that they are not overly harrassed financially."

U. V. M. Graduate's Skates Exhibited

John Pomeroy's, 1809 At Hagar's Store

One day back in 1804 Mr. Cassius Pomeroy bought a pair of ice skates for his eleven-year-old brother, John, at William E. Peel and Company, a Burlington store long since out of business. They were probably the finest skates that could be bought in 1804, made of curly maple with blades of steel that even now are hardly rusted. Dutch style skates, they have three steel pins, one in the heel and two in the toe, that penetrate the shoe sole and heel, and, with the help of a very intricate leather harness, hold them on.

The Pomeroys lived at "Fern Hill" on Prospect Street, the present home of Vaughn Burgess. John graduated from U. V. M. about 1809 and became a prominent lawyer here in Burlington—so prominent that the Pomeroy school was named after him.

His skates, which have become the property of the Fleming Museum, are now on exhibition at Hagar's hardware store on Church Street.

It is the custom of the museum to send out one such exhibit each month to some store—another of the interesting functions of this vital part of U. V. M.

Debating Teams Plan Complete Spring Schedule

Varsity Debaters To Travel in South and West

University of Vermont debating teams on all fronts will see plenty of action before the close of the debate season next spring. Men debaters have a full schedule of home debates, supplemented by an Easter expedition through New Jersey, Maryland and Virginia. The women's team, in addition to several home debates, is planning a spring trip through the South, with eight or nine debates along the way, traveling through North and South Carolina, Florida, Georgia and Virginia.

Middlebury Debate A Tradition

The annual Lawrence prize debate with Middlebury College is scheduled for Burlington on March 1. In this debate prizes are awarded to the three best speakers out of the six participating. Middlebury and Vermont, traditional rivals in debating as elsewhere, will this year argue the question "Resolved, That a system of socialized medicine should be adopted, making available to all, complete medical service at public expense." Middlebury will defend the affirmative and Vermont the negative of this question.

Other home debates scheduled for the men's team are Brothers College of Drew University, Madison, N. J., March 8; University of Florida, March 11; Providence College, March 12; University of Ottawa, March 16; Washington and Jefferson University, Washington, Pa., March 19; Canisius College, Buffalo, N. Y., March 21. Men debaters have already met Clark University in discussion here February 12.

Schools included in the tentative itinerary for the men's Easter trip are Washington College, Georgetown University, College of William and Mary, Western Maryland College, and Drew University.

Three Home Games

Middlebury College, Upsala College and the University of Connecticut are on the list of home debates for the women's debate team during the next few weeks. A women's team will go to Montreal the first or second week in March for a debate at McGill University. The women's team will top off their season with the southern trip, which they will make during the Easter recess.

Freshman debaters have already met Middlebury and Montpelier High Schools and are scheduled to oppose Milton High School March 7. Debates with Vergennes High School, Essex Junction High School and Green Mountain Junior College are pending.

$250 Prize Offered For Science Essay

In honor of the celebration which will take place on April 10 in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the enactment of the first patent statute, the American Patent Law Association is offering a prize of $250 to the undergraduate student of any college who writes the best essay on the subject of the "History of the American Patent System and of Economic Advancement." The person who wins will read his paper at the commemoration exercises on April 10, which will probably be broadcast from coast to coast.

The essay should not exceed 3,000 words and must be typed. It is to be sent to the American Patent Law Association. Anyone interested in competing in this essay contest should see Prof. D. B. Carroll or Prof. G. L. Milliken of the political science department.

The Gala Masquerade

Alumni Council To Meet Saturday

Vermont Graduates to Return for Festivities

Kake Walk being the time when loyal alumni come back to the Vermont campus, the Alumni Council has appropriately picked 9.30 Saturday morning, February 24, as the date for its winter meeting. The Council is made up of representatives from each of the fifty classes last graduated, one member from each active alumni club and twenty members at large. Thomas J. Mulcare '09 of Cambridge, Mass., is the president. The secretary is Mrs. Isabelle Y. Gallup of Burlington.

The purpose of Saturday's meeting is a discussion of important business and a consideration of the election of trustees to take the place of those whose term will soon expire. The Alumni Council was founded in 1920 and its object is to advance the interest, influence and efficiency of the University of Vermont, to strengthen relations between the alumni and the University, to aid and assist in the establishment of alumni associations, to keep contact with undergraduate activities and a variety of other duties which will aid alumni and University alike.

Naturally the Alumni Council will not be the only alumni activity during Kake Walk. Alumni will be just as numerous as undergraduates at the festivities. Invitations have been extended to alumni everywhere. The Kake Walk will give alumni the chance to establish new friendships and renew old ones as they enjoy Vermont's unique festival.

Music Department Releases Schedule

The following rehearsal schedule will go into effect the week of February 19 for the music groups:

Tuesday—7.00-8.00 o'clock, Choir; 8.00-9.00 o'clock, Chapel Orchestra.

Wednesday—7.00-8.00 o'clock, Men's Glee Club; 8.00-9.00 o'clock, Women's Glee Club.

Thursday, 7.00-8.00 o'clock, Choir and Brahms' chorus; 8.00-9.00 o'clock, University Orchestra.

If there are any faculty members or others interested in singing in the Brahms' "Requiem" which is to be given April 28, rehearsals are held each Thursday at 7.00 o'clock and there is still room for a few more to enter.

Judges Pick Five Final Skits for Kake Walk

Angels on roller skates, red devils, Hitlers, Nazi storm troopers, scientific apparatus—mix these all up and you will have the scene of the Kake Walk despite eliminations held last night in the auditorium. Six fraternities performed their skits before the judges—Professors Q. D. Carpenter, T. S. Rowell, A. Gershoy.

The Tau Epsilon Phi's were eliminated after long deliberation by the judges. The following fraternities are the ones who will put on their skits at the Kake Walk Saturday night: Sigma Phi, Lambda Iota, Sigma Nu, Phi Delta Theta and Sigma Alpha Epsilon. The skits are judged for originality, timing and other points.

The Sigma Gammas Initiate Nine Girls

Sigma Gamma, the only local sorority on the hill, initiated nine girls last evening at Southwick. The new members are as follows: Emma Abbott '43, of Dorset; Helen Carr '41, of Burlington; Laura Ann Douglas '41, of Shoreham; Dorothy Franklin '43, of East Ryegate; Hilda LaDeau '40, of Fairlee; Pearl Marvin '42, of Fairfax; Dorothy Murphy '42, of Burlington; Frances Rogers '41, of Townsend; and Grace Thompson '42, of Milton.

An excellent supper preceded the formal initiation. The girls who took charge of this were Laura Dustan '40, Helen Towne '40, and Betty Isham '41. Helen Carr and the other pledges supplied a good program of games which included a Quaker meeting, a peanut hunt, and the writing of telegrams. Several of the alumnae as well as the active members were present.

Rev. Charles Jones Last Week's Chapel Speaker

Rev. Charles S. Jones, well known to many students, was the chapel speaker last Wednesday, February 14. He chose for his theme the unusual subject of "The Art of Blushing." He pointed out that we blush over non-essentials such as social discomfiture or embarrassing moments. We really need to cultivate "the art of blushing over things about which we should be ashamed, such as social injustices of which we are a part."

The choir selection was Bach's "To Thee Alone Be Glory."

Secretary of Y. M. C. A. To Be Chapel Speaker

The chapel speaker on Wednesday, February 21, will be Mr. A. T. Morrill, secretary of the State Young Men's Christian Association. Popular among the various youth organizations of the State, Mr. Morrill is a well-known speaker.

Kake Walk Plans Near Completion

Fraternities Announce Walkers fo' de Kake

U. V. M.'s annual mid-winter frolic, Kake Walk, will take place on Saturday at the Memorial Auditorium. The directors, Carl Schofield '40, and J. Walker Robinson '40, have planned an excellent program and have made several innovations. The advance sale of tickets indicates that many alumni, parents and students will be attending Kake Walk. Phyllis McGovern '40 who is in charge of the Fa-So-Ma-Da banquet expects many of the parents and students to attend before Kake Walk.

The fraternites and the independents will compete for two large coveted cups which are given each year to the groups which present the best Kake Walkers and stunts. The remainder of the prizes is a large number of handsome layer cakes. The winning of the Kake Walk and stunts also counts as points toward the Traynor Trophy award.

Ten fraternities have announced their choices of Kake Walkers who will be Walkin' fo' de Kake in the Memorial Auditorium next Saturday night. The entrants are as follows:

Kappa Sigma—J. L. Costello '42, Rutland, R. L. Swift '43, Portland, Me.

A T O—E. J. Roberts '40, Jacksonville, W. L. Dorion '43, Rutland.

Phi Sigma Delta—A. H. Becker '41, Burlington, A. D. Wolk '41, Rutland.

Sigma Nu—N. J. Boyden '42, Burlington, R. D. Wakefield '42, Burlington.

Sigma Phi—C. W. Utter '41, Westerly, R. I., J. A. Hamilton '42, Burlington.

Tau Epsilon Phi—C. Joseph '43, New York City, C. Itzkowitz '42, New London, Conn.

Lambda Iota—J. A. White, Jr., '42, Essex Fells, N. J., J. N. Cabanzo '41, Barre.

The three judges of the Kake Walking will be Warren Austin, Jr.; Prof. J. E. Pooley of the Classical Department; and Prof. P. B. Willis of the Economics Department.

Annual Banquet to Take Place Saturday At Hotel Van Ness

Mortar Board, Boulder Sponsor Fifth Banquet For Parents and Students

One of the more recent Kake Walk traditions is the Father-Son-Mother-Daughter Banquet which was innovated February 23, 1935, becoming an outstanding contribution to the Kake Walk week-end activities. This first banquet was held at noon of the Kake Walk Saturday, which was on Washington's birth day that year. The innovation was instigated by the Alumni Council and since 1935 the banquet has been sponsored by the Mortar Board and Boulder honorary societies, represented this year by Phyllis McGovern '40, and E. Gasperini, Jr., '40, who are the committee chairmen for the banquet.

Purpose of Banquet

This first Fa-So-Mo-Da Banquet was an attempt to establish closer relationship between the parents and the college, other colleges having successful annual banquets of similar nature. There were 172 guests at this first banquet and owing to the efforts of the Alumni Council, the number attending has increased each year. Meeting with increasing popularity, the Fa-So-Mo-Da Banquet gives the visitors an opportunity to get acquainted in an informal background so that they may better enter into the true Kake Walk spirit.

Between courses of the banquet, a Glee Club Quartet or trio has usually entertained and there is a short program of after dinner speeches. This banquet is being timed to give the guests ample opportunity to be at the Memorial Auditorim for the evening's program.

As the purpose of the banquet is to give parents and alumni an opportunity to mingle with each other and with the faculty and students of the University and as letters have been sent to the alumni and parents, students are urged to attend even if their parents cannot.

Cushing to be Toastmaster

This year the annual banquet will be held Saturday, February 24, at 6:00 at the Van Ness Hotel. Steven Cushing, of St. Albans, will be toastmaster and Dean Simpson and Dean Swift will be there. Bill Lockwood, of the alumni will be a speaker and Professor Hall will give the invocation. The school quartet will entertain between courses. The annual alumni luncheon will be omitted this year so that there will not be such a rush between the events planned for the afternoon and evening. All guests attending the Fa-So-Mo-Da banquet are urged to be at the hotel as soon after the basketball game as possible in order to give plenty of time to the banquet and time to get to the Memorial Audtiorium for the Kake Walk.

Betsy Marlow Gives Talk at Weeks School

Betsey Marlow '40, accompanied by Florence Wade '40, traveled to the Weeks School in Vergennes last Sunday, where she presented a talk on England. Miss Marlow recently visited England and based her talk on the customs of England which seem peculiar to the people here in America.

Following the talk, these girls led the church service for the school.

Friday afternoon, February 23, and Saturday, February 24, will be University holidays. No classes will be held Friday, February 23, after 12.20 p.m., but morning classes will meet as usual on that day. Thursday, February 22, all classes will meet as usual.—E. Swift, Secretary.

The Spirit of Kake Walk

Once again in our round of activities the annual Kake Walk festival is nearly upon us. This is our big social holiday of the year, and to most of the students, it has a real significance. We are proud of the fact that Vermont's mid-winter celebration is a unique tradition, a tradition that has been built up through the years and the spirit of which cannot die. Every University student should feel a thrill when the band plays "Cotton Babes," and the high stepping Kake Walkers start down the floor.

For these of the alumni who worked and built up Kake Walk during the past years, coming back to the scenes of their former triumphs is a great occasion. We undergraduates cannot appreciate how they feel about the work and spirit that has gone into the development of Kake Walk unless perhaps we have parents, who are University alumni. It is our part as upholders of those traditions which were set before us to show by our enthusiasm, spirit and hard work that we too wish to continue the fame of our mid-winter festival.

A former graduate recalls that around Kake Walk time the class rooms were nearly, if not quite, forgotten, but that the time and energy spent in developing the Kake Walk down through the years has paid rich dividends in better college spirit and greater interest on the part of the alumni, parents, and friends. Kake Walk serves to help build fraternity spirit as well as college spirit, when one group is really working together on something with a common interest. Making a success of the production of Kake Walk is something that every person who assists can have as his ambition. So our Kake Walk has grown from a small affair held in the loft of the Old Mill to our modern performance which is given before a packed auditorium.

One thing which many of us undergraduates forget is that while the majority of students look forward to a week-end of fun and excitement, the production of Kake Walk is really an enormous task. The directors start working early in the winter, and it is through their efforts that our Kake Walk is successful. In addition to this there is the worry over countless details. However, a fine performance is more than adequate reward for all the effort.

The directors of this year's Kake Walk, C. H. Schofield '40 and R. W. Robinson '40 deserve a great deal of credit for all the detail and work which their task involves, and the spirit, enthusiasm and cooperation of the entire student body.

At-last-the-truth-is-out item: So that its football field would be just the right color to impress the crowd that attended the Missouri-Kansas grid duel, the University of Kansas dyed its field "aura-green," using 300 gallons of coloring to make the playing field a thing of beauty—at least until the dye washed out.

It will stand up for anyone who just leaves in disgust and lets that 'waiting' date wait."

Embarrassing moment: Greater Boston's untold thousands of debating fans were foiled when they sat down to listen to a Harvard-M. I. T. word battle broadcast. Reason: Both teams had prepared negative arguments, and no one was ready to uphold the affirmative side. Result: Strauss waltzes were heard instead of the debate.

Kasper's Kolumn

After being in the arms of Morpheus for nearly a year Kasper decided to dig up his Joke-Gripe Kolumn and forthwith send it to press. The jokes were in the moth balls but with a little airing they can be tolerated. The gripe, on the other hand, has reached the point where it can no longer be tolerated. Naturally I am referring to the unexcusable new low to which our cheerleaders have sunk.

Of course, judging from past performances the student body didn't expect too much from the cheerleaders during the game last Tuesday night. But out of all fairness to the faculty, students, and reputation of our school WHY WEREN'T THERE ANY CHEERLEADERS AT THE NORRWICH GAME???

It can now be easily seen that the buck doesn't need to be passed from the cheerleaders to the student body and back again any longer. THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE LACK OF CHEERS AND SCHOOL SPIRIT LIES SQUARELY ON THE SHOULDERS OF THE CHEERLEADERS. Tuesday night many attempts were made to start cheers in the student section but due to the lack of leadership these yells were confined to small groups who at times were cheering against one another.

THIS SITUATION CEASES TO BE FUNNY. One local townswoman was heard to remark that it took much self control on her part to refrain from leading the cheers herself. 'People' think we are crazy because we no longer vocally support our teams. Norwich, with her handful of supporters and single cheerleaders, put Vermont to shame.

And here is another question. Why is it, when Joe can get his band to turn out 100 per cent for every game, the cheerleaders do not send even one delegate? And the only tangible compensation the band receives for hauling its heavy instruments down to the Auditorium is a little medal—issued by the Military Department, incidentally. At the end of the season the cheerleaders brazonly step up and expect to receive letters signifying they have made great sacrifices for their Alma Mater. And meanwhile Ev Bailey and his skiers climb all over Mount Mansfield bringing glory to the University of Vermont without even—if you can imagine it—receiving minor sports letters. It is a situation which certainly needs rectifying in the eyes of justice.

It just doesn't stack up and unless Kendall Beaton and his cohorts do a right-about-face the alumni are liable to step in. Many of these loyal alumni will be in town for Kake Walk and the basketball game next Saturday, therefore this Kolumn, on behalf of those students who still have faith that there may be a little school spirit left at the University of Vermont, sincerely urges the cheerleaders to send at least one representative down to the game to lead the student section in their cheers. If such a person, by chance, attends the game Kasper believes the classes of '40, '41, '42 and '43 may yet be saved from disgrace in the eyes of the alumni and interested supporters.

THE TEAM NEEDS OUR SUPPORT AND COOPERATION—LET'S GIVE IT TO THEM!!!

And Kasper heard this one in the bus the other day:

Frosh—"Transfer, please."

Conductor—"Where to?"

Frosh—"Can't tell you. It's a surprise party."

To laugh is to be free from worry. Who doesn't worry lives a long time. To live a long time is to last. Therefore he who laughs, lasts.

"Why the toothbrush in your coat lapel?"

"It's my class pin—I go to Colgate."

And Kasper understands the Thetas went to great lengths to please their dinner patrons Thursday night—they served spaghetti.

"Bow legs are few."

"Yes, and far between."

The Band Wagon

By BOB JOHNSON

Kirby Krew

We note with pleasure the rapid rise of John Kirby (Mr. Maxine Sullivan) and his six-man combine—the best such—subtle swing galore. Will there be a swarm of similar outfits—jam to you—cropping up over the country? Personally here's hoping it's the case!

DKC-ussions

A really fine batch of Krupas on the red label for Columbia.

Some typically Ellingtonish moods for the same company. Two of these sides feature Jimmy Blanton, Duke's new bass man who is utterly astounding, even comparable to Popo Foster, Bernstein Haggart, Kirby and Shapiro.

On Bluebird we find Barnet always true to form. Also on the same sticker don't miss Erskine Hawkins' "Tuxedo Function"—and on sweet tunes we go for chirper Dolores Brown.

J. Dorsey heads Decca as usual with his recent releases, closely followed by Ella—the incomparable Fitzgerald. Woody Herman is one of the big names on Decca's list. We rather go for Carol Kay—Herman thrush—on the delovely side but possessing a fine voice.

Out on a limb—we'll call Niggy Elman's "Bublitchki" the prettiest solo for brass recorded last year—please don't saw off the limb.

From the Sidelines

Benny Goodman ill, but carrying on is Hawkie Kogan, the new tenor in the Berigan troop.

The Andrews Sisters suffering Mama and Papa trouble on the subject of heart interests.

Cornell—going solidly swing with Casa Loma and Jan Savitt.

Stellar performer with Harry Harris is the new trumpet man—formerly with Glenn Miller—but terrific!

On Another Limb

Pardon our blowing our own horn. Most colleges have their own dance band—school supported and maintained. The Catamounts is the nearest thing to an all-collegian band that this college—or most—has ever had. For the first time a band on the hill is 80 percent collegian in personnel. Thus far the college has presented the most serious obstacles for the outfit to surmount. The combine has pulled itself up by its bootstraps to secure some of the most sought-after jobs in New England and New York—the more credit to them.

Men in the profession have criticized and applauded certain features of the band in a helpful and gratifying manner. Employers have been highly enthusiastic in their praise while audiences off campus have been very receptive. On campus—we're not so sure—with a few exceptions.

Oh, well—saw that limb off, too—and then dig us out of this snow pile—or was it a pillow fight? We'll see you at Reynolds' début on the U. V. M. campus—till then—ta-dee-ah—and if you have to have swing explained to you—"yo sho' nuff hadn' bettah mess aroun' wif it."

James H. Starbuck Flying Cadet Now At Kelly Field

Last Step Before Being Commissioned Second Lieutenant

An Air Corps more than double in size by June, 1941, was authorized by Congress before it adjourned last summer. A total of 5,500 airplanes and pilots to man them was the goal set. Aircraft factories are turning out pursuit planes, top speed nearing 400 miles an hour, giant four-engined bombers, capable of thousands of miles non-stop flight.

Pilot training activity also has been stepped up. Classes of 250 young college men are reporting to Randolph Field, Texas, the "West Point of the Air," every six weeks for basic flight training. Previously they have piled up 65 hours at one of the Air Corps' elementary flying schools.

One former University of Vermont student is now a Flying Cadet in Class 40-B, scheduled to be transferred from Randolph to Kelly Field, the Advanced Flying School, for a final three months of flight instruction before receiving their wings and being commissioned as Second Lieutenants in the Air Corps Reserve.

The former University of Vermont man who is now a student pilot at Randolph Field is: James H. Starbuck, Burlington, Vt., '39, B.A., Kappa Sigma, lettered in Cross Country, and Captain of varsity Tennis team.

Transferred to Randolph

They started their aviation career last August when they reported for primary flying instruction. Sixty-five hours in the air in rugged primary training planes was entered in their log books during the first three months of the nine months course.

Then they were transferred to Randolph Field, the Air Corps' model airdome, where the mysteries of a 400 horsepower low wing monoplane had to be mastered. These basic training planes are small counterparts of a modern day tactical airplane. Their equipment includes complete blind flying instruments, landing flaps, wing tip lights for night landings, a controllable pitch propellor, and radio transmitter and receiver.

At the primary school, almost half of their flying time was dual and half solo flying. At Randolph Field after the first few hours necessary to familiarize them with the new type of plane, they spend most of their flying hours solo.

Aerial acrobatics, such as snap rolls, slow rolls, must be mastered before the course is completed, not for the theatrical effect on spectators, but to teach them the use of the controls in these unusual positions of their craft.

Opportunity in Air Corps

Several hours night flying and instrument flying are included in the 75 hours flying time each Cadet receives at the "West Point of the Air."

Transfer to the Advanced Flying School is the last step in their aerial career before being graduated as full fledged military airplane pilots and commissioned Second Lieutenants in the Air Corps Reserve. Ahead of them lies an opportunity to compete with their classmates for a permanent commission in the Air Corps, or if they so elect, as much as seven years of active pilot duty with either a pursuit, bombardment or observation squadron. In either case, three years after graduation, these Flying Cadets will be promoted to First Lieutenants with a corresponding increase in pay.

Quotable Quotes

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"The impasse that faces civilization today is not due to any lack of intellectual power. Rather it has arisen because we have attacked our problem by the wrong method, a method characterized by rule of thumb, expediency and self-interest. The right method is the scientific method which, if coupled with sensitivity to the human values of freedom and individuality, will save our civilization from the irresponsible technologist and the scheming politician. Scientific humanism, as the doctrine has come to be known, is an unfailing resource of a sane democratic state." Edwin Sharp Burdell, director of Cooper Union, states the technologist's goal in our democracy.

"If the new generation of which you are a part has not the wisdom to sweat for its own security as free men on the long, adventurous road, college education is no good and the driving fire of ingenuity has gone out. With wisdom, young men will come not to care whether they wear white collars or no collars. The trouble is that there are too few of us who are ambitious enough, industrious enough, ingenious enough, courageous enough to provide our own personal security." Famed Editor Grove Patterson tells Oberlin College and all U. S. students how they can attain success without artificial securities.

Reporter Reviews Former Kake Walks

Former Enthusiasm Definitely Lacking

It just doesn't seem possible that in one short week the Kake Walk campaigns will be able to measure up to former years. The candidates say, "Yes, wait until we get started." We certainly hope so, but they've a lot of starting to do.

Last year's reports on Kake Walk started in the Cynic before Christmas vacation, believe it or not, and the first campaigning was in evidence at the Sophomore Hop. It is obvious that nothing had been done until last week; it can't be that U. V. M. students want the honor less than they did in other years; maybe we are losing the old pep and enthusiasm.

Mixture of Seasons

Thinking back (which is always interesting, if you can think!), we recall the fun of last year. Claire Rock winning through with her bright red ribbons flashing over the campus, and that beautiful crown that draped the usually serene Boulder. And 1939's king, Clark Nichols, with every political trick from buttons to airplanes (except kissing babies). Nothing like having a politician in the family to come to the rescue. And we can't forget the confusion of seasons when, in the middle of February, we were confronted by Jane Riddell's cotton balls on one side, and Holley Fletcher's sprigs of holly on the other. And need we mention the sight of half the student body wandering around with tea-balls (no less) dangling for their favorite, T. B. McHugh? Or awaking one morning to find (nothing else but) a goat calmly meandering through Coffee Corner? (you know, "don't be a goat, vote for Judy Flack"). Then there was that memorable period when we were disturbed from our studying every five minutes to hear loudspeaker trucks driving around to broadcast to the world the merits of some candidate; we don't know, maybe they all thought it was an original idea!

Pep for Campaigns

We just don't seem to have the old fight this year. If only one campaign could compare to that of 1938's queen, Babe Starbird. There was a campaign that was! You can't escape a candidate when you see a life-size portrait of her every time you pass through Coffee Corner. Bill Langlas also won by using unique methods. In this same year, each candidate boomed forth his good points into every happy little home via the local broadcasting station.

Let's hope everything peps up to make Kake Walk's campaigns of 1940 compare with former ones.

M. J. Adler Attacks Modern Education

CHICAGO, Ill. (ACP)—Modern education, with its great emphasis on the study of contemporary problems, is superficial in theory and confusing in practice.

That's the opinion of Dr. Mortimer J. Adler, professor of the philosophy of law at the University of Chicago, and here are his arguments to uphold his position:

"Progressivism has become so absorbed with the study of contemporary world that it forgets human culture has traditional root. It has substituted information for understanding, and science for wisdom. It has mistaken license for liberty, for that is what freedom is when unaccompanied by discipline.

Alpha Xi Delta Has Anniversary

Active Chapter Founded Twenty-five Years Ago

The active chapter and the alumnae of Alpha Xi Delta celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their installation here at the University last Thursday evening at the chapter house.

Roses decorated the rooms. A large cake trimmed with double blue and gold, the icing and candles carrying out the fraternity colors, and bearing twenty-five lighted candles, was in the center of the refreshment table. Ice cream was served with the cake.

The party was in charge of Mrs. Betsy Kidder '23, chairman, assisted by Miss Helen LeBaron '32, Mrs. Ruth Mills '39, and Miss Dawn Nichols '41 of the active chapter. Mrs. Lorenzo W. Howe, president of the alumnae chapter, spoke and introduced the other speakers of the evening who represented each class.

Upsilon Chapter of Alpha Xi Delta on February 15, 1915, became the fourth women's fraternity at U. V. M. The installation was conducted by Mrs. Haskell, a national officer, and members of the Lambda Chapter of Jackson College. The ceremony, when the charter members graduated from the ranks of Alpha Sigma, a local fraternity, and became Alpha Xi Deltas, took place at the home of Miss Irene Ballou. The following day this group gave a tea for the other three women's fraternities on the hill.

The first annual initiation banquet was held at the Hotel Vermont on March 13, 1915. At the 1915 commencement the Mabel Nelson Jacobs scholarship which goes to the men's or women's fraternity having the highest scholastic average was awarded to Alpha Xi Delta.

Alpha Xi Delta was founded at Lombard College, Galesburg, Ill., in 1893, and is a national organization.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of The Cynic:

School Spirit—Where is it?

Would you believe it? Last Tuesday the freshmen played V. J. C. During the game Phil Chesarone wrenched an ankle. He was helped off the floor by two gents, and carried past the entire Vermont student body. And unbelievable as it sounds not even one person clapped to show their appreciation of a gallant lad. Students we must snap out of it, but definitely Disgusted.

John Dewey Club Initiates Members

New Rules Adopted Rev. Parkhurst Speaks

The John Dewey Club met on Thursday evening, February 15, and received fifty-five new members who have acquired a grade in either philosophy or psychology sufficiently high to qualify them for membership. Heath Riggs '40 gave a report of a committee which had been appointed to find means of fostering interest and more responsible membership in the club. He presented a resolution which was voted upon as an amendment to the constitution. Anyone whose past dues are unpaid will be dropped from the club. Absence from two consecutive meetings means a forfeiture of membership. If anyone who has been dropped from the roll wishes to be reinstated, he may do so by paying a fine of twenty-five cents, at the discretion of the executive committee.

Professor Metcalf gave a brief summary of the founding of the John Dewey Club on the Vermont campus, and of the life of John Dewey, a former graduate of the University and the foremost philosopher in this country.

After the initiation, Rev. Parkhurst, from Williston, gave a very enlightening outline of the trends of philosophical thought dealing with the social process. After dealing with different theories, he closed with what he feels is the most truthful synthesis—organic pluralism. The individual is a whole in himself, yet he lives and moves in the larger whole of society. The relation of the part to the whole is the basic problem. Mr. Parkhurst stated that one's view of God influences his actions toward his fellows. He criticized Dewey as leaving out of his instrumentalism the idea of a personal God, so that he is not as critical of the status quo as the philosopher who thinks of a God who is moving toward perfection of the social order.

League of Nations Want Guides

The League of Nations Association is once again to have the privilege of staffing the League of Nations Pavilion in the 1940 World's Fair. We are seeking students with both a knowledge of and an interest in international relations to volunteer their services as guides for a limited period of time.

A large percentage of the people who came to the Pavilion last summer were especially interested in having the exhibits explained to them. The guides served the double purpose of welcoming all visitors and conducting them through the Pavilion, explaining the work illustrated in the various rooms. This guide system proved successful last summer and the students found the experience most worthwhile.

The Pavilion gives an honest evaluation of the work of the League of Nations. It is comprised of six rooms: The first treats with the development of the concept of international cooperation; the three rooms which follow are devoted respectively to the health, social and economic work of the League; the fifth room deals with disarmament and the political and legal work of the Council of the League and the World Court; and the sixth room, the Rotunda, symbolizes the aims and purposes of the League.

Students who are interested in the possibility of doing this work can apply for further information to the League of Nations Association, 8 West 40th St., New York City.

Southwick Scene Of Poverty Dance

Leap Year and Ladies' Choice proved to be an interesting combination last Saturday evening, February 17, at Southwick when the Poverty Dance drew a big crowd of couples and stags. Highlight of the affair was the awarding of a prize for the most original costume. This prize went to Henry McGinty, dressed very cleverly as a girl, and his partner, Helen Keedy, dressed equally cleverly as a boy.

From 8.30 until 12.00 the poverty-stricken students pranced in their rags to the strains of the New Vermonters orchestra, and a grand time was had by everyone, including the chaperones, who were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Perry and Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Rowell.

The proceeds from this dance, which was in charge of Mary Arms '40 and Betty Taylor '40, will go to the treasury of the Health Council.

Vermont Splits Even On Last Road Trip Of Year

Colgate on Top, 44-39, N. Y. Teachers No Match As Cats Score 55-45

Vermont's touring hoopsters broke even in games over the week-end. Johnny Sabo's Catamounts halted the New York State Teachers, 55 to 45, in Albany Friday, and then went on to Hamilton, N. Y., Saturday to throw a scare into Colgate before bowing, 44 to 39.

Paul Corley's deft one-handed shooting played havoc with the Teachers' defense. The slim Vermont forward netted nine field goals and a triumvirate of free throws to roll up twenty-one points. Anse Belardinelli and Captain Frankie Taylor registered fifteen and fourteen, respectively, big Anse converting several rebounds into two-pointers.

The Albany quintet, conquerors of such potent foes as Niagara, offered stubborn opposition, but simply couldn't keep pace wtih Vermont's big three.

Colgate, bouncing back remarkably from terrific thumpings at the hands of Army and Penn State, loosed their regained vigor on the Catamounts and emerged with a close victory. Vermont trailed the Red Raiders, 23 to 11, at the half, but closed fast and made things quite uncomfortable for the home five in the late stages. Taylor paced this surge, accounting for thirteen points in all. Belardinelli got nine and Bill Pye, a valuable cog in his team's attack, added seven more.

The Raiders made most of their points on set efforts, scoring from underneath only once all night. They worked the ball in and shot it into the corners, where either Nick Ustinovich or Johnny Buck was lurking. These rangy sharpshooters couldn't miss, and Ustinovich dropped in enough to total thirteen points.

A big factor in Colgate's success was the close checking of Corley by Don Collins, Raider guard. Collins solved Paul's trickey feinting and held the Vermont ace scoreless from the floor, Corley scoring but one free throw.

Sabo is drilling his men for Saturday's Kake Walk contest, the season's finale with strong Trinity. The Connecticut club took one on the chin from Swarthmore Saturday, but are by no means regarded as weak sisters.

Chicago Prexie Indicts Football

CHICAGO, Ill. (ACP)—Amid thunderous cheers of approval by the student body, the University of Chicago's President Robert Maynard Hutchins has delivered a vigorous indictment of football and an explanation of why the sport was dropped from the Midway campus' program.

"There is no doubt on the whole that football has been a major handicap to education in the United States," President Hutchins affirmed. "I think it is a good thing for the country to have one important university discontinue football."

Continuing, President Hutchins said: "Though football is a wonderful game for the spectator, it is not so good for the participant as many other sports. It is time-consuming, and the time is consumed just when the player ought to be devoting himself to the new courses begun with the opening of the academic year. Other sports develop cooperation, team spirit, sportsmanship and fair play just as well as football."

At a special student forum, only two of about 30 students eligible to participate in the discussion opposed the discontinuance of football as an intercollegiate sport.

Two-thirds of the Badger state's lawyers are graduates of the University of Wisconsin law school.

Archery

Archery has become another major sport on Vermont campus, and the girls here are representing our college well among other colleges and girls' schools of the country, in competing in the Annual National Intercollegiate Archery Meet. This is sponsored by the Oregon State College, and the scores of the four girls who have rated highest during the week are telegraphed to them. This meet lasts for three weeks, and the first of the three matches took place at Southwick last Friday evening. The four girls who held the highest scores for the week met, and at distance of twenty yards, shot sixty arrows and rung up the following score:

Marjory Carbino '43..... 399
Marjory Southworth '43... 313
Betty Preston '43..... 304
Helen Witham '42..... 264

These make the team score 1,280 points.

There have been special practices for all the girls interested, on Friday evenings at 7.30 for the past two weeks, and Dawn Nichols '41 has been coaching them.

This competition is grouped nationally into four classes: the regulation Columbia round, which is held outdoors, the 30, 20, and 15 yard group, the latter having a small target.

In our class six other colleges are competing—Glendale Junior College of California, Goucher, Oregon Education College, University of Nevada, Willamette University and Santa Rosa Junior College. Most of these colleges are in the West, and hope has been expressed that our girls will hold their own among them.

Basketball

The basketball tournament finals will be played off this week. Redstone vs. Theta, Gates, and Etc's vs. Town Team (2) will play the preliminary games to the finals in the A tournament. A double elimination will follow, the winners of these two games forming the A team, while the losers will form the B team. The A teams will finish off Tuesday at 4.15, the B team Wednesday.

Last Tuesday Robinson won over Theta Gates by a score of 11-9. High scorer for Robinson was Blume and high scorer for Theta Gates was Spiwak.

Next Thursday afternoon at 4.15, Green and Gold basketball practice will begin. Anybody is welcome to come out and the tryouts for the team will be chosen later, one from the Gold group and one from the Green. Practices will be held February 22, 27, 29.

Badminton

Last Thursday night, the Y invited our Badminton Club to a practice down at the Y gym. Marion Craig '40, Jean Finney '41, Mildred Mack '42 and Miss Hazard attended, and it proved to be a great deal of fun. We hope it will result in our getting together in such a way more often. A tournament was run off in a most unique way. Members with birthdays anywhere from January to May formed a summer team, and played against the winter team, which bowed in defeat. Marion and Jean were victorious in their doubles set.

The W. A. A. badminton tournament here has swung into action, and already the teams, consisting of two girls each, have been chosen from the dorms. The teams are as follows:

Allen House—Jean Stewart '41, Doris Kinsley '40.

Alpha Chi—Mary Howe '40, Elizabeth Doton '41.

Campus House—Mignon Warner '43, Elizabeth Deming '43.

Delta Delta Delta—Betty Ingalls '42, Marjory Albro '42.

Doane's—Lois Murray '40, Helen Soult '41.

Pi Phi—Mary Arms '40, Shirley Mayforth '41.

Redstone—Betsey Marlowe '40, Jean Soule '41.

Robinson—Mildred Mack '42, Ruth Miller '42.

Theta—Charlotte Hall '40, Barbara Mann '41.

Town teams—1. B. Levens '43, Kay Holden '42. 2. Kay Kyle '42, Eleanor Bayley '40.

Warner—Alice Reichmann '42, Henrietta Facteau '43.

Slade, Gates and Grassmount teams have not yet been decided.

This week the first round will be played off: Warner vs. Campus, Doane's vs. Theta, Town Team (1) vs. Robinson, Delta Delta Delta vs. Town Team (2), Slade vs. Pi Phi, Redstone vs. Grassmount.

Sports Cast

By the SPORTS EDITOR

Two to Get Ready, One to Go!

This Saturday winds up a great number of activities on the University of Vermont campus. It is not only the day that determines the winning Kake Walk stunts and strutters, but also marks the completion of the Catamount basketball season—a season that has been pox-marked by numerous defeats by small differences in score. Outstanding in this category is the defeat handed Vermont by Colgate last Saturday night at Hamilton, N. Y., by a 44 to 39 count. According to Joe Wysolmerski, manager of the Catamounts, who gave us this information late Sunday night the Red Raiders were most fortunate to come out on the long end of the score as the second half witnessed a furious Vermont uprising. Trailing 23-11 at half-time, the Sabomen hopped on their wagon and rode to town, outscoring Colgate by eight points in the final minutes of play. However, the early Colgate lead proved to be too much and despite the courageous Vermont rally they emerged victorious. According to Joe, the Colgate men found the Vermont zone defense a tough nut to crack and their play was featured by outstanding long-distance popping by a gent name of Ustinovitch who tossed in 13 points in the first half. The night previous the men of Vermont went on a scoring spree to defeat New York State Teachers College by a 55-45 count. Obviously the Catamounts are now beginning to play the brand of basketball that was generally expected of them.

Midd. Carnival

The Vermont ski team put on a very creditable performance at the Middlebury carnival this past week-end. Competing against the best collegiate skiers in the East the green-capped skiers copped fifth place trailing Dartmouth, New Hampshire, Middlebury, and Norwich and leading Williams, Amherst, and M. I. T. Ev Bailey, Dave Collins, Pete Patch, Ernest St. Mary, Paul Sutton, and Hank Pache all took to the snow for Vermont. We hesitate somewhat to threaten the masculinity of this column by injecting a wisp of femininity into it again but we feel that the sensational showing of Sarah Peters, Dot Smith, and Margo Goodell at the carnival should not go unmentioned. Sarah was first in the combined and second in the downhill. Dot placed sixth in both. Most creditable.

The Saturday Letter

To One I Do Not Love

When I, a stranger, came Within the town
To live,
You were the first
To call
Because you had a pumpkin
For sale
And, I, a salary.

You were the first
To look me up
When news leaked out
That I might need
A peck of potatoes,
But you did not come
When I was taken
Ill at night
And nearly died
Before the antitoxin
Worked.

And, you did not come
When there was rumor
That I might be Fired because I did
Not pat a certain
Scheming politician
On the back.

You did not come
When banks were closing doors
And all I had was Flicked away
Before I had a chance
To pay my honest debts.

So,—
Don't spend ten cents
To buy a flower for me
When I am stretched out flat
Upon some slab,
With props within my cheeks
To make some undertaker
Proud of all his handiwork.

Don't spend ten cents
To show the townspeople
How much you loved me,
Because I shall be Watching you put on
Your hypocritical act
And I shall be Remembering the twenty years
We two have lived within the Corporate limits
Of the town
And that never in that time
You cared enough to come
Within my home
For a visit in the parlor
Or a friendly game of bridge
Upon the porch.

Save your dime
And buy a flower
For some poor guy
Who may think more
Of your publicity stunt
Or use it to buy
Yourself a drink
Or an imported cigar
Or a couple of chances
On the slot machine.

Save your dime
Because I am going
To look down upon you
And laugh at the Pretentiousness of your
Cheap flourish.

There are some folks
Within the line
Drawn around this Geographical spot
Upon one of the Planets in the Solar System
Who wept with me
In my sorrow
And laughed with me
In my joy
And who will have
A lonesome feeling
When I give up my Citizenship.
And, these will not
Be spending dimes
For pretty flowers
To impress the passing throng
But will, instead,
Be lifting up my burdens
And giving strength to
My unfinished projects.

No,—
Don't spend ten cents
To buy a flower
To show the people
On the street
How sad you feel,
Because I'll haunt
You in the night
And walk with heavy step
Across the attic floor
Just to help you remember
That you are a
Mean, selfish, cruel,
Little dried up shrimp.

Save your dime and buy
Some ghost insurance!

Very truly,

Royal Candidates Deliver Orations At Rally In Gym

H. V. Middleworth '40 Presides at Meeting. Introduces Speakers

The gymnasium resounded with boos and boosts, cheers and cat-calls, slams and shouts on Saturday morning as the regal rivals presented the platforms on which they are running for the coveted Kake Walk King's crown. The president permitted classes to begin one-half hour earlier in order to allow time for the rally. The student body arrived en masse to listen to the pleas of the would-be nobility and a lively bit of speech-making ensued. There was a marked attempt on the part of the rivals to keep their speeches and campaigns clear of mud-slinging and slander, a practice which they claim has been characteristic of the past few years. H. V. Middleworth '40, Chairman of King and Queen Committee, acted as master of ceremonies and introduced the speakers.

"Dimples" MacDonald '40

Manager Gus Malone '41 introduced his candidate, "Dimples" MacDonald, with the statement, "We are here not to bury Mac, but to raise him to the heights of king." Mac stated his desire for a clean campaign and quoted the venerable Confucius who says, "Man who flings dirt loses ground." He went on to clarify his platform and elucidate such fine points as plans for classes twice a week, Cashier Bruce's financing dates, and free bus system for downtown students. Mac is all for a jolly Kake Walk festival with "Dimples" to bring on a happy frame of mind, for:

Smile and the world smiles with you,
Cry and you cry alone;
So let's make Kake Walk a happy time with "Dimples" MacDonald on the throne.

Mark O'Toole '42

With Manager Bill Murphy '42 advising the students to go to the polls and "mark O'Toole," the next candidate took the floor. By means of flattery of his opponents and his prospective voters, O'Toole attempted to show his right to inherit the throne. He contended that he is not affiliated with any particular party but is interested in the entire college—the students' party. O'Toole pointed out the fact that thus far he has emphasized personal contact as his means of reaching the voters, rather than the usual posters, stickers and tags. He further pointed out that his idea of the ideal campaign is less commercializing and more talent: for that reason he has refrained from spending large sums on his own. "You need a big man to sit on the throne," O'Toole concluded, "so r u l e with O'Toole."

Hugh Ripper '40

The R. I. P. party candidate, announced by Manager Reed Leonard '40, expanded on certain points of his much-publicized platform, and dealt with such problems as lubricating squeaky chalk, extracting the bull from economics, and the fact that "all work and no play doesn't make jack." He went on to warn his opponents not to count their chickens before they vote. Ripper put forth his desire of also carrying on a spotless campaign free from the unkingly coarseness and vulgarity previously prominent. He expressed his admiration for the strong, silent rivals who lived up to the old adage which states, "If you've nothing to say, don't say it."

Norman Tucker '42

The previously silent Tucker exploded his bombshell by running on the Little King platform. Dressed in the high gold crown and fur-trimmed red robe of the comic strip favorite, Tucker theoretically refused to stand on any platform, for he maintained that he wished to pass no illusions about his size. He has announced that he is running on the following points:

THE LITTLE KING
KINGDOM OF KAKE WALK

WHEREAS, It is very obvious that a ruler must be one of royal blood, born to rule, and guided by the Divine Providence;

WHEREAS, A true ruler, of royal blood, born to rule, and guided by the Divine Providence, must keep the welfare of his subjects at heart;

WHEREAS, The welfare of his subjects is built around moral happiness and freedom from the bonds of drudgery;

WHEREAS, There are some people who would minimize this aim by extending their purpose to vague and indefinite policies;

THEREFORE, Let it be known that I, the Little King of Kake Walk, on consulting Tim Gilbert, my Prime Minister and Ambassador of Good-will, admonish my snailish opponents, and do hereby set aside February twenty-third and twenty-fourth as days of relaxation, rejoicing, and good-fellowship. May all my subjects be gay, and may their happiness be boundless.

Given under my hand this twentieth day of February, nineteen hundred and forty, Anno Domini.

GUBBER TUCKER,
"The Little King."

Seal

The speeches inaugurated an active program of campaigning which is approaching election day filled with unexpected surprises. The week-end saw the aspirants to the throne getting in the public eye with such things as speeches, fireworks, and personal visits to prospective voters. The race promises to be a close one as the four candidates are rapidly surmounting many obstacles in their climb to royal heights.

Careful

Careful, careful of how you vote my dears
Be careful, or you will soon be shedding tears
For Laura Hawley's the gal for our Queen
When you've electing, please use your bean.
Careful, careful, to fill your every need
She's careful, she'll do you right with every deed.
She's got the looks, the brains and everything
In short—she's the Queen for your king.

Interfrat Tourney Approach Finals

Two tournaments, hockey and basketball, of the winter interfraternity series are in their last phases.

The semi-final hockey match took place yesterday afternoon between Phi Delta Theta and Sigma Nu. The winner of that match, not known in time to be printed, is to play the Independent hockey team for the championship.

The Kappa Sigs and Sigma Nus are battling it out for the basketball title. In this series, a team is eliminated when it loses two games. In the first game of the finals held last Saturday night the Kappa Sigs, who had lost one game, defeated the unbeaten Sigma Nus. Now with the score evened, the championship laurels rest upon the final game to be held at the gymnasium tonight.

Gov't. Expanding Army Air Corps

Randolph Field, Texas "West Point of the Air"

Military aviation is rapidly moving to the fore in our system of national defense. The United States Army Air Corps is expanding. Orders are being placed almost daily for additional airplanes. To man these sky giants, these waspish pursuit planes, Uncle Sam is also expanding his pilot training program. Randolph Field, Texas, often referred to as the "West Point of the Air," is the hub of this expansion plan.

The VERMONT CYNIC is pleased to present herewith the first of a series of ten pictures and stories, which tell in graphic form how the Air Corps trains its pilots. During this series our readers will be taken on a "behind the scenes" tour of "West Point of the Air." They will be carried aloft in an army plane to look down on the mammoth airdome; figuratively, they will crowd into the plane's cockpit with a Flying Cadet as he practices aerial acrobatics; they will watch the future pilots at drill and at play.

Each week we will present another in the series. Watch for them. Additional information concerning the entrance requirements for Flying Cadets may be obtained by dropping a letter or post card to "THE SECRETARY'S OFFICE, RANDOLPH FIELD, TEXAS." Or, if you prefer, you may write direct to us and we will forward your request.

Administration Building at Randolph Field, Texas, home of the Army Air Corps Primary Flying School. This handsome structure houses various executive offices as well as a complete meteorological department, theater, and photographic section.

Corresponding to the office of the registrar of a college is the secretary's office in this building through which passes every Flying Cadet of the Air Corps as soon as he reports for his course in military aviation training.

Classes of Flying Cadets report to Randolph Field every six weeks under the recently inaugurated plan of expansion for the U. S. Army Air Corps. Under this system, young men between the ages of 20 and 27 are given a three-month course in flying at one of nine flying schools in various sections of the country, then transferred to Randolph Field for the basic stage of the nine-month course. Flying Cadets receive $75 per month and in addition are furnished with uniforms, food, lodging, hospital care and other services.

Laurels To Laura

Candidate for Queen is Laura Hawley '41. She is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta, the Outing Club Council, Staff and Sandal, W. A. A. Council, and faculty editor of the Ariel. The "Hawley for Queen" campaign manager is Elizabeth Gurney '41, member of Pi Beta Phi. Laura's platform is:

1. Textbooks with zipper pages to relieve the load to and from classes.
2. A carload of apples delivered daily to each dorm to keep the students in good with the profs.
3. A perfect form letter to parents, relatives, and friends to be published each week.
4. A new stamp machine in the Old Mill in which you DON'T lose a cent with each purchase.
5. Cigars the only smoking restriction for girls.
6. Comfortable chairs in the waiting room of the dean's office.

University Offers Course In Social Agricultural Work

Booklet on Soil Conservation by Prof. Dykhuizen

In the troubled world of today, beset by social problems which become more and more pressing, farmers find that the general confusion affects their calling, as it does both city and small town dwellers, factory workers and professional men. The problem is not so much one of methods and techniques, for technical schools are finding and teaching better ways of performing the physical work of farming. It is rather a question of the place the farmer should occupy in the structure of today's society, of the action he should take in the problems which affect his home and work, of the farmer's role in attaining the democratic ideal held by the United States.

Course Started in '37

The college of agriculture at the University of Vermont is now offering for the fourth consecutive year a course in the social philosophy of American agriculture. First offered in the winter of 1937, this course has become a required study for all men seniors of the agricultural college. The course was organized in order partially to meet the criticism so frequently launched against technical schools of this country, namely, that these schools, while offering excellent instruction in the technical aspects of the subjects taught, tended on the whole to neglect the wider social and moral implications of the fields surveyed.

Since the great need today is to meet the challenge which social forces everywhere are imposing on democratic principles and practices, the course undertakes to discuss the enduring characteristics of the democratic process. Moreover, since our problems of the present can be clearly understood only in the light of the past, the course traces the social history of American agriculture and its European background. Finally, the course discusses the problems and objectives of contemporary American agriculture and attempts to evaluate various proposed solutions in the light of the American democratic ideal. It is believed that a course of this general nature, grounded in the facts of history and contemporary life, and aiming at the classification of current problems of agriculture in the light of the democratic ideal, should fill a definite need on the part of the students.

Vermont Pioneers

The University of Vermont agricultural college was the first institution in the country to offer this type of instruction, which is recommended by the United States department of agriculture. Prof. George Dykhuizen of the University philosophy department teaches the course. Professor Dykhuizen has done research work with the department of agriculture at various times during the past four years, inquiring into the social and moral philosophy of agriculture in this country and its relation to our system of democratic government. A booklet on the philosopher's viewpoint on soil conservation, written by Professor Dykhuizen, has been widely circulated through the University Extension Service. Professor Dykhuizen has also spoken recently before a number of groups, both in New England and New York and in the Middle West, concerning his study of the social problems confronting agriculture in this country.

Masquerade To Be Colorful Affair

Queen to Be Crowned By Tommy Reynolds

With Tommy Reynolds & Co. on the down beat, Patsy Parker handling the vocals, the gym gaily decorated, Betty and Joe College competing for the costume prizes, and their majesties, the King and Queen of Kake Walk, presiding, the 1940 Kake Walk Masquerade gives promise of being the most colorful and outstanding social event ever to take place on the hill, reports H. A. Allen, Jr., '40, chairman of the Masquerade.

M. J. Boucher '40 and W. P. Koche '41, in charge of decorations, promise that though "simple and sweet," or "short and snappy," the decorations will be decidedly different than those of previous years. They have announced that the Band of Tomorrow will play before a large Kake Walk portrait, with miniatures adorning the sidewalls, but have asked the CYNIC to refrain from publishing further details and especially those of a "huge central piece" that will "knock 'em cold."

Slated to "give" from the bandstand, Tommy Reynolds, though billed as the "Band of Tomorrow," is very much a band of today, and his popularity is increasing as the hours pass. Reynolds, now said to be in the same bracket that Glenn Miller was when he played here a year ago, brings with him thirteen proficient swingsters and a vocalist, likewise on the up and up, but counts on his own clarinet solos, flashing out in brilliant and breath-taking improvisation in front of choir voicings of brass and reed, for the "oomph" that makes fans of all kinds sit up and take notice. Crispness of execution and really bouncing tempos characterize the Reynolds band, led by the tall, dark and handsome Tommy, who will place the coveted crown on the head of the new Queen, to furnish the climax of Friday evening's long-awaited event.

C. B. I. C. Investigates Catholic Groups

Washington, D. C. (I. P.)—A survey of National Catholic student groups in South America is now under way by the recently formed Catholic Bureau of Inter-American Collaboration, acting in cooperation with the newly established international headquarters of Pax Romana on the campus of the Catholic University of America.

An extensive program to promote Catholic thought and unity among university students throughout the world, has been worked out and incorporates every medium of education. Cinema, radio, publications, and relations between professors and students to insure Catholic education, were considered the best means of fighting anti-Christian and anti-Catholic propaganda, while at the same time stimulate Catholic thought.

Plans have also been made to undertake the compilation of a directory of the universities and technical schools of North and South America in which a student may be sure of Catholic training. Further cooperation has been suggested between university officials and students to assure Catholic contacts and surroundings when a student studies in a foreign country. Publication of inter-American scholarships, student exchanges, and exchange professorships were also deemed important.

Bereaved Bard

Aloysius Michael Sullivan is a little sad these days. Poetry, if you heed A.M.S., is on the skids.

In case your English professor hasn't posted you on our American Keats, be advised that Mr. Sullivan is the sweet voice of native poesy, not to mention the pontifex of the Poetry Society of America.

College is to blame for the flight of the muse. Pegasus today is the mount not of the high-minded Plato but of the sourpuss Aristotle. So runs the Sullivan lament.

"The net result is that our bards have lost the sense of beauty," Mr. Sullivan grieves, and turn their versifying on sweat, blood and the stereotyped underdog.

To prove his own oneness with intellectual beauty, Mr. S. offers you this winged tid-bit titled "A Day in Manhattan."

"A boy on a Fifth Avenue bus,
With a raucous voice,
Throws chewing gum
On a Rolls-Royce."

"A man on Second Avenue
Reading the New Masses
Applauds the jibe
At the upper classes."

Life is truly sad, especially for Aloysius Michael Sullivan. That is if you realize that daily instead of communing with the souls of Sappho, Shelley and Swinburne this same tyrant, Life, compels him to dabble with nasty figures, financial diagnoses and such. Poor Aloysius Michael is associate editor of the Dun and Bradstreet rate sheet.

C'est la vie. At the very least.

Interlude

The photographers in front of the elegant night spot brightened up when John Barrymore, minus his loving bride, swooped down on the place. Mr. B. was in high dudgeon, in the groove one might say. He paused for a snap, then he charged into the place.

Hardly bothering to wait for the captain to pilot him to a table, the most noble side view of mortal man swooped down upon a quiet nook in the aft section of the bistro. The management seemed most unhappy at the location he had chosen.

Well, before you could figure out the square root of 9, John had gathered around him a posse of admirers and was doing his dance. In a roistering mood he told tall stories, gamboled, frolicked, cocked one eye and perpetrated incredible gestures, accompanied by prose which you hardly ever use in English 12 compositions.

Suddenly he noticed the veiled figure at the next table. She reminded one of the Sphinx. Not to be cowed by a cold demeanor, Mr. Barrymore straightened up, swept over to her party (of two) bowed and offered to drink her health.

She rose hurriedly and departed into the night, without a goodbye.

Mr. Barrymore chuckled, while the photographers and patrons looked on sympathetically.

"Alas, poor lady," soliloquized our John. "I knew her well in Hollywood. She was in a picture with me, I think. She's a dancer, or something like that. Perhaps a crooner. Her name I believe is Garber or Garbo. I forget exactly what."

U. V. M. Celebrates Forty-third Kake Walk

The Vermont Cynic

Z 761

VOLUME 58 | BURLINGTON, VERMONT, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1940 | NUMBER 37

Mask Ball Tonight At Gym Opens Big Winter Celebration

King and Queen to Be Crowned by Band Leader Reynolds

Promising to bring one of the most novel and exciting masquerades in the history of U. V. M. Kake Walk, the time is quickly approaching for us to climb into an often-longed-for disguise and go up to the gym and dance to the wonderful music of Tommy Reynolds. And we're pretty sure snow drifts, howling winds, and a few more blizzards won't keep us away, or dampen our enthusiasm.

Tommy Reynolds, the rising clarinet player in swing today, has created quite a sensation lately among New England top-notch dance spots and college week-end parties. And it's little wonder! His band, fashioned after the smooth Artie Shaw style has something unique in itself, and promises to rise to greater heights in the opinion of modern dancers as our last year's Masquerade band, Glenn Miller has already done. His band, starting in the Middle West, has acclaimed greater fame here in the East, and has already scored several successes at the Roseland State Ballroom in Boston, which has started most big name bands on their road to success. Tommy Reynolds has thirteen pieces in his band, and charming Patsy Parker as his vocalist. If what we hear is true, we'll have some pretty hot clarinet solos during the program.

Novel Costumes

Did you ever see two masquerades anything alike? Of course not—that's why a masquerade is a great drawing card, with its informality, mysteriousness and unaffected friendliness. That's why Vermont has chosen a masquerade to be the biggest, most successful dance of the year—because everyone comes, from Freshman Greens to Alumni Grays, dressed in anything, from the costume which represents what you've had the secret passion to be, down to the last rag the costumers' had in stock. Three prizes will be offered for the best costumes, so here's your chance to win a prize, even though you can't kake walk a step!

King to Be Crowned

Speaking of prizes—the newly-elected King receives his greatest prize of the week-end—his coveted crown, presented, as is the custom, by the band leader. Who wouldn't like to play at a big dance at U. V. M., having this honor of crowning this worthy person, who, after weeks of campaigning, thinking of witty remarks and catch-the-eye phrases, has finally convinced the students he's the one and only king for this Kake Walk!

The decorations this year are to be a surprise—although we can let you in on this much. In the center of the floor will hang a huge crystal ball, which revolves, reflecting variegated colors and throwing thousands of small circles upon the walls and floor. Behind the band will be a huge picture of a Kake Walker.

Professor and Mrs. Bickford, Professor Laatsch, and Professor Woodard, will be the chaperones. H. A. Allen, Jr. '40 is chairman of the Masquerade and dancing will continue from nine to two o'clock.

Co-ed Kake Walkers To Give Exhibition Tomorrow Night

Betty Myers '40 and Gloria Farrell '43 Will "Walk fo' de Kake"

Two courageous coeds, black-faced, and dressed in regular Kake Walk style will appear on the floor of the Auditorium Saturday evening to kick their version of "walkin' fo' de kake." Who are they? Betty Myers '40 and Gloria Farrell '43, both members of Alpha Chi Omega are carrying on the precedent of two other sorority sisters who walked in 1938, Marjorie Howe and Amy Bronkhurst.

When interviewed Betty and Gloria said that they conceived of the idea at Thanksgiving time but have only been practicing steadily for the last three weeks. "We have a version that we call the 'Dizzy Step' so-called because we go round and round and cannot find each other when we want to stop. Only hope we can that night, though." Laughing, Betty Myers said, "we've been practicing among the chairs of the Alpha Chi house with a broken record at that. The first time I tried walking I neglected to stop for the studio couch and consequently found myself on the floor." Both girls said "we hope our attempt this year will encourage others to try it in future years."

They will appear after the judges go out to decide upon the winners among the fraternity walkers. Their walking will last one minute and a half.

Best of luck and orchids to you for your courage and initiation in carrying on a Vermont tradition of "walkin' fo' de kake."

Fraternities To Hold Open House

Kake Walk Visitors Are Invited to Attend

A fitting ending to the activities of Kake Walk week-end will be general noon by all the sororities and fraternities noon by al the sororities and fraternities on the campus. Final plans are not yet completed, but most of the houses will be open to visitors between two and five, light refreshments will be served, and everyone is welcome.

At Sigma Nu, W. I. Pye '41 is in charge and D. J. Graziano '40 will receive. The committee in charge of decorations is headed by H. C. Parker '43 assisted by S. J. Foti '42, R. A. Bloomer '43 and J. J. Fleming '43, and Ed Foley will pour. M. J. Boucher '40 is chairman at Phi Delta Theta and among the alumni expected is last year's Kake Walk King, Clark Nichols. Sigma Alpha Epsilon will be open from two to six with T. K. Malone '41 in charge, assisted by H. J. Rufo '41 and J. S. Noble '43. Their special guests will be Gander McLeod of California Beta Chapter and Harry Columbo of Virginia.

Kake Walk Origin and Growth Brings Many Yearly Innovations

The forty-third annual Kake Walk is a far cry from the first unorganized "Cake Walk" of forty years ago. Strangely enough the first Kake Walk was really a masquerade dance. It was in December, 1893, that Captain Tutherly of the Military Department first attempted to stage a "flivered" military ball. Captain Tutherly's well-meant efforts, however, went for naught; the military hop did not materialize.

The student body did not bear the disappointment very well. Under the leadership of Frederick T. Sharpe '95, a group of students decided to put on an affair in the Old Mill "Loft." Signs were soon posted, bearing "Cake Walk in the Loft Tonight. All Invited." Thus was the first entertainment of its kind produced at this University.

Early Troubles

The annual production of a Kake Walk however, did not tread the easiest path. In 1894 when the event was held once more in the Old Mill "Loft," a keg of beer was furnished for the occasion and was the cause of some embarrassment the next morning when some of the beer trickled down into the old chapel below. The incident sealed the doom of the 1895 event, for during that year the ban of the faculty was placed upon it.

In 1896 faculty permission was secured for a third performance to be given this time publicly and with more restraint. This and succeeding Kake Walks until 1904 were held in the State Armory. From 1904 till 1938 Kake Walks were all held in the University gymnasium, the 1939 Kake Walk being the first one to be held in the Memorial Auditorium.

In 1897 was held the "Lullud Loon's Kake Walk" on a scale far beyond anything before thought of. Judges were selected from the faculty, and the net profits ($165) were turned over to the football department.

Financing Athletics

Fortunately for us of a later generation, athletics in those days were in a far from flourishing condition, and at times no teams were put on the field. The proceeds of the first Kake Walks were turned over to the athletic department, and it is very probable that the need for athletic funds kept alive the Kake Walk.

As the Kake Walk improved from year to year, several cups were presented to the winners, in addition to cakes. The stunts produced were more clever and startling than preceding ones. One of the best stunts on record appears to have been the one presented in 1912 by Alpha Zeta, honorary agricultural society. The gong struck! Suddenly there appeared floating and dancing through the utter blackness of the hall miscellaneous arms, legs, a head, and dismembered bodies of a ghostly phosphorescent character, all of which kept disappearing and reappearing here and there in remote parts of the hall. Suddenly a comet with a fiery tail shot through the air, and instantly all the dissected bodies vanished and in the middle of the hall arose a huge, glowing devil,

Kake Walk Aides Make Final Plans

Thirty-eight Girls To Serve as Ushers

On the eve of Kake Walk, the various committees are in a fevered rush. C. H. Schofield '40 and R. W. Robinson '40 have succeeded in a mammoth undertaking. Aiding them on details are R. P. Kenney '41, J. R. Royer '41, and W. I. Pye '41, the directors for next year.

The chairman of the Masquerade is H. A. Allen, Jr. '40.

The decoration committee, which has again secured the sensational "colored crystal" for the Masquerade, is composed of M. J. Boucher '40 and W. P. Koch '40, co-chairmen, Margaret Crowley '41, Claire Rock '40, G. F. Babits '42, and J. J. Spasyk '42.

The programs are to be included in the new issue of Ira's Folly and will be distributed free at Kake Walk. R. M. Story '40 and L. B. Whitcomb are in charge of a committee composed of Dorothea Smith '41, W. P. Koch '40, J. H. Couture '41, C. J. Katzew '42, J. S. Burgess '42, W. A. Roeder '42, J. H. Stephen '42, C. A. Pease '43, Gratia Pearl '42, and M. J. Reynolds '42.

The lighting for the Kake Walk and the stunts has already been tested at the rehearsals Monday night. Chairman of the lighting committee is P. Waterman '41, aided by P. G. Whalen '40, H. H. Crossley '41, G. B. Dunn, Jr. '41.

Mary Nelson '40 is chairman of publicity, and is assisted by Maywood Metcalf '41 and Myrna French '42.

Welcome Judge Cushing

Kake Walk, the pride and joy of all true Vermonters, is once more upon us. The carnival of the present day is a far cry from the festivities of days gone by. In spirit no change is noticeable for the same feverish thrill of exciting things to come is as evident today as it must have been in days of yore.

The difference is more readily apparent in the magnitude of the affair. From the single, exciting get-together in the Old Mill loft Kake Walk has developed into an entire week-end of colorful events. The transition, naturally enough, was a slow one. From year to year changes and improvements were made until at present we have a vastly different program for the week-end.

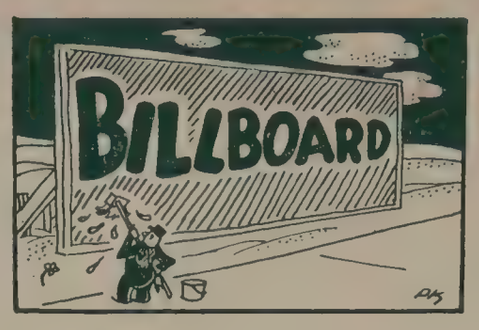
Several years ago the directors of Kake Walk inaugurated the custom of holding an annual banquet for students and their parents. It was felt that since at no time throughout the year parents and students had an opportunity to gather together some measures should be taken to remedy the situation. Accordingly the Father-Son-Mother-Daughter Banquet was born and since then has been one of the important functions of the week-end.

This year, as has already been announced, the affair will take place as usual. It has been the good fortune of the directors to secure a well-known Vermonter to act in the capacity of master-of-ceremonies at the banquet. That gentleman is none other than Judge Stephen S. Cushing of St. Albans.

Although Judge Cushing himself is not a graduate of the University of Vermont, he is vitally interested in the life of the University and at present has a son attending the institution.

Judge Cushing was educated at Dartmouth and Middlebury Colleges and in 1909 was admitted to the Vermont Bar. Since that time he has been of inestimable service to his state. He has acted as city attorney for the city of St. Albans and as state's attorney for Franklin County.

In 1931 he was made a member of the Public Service Commission and was appointed chairman of the Commission in 1932. He served in that capacity until 1938 when he was appointed superior judge. For his meritorious work he was made a life member of the Chittenden County Bar Association.



These are but part of the tasks he has accomplished for in addition to this he has acted in an official capacity on several committees in the State Legislature. During the World War he acted as Captain in the Infantry P.M.O.G.

We are glad indeed to have Judge Cushing with us at our banquet this year and extend to him a hearty welcome on behalf of the University.

They Seek Kake

For weeks the fraternity men at the University have been laboring early and late in order to put on a fine program for Kake Walk proper. Tired bodies have pranced and danced to the stirring music of "Cotton Babes" and now at last the men are ready for the long awaited "walkin' fo' de kake."

Other Greek Letter men have been engaged in the preparation of stunts for the gala night. Now at long last all is in readiness for the occasion. Competition will be keen for one and all long for possession of the cherished cups. We wish them all good luck and may the best men win.

Friday afternoon, February 23, and Saturday, February 24, will be University holidays. No classes will be held Friday, February 23, after 12.20 p.m., but morning classes will meet as usual on that day. Thursday, February 22, all classes will meet as usual.—E. Swift, Secretary.

CYNIC SCRUBS—Will those CYNIC scrubs who are assigned to regular beats come into the CYNIC office every few days to see if you have an assignments? Often the News Editors know of something they especially wish covering your particular beat.

The Billings Library will be open from 9 to 12 a.m. on Saturday, February 24.

The area for Kake Walking will be fifty-five by twenty feet.—K. F. Beaton, Chairman.

Attention all aspiring future Medical students! The blanks for application to the Medical College are now available at the Medical Dean's office. No application will be considered if the form has not been completely made out. All sorts of questions are asked to verify the ability of the applicant. Two photographs must be included also. Return these blanks as soon as possible and the Dean's office will see that they are handed to the Registrar's office for a record of scholarship.

COOPERATIVE HOUSES FOR 1940-1941—Students interested in applying for residence in one of the cooperative houses (Sanders Hall or Allen House) next year are asked to secure application blanks in the office of the Dean of Women.

All applications for cooperative houses should be submitted to the office of the Dean of Women by Monday, March 4.

Selections will be made before the Easter recess.—Freda M. Harris, Assistant Dean of Women.

There will be open house at Southwick, Saturday afternoon. Tea will be served from 2.30 to 4 o'clock.

A coffee hour will be held Sunday from 2.30 to 3.30, sponsored by the Sophomore Aides.

All students, alumni, and friends are cordially invited to visit Southwick at either or both of these times.

All tickets for Fa-So-Mo-Da Banquet must be bought at the door. No advance reservations.

which danced through the darkness with weird, fantastic steps, then gradually faded away into invisibility. The lights flashed on. Not a sign of apparatus or of human life was to be seen on the floor.

As the forty-two years of Kake Walk roll by, there is reflected in each year's event the tempo of the campus. Each year adds something or introduces some new feature. Thus, enhanced by time, and improved by experience, the Kake Walk of 1940 takes its turn on the judgment stand.

Bunny Heath is in charge and punch will be served from two to five. The Alpha Chi's, headed by Elizabeth Doton '41 will serve tea after vespers and Helen Berry '40, president, will receive.

A Collegian's Broadway

New York City, February 20.—Polls from the college papers seem to indicate that swing and jitterbugging die a-bleeding, but regardless of the fact that the tempo of dance music is set by the campus, there will always be at least one sanctuary for rug-cutters, where music careens out of this world unmindful of collegiate displeasure.

It is a section of uptown New York called Harlem, where until 1932 swing held sway without undue attention from the rest of the weary world. Then suddenly the smart-set swooped down on Harlem lured by the weired noises that emerged from a place called the Cotton Club. Here, there was no god save swing, and Cab Calloway was his prophet. The dusky dancers were soon dispossessed by the dinner jacket and sequin crowd. Hi-di-hi was the universal watchword.

But that was yesteryear and the fad is done. The Cotton Club has moved to Times Square. The white folks have turned to la Conga. And Harlem is itself again.

Most any night you can see Swing a-rocking in the Savoy Ballroom, a gargantuan Taj Mahal dedicated to torrid shuffling. Here comes Harlem cafe-au-lait society. Here trek the jaded hoofers from Columbia, a-totin' Wellesley ladies out for excitement. The tariff is modest and the atmosphere ruggedly individualistic. You pays your money and you takes your choice. The mood is Swing with a lickity split. What else would it be with such worthies as Ellington, Ella Fitzgerald, Erskine Hawkins, Earl Hines and Fats Waller serving as grand marshals?

Down With Demon Rum

If you've been troubled with pink elephants in the dormitories of your fraternity house, fret no more, gentle readers. Demon Rum is about to be catapulted from whence he came.

Here in New York a group of sixty brave souls who once gazed with affection on the wine when it was red, have at long last come to know the villain for what he is. What is more, they have organized a club called Alcoholics Anonymous; and the other evening, they were dined, but not wined, by John D. Rockefeller, himself.

These good souls have vowed to put John Barleycorn in his place, (wherever that may be) not only here but all over the world, hearth and campus alike. We were asked to invite collegiate backsliders to get in on the ground floor and to let them know that an appeal to box 657 and 658 Church Street Annex, will bring aid instanter.

Peace, it's wonderful!

Jelly-Beans

We received a list of the ten best-dressed men now enjoying the full life the other day—no doubt you did, too—and feel mighty sad to discover that our good friend Lucius Beebe, America's most storied Beau Brummel, has fallen from grace.

Only last year, Harvard's dazzling son held down the number one position, but this year he's sporting No. 17 beneath baseball players, tycoons, curbstone diplomats and, band leaders.

Ever fond of Harvard, Mr. Beebe takes solace in the fact that the Crimson is still represented in the immortal 10. Number four place is held down, of all things, by James B. Conant, Harvard's prexy.

Life is Sad Department

The other day a posse of the journalism students over at Hunter College here in Manhattan descended en bloc to interview Joan Edwards, a Hunter ex and currently a dispenser of sizzling melody as you may know.

Mostly the theme of the inquisition was to be: Career versus Marriage. The Hunter gals, as a man, leaned toward the latter.

Miss Edwards listened to the spokesman pop the questions to her, wrinkled her brow and then sallied:

"Waste all that time preparing yourself for a mere man!" she flipped. "Don't be silly. I'll take a career any day."

State of the Theatre

The only play to burgeon forth this week was a little something by Ayn Rand called "The Unconquered," which failed to vanquish even the most balmy of critics, being, if you're interested, a wheezy piece intended for anti-Bolshevik propaganda.

Not even the noble efforts of Dean Jagger and Helen Craig could save it. The cadaver will have been buried before you read this.

Baggatelles

We almost ran smack into Harry Carey the other day in the colossal blizzard that hit us. The western hero of your youth looked more like a banker than a Gallahad of the brush country. He's in town to do a show....Girls here are set-ups for sheiks; everywhere for all we know. (Come to think of it there was the late Mr. Valentino.) Anyhow a real, live sheik named Khalil Ben Ibrahim Al-Rawi sporting a turban and strip-tease eyes becomes the center of all feminine eyes if just let him saunter into a nightclub. Rumor hath it that his gold stores are enormous. Not that that matters to the nightclub gals, of course....Dorothy Lamour is in town. She walks down Broadway to the stares of the town and the winks of the cab drivers. She enjoys the attention, seems like.

Orchid of the Week

Presented to BETTY MYERS and GLORIA FARRELL

The CYNIC takes pleasure in presenting this week's orchid to Betty Myers '40 and Gloria Farrell '43, the only girl kake walkers in this year's festival, for their initiative and perseverance and ability. Kake walking demands constant, continuous and strenuous effort, and we salute the girls who have undertaken so successfully this task.

They are both members of Alpha Chi Omega, and have been active on campus. They are the second pair of girls to have walked fo' de kake.

Collegium Plans Sunday Program

Collegium is presenting a play suitable for the Lenten season Sunday evening at the College Street Church at 7.30 p.m. This program has been planned far in advance, much thought and care being put into it, and promises to be most worth your while. Come and enjoy the hour in the spirit of harmony and good fellowship which prevails at Collegium gatherings. After the service there will be refreshments and time for an informal get together.

Dean C. E. Edmondson of Indiana University is national faculty billiard champion.

Six Judges To Pick Winning Frats

Committee of Selection Includes Vt. Author

The controlling powers of the 1940 Kake Walk week-end have announced that the three judges who will decide who the best walkers "fo' de Kake" are tomorrow evening, shall be Warren Austin, Jr. of Burlington, Prof. J. E. Pooley of the classical department, and Prof. P. B. Willis of the economics department.

The three judges for the skits have been announced previously. They are Prof. V. Spencer Goodreds of Middlebury College, Walter John Coates of North Montpelier, and Dean Eckhard of the University of Vermont.

Prof. V. Spencer Goodreds received his B.A. degree at the University of Buffalo, and his M.A. degree at Middlebury College. At the present time he is the head of the department of drama and public speaking. He also is the author of many articles on drama which have appeared in such magazines as Drama, Education, and Players.

Walter J. Coates is the publisher of Driftwind, a poetry magazine which he sets by hand. He also writes poetry. He is a graduate from St. Lawrence College and last year the University of Vermont presented him an honorary degree. He has been president of the League of Vermont Writers, and at one time he and Professor Tupper were co-editors of an anthology of Vermont verse.

Dean Eckhard is dean of the Engineering College at the University of Vermont, and is professor of structural engineering.

Fa-So-Mo-Da Dinner To Be At Van Ness

Parents and Alumni Are Guests of Honor

The Father - Son - Mother - Daughter Banquet, an annual affair on Kake Walk week-end, will be held this year at the Van Ness Hotel on Saturday the 24th, at six o'clock. Mortar Board and Boulder honorary societies who sponsor the banquet have the committee chairman Phyllis McGovern '40 and E. Gasperini, Jr., '40 as representatives this year.

Bill Lockwood (of the alumni) will be a speaker and Professor R. A. Hall, of the English department, will give the invocation. Steven Cushing of St. Albans, will be toastmaster and Miss Mary Jean Simpson, dean of women, and E. Swift, dean of the college of arts, will be present. A school quartet will entertain between courses as has been customary since the banquet originated five years ago. The alumni luncheon will be omitted this year so that there will not be the rush, as in the past, between the events scheduled for Saturday afternoon and evening.

All guests attending the banquet will have plenty of time to be at the Memorial Auditorium before the evening performance commences. The purpose of this banquet is to give the parents and alumni an opportunity to mingle with each other and with the faculty and students so students are urged to attend even if their parents are unable to be present. Alumni and parents received letters some time earlier from the Alumni Council inviting them to attend Kake Walk.

Sorority Initiates Six

Delta Phi Epsilon sorority held initiation for six of its pledges Sunday evening, at the Hotel Vermont. Miss Janet Meers and Miss Marion Steinberg, of New York City, both national officers of the sorority were guests of honor.

The new members are Leah Begun, '41, Anne Berman '42, Harriet Koble '41, Miriam Rubin '41, Jean Saul '41, and Edith Topkins '41.

Ted Strain, Michigan State College basketball player, has been nicknamed "Nervous."

The sixtieth annual national archery tournament will be held at Massachusetts State College next August.

"Adventures of a Would-be Pilot"

A Dozen Suggestions To Make You Shine

What with another Mortar Board poping up in the spring, and the fact that so many of Vermont's fair damsels like to invite their own pals to Masquerade, there are some things (we shall call them "things" instead of rules—much safer, you know) all the gals should know. Maybe the fellows "should know" also, but that's another matter.

1. Before honoring a young man with your invitation, make sure he is of a respectable family, a boy scout, brushes his teeth (even though there is no hair on them) daily, and has never been known to consort with rough company.

2. If you intend to send him flowers, be sure to find out the color of his tie (if he has two, make him specify). If he does not intend to wear a tie, the color of his socks might help.

3. If there are programs, be sure to acquire the names of the prettiest ladies there. Do not put down the names of any ladies not coming, no matter how pretty.

4. Transportation is an important matter. Bicycles may be in vogue now, but they are considered too daring in some circles. Tandems might do, however, if imperative.

5. If your escort does not go to U. V. M., introduce him to everyone present. If he knows anyone, introduce him anyway; this might be quite sensational and useful when conversation lags.

6. Do not talk about the orchestra, the floor, the decorations, the people present, the chaperones, the foreign situation, your favorite movie star, Snow White, or the basketball team. This is most improper.

7. If your escort tries to dance less than two feet away from you, slap his face good and hard. The Casanova!

8. Do not powder your nose in front of the young gentleman—unless he powders his, too! This is only polite.

9. Do not become violent if your partner has fooled you and turns out to be Tyrone Power in disguise—after all, it could be worse.

10. Never bring your Caesar book to a dance. It may be a good time to get that translation done, but it's hardly the place.

11. Do not be surprised if said escort suggests dancing; he may be ingenious. Now aren't you glad you asked him?

What Would You Do If—

This column appears to help Vermont students to decide the right thing to do at the right time. Mark your behavior under the same circumstances.

When, after a half hour of trying to get your coin in the slot, amid groans from the bus driver and disgusted looks from those trying to get on, you look down to discover you have been struggling with a penny.

Would you—

1. Say "I thought transportation rates had been reduced"?
2. Faint dead away from the heat?
3. Ask for a transfer?
4. Smile sweetly at the driver and inquire about the death of his uncle?

You have at last succeeded in getting a date with that snappy little number in your math class. In the middle of a perfect evening, you commit the unforgivable by spilling gravy on your tie.

Would you—

1. Say it was about time you were leaving anyway?
2. Turn your tie over?
3. Remark on the beautiful way the gravy blends with the color of your tie?
4. Start waving frantically at some of your friends who have just come in?

After having spent your whole allowance on a so-called exclusive model, you enter a public building with a group of friends whom you have just impressed and come face to face with a cleaning woman sporting the same model,

Would you—

1. Yell "fire" and rush for the nearest exit?

Kartoonist Koch

Several times during the last few years clever cartoons depicting campus life at the University of Vermont have appeared in the pages of the CYNIC. These cartoons are the work of our own William P. Koch, Sigma Nu, a senior enrolled in the Civil Engineering curriculum. The cartoon above is the work of his pen and the sketch of the orchid in the CYNIC Orchid of the Week column is more of his fine work. Although Bill is not connected directly with the CYNIC he has always eagerly cooperated with the staff. Consequently the CYNIC takes this opportunity to give him the recognition he deserves and thank him for his meritorious work.

2. Quietly trip her with the mop?
3. Pretend that your friends are color blind?
4. Suggest that it is just your public copying you?

You have just explained at length to a group of fellow sufferers how that "so and so" of a prof gave you an F instead of the B you deserved. Looking up, there stands your professor friend whom you have described in no uncertain terms.

Would you—

1. Quietly sink into the earth?
2. Ask the whole party up to sample Myrtle's fudge?
3. Quiz each one in turn about whether he has seen "Gone With the Wind?"
4. Tell him you have just been telling your friends how you are going to work much harder this semester?

Etiquette in the Cloak Room

In the gents' coat room:

1. After entering the dance hall, escort your lady friend to her cloak room—do not step over the threshold an inch—this would be bad form.

2. Try to have something extremely witty to say upon leaving her, such as:
"See you soon."
"Over the river."
"Ta-ta, little one."

3. Now retire to your own coat room. Take off your coat, hat, scarf, gloves, rubbers, overshoes, mittens, earmuffs, spats, etc., and give them to the man.

4. If the checking fee is ten cents, toss down a quarter and tell the man to keep the change. Don't say this too loud, just loudly enough so a dozen or so can hear you. This will establish you as a man of the world.

5. Look just a trifle bored.

In the ladies' coat room.

1. As soon as you enter the coat room, do not forget your purpose. Remove your coats.

2. Comb your hair, powder your nose, paint your lips, smooth your eyebrows, fuss with your evening bag, but do not waste any time.

3. Talk to all those present who look familiar, getting the latest gossip, and make sure to mention the enormous price of your new gown.

4. If there is plenty of time, slip out into the hall as though you were looking for someone.

5. Get as many introductions as possible to good-looking strangers.

6. Slip back in and come dashing back as if you've been hurrying like mad.

Etiquette at Games

1. On arriving, take your coat and hat, and put them out of your way, just far enough to bother somebody else.

2. When you reach the gym, take the long way to your seat, in order that everyone can see your new dress, and wave prettily to everyone you know.

3. When the game starts, look enthusiastic, and cheer loudly for the cutest fellow on the team, calling him by his nickname. (This gives to the unaware freshmen and other unknowing persons the impression that you go around with him.)

4. Smile sweetly all during the game, for one never knows from which angle the photographers will shoot the boys in action. This may prove tiresome, but think of the reward.

5. Cooperate with the cheerleaders. You will then show school spirit, and this habit also lets everyone else know that you're not jealous of how cute the little dears look in their outfits.

6. At intervals, interrupt the girl on your right long enough to make clever remarks, thereby the people around you will certainly think you know something about the game.

7. At the half, choose the longest way to the lobby, for the exercise. (Also, if anyone is looking for you for a date after the game, he'll surely be able to see you.)

Millions of times a day, people the world over enjoy a happy minute with ice-cold Coca-Cola. They like its clean taste and the after-sense of refreshment that follows. Thus the pause that refreshes with ice-cold Coca-Cola is America's favorite moment.

Kake Walk Royalty Comparatively New In U.V.M. Festival

Campaign Novelty Increases Yearly At Kake Walk Time

Student polling for the election of king and queen for Kake Walk was not originated on the U. V. M. campus until the thirty-seventh Kake Walk festivities of 1934. In that year the prevailing mottos were "bear with us" not with the Three Bears, but with the Nudist Party represented by George Patterson the Third. In competition with the Nudists was the Communists Petting Party which set up S. T. Hubbard; and last but not least the Dark Horse Party who entered "Peaky" Flynn. That year the Communists Petters won out with S. T. Hubbard.

Way back in '34 queens were not in style and so none ran.

The following year there were but two candidates for king. James Lucius Cincinnatus Gillespie of the Conservative Party and Itzel Rosenblatt. It was this year that for dancing in the dormitories, no more bull slinging by the Aggies, and a date bureau was advocated by the prospective king. Gillespie and the date bureau finally won out.

The year of 1936 was auspicious. Commissar Barsalow, Jack Magner, and Fid Barber were candidates. Beer on tap in every classroom and free transportation to Burlington hot and cold spots was offered to all the students by Barsalow. Free geese, 5 bucks each from the Wilbur Fund and other exotic gifts were offered by Fid Barber who finally won out.

The nominees for queen that year were Marie Black, Elizabeth Haig, Ruth Lattimer, Martha McGillicuddy, Barbara Sussdorf, and Rebecca Kibby, who was nominated.

Nineteen hundred and thirty-seven saw Herbie Martel with his fool proof social security act whereby no one would flunk out.

E. Benson Meservey promised a better English language and F. T. Gear just ran. Barsalow, one of the preceding year's candidates, ran again and won.

As queen candidates there were Betty Simonds, Marie King, Lucille Maxham, and Sukie Newton. Sukie reigned with Barsalow.

In 1938 the radio figured as a means of distributing propaganda by the king and queen candidates.

Aspirants of the Past

"Smiling George" Bauby, who stated he would not only work his fingers, but his whole hand to the bone; "Chum" Langlas, the pride of Iowa, who was out to abolish housemaids knee, athletes foot, etc.; and lil Herbie Martel whose slogan was "Skate to Social and Scholastic Security."

Last year (1939) four aspiring (not perspiring) candidates tried their luck; "Arnie" Levine, who wanted equal privileges, "Apple Jack" Husing, "Tea Balls" McHugh, and Clark "Small Change" Nichols.

Of the feminine candidates there were four, "Cotton Babe" Jane Riddell, whose slogan was "Let Jane Reign"; Judy Flack, who urged her public to "Back Flack"; Holley Fletcher, who wanted to "Decorate this Kake Walk with Holley"; and Claire Rock, the "Rock from Barre."

This year the campaign has started off like a lamb and time will tell whether it will go out like a lion or on a stretcher.

Seventeen miles of shelves have been added to the University of Illinois library. They'll accommodate half a million books.

Northwestern University students hold a "flunkers' frolic" after their final examination periods.

Alpha Chi Omega Initiates Six Girls

Alpha Chi Omega initiated six of their pledges at the chapter house yesterday afternoon. The new members are as follows: Florence Bevins '43, Burlington; Mary Germain '43, Glens Falls, N. Y.; Mary LePage '41, Barre; Ethel Shippee '42, Dover; Lucy Williams '42, Charlotte; and Margaret Wishart '43, Burlington.

Following the initiation ceremony a banquet was held at the Hotel Vermont Roof Garden, with Claire Rock '40 and Barbara Bishop '42 in charge. Toastmistress of the evening was Miss Genette Davis of the secretarial department. Many alumnæ, as well as active members, were present.

This Collegiate World

Engineering students are famous for their mathematical approach to all phases of life—and University of Minnesota engineers are no exception. They've started a move to publish a list of all jokes used by their professors, a list that will classify and number all wise-cracks and favorite stories of the pedagogues. Chief reason for the project is that it will be a time-saver for all concerned, for in the future professors will merely give the number of their joke when they feel the moment has arrived to spice their lectures with a touch of levity.

Prof. Seba Eldridge, University of Kansas sociologist, gets the plush gonfalon in the race to determine the most absent-minded professor.

A few nights ago he left his home, "just to mail a letter." When he failed to return, his fearful wife asked the police to search for him, for she feared something dire had happened.

At 9 p.m., however, Prof. Eldridge calmly walked into his home, entirely unaware of the search. He had merely neglected to mention he was going out also to attend a dinner meeting of one of his classes!

Illinois Wesleyan University's football manager believes in taking no chances—so he recently wired President Roosevelt: "I and hundreds of other football managers over the country would like to know the exact date for Thanksgiving in 1940." A presidential secretary wired back: "The date will be November 21, 1940."

Now that that problem is definitely settled, Midland College girls have a real reason for smiling in their contest to select the college's Smile Girl. In the novel competition, students will vote for the girls who have smiles which bring greatest happiness to others while indicating maximum happiness in the owners.

We'll bet Germany would have a hard time conducting such a contest!

Engineering College Names Dean's List

A total of sixteen students enrolled in the Engineering College received marks averaging more than 85 percent. Three students had an average of 89 percent or better. Billings Library Gives Exhibition Of Author's Works

Gov. General of Canada Author and Statesman Published Works in 1895

In memory of Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Canada, whose death occurred recently, the Billings Library of the University of Vermont now has on display a number of books which he wrote. A prolific author as well as a statesman, John Buchan, Lord Tweedsmuir, had his first book published about 1895, and from that date he continued writing, often a book a year, almost up to the present, his latest book appearing in 1938. Novels, including thrillers like "The 39 Steps," a widely-known adventure tale from his pen, historical and biographical works, and non-fiction books, all came from his capacious inkwell.

Books Loaned by Dr. Leonard

The Billings Library exhibition includes about thirty volumes by John Buchan, most of them owned by Dr. C. S. Leonard, a member of the faculty of the medical college of the University of Vermont and loaned to the library for this display. A few of the library's own books by the late Governor General are included in the showing, which is in a special display case placed near the fireplace in the main room of the library.

Born in Perth, Scotland, August 26, 1875, Lord Tweedsmuir died February 11, 1940, in Montreal, Canada. Many of the books loaned by Doctor Leonard for the memorial exhibition in the library are first British editions, some of them rare. An early work, now scarce and hard to find, in the show at the library, is "Grey Weather," a collection of short stories of the Scottish moors, published in 1899.

Books by Lord Tweedsmuir

"Scholar Gipsies," appearing in 1896, was one of the first books written by Lord Tweedsmuir, then plain John Buchan. It is one of the volumes shown in the library's exhibition. Other titles included are "The Half-Hearted," "The Watcher by the Threshold," "Prester John," "The 39 Steps," and "The Power House," "Green Mantle," "The Battle of the Somme," "Midwinter" (a tale of Samuel Johnson). There are many other novels shown. Also on display is "A History of the Great War," in four volumes; "Oliver Cromwell," "Sir Walter Raleigh," "The King's Grace," "Naval Episodes of the Great War," and "The Man and the Book," which concerns Sir Walter Scott.

Appearing within the last decade were "The Gap in the Curtain," 1932; "A Prince of the Captivity," 1933; "The House of the Four Winds," 1935; "The Island of Sheep," 1936, and "Naval Episodes of the Great War," 1938, all of them on display at the library.

Exams Eliminated As New Experiment

Alma, Mich.—(ACP)—Elimination of final examinations at Alma College as an experiment for the next two semesters has been announced by Prof. Roy Hamilton, secretary of the faculty.

In explaining this inovation, Prof. Hamilton said that the change was being made with a view to stimulating students to keep up on their daily work. Frequent tests will be given on the basis of daily work, he said.

Primary reason for the elimination of final semester examinations is the practice of a great many students to neglect their work during the semester, and then stay up late during the last few weeks in an effort to cram for the tests. This system Prof. Hamilton scored as being injurious both to the students' health and to the educational interests of any college.

Under this new system of classroom examinations based on daily work, all students will be graded three times a semester, as has been the custom for freshmen.

At the same time that he announced his new system, Prof. Hamilton said that it is planned to give a standard comprehensive examination to all students at the end of their senior year. Such an examination, he said, would cover the entire college course, with special reference given to major subjects of each student.

Pilgrim Fellowship To Meet On Sunday

This will be held at the Parish House of the First Church at 7:30. Following the speaker will be a discussion period and then refreshments with a social hour.

Everyone is welcome to come and participate in our fellowship. The attendance has been steadily increasing from thirty on up. Last Sunday evening it reached a high mark of fifty-five. Reserve Sunday night for this type of experience! It really is very beneficial and loads of fun!!

We Are Not Alone

By "Pooh"

Kake Walk is a high light on the U. V. M. fun calendar; college is marvelous—and anything but all play; and we're lucky dogs to live in a "free" country. That "free" is literal as well as figurative. While we are gaily pasting campaign stickers on the Old Mill doors, and madly cheering on our favorite candidates, there is, whether we're aware of it or not, a real war going on in Europe. We have become, for the most part, pretty numb to the headlines—they're always there. And newspaper news is not flesh and blood. Believe it or not, there are live people over there, all with their own lives to lead.

A friend in England, a girl of twenty-one, working in the Foreign Office, "somewhere in the country," writes: "I have an idea that in my last letter I sounded very disgruntled about this business of working from midnight till eight in the morning. It really isn't as bad as I probably made out—I must tell you more about it.

Joyce and I go to bed after lunch—about 2.30; and there the war actually comes in useful! Because the black-out curtains with which every window is equipped, shut out every bit of light, making the room as dark as usually at night—but still, it was very difficult for the first week to sleep during the afternoon—for me, at any rate. Joyce is marvelous, she is asleep as soon as her head touches the pillow!

We have had to invest in an alarm clock, which rings out raucously at 11 p.m.; that is always a horrible moment. We get up and go down to the living room about 11.30—feeling sleepy and cold. Our hostess has left a large fire there, and hot coffee and biscuits in the hearth, which are very acceptable. An office car calls for us at 11.50, and we get up to the "War Station" just before midnight and are ready to start work as it strikes. Then—hard at it, for a steady three hours; at 3 a.m. we go over to the kitchen for supper, or brunch, or whatever it is. Eggs, sausages, etc., are laid out on a tray and we cook what we want—if you are not tired it's rather fun. We usually take an hour off then—till about four. At five we put a kettle on to our open fire and it soon boils and we make tea—there is nothing that tastes quite so good or is quite so welcome as that cup of tea at 5.30 in the morning. Our work necessitates the burning of eight 100-c.p. bulbs in our lamps, and that added to the fire makes the room very hot toward the end of the shift—and black-out blinds keep out the air somewhat. So when the tea is poured, we put off all the lights and open windows and doors, and a delicious breeze blows through. The sun is usually just rising over the hills; it is beautiful; we call our shift the "Fellowship of the Dawn!" After tea we work on till eight—when the next shift takes over—and I rush to the house to get in a refreshing hot bath before breakfast, which is at 8.30. And that's the way it goes—night after night.

This morning, after breakfast, we went for a long walk. There was a hard ground frost—it scrunched under our feet; we all (five of us) felt a bit light-headed, as we had done a successful bit of work during the night. We raced across fields and stopped at a farm miles from anywhere for a glass of milk. The country looked so lovely, with its vague white mantle of frost—Lib and I both stopped dead at practically the same moment and said 'Surely this isn't going to be smashed—it can't be.' That is the horrible part of all this—the uncertainty in which loved and beautiful things are placed . . . ."

U. V. M. Students In Sculpture Contest

An ice sculpturing contest? It's a new idea, but please give us time to do it. This was the average opinion and request by most of the sororities and fraternities of U. V. M., upon being asked their thoughts concerning it. At Delta Delta Delta Sorority, a suggestion was given that each fraternity house hold a meeting for the purpose of submitting their own rules for the contest. The reporter from Delta Psi acknowledged that it would be easy. (They are building an ice sculpture now.) However, the best of the suggestions was from Phi Sigma Delta. What was it? This is it: That one of the judges be chosen from the Phi Sigma Delta House. But to seriousness—we agree that an ice sculpturing contest would be a grand idea. A fine new tradition would, in this way, be instituted for our Green and Gold.

The University of Wisconsin boxing team has been unbeaten in thirty-two consecutive home matches.

What's in a name? Paul Painter has won a water-color art contest at the University of Cincinnati.

Catamounts Prepare For Trinity

Game to be Held Saturday at 4 O'clock

With indications that they are now in top shape the Catamounts are preparing to wind up the season with a victory against Trinity College on Saturday at four in the Memorial Auditorium. On their recent road trip the Cats showed great power by taking the New York Teachers' quintet easily and then going on to Colgate where they gave the Red Raiders a stubborn fight before finally yielding 44-39.

Coach Sabo will probably start the same team against Trinity that he started against the Colgate five. Maley and Taylor will be in there at the guard positions. Taylor amply demonstrated his versatility on the recent trip when he pushed in fourteen points in the New York Teachers' game and then was Vermont's high scorer against the Red Raiders with thirteen points. Maley, the other guard, is good on long shots and plays an outstanding defense game. Corley and Belardinelli will probably start at left forward and center, respectively, with Healey taking the other forward slot. Healey is a good man to have in there when the going is hardest and all year he has demonstrated his ability to provide the spark necessary for victory in any team. Belardinelli, high scorer for Vermont this year, and Corley are counted on to provide the bulk of the points.

Reports on Trinity are not very definite but they will probably field a fast quintet. They took the Cats over last year after a hard struggle. If Vermont can crash through with some of the fine playing that they demonstrated against Dartmouth and Fordham they have a good chance of winding up the season for a win. A large crowd will probably attend this last tussle of the season as many alumni will be in town for the Kake Walk events Saturday.

A. R. (Lefty) Pesarik, ace twirler of the University of Vermont nine, has been elected captain of the 1940 baseball team, succeeding Bud Kimball, who has left college.

Pesarik, mainstay of Coach Larry Gardner's mound corps, is a senior engineering student from Windsor. Last season he won five games out of seven starts on the twenty-two-game schedule.

Battery men are being called to the cage the last of this month, with the team going into its first engagements during Easter vacation, when it makes its annual invasion of the South.

Annual Hexathlon Drawing Close

Contested For Donahue Trophy

Each year when the Hexathlon competition is held we recall James E. Donahue, in whose memory a trophy is given to the winner of this contest. A brief survey of the life of this great man, who for many years was connected with athletic policies of the University, and who served as chairman, Athletic Council, will recall him to all who knew him.

Professor James Donahue, popularly known as "Jimmie" Donahue on the Green and Gold campus, was born at Fairfield, April 25, 1880. Eight years later his family moved to Essex Junction where he resided the rest of his life.

"Jimmie" attended the public and high schools of Burlington, and graduated from the Burlington High School in 1897. Entering the University of Vermont the following year, he became active in many activities, in addition to attaining Phi Beta Kappa. He graduated from the University in 1902 with a degree of Ph.B. After doing graduate work at Harvard, and resident work at Columbia, he became an instructor at Burlington High School, which position he held for six years. In 1910 he became an instructor at Harvard where he stayed for two years, after which he came to the University of Vermont in 1914 as assistant professor of mathematics.

Professor Donahue was one of the most popular and best liked men ever to be associated with the University, both in the field of teaching and athletics. It is very fitting therefore, that each year we associate his name with the Hexathlon contest.

The six events of the Hexathlon are run off in two parts. Three events are held on one day and the second three are run off on one other day.

Order of events are as follows:

First day's events: 110-yard dash; rope climb; one-mile run.

Second day's events: 16-lb. shot put; running high jump; running broad jump.

Eligibility rules:

1. A man must be scholastically eligible.

2. A man must have had at least eight (8) workouts on the track prior to the mile run.

3. A physical examination prior to the mile run.

Past winners were:

1932-33	J. J. Jezukowicz '36
1933-34	J. J. Delfausse '34
1934-35	T. P. Budzyna '38
1935-36	J. T. Webster '37
1936-37	T. P. Budzyna '38
1938-39	D. Jones '39.

"Colleges cannot talk about democracy and at the same time refuse to allow democratic principles and methods to be used on their own campuses. Boards of trustees, faculties as well as student bodies, must see democracy as a way of life effective here and everywhere." Dr. Gould Wickey, Council of Church Boards of Education secretary, demands that students and faculty members practice what they preach.

Pope Pius XII has named the Right Reverend Monsignor Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, titular Bishop of Bilta.

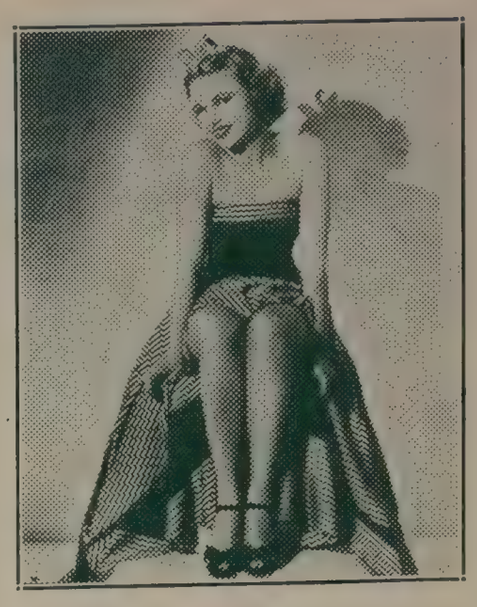
Rules For Boxing Bouts

All the bouts in the preliminaries and finals will be of nine minutes duration, unless a fall occurs. If no fall occurs and the referee does not award the bout to either contestant at the expiration of this period, two extra period bouts of two minutes each shall be wrestled.



If either contestant brings his opponent to the mat and secures a position of advantage within the first three minutes of wrestling, the bout shall be a continuous nine-minute one. A fall in any part of this continuous nine-minute bout terminates the match.

If neither contestant secures a fall or a position of advantage before the expiration of three minutes of wrestling, the referee shall stop the bout and the remaining six minutes shall be divided into two three-minute periods. The referee shall toss a coin and the winner of the toss many elect to go behind or underneath in the "Referee's Position on the Mat" at the beginning of the second three-minute bout. At the expiration of the second three-minute bout the referee shall stop the bout and shall put the contestant who started with the position of advantage in the second bout underneath at the start of the third three-minute bout. If a contestant secures a fall in the second three-minute bout, this terminates only the second three-minute bout and the third three-mintue bout shall be wrestled as though no fall had resulted in the previous bout.

A fall occurs when any part of both shoulders is held in contact with the mat for an appreciable length of time.

All Sophomores who wish to scrub baseball please report to R. O. Slack or Harold Durfee. Credit for phys. ed. will not be given until after Easter vacation but all work counts towards an assistant managership. Report at once. Early bird catches the worm.

Giant Laboratory Is Valuable Structure

State College (IP).—A giant "outdoor laboratory" covering more than 4,000 acres of ground shows promise of becoming a valuable storehouse of information for students in five branches of study at the Pennsylvania State College.

The tract has been offered to the college on a proposed long-term lease basis by the United States Department of Agriculture. The lease is still in process of negotiation.

Located only twelve miles from State College, the wooded hills and rolling fields of the region were used last summer for the first time by nearly 100 students studying geology, petroleum and natural gas engineering, forestry, nature education and civil engineering. Heretofore, each of these departments of the college has had its own summer training camp, elsewere in the state.

The students, whose curricular requirements include eight weeks of field training during one summer vacation of their college years, operated from three separate camps, which were constructed with the aid of federal funds. The mineral industries camp consists of a large two-storied frame building and garage, the forestry camp has a beautiful main building and platforms for student tents and the civil engineering quarters include a cookhouse and platform tents.

The terrain and natural features of the tract are so varied that they offer unlimited study for all groups.

Third-Act Curtain for Anse

The tremendous activities of the morrow begin at 4.00 p.m. when Capt. Frank Taylor leads his Green and Gold quintet out onto the Memorial Auditorium surface to do battle with a strong Trinity club. Anything we might possibly say in regard to the import of tomorrow's clash or in regard to the past season would be unnecessarily repetitious. Except for one thing. It isn't often that we devote a column to personalities or especially to a personality, but tomorrow marks the conclusion of the basketball career of one of Vermont's outstanding performers—Anse Belardinelli. For two years Anse has been the key man around whom the Catamount attack has always been centered. Always the debonair gentleman of the court, unruffled, helping opponents to their feet, Anse has always found time to hoop in more than his share of points and has been high scorer on the club for two years.

Model Planes Used In Training Course

Method Devised by Instructors in Texas

Model airplanes, exact counterparts of the full size Basic Training planes, are often used to demonstrate flight maneuvers without ever leaving the ground. This method of instruction was devised by the flying instructors at Randolph Field, Texas, in order to simplify the course of flying training, and to eliminate the loss of many precious minutes in the air when a student pilot failed to understand the principles involved in any particular gyration. The Instructor, center, is demonstrating the position of the airplanes in the Vee formation, the fundamental formation used in all mass flying. His three students, two of them "flying" the wing positions, are sticking right on the tail of the leader as he leads his formation into a dive. After a thorough discussion on the ground, they take to the air, and put into practice the maneuvers previously "flown" with the small scale models. Although the formation as a whole may be speeding through the air at speeds up to 200 miles per hour, the relative speeds between members of the formation is practically zero. Each of the wing men glues his eyes on the leader and follows him no matter where he leads. This principle of formation flying, starting with only three airplanes, gradually grows in size as the student pilots become more proficient. By the time graduation from Kelly Field, the Air Corps Advanced Flying School, rolls around, nine months after the start of the course of flight training, the young aviators have been built up to flying perfect formation with as many as eighteen planes in a group. The final graduation aerial review, in which every member of the class usually participates, finds as many as 150 airplanes in one gigantic formation, each man following his leader. Many estimates have been made on the cost to the government for every Flying Cadet who completes the course, and conservative figures place this at about $20,000 per man. All this is free to the individual, and, in addition, Flying Cadets receive a salary of $75.00 per month during their training. After graduation, they are commissioned as Second Lieutenants in the Air Corps Reserve and their pay increases to $200 per month. Then they are detailed to extended active duty with the various tactical organizations of the Air Corps. They have become full fledged pilots.

Radio-Active Materials Worked on by Scientists

Berkeley, Calif. (IP).—Scientists at six cooperating institutions are now being provided with consignments of artificial radio-active substances manufactured by the atom-smashing cyclotron on the University of California campus, according to Dr. E. O. Lawrence, developer of the cyclotron and director of the University's Radiation Laboratory.

Radio-active phosphorus is being used at the University of Copenhagen, Denmark, for physiological and chemical studies, at the University of Hawaii for soil investigations, at the University of Amsterdam, Holland, for research on rickets, and at the University of Washington for studies on plant nutrition. Radio-active iron is being employed at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., for studies of iron metabolism. These experiments are being conducted by Dr. George Whipple, joint winner of the Nobel Prize in Medicine in 1934. Radio-active sulphur is being sent to the California Institute of Technology for use in sulphur metabolism tests.

The radio-active materials, or "tagged atoms," are also being used in a wide variety of experiments at the University of California. Specific projects include studies of thyroid disease, Addison's and Cushing's diseases, lipoid metabolism, and cerebro-spinal fluid.

Only twenty years old, Mariana Scott is the University of Cincinnati's youngest candidate for a Ph.D. degree.

Missouri Valley College has had a 40 per cent increase in enrollment in the last five years.

Model Airplanes Can Make Model Airmen

At Randolph Field, Texas, home of the Army Air Corps Primary Flying School, Flying Cadets are taught the fundamentals of flying formations through the use of model ships which are counterparts of the basic trainers in which they receive their flight training.

This method of instruction was devised by veteran instructors at Randolph Field, the "West Point of the Air," in order to simplify the course of flying training and to eliminate the loss of many precious minutes in the air when a student failed to understand the principles involved in any particular gyration. In this photograph an instructor (center) demonstrates the "Vee" formation which is the fundamental formation used in massed flying.

Every six weeks a new class of Flying Cadets begins its course of training at Randolph Field. These Flying Cadets are between 20 and 27 years of age and while in training receive $75 per month, uniforms, board and lodging, hospital care, and all other services.

Annual Kake Walk Opens With Colorful Masquerade

Week-end of Activity Planned for Guests Climax on Saturday

Tonight is the night when Vermont blows off the lid and the 1940 Kake Walk really gets under way with the gala Masquerade. With Tommy Reynolds and his "Band of Tomorrow" giving out, the students competing for costume prizes and the newly-elected King and Queen of Kake Walk presiding, the gym will present a truly colorful picture. H. A. Allen, Jr. '40, chairman, feels sure that this event will be one long to be remembered in the history of Kake Walk. M. J. Boucher '40 and W. P. Koch '41 in charge of decorations have refused to give away their plans but they have arranged for a large central piece and for a large Kake Walk portrait before which Tommy Reynold's band will play.

According to all reports Tommy Reynolds' is as far up the ladder of swing success as Glenn Miller was last year at this time when he played at the Masquerade. Reynolds' solos on the clarinet featuring improvisations backed by brass and reeds. The band numbers thirteen musicians and a vocalist and is labeled near tops for clean-cut and crisply executed swing.

But the Masquerade is only the beginning of Kake Walk. Saturday is a big day with a meeting of the Alumni Council scheduled at 9.30 a.m.; the basketball game with Trinity at 4.00 p.m.; the Fa-So-Mo-Da Banquet occurring at 6.00 p.m. at the Van Ness Hotel and the kake walking and stunts at the Memorial Auditorium later in the evening.

Carl Schofield '40 and J. Walker Robinson '40 have planned for an outstanding program. The advance sale of tickets indicates that the number of parents of students and alumni attending will be unusually large. The various fraternities have been practicing "Walkin' fo' de Kake" and rehearsing their stunts for several weeks now. In the stunt eliminations held last Monday night at the Memorial Auditorium the following fraternities were chosen to put on their skits: Sigma Phi, Lambda Iota, Sigma Nu, Phi Delta Theta, and Sigma Alpha Epsilon. The entrants of the various fraternities in the Kake Walking are as follows:

Kappa Sigma—J. L. Costello '42, Rutland; R. L. Swift '43, Portland, Me.

A. T. O.—E. J. Roberts '40, Jacksonville; W. L. Dorion '43, Rutland.

Phi Sigma Delta—A. H. Becker '41, Burlington; A. D. Wolk '41, Rutland.

Sigma Nu—N. J. Boyden '42, Burlington; R. D. Wakefield '42, Burlington.

Sigma Phi—C. W. Utter '41, Westerly, R. I.; R. J. Hamilton '42, Burlington.

Tau Epsilon Phi—C. Joseph '43, New York City; C. Itzkowitz '42, New London, Conn.

S. A. E.—P. V. Sundberg, Jr. '43, Windsor; E. A. Guilbert '41, Waterbury, Conn.

Phi Delta Theta—W. Pratt '41 and H. Pache '41.

The Kake Walking will be judged by Warren Austin, Jr., Prof. J. E. Pooley of the classical department, and Prof. P. B. Willis of the economics department. Two large cups are the prizes for which the fraternities will be competing. As lesser prizes there will be a number of huge layer cakes.

The winning of the Kake Walk and stunts count toward possession of the Traynor trophy.

In past years the Kake Walk has always been the outstanding social event of the school year and this year's festival will undoubtedly keep pace with its predecessors. Kake Walk is a tradition at the University of Vermont and is looked forward to by many alumni as a chance to revisit their alma mater. As a unique Vermont event Kake Walk has a certain glamour and lure all its own. When the R. O. T. C. Band under the direction of Joseph Lechnyr gives out with the familiar strains of "Cotton Babes" all loyal University of Vermonters are thrilled no matter how many times they have attended Kake Walk. So we'll be seeing you at the Masquerade tonight and at the Kake Walking tomorrow night. Also we expect to see a large turnout at the Trinity game at 4.00 p.m. tomorrow afternoon. Come and root for the team and let's make this a really successful Kake Walk in every way we can.

Delta Psi Initiates Eight New Members

Many alumni attended the initiation ceremonies held at the Delta Psi house Monday night, February 19. Eight freshmen were initiated: Dudley Davis, Winston Eddy, George Little, Stevenson Porter, Robert Stockwell, Oliver Swift, Harry Twitchell and John Wanvig.

Oliver Swift was awarded the Carroll G. Paige pin as a tribute to his scholastic achievement during the first semester. (Carroll G. Paige was a graduate of the class of 1917 who went down at sea during the World War. No trace has ever been found either of the ship or the crew.)

After the ceremonies, a banquet was held. Robert Paterson '42 was in charge of the banquet.

A. T. Morrill Chapel Speaker Wednesday

Mr. A. T. Morrill, secretary of the State Young Men's Christian Association, was the chapel speaker last Wednesday. His message dealt with the closeness of God in certain unusual places. He spoke of three personal instances in which he had seen God manifest.

G. L. Millikan, instructor of political science, directed the University choir in the absence of Professor Kirby. "Jesu Dulcis Memoria," by Vittoria, was effectively rendered.

Why I Chose Vermont

by Virginia Mitchell

When the time came for me to choose a college there was the usual inflow of catalogs, advice from all sides, and the typical bewilderment on the part of the one who had to make the choice. During my senior year in high school I condensed my list to five or six colleges for serious consideration, several of which I visited, but they all failed to give me that "can't-wait-to-get-there" feeling.

Last on my list, because of its greater distance from Worcester, was the University of Vermont, but the more I heard of it, the more certain I became that it was the college for me. And when my uncle, who had lectured there and at many colleges throughout the East, recommended it more highly than any other, I was determined to see it.

The beauty of Vermont, ever increasing as we traveled northward, and climaxed by the approach to Burlington, and finally the magnificant view from "the hill" created my first favorable impression of U. V. M. During the two short days I was here, I met many people, both faculty and students, whose friendliness and eagerness to help created the second and the most lasting impression I took away with me. The Home Economics course also proved to be one of the best I'd seen and exactly what I wanted; and it was on the strength of these three factors that I registered at the University of Vermont.

Now, a full-fledged student at U. V. M., I have become a very normal, average college girl, enthusiastically fond of my school, my new friends, my studies, and the organizations in which I hope to become more and more active during the next four years.

University Enlarges Military Equipment

Columbia, Mo. (IP).—The new University of Missouri R. O. T. C. Armory's first floor is given over to a new motor court for the new mechanized equipment, repair shop, and military library. All of the second-floor space will be used for office and classroom, as well as storage space for smaller equipment. The rifle and pistol range will be located in the basement.

The University R. O. T. C. will have a motorized field artillery unit, while the horse-drawn field artillery battery will be continued. Part of the students will be given instructions on the mechanized equipment. This year only seniors who have had preliminary work in infantry will be given infantry instruction and next year only artillery instructions will be given.

Equipment for the motorized unit, most of which has already been received and is now stored by the university, includes two 1½-ton Chevrolet cargo trucks; three eight-passenger Chevrolet carry-alls; two half-ton Chevrolet pick-ups; eight 1½-ton Dodge heavy cargo trucks; four high-speed 75-mm. guns and carriages; and several hundred lesser items of fire control equipment for the motorized unit.

University Host To Writers Of Vermont At Winter Meeting

Professor Leon Dean Conference Chairman; Four Clinics Held

One hundred Vermont authors were not too far snowed in to attend the mid-winter meeting of the League of Vermont Writers last Saturday, held with the University of Vermont as host at the Southwick Memorial Building. Professional and amateur, veteran and apprentice, the writers flocked to the conference, which was built around a new idea—clinics in specialized fields of writing, with experienced writers in those fields to advise out of their experience, hear manuscripts and criticize, and generally give the struggling authors a lift over the hard places. Nurses, teachers, ministers, housewives, librarians and booksellers, with a few newspaper reporters and free-lance writers of Vermont proved to belong to many different callings.

Many attending the conference visited two or more of the four clinics which ran simultaneously, four in the morning and another four in the afternoon. Morning clinics included article writing, with Prof. Leon W. Dean of the University English department, and chairman of the conference; book reviewing, with Sanford Cobb of a local book shop; assays, with Prof. Julian I. Lindsay of the English department; and the novel, with Elliott T. Merrick, also of the English department, who is the author of several well-known novels, most recent of which was last summer's best seller, "Frost and Fire."

Clinics In Afternoon

Afternoon clinics included newspaper writing, with Mrs. Lilian M. Ainsworth, secretary of the Writers' League; poetry, with Prof. Arthur W. Peach, head of the English department at Norwich University; short story, with Mrs. Allene Corliss of St. Albans, whose short stories have appeared in magazines of national circulation; and contesting, with Dorothy Drohat of Montpelier, who has learned how to come out with the prize money in contests, so numerous now.

St. Albans, Montpelier, Rutland, Barre, Essex Junction, St. Johnsbury, Vergennes, Lyndonville, Enosburg Falls, Manchester, and Northfield were some of the communities represented by authors attending the conference. A number of writers came from other smaller places. Washington, D. C. and Saranac Lake, N. Y., also had writers attending.

State Book Wagon

Two of the four book wagons which bring library service to school and towns which are too small to have their own libraries stood outside the building where the conference was assembled, offering an opportunity for visiting authors to become acquainted with their facilities. Miss Dorothy Randolph of Montpelier, Supervisor of the Vermont Free Public Library Commission, which operates the book wagons, stated that the four state book wagons, with headquarters at Rutland, St. Albans, St. Johnsbury and Montpelier, make 1,600 stops regularly every two months. Reading certificates, which are awarded to school children reading and reporting on a specified number of books, go to about 5,000 Vermont school children a year, Miss Randolph said.

Others connected with the Free Public Library Commission attending the conference were Miss Barbara Smith, Montpelier, children's librarian; Mrs. Margaret Baker, Rutland regional librarian, and Miss Evelyn Bergh, St. Albans, assistant regional librarian. Drivers of the Rutland and St. Albans book wagons, which were dsiplayed at the conference, were Raymond Small, Rutland and Kenneth Morrison, St. Albans.

Pres. Mildred H. McAfee of Wellesley College this spring will be the first woman ever to give a baccalaureate address at Purdue University.

Eighteen pairs of brothers are now attending the Missouri School of Mines.

Walkin' fo' de Kake Old U.V.M. Custom

Phi Delta Theta Heads Winning List

"Walkin' fo' de Kake" originated from a ceremony at which all the darkies in the South would dress up in their best Sunday-go-to-meeting togs and "walk" in pairs. Those who were the funniest or the most different or the most skillful in any way were awarded a prize which was a cake. Growing from an impromptu part of the program to a smoothly running part in which couples strive to outshine each other in costumes, grace, teamwork and smoothness, carriage and stunts, it is the most colorful part of the Kake Walk.

Phi Delta Theta heads the list of the winners of "Walkin' fo' de Kake" by taking the prize in 1898. From 1900 on, the winners are as follows:

Quotable Quotes

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"A person's intellectual capabilities do not decline after he is forty, if he uses those capabilities. The average person may show a little decrease in speed, perhaps, but in real intellectual accomplishments no substantial decline is indicated." University of California's Dean Frank H. Freeman can cite many tests to prove his theory that keenness of mind does not decline in "frightening forties."

Broadcasting Studio Installed at Iowa

Ames, Iowa (IP).—Station WOI's new broadcasting studios at Iowa State College, recently completed, are located on the third floor of the recently completed Service Building. New facilities include two large studios, for dramatic and orchestra programs, an announcer's studio, a large reception room and offices for the staff.

Studio walls are of the "V-ed" type, with many angles, in order to avoid large, flat areas. They are sound-proofed with a new material made from expanded mica, an inch in thickness. Studios are equipped with new three-pattern microphones, which can be used in any type of broadcast. Each of the large studios has a grand piano.

The signal-strength of the new 5,000-watt transmitter makes it possible for the station to be heard easily at every corner of the state. The new sending equipment, embodying a number of automatic features, has the first streamlined panel ever to be installed by the manufacturer. Despite the fact that it will consume less power than the equipment it replaces, the new transmitter will send WOI broadcasts further and with greater strength.

The new, 15-ton steel antenna is 400 feet, or about 33 stories, high. Nine miles of wire are buried radially from its base to form a system which properly "grounds" the outgoing radio waves.

Survey Poll Shows Interesting Results

Austin, Tex.—(I.P.)—Two recent polls conducted by Student Opinion Surveys revealed that two to one, American college students would attend classes at their own discretion, and that students desire compulsory courses in sex education.

Results from eighty-four colleges over the nation heavily favored the University of Chicago's plan whereby a student attends classes whenever he feels it necessary, the poll showed. Students were asked whether or not they favored abolition of compulsory class attendance.

Sectionally, the Eastern group of colleges were strongest in favor of abolition, the surveys held. In the West Central section, which includes Chicago, however, a bare majority—53.8 per cent—would do away with roll-calling.

The intercollegiate opinion poll regarding compulsory sex education declared that 62 per cent of the students favored making "frank" courses in sex education a part of the college curriculum.

The surveys pointed out that several colleges now offer courses designed to help students pick the best kind of husband or wife.

Largest opposition to the compulsory courses was among women in the South and West, the surveys stated.

New Idea For Peace Told At Williams

Would Advertise Peace Like Any Other Article

Williamstown, Mass. (ACP).—Sell peace to the United States through a giant advertising program to be financed by asking each citizen to pay a dollar for the campaign's expenses.

This was the new peace proposal made to Williams College undergraduates by Paul Hollister, executive vice-president of R. H. Macy & Co. of New York City.

"Using the classic technique of modern advertising, let us buy one-fifteenth of the total time and resources of the advertising people and media owners of the country and mobilize them," said the department store executive.

"They will prepare and carry on the most educational, dramatic and urgent campaign of which they are capable, but their product will not be a can of food, a bar of soap, or a motor car, or a health examination. Their product will be peace—America's active self-interest in keeping at peace. They will duly place this copy before the American people as they alone best can.

"If the product be meritorious, neither you nor I dare say that the response would not be proportionate to the response to any other expert advertising effort. To know securely that our nation was guaranteed to peace for at least a year would certainly be worth a dollar a head. Advertising could do that at regular rates. Advertising could do it splendidly in my judgment, for a quarter of that sum, but I don't want to see advertising handicapped for want of funds with which to seek out every citizen and convert him, from a passive indifferent to our prod into an active addict.

"That is my idea of a major task, wor tackling. It is high time that open-fac American advertising taught the Goe bels-minded propagandists an object son in public education," he added.

Ev Bailey Elected Ski Union Head

Plans Made for A U. V. M. Ski Jump

U. V. M. Ski Co-captain Ev Bailey '40 at the business meeting terminating the annual intercollegiate meet, was elected president of the Intercollegiate Ski Union. The ski union, which this year held its meet at Northfield, Vt., under the auspices of Norwich University, is made up of the ski teams of twenty-five leading colleges of eastern North America banded together for the purpose of formulating standard regulations and better coordination in intercollegiate competition.

Vermont in Top Team

The union is divided into an intermediate and senior section. The senior division of which the University of Vermont is a member, is made up of the ten top ranking ski teams and the intermediate group is comprised of the remaining fifteen teams. To enable proper rating of team value the top two teams of the intermediate competition annually exchange places with the bottom two teams of the senior division competition. Following the annual meets the two groups hold a business meeting in which the intermediate group elects the vice-president and the senior group elects the president. These two officials along with a union secretary and treasurer maintain contacts with the union member teams throughout the year and arrange for intercollegiate meets. Ev Bailey is the first U. V. M. man to ever hold this office.

Big Colleges Represented

Participating in the senior competition Friday and Saturday were the ski teams of Dartmouth, Harvard, Williams, U. V. M., McGill, University of Maine, Norwich University, University of New Hampshire, Middlebury College, and Montreal College. Dartmouth won its sixth consecutive championship, followed by McGill and the University of New Hampshire. McLane and Simpter, Dartmouth stars, placed first, respectively, in cross-country and jumping meets.

Not faring very well this year, the U. V. M. team unexpectedly slipped to eighth position in the senior rank. The Vermont stave riders were handicapped in preparing for the competition by lack of a suitable jumping hill. Also, whereas many of their collegiate competitors were experienced skiers from prep school, several of the Catamount skiers were initiated into ski competition only while attending U. V. M.

Co-captains Ev Bailey and Pete Patch feel that if tentative plans for constructing a ski jump at Underhill or at a suitable site in Burlington, go through, they and their teammates will be able to undergo the proper preparation to produce a top-ranking team. Counting on a new jump, profit from this year's meets and a possible addition of an experienced skier, the boys feel capable of attaining honors in next year's annual Intercollegiate Ski Union meet which might be held here in Burlington.

Track Men Asked To Report At Gym

All men interested in track, regardless of their class, are asked to report to the cage for practice every day from Monday through Friday. Runners should report from four to five and field men from five to six.

Also it will enable those who must fill requirements for intramural distance running, hexathlon, and relays to do so. The requirements are that no man can compete in such events without having had at least six workouts on the track.

These sessions will be held under the watchful eyes of Roy Wietz, frosh track coach, and Archie Post, varsity track coach.

Annual Masquerade Is Colorful Affair

Reynolds' Music Is Broadcast Over WCAX

By Nancy Goodwin

The Kake Walk Masquerade was, as far as we are concerned, one of the biggest high spots in our week-end. Of course, this was Herbert's first glimmer of U. V. M. campus, and, if I do say so, he seemed mighty impressed by the whole set-up.

Of course, it was rather a shock for him when I came down to the living room, dressed in my tennis clothes, turned around backwards. He said he had heard of some parts of Vermont being "backwoods" districts, but didn't think it would have that kind of an effect on me. Well, we swept up to the gym, and I had to take my sun glasses off, so I really could see who was there. For the hall was practically dark—and all the lights were focussed upon Tommy Reynolds and his band. There were small colored lights along the upstairs balcony and funny circles playing all over the walls and floor. 'Course, I didn't tell Herbert, but it took me the longest time to see where these lights really came from. It seems they had hung two huge crystal balls, made up of thousands of small pieces, on which different colored spotlights played, as they revolved. In the center of the hall streamers came down from either side forming a huge V (standing for Vermont). Bill Koch, so they tell me, drew those big cartoons of the masquerade, which hung on the walls, and behind the band was a huge picture of two darkies kake-walking.

What a Band

And what a band! You know Herbert always has told me that he was a smoogoo dancer, and it grieves me to the bottom of my heart now that I have always doubted him. It seems that we just haven't danced to the right bands before, because Friday night his dancing was divine! Something about the rhythm, the style of the band, and most of all the clarinet of Tommy's. Weren't those special numbers featuring his clarinet pretty wonderful? I admit I don't know the fine points of all this harmonizing and stuff. I certainly do hope someone'll write up a good technical explanation. All we know is that we could listen to a band like that and dance and dance "the whole night through" without getting tired.

Tommy Crowns King and Queen

Then Tommy crowned the king and queen. They certainly made a fine couple. It made me think of the last time I bought my spring bonnet, the way Tommy crowned Sally—he'd put on the crown, then back away and squint—tilt it one-sixteenth of an inch to the right—back away and squint again! I happened to turn around while everybody was watching this procedure. Honestly, I thought I had seen some pretty realistic costumes, but when Quasi Modo (Reddington Pease) came to life and stood right behind me! They had a grand march to choose the best costumes and I guess Quasi even frightened the judges, because he and his girl got first prize! A freight man (Merns Puffer) and his parcel post package (Prett Brayton '42) came in second, and a cute Scotch couple (Sam Putnam '43 and Jane Thesher '43) got third prize.

Mr. Millikan Speaks to Young People's Group

Mr. G. L. Millikan of the political science department spoke to the Methodist Young People's group on Sunday night, February 25, on the subject of "Ethical Questions in the Attitude Towards War."

Dr. Ralph Sockman Speaks At Vespers

Capacity Congregation Hears Noted Theologian

Parents, alumni and students filled to capacity the Ira Allen Chapel Sunday afternoon, February 25, to hear the guest speaker, Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, of the Christ's Methodist Episcopal Church of New York. In addition to being the recipient of many honorary degrees, Doctor Sockman has been the intercollegiate secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, president of the Federation of Churches, director of Union Theological Seminary and of the New York University and New York Medical College, and is now a member of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Rev. E. A. Parkhurst of Williston read the scripture and Rev. R. A. Hall, assistant professor of English, introduced the guest speaker.

Doctor Sockman's message centered around words from the Lord's Prayer, "deliver us from evil." Evil surrounds us in many forms and the solution to all this lies in the Bible, which is a drama of deliverance. This, in turn, is divided into four acts of which the first is "group deliverance." Mr. Sockman said that we could rally people around their hatreds but not around their loves. Act two is "individual deliverance," bringing out the fact that we, alone, cannot deliver our own selves. Act three is described as "deliverance by Christ" in which the stronger bear the burdens of the weak. In the last act Doctor Sockman said that God suffers also and illustrated his point by the play "Green Pastures."

Doctor Sockman is an enthusiastic, powerful speaker, and had a truly inspiring effect on his audience.

The choir sang two selections, "Jesu Dulcius Memoria," by Vittoria, and a hymn with the tune from St. Matthew's Passion Chorale, by Bach.

Prof. Dykhuizen In Indianapolis

His address will be given before members of a women's organization of the Indiana Farm Bureau. Professor Dykhuizen has spoken a number of times recently in widely separated parts of the country on subjects concerning the social philosophy of agriculture, appearing in New York, Massachusetts, Illinois and Iowa.

King Mark and Queen Sally Reign Over Kake Walk Crowd

The Memorial Auditorium rang with the familiar strains of "Cotton Babes" Saturday night as the forty-third annual Kake Walk was ushered in by an enthusiastic crowd of students, alumni and parents. Sally Rome '42 and Mark O'Toole '42 reigned as queen and king of the festivities. Big moment of the evening came when the high-stepping Delta Psi's, R. P. Davis '41 and E. F. Roby '41, danced their way to the first prize, the coveted Boulder cup. Second in kake walking were the Sigma Phi's represented by C. W. Utter '41 and R. J. Hamilton '42, who received the new Hayes and Carney cup. Honorable mention went to C. Joseph '43 and C. Itzkowitz '42 of the Tau Epsilon Phi's.

The stunts were all about world events or else made use of local happenings this year. The Sigma Nu's took first prize, consisting of the Briggs cup and a check of $50, awarded by the directors for a timely skit called "Hell Freezes Over." The devil was represented as calling up Chamberlain and other well-known world figures. Chamberlain was quoted as saying he would not give up his umbrella till hell froze over. In the course of the skit several satirical comments on Hitler and Stalin were made and the skit ended with a view of the dove of peace and Chamberlain's umbrella by a frozen hell.

"Tin Pan Alley"

"Tin Pan Valley," the Sigma Phi's skit, took second prize. It was a humorous comment on the activities of the Vermont Symphony Orchestra. Various people were shown leaving their work to rush to practice and soon the haunting strains of Beethoven are heard only to merge suddenly into a riotous jam session. Second prize was the Southwick cup.

The Phi Delta Theta's took honorable mention with their skit entitled "College Daze" which verged onto the medical with the representation of a nightmarish yet very humorous operation.

This year's Kake Walk was outstanding for its unique innovations. The R. O. T. C. Band, under the capable direction of Joseph Lechnyr, was attired in brand new satin uniforms of orange and black. Each player also was appropriately made up in black face and black wig.

For the third time in the history of Kake Walk a feminine team appeared. Betty Myers '40 and Gloria Farrell '43 made history as they performed an exhibition routine fully as expert as that of the male kake walkers.

Mark O'Toole as king of the Kake Walk addressed the gathering and expressed his appreciation to all his loyal supporters following which Prof. B. F. Ladd presented the awards.

Band Gets Kake

Besides the regular awards cakes went to the R. O. T. C. Band and the exhibition kake walkers. Judges of the stunts were V. Spencer Goodreds, Walter John Coates, and Dean George F. Eckhard. The judges of the kake walkin' were Prof. P. B. Willis, Warren R. Austin, Jr., and Prof. J. E. Pooley.

Especial credit goes to Production Director Carl H. Schofield '40 and R. W. Robinson '40, financial director, who put so much effort into making this one of Vermont's most successful Kake Walks.

The appearance of the first issue of Ira's Folly at the Kake Walk was especially appropriate as the issue featured the event and served as a remembrance of its

EDITORIALS

Defense for "The Greeks"

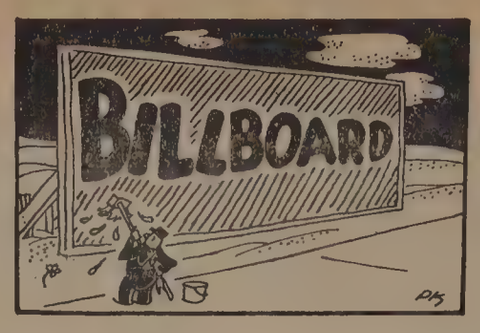
Much has been said both pro and con in regard to fraternity and sorority life on the campuses of the colleges of the United States and it is not surprising that the issue has been revived recently. The March second issue of The Saturday Evening Post contains much food for thought relative to the matter.

In it Margaret Weymouth Jackson, herself a Pi Beta Phi, strangely enough presents the case for the non-fraternity group in her short story, "Goon Castle" while Fred H. Turner, Dean of the Men at the University of Illinois, presents the other side in his illuminating article, "And Some Are Chosen."

"Goon Castle" is the story of an attractive young girl of eighteen who enrolls at college with her heart set on going sorority and then, much to her disappointment, is not offered a bid. She and her parents feel badly about the matter and she is on the point of withdrawing from school when she decides to stick it out and see what college is like from the dormitory angle. With this as a background Mrs. Jackson goes on to describe the young lady's experiences and winds up her story by flaunting the problems of the "Greeks" and glorifying the "barbs."

It seems to us that Mrs. Jackson must have led an especially unhappy life as an undergraduate student or else her senses of value and proportion are badly warped. Her story paints the typical sorority girl as a common snob who practically refuses to speak to an independent. We can not speak for the hundreds of campuses in the United States but we can speak with some authority for Vermont.

There are sorority members and independent women students at the University of Vermont but this writer has never seen the slightest trace of friction or snobbery between the two groups. And as for the other accusations Mrs. Jackson brings against fraternity life, we feel that they too are groundless—at least as far as Vermont is concerned.



Possibly because the writer is a fraternity man (although we have tried to look at the matter impartially), we feel that Dean Turner's attitude is much safer and saner. He realizes the faults of the fraternity indeed but also points out that it is serving a valuable purpose on the American campus.

It is our belief that the average fraternity is exactly what the men in it make it. The system may have its faults but then, pray tell us, what social system devised to date is faultless? The fraternity system today is teaching its members valuable lessons in democracy. We say this after several years in close contact with the system and, we feel, with some basis for truth.

Some will answer that fraternities are for the better class. They will contend that many students do not go fraternity because of lack of funds. To those who say this we reply that their arguments are utter nonsense. That student who has his heart set on a fraternity will find a way to afford it no matter how thin his purse.

Here at Vermont fraternities and sororities play a vitally important role on the campus. They not only teach their members true democracy but they also fulfill a definite need as far as housing conditions are concerned. Where would U. V. M. students board and room were it not for the Greek letter organizations, pray tell us? It really would be a problem.

You may have some grounds for argument, Mrs. Jackson, but we fear that they have no basis here. We'll stick with Dean Turner if you please.

Attention all aspiring future Medical students! The blanks for application to the Medical College are now available at the Medical Dean's office. No application will be considered if the form has not been completely made out. All sorts of questions are asked to verify the ability of the applicant. Two photographs must be included also. Kake Walk Royalty Consent to Interview

Mark and Sally Answer Reporter's Questions

Their Majesties the King and Queen of Kake Walk took time off from their royal duties on Saturday to give an interview to the one newspaper which their domain affords, the CYNIC. The royal couple, who were elected by popular vote after a short but strenuous campaign, are both from out of state, King Mark O'Toole, of the class of '42, being from Leominster, Mass., and Queen Sally Rome, also '42, from Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. However, they both agreed immediately on one thing—U. V. M. is an ideal university because it is small and friendly. The king was influenced to come here by one of Vermont's former football coaches, and has never regretted his choice.

Since the interview took place just before the game, the talk naturally turned to sports. Queen Sally professed a special liking for basketball and football and the king followed suit, adding that he likes football both as a spectator and a participant. They both like swimming as a summer sport, but Sally feels at a disadvantage because she can't seem to learn to dive. (Imagine a queen diving, anyway.)

Both Lead Active Lives

Both of them declared that nothing very exciting had ever happened to them up to now, except that the king once got lost in a subway when he was ten years old. But they've both had plenty of activity, Queen Sally being a sophomore aide, secretary of the Y. W. C. A., a campus manager of tennis, and vice-president of the Newman Club. She is enrolled in the social science course, being greatly interested in social service work. King Mark was president of his class last year, played freshman football and was manager for Clark Nichols, last year's Kake Walk king. He is a member of Kappa Sigma and is taking commerce and economics.

The royal pair disagreed on one particular thing—the king enjoyed giving speeches during his campaign (he's going into the business of politics after college, which proves that he must like speech-making), but the queen liked this part of campaigning least of all. They both "had a grand time" at the masquerade, and greatly enjoyed Tommy Reynolds and his orchestra.

This brought us to the question of "favorites" and again there was a wide diversity of tastes. Sally's favorite actress is Loretta Young and her favorite actors are "all of them, especially Clark Gable." Mark chose Spencer Tracy and Bette Davis, and here an interesting fact came to light. Mark went to the same prep school that Bette Davis did, and had the lead in a play which was under the direction of Lois Cann who once coached Bette Davis.

Sweets to the Sweet

Tastes in food seemed to run to sweet things. Queen Sally admitted that she can't cook anything but fudge, but loves to eat pies and layer cakes. The king boasts of being a good apple-pie maker, and likes his own better than anybody else's. He detests fish. Speaking of fish led the conversation to fishing, hunting, etc., and the king recalled that the only time he ever went hunting, he shot three times and missed every time.

Various other bits of information came to light slowly. The queen hates to write letters, and the king hates to get up early in the morning (those eight-o'clock classes again). She likes waltzes and slow, soft music; he prefers the modern swing and small doses of light opera. Neither of them has ever been up in an airplane, but both would like to go. King Mark admitted that he is a poor gambler, having won only once when playing the nickel machines. Queen Sally would give anything to be able to skate well, but her ankles are weak so she sticks to skiing and sleigh rides, of which she is especially fond.

Upon one thing they both agreed—being elected Their Majesties of Kake Walk was the greatest thrill of their lives. Whereupon the king remembered that he had to go home and write a speech to present to his loyal subjects at the festivities on Saturday night, so the interview came to an end. And although Kake Walk itself is over now, this year's handsome king and his gracious queen will long be remembered on our Vermont campus as playing their parts with majestic grace.

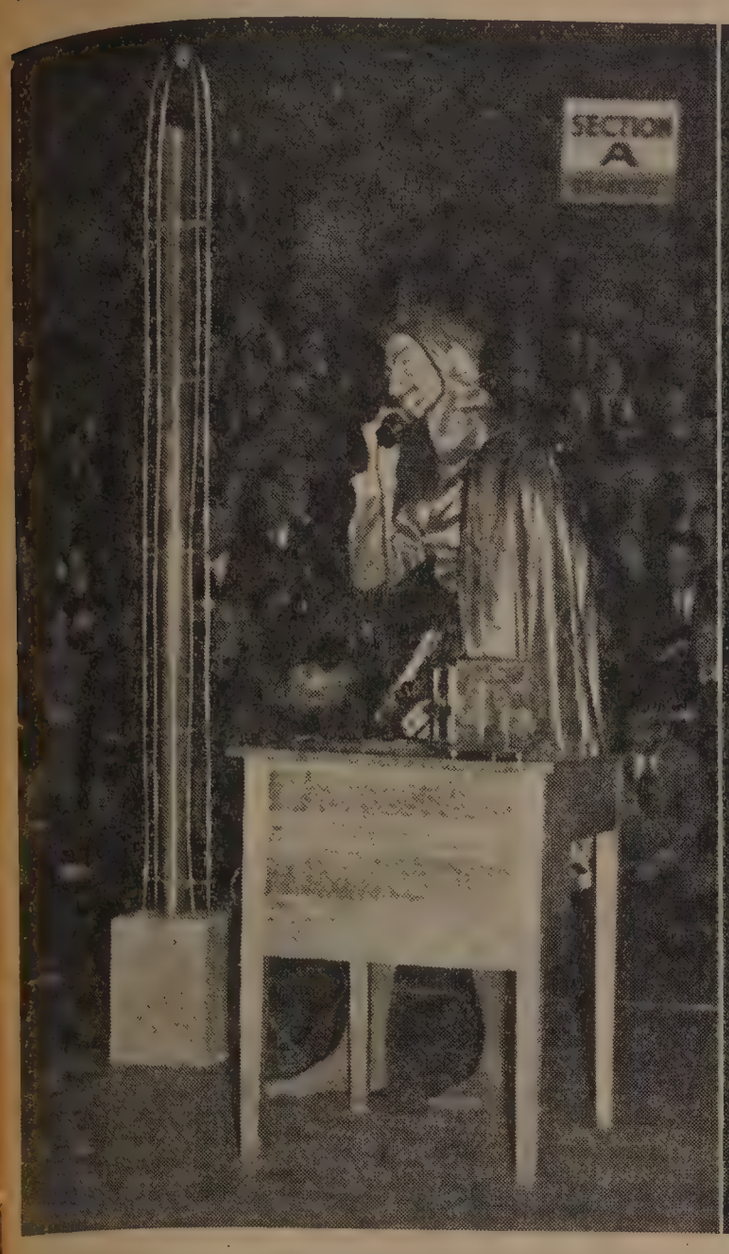
Opportunity Given For Athletic Feats

Hexalthon Competition Coming Next Month

The tentative dates for the hexathlon championship have now been set. They are March 16 and 18. This means that there is not much time left for preparation. Practice is an essential element in order to make a good showing in this competition. A man does not have to be a world-beater or superman in order to cop the prize. Just a little honest effort and much practice in events in which the participant is presumably weakest will go far towards putting him in the upper stratum of the competitors.



Three entries have been received already. They are Lyman Gallup '41, who was high man for his freshman class in the Couzens test, Arthur Clark '40, and Frank Swift '43. Both L. Gallup and A. Clark have competed in the hexathlon before. It is expected that such men as Johnny Spasyk and Frank Taylor will also register shortly.

The winner of last year's competition, Dave Jones, is still in school, but is at present entangled in the web of scholastic difficulties. Another of last years entrants, Frank Livak, due to his skiing activities, is still undecided as to his entry.

Men contemplating entrance should get their names in to Archie Post as soon as possible, so that workouts can be checked off, and coaching can be extended to them on their weak points.

In the last two or three years, the number of competitors has not been up to par. Last year was the worst with a miserable low of three entrants. The actual severity of the test does not warrant such a small number of enthusiasts. It is felt by the physical education department that unless the response to this excellent type of competition is greater this year, it may be dropped altogether. All men, if physically possible, should take advantage of this marvelous opportunity to show what they really can do.

Cats End Season By Beating Trinity

Belardinelli Scores To Break 46-46 Tie

Putting an exciting finish on an unexciting basketball season, Vermont nosed out Trinity in the Kake Walk game with a score of 48-46. Anse Belardinelli put a fitting climax on his brilliant career on the Vermont court by scoring twenty points, including the last basket just as the gun sounded.

The Catamounts started the afternoon's performance and with Anse setting the pace, got an eleven-point lead over the Hilltoppers. Suddenly Trinity's team pulled itself together and before the Cats had made any more plays Ray Thomsen and Jack Crockett had heaved in enough long shots to bring the score up to 21-17 in their favor. Bill Pye came in at that point, replacing Belardinelli, and dropped in a step shot; and Corley scored a couple of foul shots. But Thomsen, Crockett, and Linder outdid them, giving a score at the half of 26-21.

For the first few minutes of the second half things went on as before, with the Hilltoppers gradually increasing their lead. Then in a series of rapid plays Belardinelli made a step shot, Frankie Taylor a foul shot, and Anse another one when he received a fast pass from Corley, under the basket. Healy stepped in for two points to tie the score up at 33-all. The pace became terrific, with Crockett and Belardinelli making shots by turns and fouls being called constantly. Healy of the Cats and Ferguson of Trinity took to the benches for fouls, and Randall of the Hilltoppers escaped going out as the official scorer had him down for only three personals (he admitted to four, himself). A moment later this was reversed when Frankie Taylor had four personals officially, although opinion had it that he had only three.

Corley scored two in a row and Pye converted a foul shot, but Randall, Thomsen, and Crockett evened things up again. With seconds to play, Anse took Don Maley's pass at the center of the court, turned, paused, and threw the ball. It went through the basket just as the gun sounded. Stunned, the crowd was silent for a split second, then broke into a roar.

The box score was as follows:

Corley Elected Captain By Cats

Wright Chosen To Succeed Wysolmerski

Paul Corley has been elected captain of next year's basketball team, succeeding Frank Taylor of Brattleboro. Corley lives in Burlington, was a basketball star at Cathedral High, and captain of that team during his senior year. Now he is a junior at U. V. M., studying business. He is a member of Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

Corley has been a member of the varsity team for two years, playing regular left forward this season. He has made a total of 122 points in fifteen games, scoring twenty-five in one game.

Sabin C. Abell, graduate manager of athletics, also announced the managers elected for next year. W. H. Wright, a junior pre-med and an A. T. O. from Middletown, Conn., will serve as manager. He succeeds J. M. Wysolmerski of West Rutland. W. A. Gage of Burlington, a junior in the college of agriculture, will be freshman manager.

The elections brought a three-way tie for assistant manager when J. S. Burgess, R. B. Hunting, and D. L. Moran received an equal number of votes. The Athletic Council will decide on how to break the tie.

Nine players earned letters this year. Only two are seniors—Anse Belardinelli and E. F. Hawkins. The others are as follows: Capt. Frank Taylor, Capt.-Elect Paul Corley, Ace Healey, Don Maley, and Bill Pye, juniors; and Les Brown and Red White, sophomores.

Quotable Quotes

By Associated Collegiate Press

"The unit we must work with is the individual human being, and we are coming to understand that the student can't be subdivided either. It won't do to deal with his intellectual side alone and neglect his health and morale; we must reckon with his esthetic and emotional side, and by intelligent guidance help him adjust himself to the real world in which he must live. Educators have been saying these things for years, now they are beginning to act as if they believed them." Dr. Frederick P. Keppel, Carnegie Corporation president, commends our teachers for their new educational policies.

Since the first establishment of baseball as a college sport, some 500 institutions have organized and then discontinued it.

Aftermath

Kake Walk with its joys, its disappointments, and, above all, its surprises is over. And so is the University of Vermont basketball season which also was replete with joys, disappointments, and surprises (not ranked in the proper order of dominance). The victory over a strong Trinity team last Saturday afternoon in the Kake Walk prelim tinted an unsuccessful season with a somewhat rosy glow. Most of the glow was provided by Anso Belardinelli who brought his U. V. M. basketball career to a brilliant finish by tossing in 20 points, the last two of which, contributed in the last few seconds of action, won the ball game for the Catamounts.

We are in rather an awkward position as we write this column. First of all, we were prohibited from witnessing the Trinity game by our Kake Walk manager who possesses the motherly instinct. Secondly, we are as yet unaware of the accurate outcome of the International Ski Union meet at Norwich. And thirdly, the tingling haze of a hectically marvelous week-end still inshrouds us.

Better go to sleep.

Four Champs Defend Wrestling Titles

Of the six men who won titles in wrestling last year it is highly probable that four will compete again this year. Thus it may be seen two titles will be open. Frank Livak, 165-pound champion, 1939, has centered his attention upon skiing, while Ed Kodys will be unable to defend his 175-pound title, due to an injury sustained this past fall upon the gridiron.

In the 135-pound class Sumner Cohen will again be defending his title. The 145-pound class sees Herb Chesney returning, the 155-pound class has Ed Eaton and in the unlimited class Alex Warden.

For the men interested in competing in the March tournament, the mats will be available for practicing daily at four o'clock. Supervised class instruction is given on Tuesday and Thursday at four, and all men are urged to take advantage of such.

The University of Vermont next year will celebrate the 150th anniversary of its founding.

W. A. A. Notes

On March 5, at 7.30, W. A. A. will hold its big annual splash party at the Y. M. on College Street. This is one of the biggest sports parties that W. A. A. holds, and is open to everyone. An admission of 25 cents is charged to all those who wish to swim, and 10 cents to those who just come to watch. But it is expected that most everyone will swim, as the pool is large and very modern, one of the finest in this vicinity.

The get-together is combined with the intercollegiate telegraphic swim meet which is being held all over the country from February 5 to March 15, sponsored by the University of Pennsylvania. There are about eight girls on the swim team here at U. V. M. and all will compete in the different races and individual medleys of 40, 60 and 100 yards, which will be conducted as at a regular swim meet, and the scores and timing will be telegraphed to U. of Pa.

There will also be exhibition diving and many novelty races, in which anyone can enter. The latter will, no doubt, draw many laughs—people swimming the length of the pool with a candle in their mouth, swimming fully dressed, etc.

So be sure and remember the date, March 5, and come and have an evening of fun at the Y pool.

Play Day

A play day will be held March 2 for all the high schools in the vicinity. The girls will be welcomed in the early afternoon, and many of the elementary education girls will help Miss Hazard supervise the activities during the afternoon. There will be ping-pong and dancing upstairs and a basketball or volleyball game or relays in the gym. Supper will be served at six, with freshmen who have been to play day previous years acting as hostesses.

Basketball

Friday afternoon the B tournament final was played off when Robinson beat the Etc.'s and Redstone by a score of 15-9. The Etc.'s had five girls on the team, and played a fine game.

The A tournament, Etc.'s against Town Team, will be played off Tuesday, February 27.

Notice

At four, Thursday afternoon, the All-Sports Club, the Health Council and the winners of the inter-dorm basketball tournaments will have their pictures taken for the Ariel. Be there promptly at four!

The jam session ended at two o'clock and if I do say so—it was a swell dance. Herbert said if things continued at the high speed at which they were going then, and with as much success, he'd really think about accepting a professorship here any day! And judging the rest of the week-end, I'd say my friend from New York would be a professor right soon!

Gov. Aiken to Speak To I. R. C. Wednesday

International Relations Club is sponsoring an open meeting on Wednesday at which Governor Aiken will speak. The meeting will be held in the main auditorium of Southwick and will begin at 8 p.m.

Vermont's chief executive will speak on "The Danger to America of Entrance into War." Following the meeting, the I. R. C. will continue its usual custom of open forum at which time the governor will answer questions from the floor.

T. R. Huntley '41, president of I. R. C., wishes to stress the fact that this meeting is open to anyone. These open meetings have in the past been very well attended and the public has enjoyed the opportunity of questioning the speaker on his subject.

All members of the International Relations Club are urged to be present on Wednesday night. And everyone is cordially invited.

Independents Lose To Phi Delta Theta

In the playoff for the hockey championship, the Phi Delta Theta skaters beat the Independents 2-0 in a hard, fast, but exceptionally clean game. This was a very interesting contest to watch.

In the basketball championship playoff, the Kappa Sigma team nosed out the Sigma Nu team by a scant one point. An unusual feature of the Kappa Sig's winning the crown was that they won both playoff games by one point. Both contests were very well played.

Annual Free Throw Contest This Week

The interfraternity team free throow championship is scheduled for Friday and Saturday of this week.

The minimum number of men that can compete for a house is five, the maximum number is ten. This is a distinctly intramural event and the only men NOT eligible to compete are varsity basketball men.

Inasmuch as competition in other fields will be light now, it is urged that every fraternity put out a team.

This non-exhaustive competition should appeal to both active and passive athletes alike.

Attention is called to one of the big events of the Vermont winter season. The Outing Club skating carnival will be held this Thursday evening at the U. V. M. rink. A large attendance is urged.

Oberlin College seniors vote for the person they want to address them at their commencement exercises.

Gov. Aiken Gives Opinion of World Conditions at I. R. C.

Broadcast of Talk Followed by Forum On Similar Topics

Gov. George D. Aiken addressed a meeting of the International Relations Club of the University of Vermont on Wednesday night at Southwick. To a sizeable audience which included State Senator Macomber, a judge and a number of other notables, the state's chief executive spoke on "The Danger to America of Entrance into War."

The speech was broadcast over the local radio station, WCAX, and the governor was introduced by T. R. Huntley '41, president of I. R. C. Governor Aiken preceded his talk by the remark that any observations of his upon international affairs would be from a layman's point of view.

In Event of Neutrality

He said that we may expect pressure for preparation of all sorts, particularly with regard to arms, machines and increase in personnel of army, navy and air force. There will be increased orders for implements and equipment both for other nations and ourselves.

We may expect a greater concentration of governmental authority. We may look for bills carrying riders giving extra governmental power and an increase in propaganda, truthful or otherwise. The governor remarked that there was no question about personal sympathies, if one can judge by the raising of the tariff against Germany. He also noted the dramatic presentation of diplomatic contacts with other countries, such as the Welles' visit and the naming of Taylor as ambassador to the Vatican. By next fall, says the governor, we may expect a more tense situation, both national and international, because of the election.

In Event of War

Governor Aiken feels convinced that a dictatorship would be enforced and that the president, whoever he might be, would receive absolute totalitarian control. This would extend to:

1. Commodity control.
2. Industry.
3. Natural resources.
4. Labor and agriculture.

Then he raised the question of whether these powers would be returned to the people afterwards. Said the governor, "There is an international trend toward centralization of power—the giving away of authority in order to get rid of responsibility."

Business today is opposing war, as are the people. To stay out of war, the governor recommends the following policies:

1. That the United States be friendly with other nations, especially neighboring ones.

2. That our own people be reasonably prosperous, united, patriotic and self-governing.

3. That our best defense be the proof that democracy is the best form of government.

Following Governor Aiken's speech, an open forum was held in which the speaker answered a number of questions.

Chapel Speaker Rev. E. O. Babcock

The Rev. E. O. Babcock of Burlington, secretary of the Vermont Church Council, was the chapel speaker Wednesday, February 28. He briefly summarized a Lenten play entitled "The Man Who Makes Crosses" and said that we, too, build crosses today. Jesus lay on a cross that was transfigured by love to a thing of beauty. If we, like the man who helped Jesus carry the cross, step out from the crowd and help friend or stranger, we, too, will find love, courage, and purpose in living.

Peace Representative Visits U. V. M. Campus

Miss Mary Morrissett, representative of the American Friends' Service Committee, has been on campus Thursday and today. Her visit here was for the purpose of interviewing students who were interested in doing volunteer peace work this summer.

This work is largely composed of campaigning throughout the country for the cause of peace and it seems that special note should be given to the fact that the traveling representatives are younger people, mostly of college age, who are interested in such a cause.

Pre-Medical Society Hears Prof. Jordan

Advisor Points Out Qualifications Needed

Prof. Hovey Jordan, professor of histology and embryology of the Medical College, addressed the Pre-Medical Society in a meeting at the Fleming Museum, Tuesday evening. Professor Jordan has consented to act as faculty advisor of the newly organized society.

Following a brief introduction by L. A. Janoff '40, presiding chairman of the meeting, Professor Jordan, who is a member of the admissions committee of the Medical College, spoke both to the pre-medical students who are applying to the Medical College this year and to those who are to apply in succeeding years.

Increasing Responsibility

The medical field is branching out and with it the responsibility of the medical student increases. Professor Jordan urged the students to consider seriously and honestly their motives for wishing to study medicine. (The motive most often received from students is that medicine is a profession in which the most can be done for humanity.) The record of those students who are applying for medicine this year has been already made, Professor Jordan stated, and he discussed the three categories which this record includes, namely, aptitude test, scholastic record, and personal qualifications.

Professor Jordan discussed the aptitude test and its value. Devised by the American Medical Association, it has been copied by law schools and applied in other educational fields. This test is generally, with individual exceptions, considered a good index as to the possible failure or success of the student in medicine. As to scholastic grades the ideal average is at least a B— since 75 is the passing grade in medicine, and if a good average is maintained on the academic side the student is likely to succeed in medical school.

Personality Important

The person himself, whether his personality, character, and aptitude are adaptable to medicine, as well as his honesty of purpose, knowledge and skill, Professor Jordan mentioned as being perhaps even more important than the scholastic grades, and the aptitude test.

To those students who will apply to the Medical College in succeeding years Professor Jordan spoke of the choice of electives. The first pre-medical curriculum consisted entirely of required subjects but has been reorganized on a three-year basis, since the American Medical Association recommends the liberalization of science with liberal, cultural courses and their broadening influence. Political science, social science courses, business courses, and history courses were suggested. It is essential, Professor Jordan said, that certain traits be acquired on the academic side such as powers of observation, sensible reasoning, logical conclusions, cooperation, tolerance in social viewpoints, a scientific viewpoint and intellectual honesty.

Professor Jordan showed the pre-medical students a wooden balance and a pill-making board which had been used by his grandfather who had graduated from the Medical College in Woodstock, Vt.

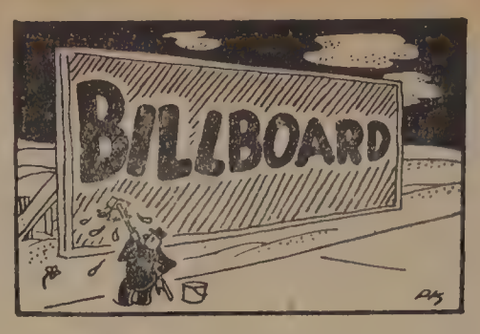
EDITORIALS

Swansong

Fruitlessly we have been sitting for some time now, staring dreamily at the typewriter, wondering what to say and how to say it. Quite a few minutes ago we rolled a sheet of paper into the machine, labelled it "Editorial," and began to type. The words came slowly for a host of visions were before us and, as the keys spelled out their message, old memories came back to haunt us.

As they danced before us melancholy descended. It gripped the machine, the keys, and the writer. The tapping of the keys ended and the paper was ripped from the typewriter. The first attempt had been made in vain. That was neither the thing to say nor the way to say it. But there seemed so much to be said and yet, somehow, we felt decidedly inadequate when we tried to say it.

Rolling another sheet of paper into the machine, we paused to consider the situation. Our military training insisted on an "Estimate of the Situation." Fair enough, let's consider the matter carefully. First of all, this is our last editorial. Secondly, we are indebted to the entire staff for the fine spirit of cooperation shown throughout the past year. Third, we desire to wish the incoming staff the best of good luck for the coming year.



Endless other matters are also involved. These other matters complicate the situation considerably. The faculty, the student body, and the administration all enter the picture. Each of the three have assisted the staff in their undertaking which was to present an unbiased account of college life at the University of Vermont.

We realized when our duties first began that Vermont is a democratic university. We were also aware of the fact that to preserve the ideals of democracy was our most important function. Toward that end have we labored. Our heritage was a priceless one and we hope that it has not suffered in our hands.

Enough of that. The estimate has been completed—now to get to the matter at hand. We shall waste no time discussing the fact that this is our last editorial. As for the staff and its spirit of cooperation, that spirit has been an inspiration to the writer. Led by an incomparable managing editor, Mary Cobb Nelson, the staff has functioned with gratifying efficiency. It has left little to be asked for.

Lastly, we desire to extend our best wishes to the new staff. For the first time in history the CYNIC is to have a woman editor-in-chief. This is nothing to apologize for because the young lady who will edit the paper for the next year has earned the position by hard work and splendid ability. The remainder of the staff are equally deserving of their respective positions.

Leave-taking is now in order but before we depart we feel that we should make one last comment. Each year the number of men on the CYNIC grows smaller. The result is that the paper is fast becoming a women's publication. This is unfortunate for a university paper should reflect the minds of the entire student body. This is impossible with a staff composed of a few men and many women. We appeal to the men in an effort to remedy the situation. We do not mean that next year's editor is not equipped for her work for her qualifications are indeed excellent. To her and to her staff we say, adieu, good luck, and smooth sailing!

"College men and women are peculiarly the sentinels on the outer walls. There was never more need for clear thinking and courageous doing by college men and women than there is today. We of the universities must more aggressively, more earnestly, more militantly combat these fallacies and heresies and expound and 'sell' representative democracy. It is the bastion of our liberties; and the foundation of our faith must not be undermined." Diplomat Joseph E. Davies (Wisconsin '98) urges collegians to fight the fallacies of today's world.

Museum Exhibiting New Collection Of Modern Works

Until March 25 Art of Foreign, American Painters

Opening today in the Art Gallery of the Fleming Museum is a new exhibit of oil paintings by fourteen modern artists. The collection, assembled through the courtesy of the Milch Gallery, contains pictures valued as high as three thousand five hundred dollars and is circulated by Blanche A. Byerley of Westport, Connecticut.

Among the artists representing are three Russians: Maurice Stern, who came to this country at the age of twelve to study, has traveled extensively in Europe and made a special study of the people of Bali, and whose works appear in art galleries throughout the United States and Europe; Simkha Simkovitch, member of the Brooklyn Society of American Painters and Sculptors and recipient of many awards and prizes; and Louis Ritman who has also won numerous awards for his works.

The rest of the artists whose oil paintings appear in the collection are Americans. The pictures "Summer Day—Woodstock" valued at three thousand five hundred dollars and "Natalie" valued at one thousand five hundred dollars are by Leon Krall whose works are in all of the large museums and important collections in this country. At present he is engaged in an important commission which will take him two years to complete. Francis Speight, whose "Cotton Fields" and "Plowing" appear in the exhibit, is an important American artist with many prizes to his credit and work in many Pennsylvania and New York galleries. Lucille Blanch, artist of "Finuchi" and "Wilson Farm," is a member of several art societies and has also received many awards for her works.

Other artists represented in the collection are Stephen Etnier, Sidney Laufman, Edward Bruze, Robert Philipps, Paul Rohland, Harry Hering, Edith Blum, and James Clymer.

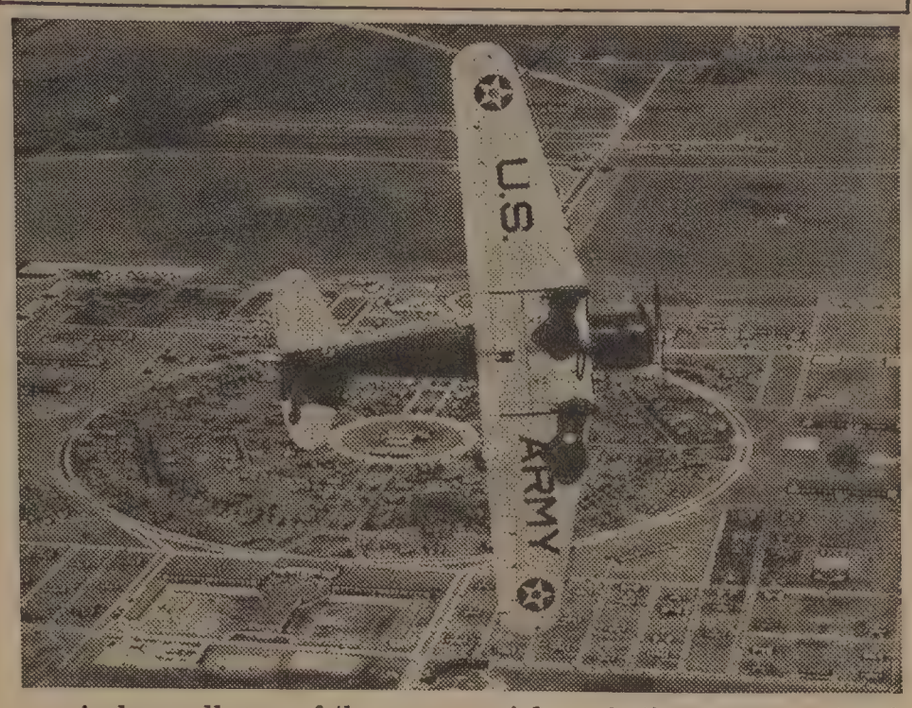
The exhibition is scheduled to remain in the art gallery until March 25.

Professor Reveals Education Problems

Cincinnati, Ohio (ACP)—With less than 5 percent of advanced graduate studies in education in preparation of doctorates and masters' degrees concerned with the problems of some 10,000,000 American school-age children requiring special attention in their schooling, the United States is unprepared to face this situation.

Dr. Carter V. Good, professor of education in the Teachers College, University of Cincinnati, painted this picture of inadequate consideration for the nation's exceptional children in a report prepared for the International Council for Exceptional Children.

His survey traced the extent to which graduate students in education have covered this problem since 1929 and institutions active during the past four years in investigating problems of exceptional children.



Institutions stimulating graduate study and research in this field include Chicago, Columbia, Iowa, Michigan, New York, Ohio State, and Southern California universities, according to Professor Good.

If American school systems in the next decade should decide to provide "reasonably adequate instructional facilities for the approximately 10,000,000 children who need special consideration in the solution of their educational problems," they would find research methods and investigational evidence wholely inadequate for a substantial basis for such a program, Professor Good indicated.

"How and where could a quarter of a million teachers be trained in service and specially prepared new teachers be educated to cope with the situation?" he asked.

"If 1,000 colleges, universities, and teachers colleges should decide to organize courses calculated to assist teachers in dealing with problems of exceptional children from whence would the instructors come?

"Over She Goes!" An Aerial Acrobatic Maneuver by an Army Air Corps Pilot

These gyrations in the clouds include loops, spins, slow rolls, snap rolls, Immelmann turns, and vertical reversements; they are taught each Flying Cadet not for the theatrical effect the aerial stunt may have upon the spectators on the ground, but to teach the student pilot the use of the plane's controls while the ship is in unusual positions. After a few hours of these acrobatics, the Flying Cadet feels just as much at home while in inverted flight as he does while flying in normal position.

Flying Cadets are between 20 and 27 years of age, are paid $75 per month, and are given uniforms, food and lodging together with best of medical care.

Senior Girl Represents Vermont at Junior Month

EDITOR'S NOTE.—This is an actual experience of a college senior, Florence Wade, who represented Vermont at Junior Month, a month of study and experience in social service work which is sponsored by the Boston Family Welfare Society.

It was a poverty-stricken Greek home which I was sent to visit. The father was a chef who had been unemployed most of the time since the depression. The hard-working mother was a sickly woman who had been ordered by the doctor to keep off her feet, but she had four little children demanding twenty-four-hour service, and I knew that mother struggled on while father tramped the streets, ever searching for a job, any job, just something to bring in a little money.

These thoughts ran through my mind as I climbed the rickety stairs and stumbled through a dark and cluttered hallway to the apartment door. A wan little girl found me and, when I inquired for Mrs. Z., said, "Oh yes, she's my mother. She lives in here."

I entered a room which apparently served as kitchen, dining room, and living room all in one. A figure was bent over the kitchen sink—scrubbing. Another thin little miss and a small boy eyed me curiously from the corner; while a baby lay in his sticky night-clothes and fussed at the flies. A few unwashed dishes lay on the table, clothes were scattered everywhere, not a chair was vacant.

The mother turned as I entered and managed a smile when I introduced myself. She drew up two chairs, dumping clothes out of one and her little girl as unceremoniously out of the other.

Discuss Behavior Problems

We had several important matters to talk over. One concerned the small son whose vision was only 20 per cent normal. He had been quite a behavior problem both in school and at home. He disliked kindergarten, mostly because the other children laughed at him—he had such a funny way of tilting his head and pursing his mouth whenever he looked closely at an object. And at home he often resorted to temper tantrums. Lately, however, he had been attending a special nursery school for children with impaired vision, and we wanted to learn how he was progressing. At the mention of the school, Ned came out of the corner and, his face aglow with enthusiasm, he exclaimed over the rabbits they fed every day, the ice cream they ate, the slides they played on. It was evident that Ned's problems were at least partially solved.

Ann and Midge were bursting with talk by this time. They were being sent to a health camp for the summer, and somewhere pennies must be found with which to buy toothbrushes, sneakers, and other similar luxuries. Mrs. Z. and I talked the financial situation over and I, as a social worker, promised that if they paid what they could each week, the rest of the money would be provided somehow. Those bright little eyes just could not be denied.

Rent A Big Expense

Camp expenses, however, appeared to be the least of their financial worries. Mrs. Z. told how they were supposed to pay twenty dollars each month for rent, but how seldom they were able to do it—when every penny had to go into milk for the baby, a little food, and sometimes a pair of shoes or a dress for one of the girls. Tears streamed down her cheeks as she described the tramps up hill and down, her legs aching, the sun beating down unmercifully upon her toiling figure. No one seemed to have apartments to rent for less than twenty dollars, and when she did find a place which was livable, the owners "investigated" and decided they could not rent it. What chance was there for a poor person in such a hard world?

As her eyes appealingly asked that condition, I in turn thought, "And what can a social worker do?"—I could sympathize with her, and I did, and suggested a few more real estate agencies which she might try. I also promised that a moving man would be provided when they did find a place to go, and a WPA housekeeper would help her get settled. I also assured her we would do what we could to prevent a forced evacuation. It all helped—a little, for when I arose to say goodbye, Mrs. Z. patted my arm gratefully and thanked me so much for coming.

As I left the brave little family to pick my way back down the rickety stairs, a fuller understanding of the meaning of social service crept into my heart. Somebody with a problem, a social worker to which they can talk freely and confidentially and with whom they can work, a social agency to support the worker and provide needed funds whenever possible, other agencies and institutions within the community to lend their assistance and cooperation in solving the problems within their respective fields—and the result is often a home saved, a child's life kept from physical or social ruin, a discouraged heart enlightened. Worth while? You know the answer!

The New York legislature is considering a bill that would make all of the state's normal colleges four-year teachers' colleges.

U. V. M. Students Attend Service

About forty students and members of the faculty attended the mid-week prayer and message service which was held Wednesday evening in the American Legion Hall on Church Street. The Rev. Helen Graham, spiritual medium, conducted the service. Mrs. Graham is the pastor of the local Spiritualist Church.

An invitation was extended to Mrs. Graham to hold a special billet seance service for the students of the University. Many have expressed their desire to have Mrs. Graham be the Wednesday morning chapel speaker.

It is not necessary to be a spiritualist to attend these meetings. Followers of all denominations are welcome. Each seance is preceded by a short prayer and vesper service, and a free-will offering is taken.

Those who wish to ask a question are asked to write it plainly on a small piece of paper, to sign their initials for identification, and to place it in the basket at the entrance of the hall. The Legion Hall is located directly above Pine's Clothing Store on Church Street.

The next meeting will be held next Wednesday evening at 7.30 o'clock. Watch the CYNIC for an announcement of the special message service which Mrs. Graham is planning for the near future.

High Schools To Enjoy Play Day Held At Southwick

Games and Sports to Be Order of the Day; Mary Howe '40 in Charge

Saturday afternoon, March 2, will be Play Day at Southwick for the high schools in this vicinity. From among the neighboring towns and cities will come the high schools of Hinesburg, Essex Junction, Winooski, Vergennes, Dermans of New Haven, Conn., Mount St. Mary's, Cathedral, Burlington, Alburg and Richmond.

Registration will begin at 1.30, followed by a welcome by Mary Howe. Upstairs, the girls will join in relay races and newcomb, while Miss Crowe will give a basketball demonstration down in the gym. Afterwards the girls will join up in college teams—Dartmouth, Princeton, Harvard, Yale, Cornell—and compete in basketball games all afternoon. Roller skating, ping-pong and dancing will continue until 5.30. Scores will be kept in the individual races as well as in the basketball games—winner of the games receiving ten points, while the girls who come in first, second or third will receive five, three and one points, respectively, in the individual contests. All these scores will be added at the end of the day to see which team has the highest total.

Refreshments will be served at 5.30 by Ellen Isham '42 and Lois Murray '40. Miss Hazard has been assisted in her plans by the elementary education girls. The hostesses will be Betty Meade, Barbara Robinson, Kay Horseford, Marjory Abel, Marion Burns, and Jean Murphy.

This Play Day has been planned to give the girls a chance to make new acquaintances as well as to have an afternoon of indoor sports with modern equipment which may not be furnished in their own high schools. All those who care to watch the games are cordially invited!

It costs $56.50 to outfit a football player with first class equipment.

Many Men Respond To Gardner's Call

Over Fifty Candidates Appear For Practice

Baseball men, 1940 class, have been called to the colors at the University of Vermont, and upwards of half a hundred have donned uniforms for the popular Vermont sport.

Coach Larry Gardner's forces have suffered several casualties during the past year. He has an almost intact pitching staff, but his other positions have been badly shot up.

Captain Lefty Pesarik, winner of five out of seven last spring and a stout sticker, heads the mound corps, supported by veterans Hart and Belardinelli, and by Akley, Hull and Carlson.

Around the loop things aren't so good. Beauchemin at first and Kimball at third have been retired by the book route. Crossley at second is also doubtful. Only Boucher and Corbett behind the bat and Healy at short are available from last year's strong infield. To fill the gaps Carlson, a sophomore, may be shifted from the pitching staff, and Spasyk, another sophomore, who is tagged as a promising catcher, may be used on the base lines. There is also DePalo, who did some work at second last spring, and Woods, a gifted third sacker, who showed up well as a freshman.

Last year's outfield is as hard hit as the infield, but by graduation rather than scholastic difficulties. Berry, who captained the team, is gone with his diploma, as is Nicholson. Broutsas remains, and Taylor, who was unable to play last spring, has a sure assignment. Other leading candidates are Sysko and Conrad, freshman gardeners last year.

U.V.M. Tennis Team Faces Busy Season

The tennis team of the University of Vermont, which opens up its activities the latter part of April, has twelve matches on its schedule according to playing dates just released from the office of the graduate manager.

The season gets off with a three-match trip into southern New England, playing Williams April 25, Trinity April 26, and Amherst April 27.

The home season opens at Burlington against Clarkson May 1. Then the team drops over into New York State, meeting Union May 3 and Rensselaer May 4. Middlebury follows at Middlebury May 9. Beginning with Springfield May 10, four home matches come up. Springfield is followed by Colgate May 14, St. Lawrence May 16, Middlebury May 18.

The season closes against Norwich at Northfield May 20.

Dream Band Records King Porter Stomp

Thousands of fans picked fourteen bandleaders and instrumental soloists as THE best combination for an all-star "Dream Band."

And now Columbia records has put the dream on wax with KING PORTER STOMP and ALL-STAR STRUT—two jazz classics to delight every jitterbug. The record is scheduled for national release during the first week in March, and proceeds from the sale of the discs are to be turned to Local 802, A. F. M., in New York, for the Relief Fund.

It took three weeks before Columbia could corral, in one studio, the array of talent represented on the record. Every chair was filled by a nationally famous instrumentalist.

Benny Goodman led on clarinet with a solid, almost unbelievable rhythm section of Pianist Jesse Stacey (Bob Crosby Band), Drummer Gene Krupa, Charlie Christians (Goodman), guitar, and Bassist Bob Haggart (Bob Crosby) backgrounding. Then there were Harry James, Ziggy Elman (Goodman) and Charles Spivak, trumpets; Jack Teagarden and Jack Jenny, trombones; and Eddie Miller (Crosby), Toots Mondello (Goodman), Benny Carter and Charlie Barnett, saxes.

KING PORTER STOMP is a Fletcher Henderson arrangement which shows sock and drive generated singly and in ensemble by the stars. Each member of the band contributes a sparkling solo bit with entire combination riding out on the last two choruses. ALL-STAR STRUT is a "jam" selection with small band. Exciting improvisations and ensemble treatment makes this an outstanding example of pure jazz.

George Simon supervised for Metronome magazine with John Hammond, Jr., and Morty Palitz overseeing the recordings for Columbia.

Five Meets Scheduled For Varsity Track Team

The varsity track schedule, set up by the University of Vermont for the spring season, calls for five meets. The season opens April 20 with Williams at Williamstown.

Following the Williams meet come Union at Burlington, April 27; Colby at Burlington, May 4; Middlebury at Middlebury, May 11; Eastern Intercollegiates at Worcester, May 18.

The State Interscholastic Track meet, which will be held again this year at the University, is scheduled for June 1.

Vermont Skiers to Sponsor State Meet

Will Include Downhill, Slalom And X-Country

This afternoon at 2.30 an eight-mile cross-country race will start the competition for the state intercollegiate ski championship. There have been ski meets between Vermont, Middlebury and Norwich before, but this is the first official meet for the championship of the state. Vermont took the initiative in organizing this one.

The meet is being run by our Outing Club with I. S. U. (International Ski Union) sanction, with Tim Gilbert and Jack Coutre taking charge. The officials are Professors Holmes and Prentice, Mr. J. Dodd, Mr. G. Lynde, Mr. J. Marvin and Mr. Charles Houghton. The courses were set by Sepp Ruschp and Otto Hollans, the coach of the team.

There are three events; the downhill run at 10.00 a.m. tomorrow and slalom at 2.30 p.m. will be held tomorrow afternoon on Mount Mansfield's very tricky Teardrop. But the course of the cross-country run extends through our back campus. Starting in back of the gymnasium, the boys will ski out to Centennial Field, then turn to the Winooski River. After following this for some distance, they will branch off through the woods and continue out to the Burlington Airport. The return trip follows the main road back to the gym. The eight miles should prove to be quite a difficult and lengthy run. A good deal of it runs through the woods and uphill.

From Middlebury come five competitors: Robert and John Gale, Ira Townsend, Dwight Smith and Raymond Unsworth. Norwich is entering only four men: J. Fowler, A. Beck, V. Constant and R. Fletcher. Tom Cootey, downhill ace, is unable to compete because of a recently sprained back. Peter Patch, Dave Collins, Floyd Rising, Dick Tracy and Henry Parish are entered as Vermont's first team. A few boys from the second team will run the courses for practice, but their scores will not count.

The Norwich and Middlebury teams are being accommodated at various fraternity houses on campus. Tomorrow night at 7.00 o'clock there will be a banquet for all contestants at the Delta Psi house. After dinner awards will be presented.

If you can't get out to see this afternoon's race, listen tonight at 7.25 when the results will be given on WCAX.

It is understood that each contestant, upon making his entry known, shall take part in each event on the program.

The following are the entries to date: F. Taylor '41, A. Clark '40, F. Gallup '41, F. Swift '43, W. Keith '43, and R. Ladd '43.

There are many more men who are scholastically eligible to compete and physically able to make a good showing who have not yet entered. Confucius say, "He who doesn't try, will never know what he can do."

The point is stressed that those candidates who are working for the championship should emphasize the most those events in which they do not excel, because past results indicate that men have lost more points on their weak events than by overworking in their specialties.

The deadline is now approaching for the completion of the final number of workouts (eight). It is advisable for anyone interested to make known their entry at once by contacting Archie Post, so that they can be checked off on the workout requirements.

This Collegiate World

Charles N. Pollack, Harvard senior, has a very, very red face—and here's why:

When the Crimson relay swimming team decided to make a try for a new record in the 800-yard distance, Pollack was chosen to call out the laps to the swimmers from the edge of the pool. The first three mermen turned in excellent times, and the fourth member of the team was well on his way to breaking the established record, when—Caller Pollack became over-excited, fell into the water atop the record-breaker!

He fled from the pool—with the swimmers doing some tall calling of their own in his direction!

Editorialists on the University of Minnesota's Daily have a new and not-too-complimentary (to themselves) explanation for the current feminine hat fads. Listen to their spouting:

"With a half-dozen exceptions, the girls all buy hats. And it's no use trying to figure out why. What appeals to the ladies is clearly the ludicrous—after all, look at the things they marry."

Hitler. Mussolini. Roosevelt.

Those are the three leading "I"-men of the world today, and Pearl Waxman, Syracuse University speech student, has just completed the research to prove it.

The German spell-binder refers to himself once in every 53 words in his public addresses, Mussolini once in 83, and the President once in every 100 words.

Sports Cast

By the Sports Editor

Hours of Parting

Just about a year ago tonight we sat down at our desk, lit a cigarette, and wrote our first Sports Casts. A very fast year has passed. Tonight we are writing our last column. Everything is still the same except that the smoke is thicker and our beard is heavier. We feel somewhat as the year 1939 must have felt a couple months ago when it passed out of sight with nothing more than a white beard, a white sarong, and a scythe. Only our beard is black, and we are lacking the sarong and scythe.

Before the chariot comes to take us away there are a few last words we would like to get out of our system. First of all, we hope that all our haranguing last year that track lettermen not be allowed to compete in the interfraternity relays will not go for naught and that someday soon this event will be placed on the same level as other interfraternity competition. We also want to thank, once again, Johnny Spasyk for the letter he wrote all of us earlier in the year which precipitated numerous attempts to inject a little school spirit into all our systems.

Another pet gripe of the year was that the ski team should receive the recognition that it definitely merits. We still see no reason why the Athletic Council cannot award at least minor V's to this worthy organization and there is still time for this to be done this year. We might point out that our ski team has a class A intercollegiate rating, which is at least one letter higher than any other team in this school. And still they are not awarded letters. Rather strange that Ev Bailey, the new prexy of the Intercollegiate Ski Union, will receive no award from his own school.

Our last gripe (and this time it's more personal) is that we hope that the succeeding sports editors on this paper will not be accused of disloyalty to their school because they recognize the faults of the present system and realize that no cure can result without first a cognizance of said ills. We further hope that they will give praise where it is due and also reproof when it may possibly be of some good.

The bells have started to ring. It is almost time to depart. Thanks to the athletic department for the cooperation it has given us throughout the year. And thanks to you for graciously reading this occasionally. We hope that a few of the better columns will stand out in your minds instead of the horde of inferior ones—like this.

This is our swan's song.—A. D. W.

Northwestern Organizes United Peace Front

Evanston, Ill.—(ACP)—An all-college peace front, with "We Don't Want to Fight in Europe" as its slogan, has been organized here by the student newspaper of Northwestern University, and is slowly assuming significance as college editors in all sections of the country join in the movement.

For the past two months, Stanley Frankel, editorial chairman of the Daily Northwestern, has been contacting other colleges, and out of his work the Peace Front has evolved.

In the east, Princeton University students have organized the American Independence League, which includes 23 of the leading eastern universities, and this group is working as one autonomous organization under the national All-College Peace Front. In the far west, U. C. L. A. is now sounding out colleges on the coast as Donn Brown, last year's president of U. C. L. A. student body and son of movie comedian Joe E. Brown, has been traveling throughout the western states in the capacity of organizing secretary for the western states as a third autonomous unit working for a common goal.

The middlewest has quickly responded to the idea, and today 53 of the leading colleges in this section are working under the Peace Front banner.

At present, the women's colleges are being organized by the woman's editor of the Daily Northwestern, and the southern colleges are being approached on the subject.

The purpose of this Peace Front is, as has been stated, to keep this nation out of war. Through campus newspapers it wants to propagandize for peace, pointing out to the 1,350,000 college students that the present war is none of their business, that democracy's dangers lie in this hemisphere, and that they have nothing to gain by fighting.

The Peace Front aims at convincing college students that they will be called upon to fight in case of a war, that strong and united public opinion is the best weapon against involvement, and that the college student should have an important hand in molding that opinion.

Two-mile Run Dropped From Interfrat Meet

The interfraternity track meet which is soon coming up has undergone a few minor changes.

A definite call is now being made for being dropped. Earnest consideration is being given to dropping the 30-yard dash and replacing it with a 110-yard dash.

A definite rule that has been formulated is that no man may compete in more than two distance running events, i.e., in events held on the gymnasium track.

There will be no stipulation as to how many field events, short dashes, or hurdles that a man may enter.

Post Issues Call For Interfrat Relay Teams

A definite call is now being made for entries from the various fraternities for the interfraternity relays. These entries MUST be in by March 9, so that drawings can be made and dates can be set.

Intramural representatives should contact Archie Post as soon as possible.

Six running workouts are required on the track for all individuals competing prior to competition.

A change has been made in the running of the events this year.

The total distance will remain the same (1,320 yards), but the distances run by the individual members of the team has been shifted. The first man will run 440 yards, second man will run 220 yards, the third man will run 220 yards, and the anchor man will run 440 yards.

The Saturday Letter

ESSAY ON THE LOUSE

(or should one say a lousy essay)

Mr. Universal Dictionary says the louse is small and flat and wingless and is an insect. He also says the louse lives on bodies of animals and men. He further deposes and says that when two or more of the little rascals have a rendezvous the proper way to refer to the group is to use the word lice even though one may be tempted to label the aggregation louses or on special occasions lices. But, Mr. Universal Dictionary and his cohorts are somewhat out-dated and not wholly on the ball because along with time the louse has marched on and is now not only flat and small, but also big and pestiferous and in this new form amuses himself (itself, herself, as you will) as a writer of anonymous letters, a smearer of ideas and institutions and a spreader of vicious gossip.

Said in another way the louse situation (or should one say the lousy situation) has changed with the years and along with the little insects, that (or who) bother dogs and men by biting and running, there are now members of the clan who (or that) do their daily mean deeds by working on reputations, characters, and social standings. We now have not only the wee type, the one that (or who) is chiefly interested in irritating the epidermis, but also the big specimen, the one who (or that) is chiefly concerned with upsetting everything fine and decent.

Like the little louse, the big louse loves to bite and run. Not only does old Rover start going around in rings, but the unfortunate percent of the human family, when tormented by the foul fellows, engages in much aimless and futile rooting around. "Hell's a poppin" when the big louses (lice-lices) are on the loose. It seems to be characteristic of the breed to snap and scamper, hurt and hurtle,—get in a good dig and then not be there when paged. Rover may be blessed because the louse keeps him from worrying about his other troubles but we (of the biped society) can't agree that the louse in human form helps us very much in forgetting our louseless difficulties.

Much research has been devoted to ways and means to eliminate the louse but up to now the louse has been too smart or we (the sufferers) have been too dumb. Lacking the means for an effective offensive and knowing that the most potent poison of all resides within the louse (itself, or himself, or herself, as you wish) we are, just sitting around hopefully awaiting the time when the louse may accomplish self liquidation by accidentally biting itself (himself-herself-as you please).

Very truly,
RAYMOND E. MANCHESTER.

New Wilmington, Pa. (I. P.)—It's either "be a neat and tidy housekeeper," or "no dating" for Westminster College co-eds.

A new point-system dormitory ruling gives a demerit mark to co-eds having untidy desks, unmade beds, hat boxes under the bed, and such "domestic crimes." Co-eds, over six-week periods, who receive the largest numbers of these demerit marks will be penalized by 48-hour campus limits, which means the girls can go to and from classes, but nothing more.

"Dormitory inspection," to be made by residence directors in co-ed dormitories, will make their tours of girls' rooms at "unexpected moments." Co-eds who acquire six demerit marks receive immediate "house limits" for two days.

But, for the girls who keep their rooms in tip-top order, there is a reward. Senior and junior co-eds who rank highest in tidiness will receive an extra date night each week; sophomores an extra 10.30 permission night a week; and freshmen, an extra weekly 10 o'clock permission.

Girls who happen to be rooming with an "untidy roommate" are penalized along with the original offenders. The ruling will affect three women's dormitories and six cooperative lodges.

As for men, well, they can throw all of their shoes under the beds if they want to. So far, no "men's tidiness law" has been laid down.

College Senior Has Enterprising Career

Cape Cod clams put Hugh J. Ripper of Burlington in college and kept him there his first year. Ripper is a senior in the agricultural college of the University of Vermont. Back in the summer of 1935, after being out of high school for two years, he discovered that from the clam flats of a Cape Cod town he could take a very fair income. Clams were plentiful and the market good. He dug clams and sold them for almost a year. Then, with the money he had made, he entered college. As he had worked for a while on a farm, it was natural perhaps that he should enter the agricultural college.

After his first year of college work, Hugh went back to the little Cape Cod town where he had prospered digging clams the year before, but the situation had changed. The market had turned to other quarters, and the second summer was considerably less profitable. So he had to think up something else, but Hugh is handy at thinking things up. For the summers of his sophomore and junior years, he found work in a Burlington ice cream company. His major in dairy manufacturing in the college of agriculture stands him in good stead at this job. Not satisfied with working merely in summer vacations, he has had employment also during the college year, working for his first three years in the zoology laboratory, and this year in the dairy sales room at the agricultural college.

Choice of Professions

If Hugh has trouble landing a job following graduation, like so many other graduates, it won't be because he does not have several different lines of work to choose from. Asked if he wanted to go into the dairy manufacturing field, in which he has majored and has practical experience from working at the ice cream company, Hugh replied that he'd be willing to pursue that calling, but said he had also majored in agricultural teaching, which gives him another profession to follow in case opportunity doesn't knock quickly enough. Even that wasn't all, for he confessed that since he took the Civil Aeronautics Authority course of flying training this fall, he's crazy about flying, and would go on with that if he had the chance.

"I'd rather fly than eat," said Hugh, and he went on to say that he planned to look into chances for joining the Naval Aviation Reserve, whose representatives visited Burlington a few days ago, to interview boys who are interested in flying training, following which the men completing it would belong to the Naval Air Reserve, a supply organization of pilots who could be called upon in the event that war made it necessary. The day after the interview, Hugh made his application for the training. Final action has not been taken on these applications.

Trains for Flying

The Civil Aeronautics Authority course, taken this fall by Hugh in company with a group of other University of Vermont students, and still continuing with navigation and flight training, is a different and newer program, designed only to train a greater number of civilian pilots than has been done in the past. Hugh has already soloed, and is now in what is known as stage C, which follows completion of the solo test, and includes training in power turns, spins, pylon turns, figure eights, and other maneuvers.

Never in a plane before he enrolled in the course this fall, Hugh believes that it's a lot safer in a plane than in a car, and gives it as his opinion that we'll all be flying in a few years.

A brother and a sister, David and Joan, have preceded Hugh at the University of Vermont and have already taken their degrees. David now studies hotel administration at Cornell, while Joan works for the Burlington Free Press. Hugh's father is an Episcopal minister who has churches in Milton and Vergennes, visiting them alternate Sundays. He also teaches certain classes at the girls' school at Rock Point in Burlington.

Although he has made himself at home in various parts of New England, Hugh is not a native-born American. He was born in Dorking, Surrey, in England, coming to Canada with his parents when he was three. They lived in Alberta for a time. The only things Hugh remembers from there, he says, are the dust and the grasshoppers. Two years later they moved to Quebec, and from there to Vermont. In this state, they lived in Lyndonville and Barre, and finally they came to Burlington, where the family has lived for about ten years.

Archery Contest Now in the Final Lap

Basketball

The Town Team (2) became the winners of the A tournament when they defeated the Etc.'s by a score of 28-18 in the final meet. Members of the respective teams are as follows:

TOWN TEAM	ETC.'S
Shaw	Quimby
Gurney	Bayley
Shine	MacLean
Savage	Orr
Holden	Bates
Mead	Libbey
Abel

Shaw was high scorer for the Town Team, totalling a score of 14 points, and Quimby led the Etc.'s with 10 points.

If the Town Team can beat all challengers they will remain permanent victors of the tournament. Robinson, however, is expected to challenge them soon.

Archery

The girls are about to enter the last lap of the intercollegiate archery telegraphic test, in which they have been competing for the last two weeks. The girls totaled almost 200 points more last Friday over their previous record, and it is hoped they will do even better this Friday. The meet is sponsored by the University of Oregon, and the scores will be telegraphed to them immediately after the final round. We will know how Vermont placed in this meet very soon, so watch the news column! Last week the scores ran as follows:

Marjory Carbino	418
Marjory Southworth	387
Betty Preston	343
Helen Witham	301

Splash Party

The annual splash party of W. A. A. will be held next Tuesday night at 7.30, March 5, in the Y on College Street. It is expected that many will attend because this pool is unusually fine, and also because there are to be many novelty races and stunts besides the regular contests. The party offers the girls an opportunity to chalk up some points for their teams, as there will be Green and Gold competition.

The admission has been changed to 10c for everyone who wishes to swim, W. A. A. making up the 15c deficit of the original price. There will be no fee for those who wish to watch.

Don't forget the night—next Tuesday. See you there!

Badminton, Ping-pong

The tournaments are progressing rather slowly. It is hoped that more girls will play off their games as quickly as possible next week, so that these indoor sports contests will not drag into the spring season. How about it?

Students Eligible For Play Contest

An intercollegiate, one act play contest is being sponsored by the editors of the Literary Magazine Criterion of Pomona College, California, with a first prize $50 offered by the cinema actor Robert Taylor, Pomona graduate of 1933. The other prizes are $25, $15, and 12 merchandise awards. Any type of play such as tragedy, comedy, drama, satire, farce, folk plays, etc., may be submitted. The plays should not exceed a range between twenty-five and forty-five minutes of playing time and they must be in one act for stage presentation, but may have as many scenes as desired. These plays must be original and ones that have not already been published.

This contest, the Criterion editors have announced is for the purpose of encouraging collegiate production of one act plays of high value. On the list of judges being selected are Mary Inloes, chairman of the play-reading committee of the Pasadena Community Playhouse, Philip K. Scheuer, drama editor of the Los Angeles Times, and Norman Philbrick, playwright and director of dramatics at Pomona. The possibility of adapting the prize winning plays for motion picture scenarios will be considered by Robert Taylor, from whom the winning contestants will receive a signed certificate of award.

Each entrant will receive a critique of his play and a copy of the Pomona College literary magazine containing a list of the winners and copyrighted reprints of the best plays besides the awards offered to individuals for the fifteen best plays.

Any person enrolled in the University is eligible to compete and there is no limit to the number of plays that may be submitted by an individual provided the entrance fee of one dollar accompanies each play submitted according to the rules of the contest. All entries must be postmarked not later than the closing date of the contest April 15, 1940, and should be addressed to Criterion Editors, Pomona College, Student Union, Claremont, California, from which address entry forms and additional information may be obtained.

Results of the contest will be announced June 1, when copies of the Criterion will be received by each of the contestants.

California Ranks In Psychology Staff

Berkeley, Calif. (UP).—The University of California ranks among the leading educational institutions of the United States in the excellence of its staff in the department of psychology. This is shown in a survey made by Stephen Visher of Indiana University, published in The American Journal of Psychology, which shows that of nine distinguished psychologists west of the Mississippi, four are on the faculty of the California state university.

By vote of their fellows, about 2 per cent of the active members and associates of the American Psychological Association are included in American Men of Science as starred, or distinguished. The star is described as indicating that "in the opinion of his peers the person selected is distinguished for psychological research; it implies either a large volume of good work or a considerable amount of especially original work.

The University of California has four starred men on its active teaching staff, exceeded only by Columbia, Harvard, and Yale. Among the starred psychologists, five received their baccalaureate degrees from the University of California, a number not exceeded by any other university, and equalled only by Harvard, Indiana, Michigan and Pennsylvania.

The four psychologists in the university who were given the star for excellence, are Warner Brown, Harold E. Jones, and Edward C. Tolman, on the Berkeley campus, and Knight Dunlap of the Los Angeles campus.

In honor of the school's famous athletes, an Ohio State University student group is planting trees bearing commemorative plaques.

A Collegian's Broadway

By JOE WHITLEY

Tony Galento-Cavalier

A column back we told you about a rather mournful pilgrimage to the beer paradise of Tony Galento over in the wildernesses of New Jersey and how he mostly didn't care whether we came or went.

It isn't so, it seems.

If we can credit a most gentle note we've just received from the spheroid one's amanuensis. Some college guy read the wistful comment aloud to Tony. His feelings were hoited.

"Mr Galento," to let you in on our correspondence, "was merely preoccupied, not surly as you suggest. Perhaps you'll drop by again."

Anon, good Tony, anon.

State of the Drama Shavian Harangue

Mr. George Bernard Shaw is still as sharp as ever only more rambling.

His latest opus, "Geneva," a political lampoon, is the stuff that laughs and yawns are made of.

Shaw's characters are not hard to recognize. Hitler's there. So is friend Mussolini, Stalin and General Franco. Done to a brown!

With a good deal of editing Mr. Shaw might have had him a play here.

Backdrop for Barrymore

As we've hinted already, Mr. Barrymore is with us again in an inoffensive little number called "My Dear Children," all about an antique actor, father of three stunning daughters, carrying on in the Swiss Alps.

Some of the lines are so dreadful that Mr. Barrymore winces as he pronounces them.

We would be doing the authors wrong (Catherine Turney and Jerry Horwin) if we did not take stock of the fact that neither is making eyes at the Pulitzer committee. All they had in mind was to tailor a conversation piece for Barrymore. He handles the alterations himself, ad libbing all over the place.

New Telescope At Vermont

A cloudy sky recently prevented stargazers from looking at Mercury, Jupiter, Venus, Saturn, Mars and Uranus through the telescope recently acquired by the University of Vermont and now located in its engineering annex building. A very unusual line-up of these planets is now to be seen in the sky. Of the planets named, all may be seen with the naked eye except Uranus. However, the telescope makes it possible to see more detail.

Prof. A. D. Butterfield of the engineering college, who has charge of the telescope, earlier this week issued an invitation for those interested, students, faculty or general public, to come and examine the planets in their unusual formation through the telescope. Monday evening a group of engineering students accepted the invitation. Tuesday evening was cloudy, so no star-gazing was possible. Professor Butterfield requests those who wish to take advantage of the opportunity to make appointments with him. The best time for seeing the planets, Professor Butterfield says, is from 6.30 to 6.45 p.m., since Mercury disappears before 7.00. This planet can be seen only between the time the sun sets and the time, little more than half an hour later, when in its turn it sinks below the horizon.

Fifty-one Students On Dean Hills' List

Three Attain Averages Of Over 92.5 Percent

Fifty-one students in the college of agriculture at the University of Vermont are named on the dean's list for high scholastic standing during the first semester of the current college year. This is almost exactly 20 per cent of the enrollment in the agricultural college. Eleven seniors, twelve juniors, fifteen sophomores, and thirteen freshmen made the honor list. Three of the fifty-one had grades in all their subjects which averaged above 92.5 per cent. Two of these are seniors, and the third is a freshman. They are Laura C. Dustan, Craftsbury Common, and Lucien D. Paquette, Craftsbury, seniors, and Wilfred T. Elliott, St. Johnsbury, a freshman.

Ten students averaged between 89 and 92.4 per cent in all their courses, while thirty-eight were rated between 85 and 88.9 per cent.

In the 89-92.4 per cent class are Helen P. Towne, Milton, a senior; four juniors, George H. Bailey, Rochester; Harold R. Cushman, Vergennes; Evelyn M. Fuller, Chester, and Kathleen R. LeBaron, Waterbury; two sophomores, Douglas P. Dana, North Pomfret, and Joyce Kenyon, Richmond; and three freshmen, Helena Anderson, West Glover; Eleanor M. Davis, Underhill; and Irene M. Quimby, Barnet.

Y. W. C. A. Delegates To Attend Conference

A cabinet meeting was held last Tuesday to discuss the New England Conference to be held March 8-10 at Northfield, Mass. This is the midwinter conference and delegates will be sent from here. This conference is a student Christian movement for colleges of New England.

At this meeting, plans were also made for a party for the Rock Point children, which will be held sometime before spring vacation. Peggy Bodette '40 is in charge of the committee.

The date for the meeting of the cabinet and advisory board has been set for March 13. At this time, future work will be discussed. The girls who signed for the refreshment committee will serve tea.

There will be a mass meeting soon of all Y. W. C. A. members, at which attendance will be required.

To Ski Or Not To Ski

By SYLVIA BERGMAN

I purchased a brand new pair of slightly used skis at the Snow Train Shop, where they were fitted both for height and for weight and sold so reasonable just for the advertising. Though mid-year exams were in the offing, the sun beckoned this bright sunny afternoon. I shouldered my ton of skis in a very professional manner, with the points downward; for somewhere I had read that only a novice carries his ski points skyward.

While I might look professional, one would have to be a fool (a fool's fool) to fool oneself. Hence I hopped my back fence and into a neighbor's snow-covered cornfield. I remembered to fasten them on as I had been instructed, with the boot toe just over the edge of the binder and with the clamp on the outside—thus making a right and a left ski to correspond with the right and left foot if you can tell the difference after you have your heavy ski boots on. This I found to be not much more difficult than applying ancient strap skates, though no one would think of wearing them in this day and age. Perhaps in the not too distant future, we too shall have white-booted skis. But now for the other ski. Wow—my waist—I didn't realize I had any. It must be all this excess baggage in the form of warm clothing. I know that these balloon snow pants, that make me look like one, are not exactly the latest in ski togs. Of course when I have learned to ski and journey to Underhill and Stowe, I, too, will bedeck myself in smooth gabardine and featherweight parka.

Again I attempt to fasten my other ski. This is certainly excellent for the new twenty-four inch waist. My twenty-eight inches certainly needs reducing. No need to fasten myself in stays. I'll just fasten on these staves. Henceforth let the Floradora girls look to their laurels.

Now that I have skied across the great expanse of about twenty-five yards, I find myself facing a barbed-wire fence. I must do an about face, as I had seen in a ski movie, held for the sole purpose of teaching technique.

Placing one foot across and in opposite directions, I get all tangled up with myself—must have been the wrong foot. I try it again with the other, only to fall in a heap and to hear peals of laughter issue from a not too distant window.

This is indeed a deciding factor, that the straight and narrow path is always the safest—at least for beginners. This I endeavor to do in clockwise fashion around the field. I must remember to flex my knees—the latter from "Bottoms Up"—and where I prefer to keep mine, while I thrill on a slight incline.

The sun set low and this daughter "Ski Hi'd." Today, I'm so lame and my waist—well it's all there plus a few lumps and bruises. Incidentally, if you know of anyone who is five feet six inches tall and weighs under 150 pounds, that would like to purchase, very reasonably, a pair of brand new, slightly used skies ——! And as for those Floradora girls, they won't have to watch their laurels—not yet.

Professor Discusses Dangers to Teaching

New York, N. Y.—(I.P.)—"Two grave dangers to efficient and wise instruction which for years threatened to discredit all language instruction have at last been recognized by language teachers generally as the breeders of evil that they are," declared Dr. E. Herman Hespelt, associate professor of Spanish, at New York University, recently.

"The first of these was the ill-begotten jealousy and the spirit of competition felt by the teachers of one language for those of every other. If we have learned nothing else in the past few years as a result of the attacks of outsiders upon us we have at least learned that the teachers of French, German, Italian, and Spanish have common developments and interests and must present a united front to their critics.

"Having recognized these facts we are now in a position to cooperate with each other and have as the practical result of such cooperation the committee on the place of modern languages in the curriculum.

"The second grave danger, which I believe was one of the first factors seriously to discredit the teaching of modern foreign languages in this country was the tendency to identify support of the teaching of a language with approval of the current political set-up of the country where that language was spoken."

Fortunately, for those of us who teach Spanish it is impossible to identify our subject with any one governmental idealogy, since the language and the culture of which it is the vehicle are contemporaneously the possession of not one, but nineteen different political organizations, Dr. Hespelt stated.

"This should, however, not make us too complacement. We should always be on our guard against any attempt to restore the old fallacy."

British Lecturer To Speak On Europe's Future

Mr. S. K. Ratcliffe Well-Known Writer To Appear at Museum

On next Tuesday evening, March 5, at eight o'clock the next in the series of annual University lectures will take place. S. K. Ratcliffe, of London, will honor us with his presence, and speak on the question which looms largest on the international horizon, "What Next in Europe?" In thus titling his speech, he aptly expresses the keynote of the long train of questions that was started in 1938, with Munich. Added to the amazing variety of the famous Hitlerian "surprises," has been a new batch of almost equally astounding ones, pulled from the Russian bag of tricks. Now the world waits and wonders anxiously for the next move, and we ask—to quote Mr. Ratcliffe—"What next?"Will it be a deluge? An ending? Or possibly a new beginning?—as England fondly hopes.

Lecture Held in Museum

The lecture will take place in the usual place, the Fleming Museum. There we may expect to hear the opinion of an experienced and exceptionally well-informed journalist and international observer. Through twenty-five years of lecturing in the United States, Mr. Ratcliffe has won wide fame and acclaim as an objective observer and unprejudiced reporter. His British affiliations have been with the more liberal political groups and such liberal periodicals as "The New Statesman and Nation." In recent years he has been an editorial writer for the latter weekly as well as for the London Daily News.

This will mark the fourth visit of Mr. Ratcliffe to the University of Vermont. Those who remember his three previous appearances will undoubtedly recall the eloquence with which he succeeded in charming his audience. Not only does his eloquence have charm—it has more than that. Coupled with it are unusual powers of lucid and accurate expression.

Lectures in Town Hall, N. Y.

Mr. Ratcliffe is well known in a number of educational and intellectual centers. Since the establishment of the Town Hall, in New York City, he has each winter delivered a series of addresses there. At Yale he has lectured on the Bromley and Block Foundations, and at Cornell on the Messenger and Shiff Foundations.

His appearance here this Tuesday should prove to be vitally interesting and very much up to the minute.

This lecture, as usual, will be open to the public; all are cordially invited.

Scribes Hold Meeting At Southwick Friday

The Scribes, the honorary literary society for Freshmen and Sophomores, held a meeting full of intense and vivid literary activity at Southwick on March 1. After Daan Zwick, the temporary chairman,, read the finished form of the petition for the club, some creative works of those present were read and constructively discussed. The writings literally soared from a short story, "Earth," extolling the strength of the ties to the soil to a sketch on one moment in the life of George Trochorsaurus, a dinosaur of the pre-glacial age and then "The Blue Plate Dinner," a morbid tid-bit on the palate of war. Special details of the next meeting will appear in a later edition of the CYNIC.

W.A.A. Splash Party Tonight At "Y"

Amusing Events On Varied Program

Preparations for the W. A. A. Splash Party to be held tonight at the "Y" on College Street have been made in great detail. We'll give you an outline of the events, so that you can see what a good time everyone is going to have, and come down and join us, too.

There will be novelty races interspersed among the regular events, which include the 20- and 40-yard crawl, the 20-yard back stroke and the 20-yard breast stroke.

The novelty races include the following:

(1) Varsity Crew Race. Contestants in groups of fours swim one length of the pool by the backstroke, their feet around the waist of the teammate in front. The first girl is the coxswain, and the team reaching the end of the pool first without breaking their line wins.

(2) Candle Race. The contestants swim a length of the pool dressed in nightgowns or pajamas, light a candle, and swim back. The first person to return with the candle still lighted wins.

(3) Cork and Spoon Race. In this race the swimmers place a cork on a spoon which they hold between their teeth. They have to swim the pool in this fashion, retrieving the cork every time it is dropped from the spoon.

(4) Baton Relay. There are six contestants in this relay, three standing at each end of the pool. It is carried off in the shuttle relay style, one girl swimming the pool, carrying the baton, passing it on to the next girl, until the three girls have had their turns. The team who completes their swimming first wins.

(5) Flying Fish. Everyone lines up on one side of the pool, and sitting on the edge assumes a diving pose or some comical position. All dive in at the same time, swim to the opposite side, and assume their first position. The last one to do this drops out and the winner is decided by a process of elimination.

(6) Diving for Spoons.

Come down and join the fun. The admission is only 10 cents, and anyone who wishes to come down to watch is cordially invited. The party beings at 7.30.

U. V. M. Students Invited To Wesleyan Conference

On March 7 and 8 at Wesleyan College in Middletown, Conn., there is to be a meeting at which representatives of all phases of opinion will discuss "Political Issues in the Coming Election." Student and faculty delegates are invited to attend. Anyone interested in attending this meeting should see Prof. D. B. Carroll of the political science department.

Vermont Victorious; Debaters Win Again Over Middlebury

Becker, Durfee, Cohen Continue Winning Streak, Capture Prize Money

Winning by the judges' vote of two-to-one, the U. V. M. men's debating team continued its long undefeated record by downing Middlebury College in the annual Edwin Winship Lawrence prize debate between the two rival schools. Vermont speakers also won $17.50 of the $50 of individual prize money, awarded as a feature of the formal-dress forensic encounter.

G. H. Leggett '40 of Middlebury was awarded the first prize of $25 in cash, A. H. Becker, Vermont '41, and K. T. Brown, Middlebury '42 divided the second prize of $15, and H. A. Durfee, Vermont '41, won the third prize, $10 in cash. Oddly enough, the tie for second place gave the third-prize winner a larger sum than either of the two second-place winners. Other debaters in the contest were J. G. Cohen, Vermont '42, and J. H. Gordon, Middlebury '41.

The topic of discussion was "Resolved, That a system of socialized medicine should be adopted, making available to all complete medical service at public expense." Middlebury took the affirmative, Vermont the negative.

The debate decision was handled by Attorney F. W. Wakefield, Jr., and Mrs. H. Arthur of Burlington, and A. P. Couture, principle of Winooski High School. Separate judges, who judged the individual speakers on their respective merits and awarded the prize-money accordingly were Mayor J. J. Burns, Attorney S. E. Mansfield, and Thomas Wright, Jr., all of Burlington. Prof. L. W. Dean served as chairman.

Brocade Display At Fleming Museum

Riotous Colors In Japanese Textiles

The newest display in the entrance hall of the Fleming Museum is beautiful, multicolored Ito-Nishiki brocade from Japan.

Ito-Nishiki is a type of brocade shot with gold threads which, in this piece, were made by cutting very thin strips of gilt paper. On the back there is basically both a warp and a weft of blue silk, but with the weft, carried back and forth, are the threads of green, gold, orange, tan, and white, which appear on the right side only when needed in the pattern. This accounts for the heaviness and costliness of brocade. They are made on hand looms and the additional weft threads are handled by bobbins which are thrown back and forth at the weaver's direction by a boy who sits above the loom.

Brocades were originally used only for the garments of royal princes and high court officials, and in the furnishings of the richer theaters and temples. In these the gold thread was made either by twisting together several strips of the gilt paper or by wrapping it tightly around a fine silk thread.

The brocade is held in very high regard in Japan. In fact, the Japanese have a saying which would correspond with our "he has a heart of gold"; "Tsuzure wa kito mo kokoro wa nishike"—"Coat of rags but heart of brocade."

U.V.M. Girls Sponsor Annual Play Day

Miss Rosemary Hazard In Charge of Affairs

The Play Day which was held last Saturday afternoon at Southwick for the high schools in this vicinity was a great success. Eight high schools attended, spending the afternoon playing newcomb, basketball, ping-pong, roller skating and dancing. The girls were divided into teams and scores were kept of all the participants. Gold Key Elects Second Semester Officers

Gold Key, sophomore men's honorary society, elected second-semester officers last week, at a regular meeting held at the Sigma Phi place. Those sophomores elected were: J. S. Burgess, Burlington, president; H. P. Wood, Randolph, vice-president; and J. A. White, Jr., Essex Fells, N. J., secretary. R. L. Carlson, S. Ryegate, remained in office as treasurer. Because the customary Basketball Hop could not be held this year, preparations are now going on to honor this year's basketball squad in some other manner.

There will be a meeting of the Goodrich Classical Club, Thursday, March 7, at 7.30, in the south lounge at Southwick. At this time, Professor Myrick will speak on "Words and Their Ways in Vulgar Latin."

Dancing To Follow Annual Sugar Party To Be Held March 8

Committee Plan Affair To Honor Dean Hills' 53 Years of Service

The fourth annual Dean Hills' sugar party will be held March 8 in the gymnasium. The guest of honor will be Dean J. L. Hills of the Agriculture College, who has completed fifty-three years of service to the University. The proceeds from this affair will go into a fund for helping students who need financial aid.

The menu for the party will include sugar on snow, doughnuts, pickles, and coffee, all served in typical Vermont fashion by the Home Ec students.

An innovation to this annual party will be a dance which will follow the party. During the party the committee have planned a very amusing entertainment.

The affair is under the joint sponsorship of the Agriculture Club, the Home Economics Club, the University Chapter of the Future Farmers of America, and Alpha Zeta, honorary agriculture fraternity.

The men's committee is headed by G. Page '40 as manager general and he will be assisted by the following: snow, C. Lafley; syrup, F. Nye '41; entertainment, R. Evans '41; and finance, H. Ketcham '40.

Marian Skinner '40 is the general chairman of the women's committee with Eloise Bayley '41, Hester Carver '41, Helen Reed '40, Madge Duba '41, Louise Peters '41, Janet Taylor '42, and Hester Rice '42.

Norwich Skiers Win; Defeat State Rivals

Constant and Fowler Are Meet Stars

Norwich, showing a surprising amount of strength in Constant and Fowler, staged a complete upset Saturday by monopolizing points in the downhill and slalom to win the first two-day Vermont Collegiate Skiing Championship and leave Middlebury and Vermont in second and third places respectively. On the preceding day Norwich's first man took seventh place in the cross-country and the team showed no sign of the superior strength witnessed at Stowe of Saturday.

On Friday Dave Collins sped over the six-mile cross-country course, which was laid on the back campus from the gym to the Winooski river, southeast nearly to the airport and back to the gym by way of Williston road, in 37 minutes and 53 seconds to nose out Middlebury's ace long-distance poler, Ira Townsend, by one minute and four seconds. Co-captain Pete Patch took third place from Ray Unsworth of Middlebury and Vermont's Ernest St. Mary took fifth followed closely by Middlebury's Robert Gale, leaving Vermont at the head of the day's meet.

With perfect snow conditions on the nose dive at Stowe, Saturday's two events were run off in the morning and afternoon. Johnny Gale of Middlebury took the speedy two-mile downhill course in 31.8 seconds, followed by Norwich's Vic Constant, whose teammates Fowler and Beck took third and fourth places and by Pete Patch in fifth place.

Vic Constant, Norwich's freshman threat, tore through the slalom flags in 76.6 seconds to defeat Ira Townsend of Middlebury and Pete Patch in third place,

EDITORIALS

"What Next in Europe?"

To our campus tonight, comes Mr. S. K. Ratcliffe, of London, an internationally famed journalist and lecturer. "What Next in Europe?" is the question upon which the lecturer will speak. Popular for twenty-five years as a speaker in America, Mr. Ratcliffe has won wide fame as an objective observer and an unprejudiced reporter. In the field of journalism, he has served as an editor of The Stateman in Calcutta and the Sociological Review.

A frequent contributor to monthly reviews, the lecturer has published two books, and at present, is an editorial writer for the London Daily News and The Nation. Mr. Ratcliffe is a frequent speaker at Town Hall in New York and he has also lectured at Yale and at Cornell.

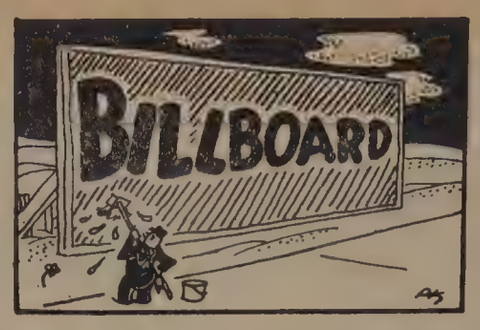
Six months of war have passed and we think of Europe today as a continent "packed with naval and air bases, scarred by fortified lines." None of the belligerents have dared to have a big offensive, except Germany, who completed a brief but devastating war against Poland, and the Russians who have made a merciless drive on Finland in which "Old Man Winter" has been on Finland's side.

Europe is now a continent paralyzed with fear. This fear has been heightened by the sufferings of millions of civilians, blacked-out cities and the great number of bereft homes behind the lines. All Europeans are waiting for spring when the "big blow" is expected to fall. Americans, too, are anxious, for as the war continues, we realize more how pertinent it is to us.

Thus, we recommend that you attend the University lecture and hear what a fine lecturer has to say about, "What Next in Europe."

To Our Predecessors

The new CYNIC staff wishes to take this opportunity to commend the members of the retiring staff and its able editor for their splendid work, loyal effort and their long hours of work. The CYNIC prospered under their régime and appreciation was seldom shown for their untiring effort. The new editor of the CYNIC and her staff will endeavor to maintain the high standards of their predecessors and make the CYNIC an ever-improving publication on the campus.



"Ski Heil"

Vermont men's ski team was last week-end the host to teams from Middlebury and Norwich in an intercollegiate ski meet. This marked the team's fifth participation in intercollegiate competition this winter. Coached by Otto Hollaus, the team's eight men have improved immensely as the result of many hours of hard practice. Ev Bailey and Pete Patch have led their team in competition with all the large colleges of the East and although the team has not won any meet they have placed well in several meets. The team is going next week-end to Lake Placid to enter its last competition meet.

Vermont should be especially proud of its women skiers who have competed in two meets and have placed very well in both. At the University of New Hampshire, Dorothea Smith and Barbara Burns each took second place in the downhill slalom.

Sally Peters won first place at the Middlebury carnival against a field of twenty-four. These women were chosen from the eight women who comprise the ski club. To these women, who have spent many hours of untiring effort in practice, we give our praise.

To both of Vermont's ski teams, we say "Ski Heil," and the best of luck.

The admission to the Splash Party tonight is 10c, not 25c as was previously announced. There is free admission to all those who come just to watch.

Remember the mid-week prayer and billet message seance which is held every Wednesday evening at 7.30 in the American Legion Hall on Church Street, directly over P'ine's Clothing Store. The Rev. Helen Graham, spiritual medium, will conduct the service.

Bluestockings will meet Tuesday evening at 7.30, March 12, instead of March 5, because of the University lecture being held that evening.

There will be a meeting of the entire CYNIC staff, including scrubs, at Southwick, Thursday, March 7, at 7.15.—Maywood Metcalf, Editor.

The Band Wagon

By BOB JOHNSON

Tommy Reynolds

"Everyone to his own taste;"—a very sage remark which is always good. As for us—crawling out on a limb. Somebody wanted a good technical explanation of the band. Our opinion:

The best things about the Reynolds' outfit were its advance publicity, press agents and a better than average tenor man. Patsy Parker—an A-1 jitterbug falls flat in the vocal department. Tommy "I'll take the next fifteen choruses." Reynolds lacks tone and a great amount of technique on his clarinet. He would do well to place more emphasis on the band and less on his own playing. The tenor man—exceptionally good with some different conceptions. The brass crew was very weak, ditto for the rhythm with the exception of the piano man.

Some few arrangements were good—most were poor examples of the Shaw-style. The strong point of the ork was the work and blend of the sax section—a point even more prominent on their two discs.

Maybe it was just an off night for the boys (there have been many recent changes in personnel, too, which didn't help much.) By the by—the Paragon's loss (on trumpet) will soon be Tommy Reynolds again.

Combing the Campuses

Norwich wowing them with a much improved Jack Teagarden and an up and coming Tony Pastor combine based on the Shavian records featuring his scat singing and refined tenor.

Princeton definitely hep with Erskine Hawkins and Al Donahue.

Campus favorite for the country seems to be Glenn Miller.

"Tuexdo Function" coming up as the most popular record on the hep side. "It's a Blue World" leading for the pretty department.

Personality of the Week

Gordon "Tex" Beneke, tenor man and scat singer with a different style . . . one of the big reasons for the Miller success . . . proving Texas grows hot musicians as well as long-horn cattle and beautiful babes . . . a charming, lazy, sincere, handsome sort of fellow . . . reported to be married. His latest choruses even surpass his earlier efforts.

Most Underrated Band?

One of our favorite sweet bands, and we don't mean "Messrs." Lombardo and Kaye, Glen Gray and the Casa Lomans has always held a high rating but is undeniably underrated. The band is blessed with men who double extraordinarily well, giving the band great opportunities for specialties. The reeds are well balanced, sometimes swelling to a seven-man reed section. The brass is brilliant and has two fine soloists. The rhythm is adequate. Glen Gray makes a fine front. The band has a definite style both for sweet and swing. Their records are always fine, especially their oldies.

Courses in Swing

I advocate this as seen at Brooklyn College, N. Y. U., Oberlin and Harvard. A new textbook in swing is needed. "Hot Jazz" is the best thus far but it is four years out of date and therefore is no longer adequate. All other books on the subject are inclined to be on the deficient side.

Turning the Dial

Note the great improvement in the Tommy Dorsey band. He is at last deserting the Dixieland field—Yank Lausen's trumpet is gone and Lee Costaldo really boots. Babe Rosin is terrific on tenor and the rhythm is once more on its old scale.

Charlie Barnet, with the "blackest" white band setting afire the country from coast to coast.

. . . Where we come in and Philbert tells he has got a date with somebody—which will bear looking into—his salary being lower than McCarthy's.

It is not now as it hath been of yore;—
Turn wheresoe'er I may
By night or day,
The things which I have seen I now can see no more."

Boy, Wordsworth had the right idea. The grass in the other guy's pasture certainly does seem greener. As lowly scrubs we used to think how swell it would be to some day climb into the editor's chair, get our names on the masthead, get by-lines on our editorials, and smoke quarter cigars. Well the day has come. We are now editors. - - - - And what do we find? "You can't have your cake and eat it."

Especially is this true of sports editors, who make their entrance at such a time as this. For this season of year is known in sports circles as a "slack season" and there is nothing to write about. Moreover, even if there were something to write about a sports editor couldn't write about it in his first issue. Past precedent has laid down the law that incoming men should establish their policies, give their future plans, congratulate their predecessors, and in fact, do anything but mention sports. Well here goes. Nobody can say we didn't die trying.

Platform Planks

First we wish to discuss our policies. We have none. However, we vow that this page will be constructive and not destructive. We vow to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. We vow to cover all Vermont sports from every angle, including intramurals. (Archie, take notice.) However, we also plan to keep contact with the outside sporting world by running occasional columns about the same. We recognize the fact that women are much more than they used to be in the days of the flying wedge. Hence we plan to run articles on women's sports by women reporters. But under no circumstances will we surrender this page to them.

We promise not to campaign for a new athletic field. (Not even for intramurals.) We don't want a University ping-pong team. We do not recognize tiddly-winks as a major sport and we don't bewail the fact that shuffle-board is not taught in the Aggie Department. So much for that.

Salutations

But getting serious again, we want to take our hats off to Art Wolk, our predecessor, whose shoes we are trying to fill. His columns were tops. They were something more than just sport columns. They possessed a certain intangible something that made one feel that the writer was conversing with the reader and discussing things of interest to both of them. In other words formality was out and the editor was speaking straight from the shoulder. We also wish to salute Carl Schofield and the rest of the outgoing staff for their fine work of this last year. Our only hope and desire is to continue in their footsteps and prove ourselves worthy successors.

Records Show Drastic Season For Courtmen

Lose to Norwich Twice, Scrub Middlebury 68-39 Bad Midseason Slump

With nine lettermen returning from a state championship team, Coach John Sabo looked with optimism toward his 1939-40 basketball season. The team opened against McGill and scored an unimpressive 32-25 victory. However, their ragged play was accredited to early season weaknesses, and they were still expected to accomplish great things during their coming season.

The Dartmouth Fracas

The Dartmouth Indians were the first Vermont conquerors. They accomplished this feat after a hectic ball game in which Ace Healy's last-minute basket which would have sent the game into an overtime was disallowed by an official who called a foul on a Dartmouth player somewhere else on the floor. Nobody heard the whistle and this was one time when a foul proved a blessing rather than a penalty. In this game Vermont showed a comeback punch which labelled them as a fighting team. They certainly had it that night.

Victory Knocks Again

The Cats downed a determined and sharpshooting quintet from Winooski 42-39 in a ding-dong battle in which Anse Belardinelli dropped in the last four baskets to clinch the game for U. V. M. The Mikemen stuck within striking distance all the way, and they managed to gain enough knowledge on how to break a Vermont zone to do serious damage in the future.

Another Glorious Defeat

A gang of hawk-eyed Fordham sophomores provided the Cats with their next bit of competition, but the experience cost the Vermonters a 46-42 defeat. Again the Cats showed a fine fighting spirit under pressure, outplaying their rivals when the going was toughest, but again they were beaten by Father Time. Frank Taylor came into the limelight as a dynamo of basketball power, for he played the game at full speed and was as brilliant and indispensable on the defense as he was on the scoring side. The Vermont quintet reached its peak in this contest.

Cats Hit Slump

The Fordham game was the crisis. The team had played three exceedingly close games, any one of which could have been a victory or a defeat. Now they would go up or down. The Cats went down, losing first to Tufts 48-37, then to Dartmouth by the lopsided margin of 68-39. The Horsemen next scored a surprising 46-41 triumph and slightly dimmed the Catamount hopes of a state championship.

Middlebury Routed

A momentary recovery was experienced just in time to give our old rivals from Middlebury a 56-27 shellacking. Ace Healy played a remarkable floor game that night, setting up his teammates time and again, doing any defensive work necessary and scoring nine points himself.

Another Relapse

A greatly improved Saint quintet spurted in the second half to outscore the Cats 61-56. The Mikemen popped them from all angles. They were content to remain at the Catamount heels until the finish, when their man to man defense suddenly tightened, and they spurted to the tape. If not for Corley's shooting the defeat by the Purple might have turned into a rout. Paul hoisted them in both coming and going for a total of 25 points, and was a thorn in the Purple's side as he dropped in point after point.

Springfield and Norwich

A speedy gang of gymnasts added a Catamount scalp to their growing string as they eked out a three-point victory for their third out of three on their northern tour. Vermont stayed within striking distance for the first part of the second half mainly due to the heroic defense of the Vermont hoop by Don Maley. Even though defeated, the team seemed to play much better than they had during many previous games.

The Norwich Horsemen outrode the Cats to the tune of 44-39 for their second Vermont triumph during the season. Vermont led at half time 24-23 and held a 35-27 advantage after eight minutes of the second period. However, they lacked their usual last-minute spurt and were easily overhauled by the Cavalry and subdued.

Season End With Trinity Victory

After splitting even on their last road trip of the year in which they lost 44-39 to Colgate and topped the N. Y. Teachers 55-45, the Green and Gold concluded their season with a 48-46 triumph over Trinity. Anse Belardinelli ended his basketball career at U. V. M. in a blaze of glory as he broke a 46-46 tie with a beautiful shot from the side, and dropped in an even 20 points.

The team's record in wins and losses stands at five wins and nine defeats. This record is far from impressive. However, many of their games were lost by very close margins and could easily have been victories. Their schedule this year was a tough one, and they fought one gruelling battle after another. This team may have lacked coordination, but they displayed a fine fighting spirit throughout the entire season.

Cadets From Norwich Capture State Ski Meet

Vermont Takes Early Lead As Collins Wins Eight-Mile Cross Country Run

Led by their ace skier, Vince Constant, the Norwich ski team rode to victory over Vermont and Middlebury in the first state intercollegiate championship ski meet. The total scores for the three teams were: Norwich, 816 points; Middlebury, 811.6 points; and Vermont, 781.1 points.

Dave Collins of Vermont took first place in the eight-mile cross-country run, followed by Ira Townsend of Middlebury, and Pete Patch of Vermont. The winner's time was 2 minutes 31.8 seconds. This was Friday's only event, and Vermont was in the lead, having 286.9 points, 3.4 points above Middlebury and 26.7 points above Norwich.

The downhill run on Saturday morning down the Nose Dive at Stowe was won by John Gale of Middlebury in 2:31.8. V. Constant and V. Fowler of Norwich placed second and third in that order.

In the slalom, V. Constant placed first in 75.6 seconds, with Ira Townsend and Pete Patch taking second and third.

3 Places for Patch

The cross-country course started in back of the men's gym, extended out through Centennial Field, crossed over and followed the Winooski River for some distance, till it branched off through the woods to the Burlington Airport. The return course followed the main road most of the way back to the gymnasium. Much of it was laid out through tricky woods. Pete Gale's time of 2:31.8 for the downhill run is very good for a college man, falling barely ten seconds behind the course record. Pete Patch did pretty well with two thirds and a fifth. He missed a second in the cross-country by three seconds. Vince Constant was high scorer with a first, second and eighth place. Dave Collins is one of the most improved cross-country skiers in the East and is pretty highly rated. Norwich, handicapped by injury, entered only four men instead of the usual five. Middlebury had to use one second-team man because of injury. Two first-team men were missing from Vermont's line-up, one because of illness, the other because of ineligibility. After the banquet sponsored by the Outing Club and held at the Delta Psi house on Saturday evening, Norwich was presented with a handsome eighteen-inch trophy. First- and second-place skiers in each event received medals. This was the first official state championship meet. Vermont took the initiative in organizing it. The meet was run by the Outing Club under I. S. U. sanction. Tim Gilbert and Jack Couture took charge. Sepp Ruschp and Otto Hollous were the course setters. Professors Prentice and Holmes, Mr. Lynde, Mr. Dodd, V. Marvin and C. Houghton officiated. The final results were:

S. A. E. Victors In Free Throw Tourney

"Coffee Corner" Team Takes Second With 33.2

In the intramural free-throw championship tournament held Friday and Saturday of last week the S A E team copped the laurels with a team average of 34.6 shots.

Each man on the team took fifty shots and the five highest men were counted. The S A E record was as follows: Salmon 36, Pullinen 37, Utley 34, Massucco 33, and Strachan 33.

The teams that participated were: Tau Epsilon Phi, Delta Psi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Alpha Tau Omega, Sigma Nu and the Coffee Corner.

The best score for the competition was made by Jimmy Horvath of the Coffee Corner team. He looped in forty-two free throws. Basch of T E P and Bove of Sigma Nu were tied for second honors with thirty-nine gratis baskets apiece.

The Coffee Corner team took second team honors with a per man average of 33.2, Delta Psi was third with a 30.4 average.

All men who intend to enter the intramural wrestling tournament to be held March 19-21 are reminded that practice sessions are being held Tuesdays and Thursdays at four o'clock. These men should sign up in the physical education office at once.

Although the time is getting short for practice, there is still an opportunity to report.

Quotable Quotes

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"Never allow yourself to become a 'case' if you can help it; and never froth at the mouth about things. That's the trouble with too many people. They froth at the mouth because they're reading the same newspaper too much. They get all scared about what they think Germany's going to do. They get all worried about 'reds' in the country. They get frothed up about what's going to become of democracy. And all the time they forget that there are limitations to all things; that there always is a balance to everything." Harvard University's famed poet, Robert Frost, says that's the reason his life has been "all holidays," whether he's working or playing.

New Flight Course For Student Fliers

New York, N. Y. (IP).—The Civil Aeronautics Authority has authorized New York University to conduct an experimental advanced flight course for a limited number of students who successfully completed the primary experimental course last spring.

Prof. James Coburn, of the Guggenheim School of Aeronautics of the University's College of Engineering, said that the new course would include 146 hours of ground school work to be given by the School and forty to fifty hours of an advanced controlled flight course at a designated flying school. At the conclusion of this training the students will receive the equivalent of a limited commercial certificate from the Authority.

"The requirements as outlined by the C. A. A. call for the successful completion of the private pilot course last semester, enrollment in college as a full-time student, certification from a new medical examination to be conducted by an approved C. A. A. flight surgeon, sufficient time available to complete the course by July 1, 1940, and ability to pay a laboratory fee of forty dollars to include insurance and medical examination," Professor Coburn said. "The C. A. A. will bear the expense of ground school and flight instruction."

The advanced program will differ widely from the primary course in that it will be far more comprehensive and will utilize heavier aircraft, Professor Coburn stated. "The flight operator will be required to provide at least one acceptable aircraft of 125 minimum horsepower not more than three years old. It must be a tandem type plane, with a modern fixed or sliding hatch, and must be stick controlled.

"The original experimental ground school course included ten hours of Civil Air Regulations, and thirty-five hours each of navigation and meteorology, while the advanced program calls for five hours each of navigation and meteorology, one hour of parachutes, fifty hours of aerodynamics and aircraft, sixty-five hours of engines, and ten hours each of instruments and radio navigation.

"The flying program will include a period of familiarization with heavier, more complicated airplanes; general air work; take-off and landing into and cross winds; forced landings, and general precision flying. Also, primary acrobatics, including advanced stalls, falling leafs, spins, half rolls, loops, snap rolls, Immelmans, advanced cross-country flying, and one hour dual instruction at night."

Campus Comment

Thirty Years Ago Today

To the Editor of the CYNIC:
Dear Sir:

Permit me to call attention to The Riddles of the Exeter Book, edited by Professor Tupper of this University and recently published by Ginn & Co. This book reveals a thorough and enthusiastic scholarship, of which the University of Vermont or any other university might well be proud.

The Exeter Book (Codex Exonieysis), which is kept in Exeter Cathedral, is one of the three most notable monuments of Anglo-Saxon poetry. It was the most important part of the library which Leofric, the first Bishop of Exeter, bequeathed to his Cathedral Church in 1071, and which he designated as "A mickel English book about all kinds of things composed in verse." In it is contained the collection of Anglo-Saxon Riddles, which were composed probably in the eighth century.

These riddles, which are really short poems of varying lengths, are interesting to us nowadays for several reasons. Some of them are excellent poetry, particularly those descriptive of nature; others throw light on many phases of the daily life of the time; still others are rich in the folklore of our early ancestors. Taken together, as Professor Tupper says, they "reveal at once the loftiest and lowest in older England's thought, and open up a hundred vistas of early word and action," and are therefore worthy of most careful study.

Professor Tupper's investigation is thoroughly adequate and appreciative. He furnishes the student of Anglo-Saxon with complete apparatus for the study of these poems. In an introduction of a hundred pages he discusses "The Comparative Study of Riddles," the "Originals and Analogues," the "Authorship." the "Solutions," the "Form and Structure," and the "Manuscripts" of the Exeter Book Riddles.

The text is followed by some one hundred and seventy pages of notes, which are a rich mien of information about not only the riddles but the culture of the Anglo-Saxons.

British Lecturer Speaks At Museum; Fourth Visit Here

Noted Journalist Discusses Present European Situation

On Tuesday evening, March 5, at the Fleming Museum, Mr. S. K. Ratcliffe of London, who is visiting the United States for the twenty-sixth time, spoke on the question of "What Next in Europe?" This marked Mr. Ratcliffe's fourth visit to the University of Vermont. The speaker is an experienced and exceptionally well-informed journalist and international observer, who has lectured in many educational and intellectual centers here in the United States, including the Town Hall, in New York City, and at Yale and Cornell. He has also written for such liberal periodicals as the New Statesman and Nation, as well as for the London Daily News.

England at War

Mr. Ratcliffe was introduced by Professor Evans of the history department. He opened his talk with a description of England at war, touching successively on the conditions under the blackout, and the adjustments necessary to the lives of the people in their changed world, the movement of the population out into the country, beginning with the larger companies, and including the various government offices and a tremendous number of the women and children and, lastly, the fact that England is approaching a new sort of totalitarianism—a totalitarianism that is voluntary, and which is accepted by the people as a necessity.

At this point he launched out into a more general discussion of the war. "It has been called a war of mystery," he stated. But there was no justification for this, he added. To illustrate his point he mentioned the German change in policy, from the Blitzkrieg of the nineteenth

Women Compete In Telegraphic Meets

Vermont Girls Oppose Six Institutions

Swimming and archery meets by telegraph are now occupying the attention of University of Vermont girls, who are swimming and shooting in competition with other college girls from all over the United States. The University of Oregon sponsors the archery telegraphic tournament, which consists of four classes. In the class entered by University of Vermont women are several colleges from the far West. The six institutions which the Vermont girls are trying to beat are Goucher College, Oregon Education College, University of Nevada, Willamette University, Santa Rosa Junior College and Glendale Junior College of California.

Shooting each week for three weeks, the four highest scorers among the University of Vermont girls send in a special round of scores shot by them by telegraph to the University of Oregon. Results of the meets will be known shortly.

The telegraphic swim meet is being held by colleges and universities all over the country. It is sponsored by the University of Pennsylvania, and closes March 15. An eight-girl team from the University of Vermont will swim in regular meet style, telegraphing results and times of the various races to the University of Pennsylvania.

Students Hear Middlebury Prof.

Speaks to Methodist Church College Group

Last Sunday Professor Heinrichs of Middlebury College spoke to the Methodist Church College Group on "What America Means to Me." The significance of being a "citizen" of the United States as contrasted to being a "subject" of a king was brought out. Professor Heinrichs mentioned the advantages women of America have over women of other countries. In America the freeness of education, the educational opportunities women have, and the right for the womanhood of America to express its mind through legal ballot, are striking examples of these advantages. Professor Heinrichs stressed the fact that in foreign countries there is almost no freedom of speech or press, labor unions are definitely forbidden, and one-sixth of the globe is under controlled economy.

Ashamed of America

"Why I am Ashamed I am an American" was another view discussed, covering as some of the points: when the United States left the League of Nations; the United States is 97 percent in sympathy with China, yet she is still shipping munitions to Japan; when it was asked "can Finland pay back the twenty million dollars she wants to borrow," Professor Heinrichs said, "I'd rather die than lose our ideals."

When asked what he thought a just peace would be, Professor Heinrichs replied with these points: (1) Restitution of all countries that have been destroyed; (2) redistribution of colonies and industry; (3) complete disarmament; (4) and to show by force that force does not pay.

Keep Out of Peace

It was cited that if America wants to keep out of the war she must also keep out of the Peace.

Professor Heinrichs ended his speech by saying that there would undoubtedly be a definite change in the activity in the European situation after the middle of April.

On Sunday, March 10, Prof. L. S. Rowell of the zoology department of the University will speak on "Wild Life Conservation."

Bowling Winners To Be Announced

Vermont Debaters To Meet Drew and Florida Speakers

Decision Debate With Drew on Isolation Issue

The men's debating team will be very active for the next two weeks with four home debates listed on this schedule. Teams from Drew University, University of Florida, Providence College and the University of Ottawa will face Vermont speakers, discussing the question, "Resolved, That the United States should follow a policy of strict (economic and military) isolation toward all nations engaged in armed international or civil conflict."

The first encounter, with Brothers College, Drew University, of Madison, N. J., will be held in Room 33, South College, Friday, March 8, at 3.15. A. H. Becker '41 and J. G. Cohen '42 will uphold the negative of the above question for Vermont.

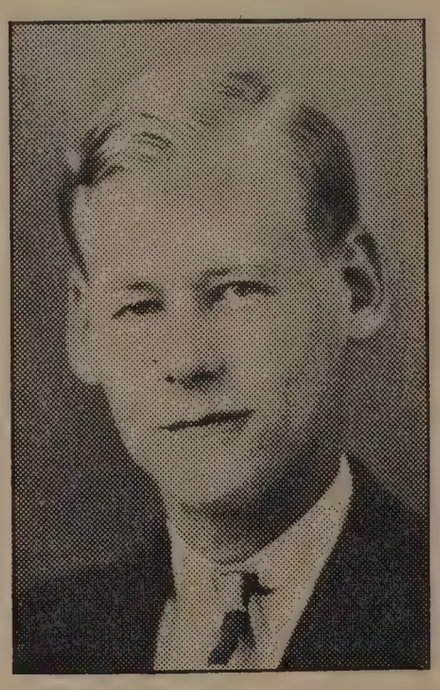
On Monday evening, March 11, at the Fleming Museum, Becker and Cohen will uphold the negative side of the same issue against Stuart Simon '40 and George Young, senior law student debaters from the University of Florida. Mr. Simon is president of the University of Florida Debate Club, a senior in arts and sciences, winner of the 1939 Southern Association Oratory Contest, and president of his fraternity, Phi Beta Delta. Mr. Young is a senior in Law School, Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Kappa Phi and Sigma Alpha Epsilon. Both are members of Blue Key, highest honorary leadership fraternity on their campus.

Further details of the debates with Providence College, Providence, R. I., on March 12 and the University of Ottawa, March 16, will appear in the next issue of the CYNIC.

U.V.M. To Celebrate 150th Anniversary

October 1941 Will Be Date of Festivities

Tentative dates for the Sesquicentennial celebration, marking the 150th anniversary of the founding of the University of Vermont in 1791, have been set for October 3, 4 and 5, 1941, and will include the dedication of the new million dollar Waterman building, which it is expected will be completed by that time.



Prof. H. F. Perkins, head of the general committee, stated that Friday, October 3, according to the present program, will be observed as College Day, when each college will arrange for its own meetings and exercises, with perhaps the reading of scientific and literary papers, the holding of separate dinners, and public meetings.

It is planned, according to Professor Perkins, to make Saturday, October 4, the most important day of the celebration, marked by such features as the conferring of honorary degrees, an oration, the dedication of the Waterman building, athletic and social functions, a banquet, and a dramatization of University history.

On Sunday, October 5, there will be a special vesper service, with special music by the University Choir and Orchestra, and a preacher of outstanding ability.

Dr. A. E. Nuquist of the political science department visited the town meeting in Johnson, March 5, with Mr. Dodge of the Extension Service.

Plans Completed For Fraternity Sing

Nine Fraternities Plan to Participate

Great plans for the annual interfraternity sing to be held March 22 at Southwick Memorial are now being formulated by E. A. Guilbert '41, S A E, chairman of the committee. As a result of last year's outstanding success, Guilbert is sure that even more interest will be taken this year. The interfraternity sing is a fairly new innovation on the campus, having been originated only last year, but it is rapidly taking shape into being one of the finest interfraternity activities on the campus. Nine fraternities are taking part in this year's competition, one more than last year. They are Alpha Tau Omega, Delta Psi, Kappa Sigma, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Sigma Delta, Lambda Iota, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Nu and Sigma Phi.

Keen Competition

Sigma Alpha Epsilon, winners of last year's event, under the direction of Louis Pichierri '41, musical education student, again promise to provide top-notch competition to the other eight fraternities, including Delta Psi, led by Wayne Barrows, which placed second.

A new plan this year will bring together all the participating singers into a massed glee club to be led by Louis Pichierri. In addition to the regular fraternity glee clubs there will also be a group of soloists including T. K. Malone '41, musical education student. Stanley Pike will be the accompanist for all the fraternities.

Traynor Trophy Points

The fraternities will have something to strive for this year because in addition to the awarding of the Daniel Carroll cup, three points toward the Traynor trophy will also be awarded to the winner of the contest. Most of the fraternities have already started rehearsing and excellent performances may be expected from them.

E. Guilbert is being ably assisted by a committee of ten men, each man representing a fraternity. The members of the committee are: A. L. Warden '42, Alpha Tau Omega; Clark Miller '42, Phi Delta Theta; Jack Goldman '43, Tau Epsilon Phi; Norman Tucker '42, Sigma Phi; Hazen Wood '42, Delta Psi; J. A. White '42, Lambda Iota; Bob Steinman '42, Phi Sigma Delta; Lyman Hunt '41, Kappa Sigma; and Don Bunn, Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Annual Sugar Party At Men's Gym; To Honor Dean Hills

Committees Announce Dancing Will Follow Eating and Entertainment

A dance will follow the fourth annual Dean Hills' sugar party to be held tonight in the men's gymnasium. Dean J. L. Hills of the Agricultural College, who has completed fifty-three years of service here at the University, will be guest of honor, Dr. H. A. Kemp, dean of the Medical College, will be the speaker.

The menu will consist of sugar on snow, doughnuts, pickles and coffee, with plenty of everything for everybody served in the traditional Vermont fashion. During the party the committee have planned a short but snappy entertainment.

The proceeds from this affair are added to a fund for assisting students who need financial aid. The price is thirty-five cents for students and fifty cents for adults. It is suggested by the committee in charge that you buy your tickets early.

The sugar party is sponsored by the Agriculture Club, Home Economics Club, University Chapter of the Future Farmers of America and Alpha Zeta, honorary agricultural fraternity.

The committees in charge are headed by G. Page '40 for the men's committee and Marion Skinner '40 as chairman for the women's committee. The men's committee is composed of the following men: Snow, C. A. Lafley '40; syrup, F. W. Nye '41; entertainment, R. F. Evans '41; and finance, H. M. Ketcham '40. The women's committee is made up of Eloise Bayley '41, Hester Carver '41, Helen Reed '40, Madge Duba '41, Louise Peters '41, Janet Taylor '42 and Hester Rice '42.

Musicians Present Brahm's "Requiem"

Vermont Symphony Members Contribute

As a climax to the activities of the musical department for the season, the combined orchestra, choir and glee club will present Brahm's "Requiem" on April 28.

This musical production, which was composed in the latter part of the nineteenth century, is one of the greatest works ever written for a combined orchestra and glee club.

The chorus, of about one hundred members, is composed, in addition to the choir and glee club, of several townspeople and members of the faculty who were exceptionally interested in this production and asked to take part in it.

The University orchestra will also be augmented by outside talent, by several members of the Vermont Symphony and players engaged from New York and Boston. The total personnel of the orchestra numbers approximately forty-five people.

This "Requiem" was successfully performed in the Boston Symphony Hall last winter by the combined musical organizations from Harvard and Radcliffe, accompanied by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Koussevitzky.

The musical organizations have been working on this presentation with much enthusiasm under the capable direction of Professor Kirby, and it promises to be a very impressive concert.

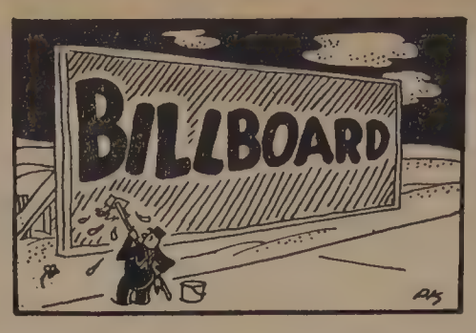
EDITORIALS

"What Are You Reading?"

Our attention has recently been called to the many articles in newspapers and magazines about the deplorable indifference that college students have in regard to our government's problems, to international relations and the progress of World War II. We asked one of our Political Science instructors for his opinion upon the subject and he emphatically stated that he thought the general student body at Vermont knew far too little about the affairs of our government and of the world.



"Freedom of thought and of action is threatened in our world, and if we are to preserve the freedom which has been won for us at a great cost, it is imperative that universities, and university men and women, be alive to the issues and alert in playing their part," says Dr. R. C. Wallace, of Queens University, as he told to take their place in the world of affairs.

Many colleges, who realize that in a few years college students will be active voters, are introducing courses dealing with citizenship. At Vermont Junior College in Montpelier, recently, important questions on national and international policies were asked of the entire student body by a competent reporter who found that the majority of students were well-informed on those subjects. At Middlebury, all freshmen are required to take a course on current events and many students feel that it is one of the most enlightening and interesting courses offered. Time magazine says that undergraduates make lower grades on its current events tests than do Time readers.

Dr. Rowell Gray Ham, Mount Holyoke College president, who recently said that every college needed a few "Reds," undoubtedly made this statement to arouse college students from their indifference toward national affairs. The editor of the Free Press recently said, "Cynical attitudes acquired by college students regarding government here in the United States may be justified, but they don't particularly contribute toward better government, unless they shake out of it sufficiently to recognize that bad government is a challenge to them to improve it."

For busy college students to keep posted on current events is not difficult. A five-minutes persual each day of any of the many newspapers in our library will adequately inform any student. American newspapers on the whole are giving us objective, factual straight news reporting which is unique in the world today. In a world which has turned black under government censorship, we can thank God that here in America, faulty as our press may be, it is, nevertheless, free—says Northwestern University's journalism dean, Kenneth E. Olson. Will Rogers was famous for his intimate knowledge on many subjects, and he said, "All I know is what I read in the papers."

Too many students pick up the newspapers, read the "funnies" and the sports page and put it down. Such a practice is deplorable for at no other time will you be able to discuss your beliefs and opinions about the policies of our government, of which you so soon will be an active voter and perhaps an office holder, more freely and more profitably with people of your own age as at present. For, as the editor of the McGill Daily says, "The university stands for leadership in society; now, more than ever before, it must make a supreme effort so to train intelligent leaders that the catastrophies of today and yesterday will ultimately be no more." To this we add that no university can do this unless the entire student body is well-informed on the state of national and international affairs. And so we say, "What are you reading?"

Pilgrim Fellowship To Have Buffet Supper

A very unusual program is being worked out for the Pilgrim Fellowship meeting Sunday, March 10. A buffet supper will open the program at 6.15. Following this each member of the group is going to contribute some verse, thought, or poem that has meant something to him. A real fellowship hour is the aim of the committee so the sharing of ideas will take place around the fireplace. Come at 6.15 to the parish house of the First Church for the pleasant experience that awaits you.

Golds Beat Greens At Splash Party

The splash party held last Tuesday night at the Y was one of the most enjoyable get-togethers the W. A. A. has held for some time. The girls came down to the pool about 7.30. The novelty races were interspersed among the regular swimming events, making it a rather hilarious tournament. Green and Gold competition ran at top speed, and when the final scores were added, it was found that the Golds had just nosed out the Greens by a small margin.

The first event of the evening was the 20-yard crawl, won by the Greens, in which Janet Rust '42 placed first, Virginia Mitchell '43 second, and Gerry Waldo '40 third. The Golds won the 40-yard crawl, with Maria Dietrich '42 placing first, Joyce Bone '43 second, and Connie Cushing '43 third. The novelty race, candle race, was won by Gerry Waldo, Phyllis Savage '43 and Maria Dietrich following, and honors going to the Greens. In the 20-yard back stroke, Maria Dietrich placed first, Janet Rust second, and Joyce Bone third. The Golds scored the most points in that event as they did in the 20-yard side which was won by Janet Dike '43, Gerry Waldo and Phyllis Savage in next place. The varsity crew race was a tie. The Greens came out ahead in the cork and spoon race. Helen McLane '43 placed first, Elizabeth Deming '43 second, Mary Howe '40 third. The Golds won the baton race. The girls also dived and swam freely for a while.

It was a most enjoyable evening and one in which there was shown great enthusiasm for Green and Gold teamwork. We'd like to see more of it.

Dr. Tucker was graduated from Wesleyan University, took his professional degree from Union Theological Seminary and in 1915 received his M.A. degree from Columbia University and in 1918 his Ph.D. degree from the same institution. He holds honorary degrees from Ohio Northern and from Wesleyan University.

Doctor Tucker is the author of two books and he is a contributor to the religious press of the country.

Mary Howe Passes Refereeing Test

Mary Howe '40 was awarded the title of referee after passing her National Referee Rating Test at Play Day, March 2. This is a great honor, as there are few women who pass this national rating test in college. These are only five women in this State who have passed it at all. A stiff examination of both practical and written types is given, with a grade of 85 required to pass. Mary not only passed, she passed with a high score. This gives her the privilege of refereeing women's games anywhere in Vermont or in the United States. She has a good right to feel proud.

Tra-La!—Spring—Or Is It?

That may be snow we see outside and the thermometer may hit zero any minute but as far as this department is concerned "Old Man" Winter is licked. Spring is here. If you don't think so drop around the gym some afternoon and see for yourself. Down in the cage Larry Gardner is putting a group of aspiring diamond men through the mill of early season warmups. Creaky "soupbones" are being limbered up, batting eyes are being sharpened and the old familiar spat of baseball on leather is a balm to the ears. If you need any further proof take a look at Archie's runners and weight hurlers. Or else watch Professor Carpenter over there, strolling around with a tennis racket in his hand. Maybe you'll believe us now.

Not that we're going to start making wild guesses and predictions about the future. No, sir. But we're glad enough to accept the fact that baseball, track and tennis are back with us. They spell robins and buds to us.

The Great Invasion

At this point we are going to make a seeming contradiction. It seems that winter is a die-hard. We forgot the high-school tournament coming off at the Memorial Auditorium this week-end. That is winter's last stand. And maybe it is the north's last stand too for four southern high schools are going to be in Burlington Saturday doing their darndest to prove that Northern Vermont hasn't got a corner on good basketball. Cathedral and Burlington are the lone opposers of the southern invasion. And we feel safe. Despite the fine showing of the southern teams we'll still string along with the Queen City lads. Cathedral if it can keep from getting jittery or over-confident should take the tournament in a walk. The Green and White has proved itself one of the finest teams in Vermont High School basketball and with Pat Evelti and Ed Merola setting the pace should come through to the title. Burlington is our choice for second place. Buck Hard's "boys in blue" have developed fast since their weak early season start and may even surprise everybody by spilling Cathedral. At all events they should be in their right behind their local foes at the finish.

This high, wide and handsome fortune telling may bring down upon our heads the wrath of the supporters of the South but we'll risk it. As far as we're concerned the south is represented by some mighty fine quintets but none has proven thus far that they have the power necessary to stop Cathedral. If we're wrong we'll apologize after the tournament. Come what may it will be a great tournament and there should be plenty of fireworks.

Call to Men of Brawn

Getting back to the campus, we find that thus far the entrants to the Annual Hexathlon Tourney number six. Can it be that in the entire University of Vermont there are only six males who are interested in a test of strength? We hate to sound crusading but we feel that there must be other men who have the necessary skill to take part in this tournament. So here's our call for men of brawn.

Instinct tells me that this is probably a column so without further ado I am off—to the springlike air of the Vermont campus.

Ninety-Six Answer Call For Track Men

Many Experienced Men Included in Group

The call to track this spring was answered by a total of ninety-six aspirants. All of the training will be done indoors until the weather is suitable for outside work and many men no doubt will drop out when this outdoor training starts, but Coach Archie Post will nevertheless have a large nucleus of men to work with. Returning from last year's successful squad are: Bud Allen, a hurdler; Arnie Becker, in the broad jump; Johnny Davis, pole vault; Frank Livak, a distance runner; Gordie Smith, a sprint man; and Dave Stowell, a middle distance runner. To help this group along, Post can count on a promising group of sophomores, including the two Webster boys for long distance running, J. Burgess and Shortle in the sprints, and Ray Kallman and the Long boys in the weights. These weight men, sorely lacking last year, will prove a boon to Coach Post since he has only one weight man returning, Johnstone, and the latter is a freshman in Medical School. Also returning to school is Akley, one of the outstanding discus throwers in New England, who is at present working out in baseball. To quote Coach Post, "He is one of the best discus prospects to ever enter this school."

Romping the boards with this group of varsity material is a group of freshman prospects which will no doubt be enlarged later. Among the first-year men are Buttles and Duque, cross-country men, and Milne, a sprinter from Spaulding High School.

The varsity and freshman track schedules just released are:

City College Makes Student Life Movie

New York, N. Y. (I.P.)—A newsreel depicting student life at the City College was begun recently at the college by members of the Film and Sprockets Society, an undergraduate group interested in the study and production of motion pictures. The finished film will be the first in a series of six 20-minute newsreels to be produced this year.

"We intend to begin preserving a visual, historical record of City College through the years," George Kaplan, president of the society, said.

Members of the society plan to combine the six newsreels each year into a unified picture of extra-curricular activities to be shown to entering freshmen. Last year the society produced a twenty-minute film of life at the House Plan, social unit at the college. At the World's Fair this year a picture of general activities at the college, filmed by members of the society, was shown.

The films will be accompanied by a synchronized sound record, somewhat on the style of the first commercial sound films. It will include a running commentary and background music by the City College Orchestra. Some time in the future the society hopes to be able to produce films which include a sound track.

Golf Suggested As Universal College Sport

Average Boy or Girl Advised to Take Up The Game That Lasts

By CHARLES EVANS, JR.

The figures on college golf are surprising, though we all know that the sport has taken a great hold and that at the present time there is hardly a college in the civilized world in which one cannot find a golfer. This means that a boy can talk his favorite sport wherever he happens to be in college. The estimates on the number of students, boys and girls, who play golf are greatly interesting. One estimate reveals that 50 students now play golf to one who plays baseball, and that 88 students now play golf to one who plays tennis. Another estimate is that 185 students play golf to one who plays football. I have no way of checking up on these figures.

A college boy does not have to be very strong or very anything, in fact, to get a great deal of pleasure out of golf. I recommend it to the average boy and girl in college; I advise all to play—not occasionally, but regularly. It seems to me that it is an ideal game, one which will increase in popularity in the colleges.

Other Games Attractive

There are many games more attractive to the usual run of collegians, but it is well to lay the foundation in college for the game that abides. Other games will always have their interest, but all too soon must be laid aside.

There is no doubt that golf from a distance does not seem a game for college boys, for from the outside you judge them to prefer the more aggressive games with the personal encounter, games that bring out the fighting spirit of youth and the boys' desire for action. Their day soon passes, and, unless college graduates turn to golf, a long sportless season lies before them. But golf is generous and lets them all in: any age, any size; and among the very best players of America there are men of almost every imaginable physique.

Therefore, I beg students to play the game of golf. Although it exercises every muscle of the body, there is only pleasant fatigue afterward. Moreover, golf is a great healer; it gives us exercise under the most healthful conditions, and brings calm and forgetfulness to sick and troubled people.

Pleasure and Pain

Two factors, aside from the charm of the game itself, contributed largely to the wonderful popularity of golf. There were the pleasure of the game, the sheer joy of it; and the pains and griefs, the tragedies that make up championship golf. Titles are beautiful things to own, and most anyone would love to have one. It has been my experience that the things hardest to get are the most gratifying. Of all the games golf is the most difficult to acquire at birth. You need something, however, in you that makes you keep practicing after many serious setbacks.

College students need this sport badly. It is gratifying to observe athletic directors seeing the light. Athletically speaking colleges are not inclined to enough golf.

Almost any college boy or girl can find the chance to play golf. And it is worth the time and expense, just as an education. I have learned a good many things on the golf course that are not taught in a college classroom. Self-control is one thing.

Golf Never Loses Thrill

Because none of us can ever master all clubs absolutely, the game never ceases to abound in thrills, nor does custom stale the sport. Herein lies the lure of golf—the eternal promise that leads us on and on in our passionate quest for fulfillment. Every once in awhile, you think you have found the secret of the flying ball—some movement of hand or wrist, some mystery of stance, that always eluded you before. Always it is the little thing that will send the ball farther than we have yet hit it, and in our mind's eye we can see it sailing far and sure. And as for our putts, particularly those simple little ones that always wrung our souls with anguish, our balls having a strangely errant habit on that tiny spot of well-kept turf around the hole, we have learned the secret at last.

When we stand on the tee with our hearts swelling with gladness, it is a time when we understand how good a place the world is, and for two hours or more, we banish all its worries and walk happily in the Land of Play.

Golf is a game that fills both hands with blessings; we can dream of them at night, and enjoy them in the sunshine; and whether our dreams fail us or are realized, we shall find health and happiness along the way.

All this is very simple, and I recommend it to every student who is seeking an outdoor amusement.

I am working to increase the interest in golf. The N. C. A. A. Committee wishes that one can hear the word "golf" echoing popularly in the different rooms of our colleges.

Six Men to Compete In Annual Hexathlon

The entries to date for the hexathlon championship to be held March 17 and 18 are F. Taylor, A. Clark, L. Gallup, F. Swift, M. Keith and R. Ladd.

There is still time for a few ambitious men to sign up and get in the eight required workouts. The hexathlon will afford a man the opportunity to get a much better preparation for the interfraternity track meet coming up soon.

It seems that with a male student body of between seven and eight hundred there are more than six able-bodied men in the University. It is true that this competition requires much stamina and intestinal fortitude, but a fellow will not be laughed at if he doesn't cop the trophy. The fun, excitement and thrill of being in such a competition should be sufficient compensation for participating, even if you don't take first place.

The fraternities must submit either a yes or no answer through the medium of their intramural representatives to Archie Post by Saturday on whether or not they are entering a relay team.

The six required workouts must be completed in order to run in this event. Forfeits are a very undesirable occurrence, so it is urged that teams really get down to business and look at this thing seriously.

Stick passing should be practiced, as that is an essential phase of the relays. Teams should get on the track in the very near future and do some real work.

Boo-Hoo Item: An entire chemistry class at University of Toledo was hurriedly dismissed recently when a student put some chemicals together to inadvertently make tear gas.

Now, if there's an epidemic of this sort of thing, we'll know all mistakes of this nature are not just plain errors.

Indiana University students are jittery these days: There's a local fireman who is seen frequently in student meeting places who looks exactly like the university president, Herman B. Wells, and his appearance causes no end of consternation. But the fireman's a thoughtful guy, though, and if you don't believe it, listen to this: "I walk across the campus quite often and always try to be friendly, because I wouldn't want to damage President Wells' reputation for friendliness."

We don't go in for exam boners very often, but this one from a Hillsdale College quiz contains more truth than boner: "A moron is a person with several husbands or wives, an insane sort of an individual."

Bib business has at last invaded the real of collegiate party-throwing. A University of Detroit student has organized "Parties, Inc."—and the new firm will guarantee the success of any social function from a hayride to a wedding.

But the company—wisely—will have nothing to do with your escort for the evening. You'll have to take care of that little matter without the firm's expert advice.

Baseball Approaches As Nine Lettermen Return To Practice

Pitchers Practice for Season Opening March 30 Against Navy Team

The crack of the hickory is heard with a will in the cage these days as thirty-one aspiring baseball candidates show their wares to Coach Larry Gardner. Among the lettermen returning are: Lawrence and Broutsas, outfielders; Boucher and Corbett, catchers; Crossley, DePalo and Healy, infielders; and three veteran pitchers, Hart, Belardinelli and the ace of last year's mound staff, Lefty Pesarik. To assist these veterans Coach Gardner has an up and coming sophomore group, the most brilliant of whom are Sig Sysko, an outfielder, and Big John Zulinger and Conrad, pitchers, and Johnny Spasyk, a catcher. Also doing the pitching chores these days are Clausing, Poulin, R. Carlson, Akley, Caldwell and Strassburg. Other promising candidates include Utley, Don Maley and Frankie Taylor.

The practice this week is mainly to get the pitchers into shape for more strenuous duties and to sharpen the batting eyes of the other prospects. Since there has been no fielding practice the first cut will take place at least a week hence, and then more strenuous work until the start of the southern trip and the first game with Navy on March 30.

This year's enthusiastic group will attempt to better the mark of their predecessors with the following schedule of twenty-three games, which, oddly enough, lists four games with William and Mary this year.

Mar.	30—Navy	Annapolis
Apr.	1—U. of Maryland	College Park

Library Established To Keep Propaganda

LEXINGTON, Va. (I.P.)—Establishment of a new research depository, the Propaganda and Promotion Archives, was announced here by President Francis P. Gaines of Washington and Lee University.

The new Archives, which already contain a unique collection of propaganda documents, were organized and arranged last summer by Foster Mohrhardt, Librarian, and O. W. Riegel, Director of the Lee Journalism Foundation.

In a joint statement issued here, the organizers stated: "In view of the force and influence of propaganda and promotional activity in modern life, it was felt that Washington and Lee University could make a genuine contribution to scholarship by collecting and preserving the mass of propaganda material which is being turned out at great expense by foreign governments and foreign and domestic pressure groups.

"Libraries customarily receive a certain amount of such material," Mr. Mohrhardt pointed out, "but as far as I know, little systematic effort is made to collect all of the documents available."

The Archives are housed on the ground floor of the Carnegie Library on the Washington and Lee campus. The propaganda material is being cross-indexed and filed. Approximately 10,000 items of propaganda material, gathered within the last two years by students in Mr. Riegel's Public Opinion course, were added to the Archives in September.

Prof. Kirby Speaks

Mr. Kirby's office is in the back wing of the Music Building, up on the second floor. It is quite small, with two windows overlooking trees (all frosted white with snow this morning) and backyards, and cheerfully hung with flowered curtains. In other words, it was a perfect setting for an interview.

We plunged straight into the business at hand. I asked him where he "first saw the light of day." That sounded like a remarkable beginning. The answer was "Boston." We went on from there to the question of education. He graduated from Harvard in 1935. After that, the very next year, he went to London and studied at the Royal College of Music there. When asked how he first became interested in music he answered, "I've always been interested in it. . . . There have never been any great musicians in the family—but my mother and father were quite fond of music." He smiled.

At the Royal College of Music he studied mainly orchestral and choral conducting. In the meantime he did quite a bit of traveling in France and Germany, as well as in England, and listened to symphonies and operas in all the music centers of Europe.

In London alone there were four great symphonic orchestras, so that there was certainly no lack of opportunity to hear the music of the masters interpreted in as many different ways as there were conductors.

After that fruitful year in England he returned to Harvard, where he spent his time up to the present in tutoring and in graduate study.

Plays Two Instruments

He plays two instruments well—the piano and the organ. Of these, he prefers the piano. However, in addition, his studies of conducting necessitated learning the fundamentals of every instrument commonly used in an orchestra. It was also necessary to study the composers in order to understand better their music.

"Music," says Mr. Kirby, "is recreational. . . . The conductor has to understand not only the composer and what he was getting at, but he must know just how each musician in his orchestra plays—he must understand each man under him; and he must be able to blend all of their separate interpretations into one and the same, which is flavored just as much by the conductor's own personality as by that of the man who composed it.

"Nowadays, when great music such as Beethoven's 5th Symphony, which is known to practically everyone, is played, people are prone to emphasize the conductor and his interpretation, rather than the music itself—in order to give a sense of newness to the music.

"Many people," he continued, "who are technically interested in music, say that they can enjoy it just as much by merely reading the score as in hearing it played." He disagrees with this attitude. "Music is not alive until it is played. It must be brought to life by the musician." Going back to the technical side, he does not agree with those critics who take a purely intellectual interest in music. "Enjoyment must be just as much emotional as intellectual."

We began to speak of music in comparison with the other arts.

"There is a transientness about music—it must be enjoyed and analyzed at the moment it is being played. On the other hand, you can stand for hours before a painting, until you have seen and interpreted everything on the canvas. . . . It is the same way with literature. . . . But music does not exist, except when it is being played."

Sports Enthusiast

At this point we left the field of music and invaded the more mundane things, such as golf. Mr. Kirby is an enthusiastic swinger of the driving iron.

"In Boston," he said, "you can play golf all winter long." He looked out of the window with regret at the snow.

He is interested in painting, and the other arts, "but purely from the layman's point of view." As for literature, he likes to read everything. Detective stories rank high in favor. When we came to Wodehouse there was a split vote. He does like some of his books. But then, on the other hand, he doesn't think much of some of the English humor. "And the English don't think much of American humor." In self-defense, at the Royal College, he used to take along a copy of the New Yorker to spring on the too avid Punch enthusiast.

Regardless of what the English may think, however, Mr. Kirby (an American) really does have a remarkable sense of humor, which fact anyone in the choir will attest to. Moreover, he has done an astounding piece of work in the music line here, ever since he came to Burlington last September. Ask anyone.

Thirty Girls Study Choral Speaking

Thirty University of Vermont girls have become interested in choral speaking, and a group has been formed under Miss Mary B. Sullivan, instructor in education and English, which meets weekly for practice. The girls hope that some day, when they have mastered some of the finer points of choral speaking, they may have a verse-speaking choir. But first they must learn much more about the interpretative speaking of both poetry and prose. It is necessary for a verse-speaking choir to practice just as a singing choir does to improve its technique in the selections it chooses to present.

Miss Sullivan announces that other University girls who may be interested in choral speaking are welcome to join the group.

At the University of the South, each junior elected to Phi Beta Kappa is given a $100 scholarship.

century to the strange procedure which it seems to be following in this present war.

German Sea Power

What about German sea power? According to Mr. Ratcliffe, the Germans haven't used their full striking force there because they are preparing for a total assault. To explain the delay on land, he said that Germany, profiting from experience, is determined not to be caught on two fronts. They accomplished the Polish campaign in short order. But when they turned around to combat France, winter was setting in, and both armies were solidly grounded behind their lines. France had profited by the Polish campaign—she had mobilized in the meantime. It was too late in the year to do anything about it. So Germany sat down to wait.

England, he went on to say, has been criticized for remaining inactive. According to the theory of Liddell-Hart, whose policy has been adopted by Hore-Belisha, it is an absolute necessity that England and France adopt a defense strategy alone. It would be ridiculous, at this time of year anyway, to launch a general offensive.

When it came to the probability of a "world" war, Mr. Ratcliffe stated that he thought there might possibly be danger in the Mediterranean and the Near East, more likely than in Egypt or Ethiopia. He considers Turkey's decision a cardinal matter, and expects an important departure from caution.

Importance of Churchill

Next he reviewed the importance of Winston Churchill to the British cabinet, and the likeliness of his becoming prime minister, or "second in command" to Lord Halifax.

When it came to the question of what to expect next, he reviewed the various differences of opinion, mentioning the costliness of waiting for the allies, and the possibility that Germany might profit by this in trying to draw in the neutrals. As for the length and character of the war, that is a matter of speculation, though he rather supposes that it will be long. Speaking of peace terms, he expresses the opinion that it is useless to formulate them now, since the post-war world will be entirely different from the present one.

Finally Mr. Ratcliffe concluded with a statement of what he thinks to be the best procedure for the United States—to withhold her physical strength, and prepare herself to make the biggest and most important contribution when the time comes to draw up the peace terms.

Following the talk Mr. Ratcliffe spent some time in answering questions from the audience.

Kappa Sigma Initiates Five New Members

The Alpha Lambda Chapter of the Kappa Sigma fraternity held its full initiation on Sunday, March 3, when four men were initiated: J. J. White '42, W. J. Newcomb '42, E. J. Kodys '42 and J. T. Dohney '41. The chapter held a banquet for the alumni on Monday. Among those present were Dean Hills of the Agricultural College, Sabin C. Abell, graduate manager of athletics at U. V. M., Wesley Abell, city clerk, Theodore Hopkins, city attorney, and Warren Austin, Jr., local attorney. Following the banquet M. L. Cushing was initiated. Dean Hills gave an explanatory lecture on the significance of the ritual. The evening closed with the alumni engaging the chapter in bowling.

VOLUME 58 BURLINGTON, VERMONT, TUESDAY, MARCH 12, 1940 NUMBER 42

New Organization Sponsored By D.A.R.

Good Citizenship Girls to Unite

In response to a call issued to all those who had been chosen as Good Citizenship Girls while seniors in high school, it was shown that there were a great many of them at the University of Vermont, as thirty-five girls appeared. A great percent of them are girls from Vermont, but there are a few exceptions. Laura and Lola Hawley were chosen from New Rochelle, N. Y., while Catherine Peterson '42 was selected from Amherst, Mass.; Faye Lipman '43 from Bristol, Conn.; Betty Gamble from Camden, N. Y.

For Friendship, Service

These "good citizenship" girls are chosen by chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and one girl is chosen each year from the senior class of each high school. Two of the girls who are included in the list, Janet Dyke '43 of Burlington and Joanna Metcalf '42 of Waterbury, are planning to form a club for all of the "good citizenship" girls here at Vermont. The purpose of the club will be to enable these girls to get together and become more intimately acquainted with Burlington, and also to come to know each other better. Also when formed in a group they will be able to offer their services to any community which might need their help.

Miss Marguerite Lane, regional chairman of the State D. A. R., is directing the organization of the club, which will be known as "The Good Pilgrimage Club." Miss Lane is also directing the forming of similar clubs in other colleges.

Thirty-five Girls on List

The girls included in this list are as follows, in addition to those already named: Ada Selleck '43, Brandon; Barbara Robinson '43, Winooski; Cynthia Bailey '43, Essex Junction; Julia Strong '43, Milton; Marjorie Southwick '43, Bethel; Fleda Jones '41, Morrisville; Phyllis Lake '42, Saxtons River; Natalie Spear '43, St. Albans; Mildred Anderson '43, West Rutland; Phyllis Pierce '43, Swanton; Barbara Butterfield '42, Manchester; Janet Hackwell '43, Montpelier; Betty Myers '40, Burlington; Barbara Potter '42, Middlebury; Barbara Gallagher '42, St. Albans; Kay Farrell '42, Shelburne; Charlotte Scott '42, Burlington; Mary Elizabeth Kelley '43, Bennington; Cecile Villemaire '42, Winooski; Elizabeth Gurney '41, Burlington; Catherine Shaw '43, Manchester Center; Elizabeth Pratt '43, North Clarendon; Shirley Hall '42, East Randolph; Katherine Kyle '42, Brandon; Alta Plumb '40, Springfield; Pearl Marvin '42, Fairfax; Louise Davis '42, Northfield; Joyce Garner '40, Cabot.

Museum Receives Exchange Exhibit

On March 7 the Fleming Museum received a gift from the British Museum in London, consisting of eighteen specimens of minerals, to go on exhibit soon in the department of geology. Three years ago our museum sent to London a collection of Vermont marbles in return for a gift on 1936 of a very rare African Pangolin or scaly ant-eater.

In addition to our exchanges with the British Museum, we recently sent a gift box to New Delhi, India, arranged by Mr. Jermain Slocum of Charlestown, South Carolina, a friend of the Fleming Museum, containing two hundred American Indian objects from all parts of the United States.

Students Rehearse For French Play

To Form Constitution At Meeting Wednesday

The French Club play has been cast and rehearsals are well under way. They are being held four afternoons a week to speed the production and Pres. J. Evans '41 is confident of a performance topping even last year's well-done piece. He is hopeful of presenting it before the spring recess but it may possibly have to wait until after vacation. The characters are:

Arlette.....Jane Slater, P.G.
Marie.....June Hoffman '43
Tecide.....Marguerite Benoit '43
Jeanne.....Mary Butler '43
Rosalie.....Joyce Gilman '43
Ernestine.....Catherine Shalucha '40
Jacques.....S. Pike '42
M. le Doyen.....Barbara Smith '40
M. de Fleurville.....A. Haritos '40
Augustin.....Ruth Hopkins '41
Hyacinth.....J. Evans '41

Due to lack of sufficient men, some of the girls have accepted male rôles.

The play will be of interest to all students and particularly to French students. There will be a small admission fee and it is hoped that there will be a good-sized audience.

Of interest to French Club members is the fact that a constitution will be drawn up at the next meeting Wednesday at 7.30 p.m. at Southwick. This action is in reply to the request of club members who have been operating thus far without a constitution. President Evans hopes that all members will be present to help formulate and ratify the new constitution.

Y. W. C. A. Meeting To Be March 15

A mass meeting of all Y. W. C. A. members is to be held at Southwick this Friday afternoon, March 15, at 4.10. There will be an opportunity at this time for any members who have not had a chance to do the type of work in which they are interested to discuss the matter with the chairmen of those particular groups. There will also be an opportunity for those who have not yet paid their dimes to do so. Remember, your name is not on the official list until that dime is paid; and you will not be able to vote for next year's officers unless you are officially a member.

After the business meeting there will be a fashion show of spring styles directed by Claire Rock '40 and open to all students, whether Y. W. members or not.

If for any reason a Y member cannot attend this meeting, she may call Shirley Gray or Flossie Wade for an excuse. Attendance will be taken, and please be prompt.

Annual Sugar Party Held Friday Night

Campbell Toastmaster; Kemp Guest Speaker

Friday night the fourth annual sugar party was held in the men's gymnasium in honor of Dean J. L. Hills of the Agricultural College, who has been connected with the University for fifty-three years.

The menu consisted of the Vermont favorite of sugar on snow with doughnuts, pickles and coffee.

Prof. M. H. Campbell was the toastmaster, and Dr. H. A. Kemp, dean of the Medical College was the guest speaker. Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Youngert played a piano duet. T. K. Malone '41 sang "I'll Take You Home Again Kathleen" and "I Love You Truly," accompanied by Betty Cole '41 at the piano. A highlight of the entertainment was the presentation of shadow pantomimes depicting scenes in the life of a college dean.

After the tables were moved way, Dean Hills lead the Grand March and dancing continued until 12 o'clock to the music of a "Vic."

The sugar party was sponsored by the Agricultural Club, the Home Economics Club, the University Chapter of the Future Farmers of America and Alpha Zeta, the honorary agricultural fraternity. The proceeds went to a fund which assists students in need of financial aid.

H. G. Page '40 was the head of the men's committee and Marion Skinner '40 was chairman of the women's committee. C. A. Lafley '40 was in charge of the snow, F. W. Nye '41 of syrup, R. F. Evans '41 of entertainment, and H. M. Ketcham '40 of finance. Eloise Bayley '41, Hester Carver '41, Helen Reed '40, Madge Duba '41, Louise Peters '41, Janet Taylor '42, and Hester Rice '42 were on the women's committee.

Debaters Split Decision With Drew

Debates With Ottawa, Providence This Week

Fighting to a draw decision in their Friday afternoon debate with Drew University, A. H. Becker '41 and J. G. Cohen '42, upholding for Vermont the negative aspect of the isolation issue, were awarded one and one-half votes, as one judge voted for Vermont, one for Drew, and the third split his vote. The team will continue its full schedule of home forensic meets this week, clashing with Providence College this evening and the University of Ottawa on Friday evening.

T. Huntley '41 and H. Durfee '41 will uphold the negative of the isolation question, "Resolved, That the United States should follow a policy of strict (economic and military) isolation toward all nations engaged in armed international or civil conflict," against Providence College of Providence, R. I., tomorrow night at 7.30 p.m. Vermont speakersfi as yet unannounced, will uphold the affirmative of the same question against the University of Ottawa. Both encounters will be of the non-decision variety.

From advance reports received about the Ottawa speakers, Friday evening's debate at 7.00 p.m. will be one of the best of the season. Leonard McDonald, a junior in the pre-medical course, has had wide experience in debating, and on the gridiron has been cheered as the fastest man on the varsity intermediate intercollegiate team. John Beahen, a sophomore in the arts curricula, with two years of varsity debating experience, is reported as one of the most popular speakers in the various young people's clubs of the city of Ottawa. William Boss, also arts '42, is a debater, a journalist and a musician. He is now employed as music critic and reporter for the Ottawa Citizen, having gained experience in this line of news reporting on the staff of the Times of London, England. He is also organizer and conductor of the Ottawa Concert Orchestra, which is made up of around fifty young men and ladies of the Canadian capital. This orchestra is acknowledged to be one of Canada's best concert orchestras made up entirely of young musicians.

The Ottawa team comes here on the last lap of an extended tour, having traveled to St. Lawrence University, Colgate University, New York University, Fordham University, University of Pennsylvania, Princeton University, Boston College, and the University of Maine since March 7. Their last encounter before they return to Ottawa will be with St. Michael's College, on Sunday, March 17.

Carothers at Chapel

The Rev. J. E. Carothers, pastor of the Methodist Church in Middlebury, will be the chapel speaker on Wednesday, March 13.

Block V Dinner To Be Held Saturday

Dr. Lawlor Toastmaster; Coaches to Make Awards

Lettermen of rifle, track, tennis, baseball, football, basketball and cross-country will be guests of the Athletic Council at the annual Block V dinner to be held this year at the Hotel Van Ness. One of the big moments of the evening will come when the letter certificates and gold medal awards will be presented to members of the different teams. Prof. A. D. Butterfield, chairman of the Athletic Council, and the various team coaches will make the presentations.

The toastmaster at the banquet will be Dr. Peter P. Lawlor of Burlington, former varsity football player. The speakers will include Pres. Guy W. Bailey and Professor Butterfield. Music will be provided by the Catamounts, well-known campus orchestra.

The evening's entertainment will feature two outstanding performers. The first, Frank Paxton, is billed as Robert Ripley's "Believe It or Not" mental marvel. He has a surprising repertoire of memory feats. Also on the program is the noted RKO vaudeville headliner, Marshall Montgomery.

Miss Frances Frost Honored At Tea

Reads Her Poetry to Bluestockings, Scribes

The south lounge of Southwick was the scene of a tea, given Sunday afternoon in honor of Miss Frances Frost, by Bluestockings, Winnowings and Scribes.

Miss Frost, who taught one year at Vermont, has become a member of the galaxy of modern writers, and her fame as a poet and novelist has been growing steadily through these years. "Yoke of Stars," "Innocent Summer," "Pool in the Meadow" are numbered among her contributions to the poet's corner and fiction shelf of every man's library.

The assemblage listened with great eagerness while she read, on request, parts from her poem, "Women of the Earth," making those bits so personal, vibrant and alive—the very qualities which make her works so much appreciated.

Co-chairmen of the affair were Jean Brehmer '40, Phyllis Williams '40 and Jean Young '42, representing Winnowings, Bluestockings and Scribes. The members of the food committee were Millicent Clough, Myrna French and Jean Young, all sophomores. Mrs. Phillip Carleton poured.

The two literary clubs will hold meetings this week, Bluestockings on Tuesday and Scribes on Friday evenings.

Final Competition In W. A. A. Tourney

Tuesday afternoon will be the final practice period in basketball for the Green and Gold teams. The first game between the two teams will be held Thursday afternoon at 4.15.

The individual challenge tournament, in which any girl can challenge another girl of the opposite team in any sport she wishes, is still being played off.

Yesterday afternoon the tennis coaching class under the direction of Miss Crowe began.

Plans for the Members Party to be held March 19 are well under way.

Girls who have been taking skiing are expected to report to indoor classes this week.

EDITORIALS

"Hell Said the Duchess"

With profound apologies to the contemporary novelist who first used "Hell Said the Duchess" as a title and with sincere acknowledgment to the scores of editorial writers who established their priority by copying this title before we did, we explain that nobody, to our knowledge, cares whether or not the duchess swore.

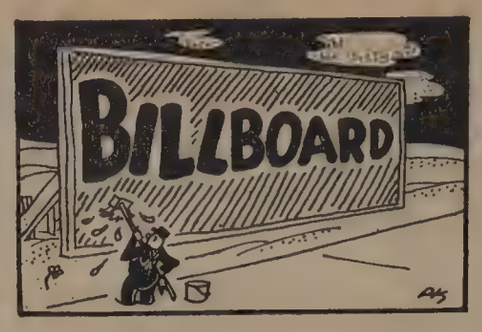
But, anyway, these four words represent an example of titular trickery which we hope has succeeded in drawing to the editorial column a few of those who never deign to let their eye fall on this part of the paper; and if those persons will bear with us for a few paragraphs, we'll speak our piece and then we will retreat to our hole and hibernate for the rest of the year.

Whether we like to admit it or not, we must recognize that there are on this campus certain closed organizations, the opportunities of which are not available to all. Phi Beta Kappa, Boulder, Key and Serpent, are exclusive, allowing membership to but a few, while managership of some athletic sports similarly seem to revolve in closed circles. Other examples of this will come to the reader's mind as he looks about the campus, but for the purposes of this editorial we hold no brief with these. What we are interested in at present is the CYNIC, and the CYNIC is not a closed institution, althought current tendencies seem to indicate that the apathy or whatever it is that keeps talented men and women from writing for the CYNIC may in time force the student newspaper to become exactly this. That there is talent on this campus could never be denied by anyone who witnessed Kake Walk; that the student body is lazy is an accusation that crumbles in face of truly remarkable student achievements. What, then, is the difficulty?

We frankly admit that we do not know. We will say this, though, if CYNIC work were put on an interfraternity competition basis, there would be probably five men from each "house" working on the CYNIC.

Fraternity loyalty is very strong and perhaps the burden lies with the fraternities who should urge their talented underclassmen to write for the CYNIC.

Something will have to be done soon, and we suggest that all those men who are in the least interested walk into the CYNIC office and sign up for work on the student newspaper.



A. H. B. '41.

"Be a Go-Getter"

One of the most prevalent of a large number of students is "job pessimism." So many students are heard to say, "Why stay in college? College doesn't help." Look at the large number of college graduates who haven't found work.

To this we say, "Stop kidding yourself." Doctor Seagle of Episcopal Church in New York, laying stress on work puts it better by saying, "Do not ever allow yourself to say you never had a chance. It is not true. It certainly is not true of anyone living in America."

One of Napoleon's favorite maxims was: "The truest wisdom is a resolute determination." Thus the "job pessimists" should abandon their defeatist attitudes, use their college opportunities to their fullest extent and resolve that they, like the frog in the pail of cream, who didn't seem to be getting anywhere but kept splashing until be landed comfortably on a large lump of butter will remove the word "impossible" from their vocabularies.

WAITRESS APPLICATIONS FOR 1940-41—Application blanks for students desiring waitress work in one of the University dining halls—at Robinson Hall and at Grassmount—may be secured in the Office of the Dean of Women.

All applications must be filed by Wednesday, March 20th in the Office of the Dean of Women.

Selections will be made before the Easter recess.—FREDA M. HARRIS, Assistant Dean of Women.

ATTENTION—The Pre-Medical Society presents Dr. A. Mackay, surgeon at the Mary Fletcher Hospital, Tuesday, March 12, Fleming Museum, 7.30 p.m. Everyone invited.

Quotable Quotes

"I firmly believe that an integrated study of the social sciences and the humanities will leave our engineering students less susceptible to the prevailing shibboleths, clinches and slogans regarding race, creeds and political programs. Stereotyped thinking is swifter and less painful, but it is far more dangerous in these days when adaptability is necessary for survival." Dr. E. S. Burdell, director of Cooper Union, asks for less "engin" in engineering.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Margaret Weymouth Jackson's story, Goon Castle, which appeared recently in the Saturday Evening Post, has incurred a great deal of criticism and comment. It seems to me, that Miss Jackson, in her treatment of Greek-letter sororities has missed the mark rather widely.

In this age of ours, which is typified primarily for its efficiency and acceleration, a thing exists only if it is useful. That which has no purpose soon expires. In Miss Jackson's condemnation of sororities, she was just; in that the picture she drew was not a true one. Hers should, and would be rightfully wiped off the campus of the American University of today.

Contrary to her conception, the sorority attempts to accomplish more than furthering social aims and putting up a solid, serene front to the exterior world. The sorority and its members form a binding tie which is reciprocal; the sorority guiding its members along the right channels and in return, the girls live up to standards set for them. In benefiting themselves, the girls also benefit, and bestow honor upon the name of their sorority. To the freshmen, entering a situation which is at once strange and confusing, the sorority offers guidance, ideals and a companionship which it would be impossible to attain elsewhere. It develops the girl into a woman; and, hand in hand with her academic pursuit, it affords a definite growth, and set of standards which would be lacking in a college which provided only work in the classroom. It offers development of ideals and helps the girl to find herself. It supplies sincere friendship, unswerving loyalty, sympathy, interest and assistance. It assists the girl in seeking out satisfactory qualities which are desirable in womanhood. The upperclassmen, living in the house, encourage and advise the sophomores and freshmen, who do not live in the sorority house. Rather than being the underdog who accomplishes all the dirty work, they are directed subtly along the right paths, and in time take their place to lead and assist similar underclassmen.

To me, Miss Jackson's portrayal of the sorority was not only harsh, but quite superficial. Contrary to her point of view, the Greek-letter girl is loyal, because she has found friends with whom she finds happiness and the attainments of her goal. A new aspect of life is opened up to her; and one which makes an indelible mark that is carried with her throughout the rest of her life.

Yours truly,
ELEANOR HALL FLETCHER,
Pi Beta Phi, 1940.

Behind the Record Of Johnny Green

Whenever you listen to a JOHNNY GREEN record, please keep in mind that four to five hours' time was required before the numbers were satisfactorily made. The average record is three minutes long, so if we figure out the time actually spent in waxing one side, it would all boil down to this: for each minute of playing time on a GREEN record TWENTY-TWO minutes were consumed in the studio. Mr Green is a perfectionist, and on the slightest provocation he will stop a recording to iron out certain points that would probably escape the average listener. If he makes a record that is technically correct and still feels that his performance could be improved upon, he will not pass the first one, but will continue to repeat the number till he is satisfied that he has given it his best possible interpretation. Yes sir, Mr. Green is Johnny Green's severest critic.

He is also very superstitious about the taking of photographs during one of his recording sessions. An old superstition he has entertained ever since he began to make records, is that the taking of photographs during a session will surely bring bad luck to the band. Some of the boys in the present band will back him up on this superstition, giving names and places to prove their point.

Last Wednesday (February 14) the York String Quartet returned to the studios to make their second record date. This time they chose a work which they took two months to discover, a previously unknown quartet by Paganini, the GRAND QUARTET IN E MAJOR.

Kay Foster, petite vocalist in the Georgie Auld Band, was chosen as the gal with the prettiest legs in the business according to a recent Downbeat survey. After close observation at the latest George Auld date for Varsity, we are inclined to agree with the judges' decision.

There are now 550 junior colleges in the United States.

Fate

Way back in 1924 one "Jiggs" Sheridan was playing basketball for Montpelier High. Now this "Jiggs" boy was good. In fact he must have been very good, for not only did he set his league afire during the regular season, but he established a new record in the state play-offs of that year by converting forty-four points. This record was destined to stand for a long time. For sixteen years it was never even in danger of being broken, until the year 1940, which brought along with it, although no exceptional teams, a few autstanding individuals who might perform the trick. There were "Red" Merola of Cathedral and his teammate Ange Evelti, both dead shots and high scorers. Then, too, Bob Twitchell of Burlington High was a definite threat. In three tournament games one of these boys might do it. Oh yes, there was also a rangy kid from Bennington who was supposed to be pretty good. Jerome Levin was his name. The boy had a lot of points to his credit—some fifty points in the Southern play-offs alone. But you know how sentiment runs. Southern basketball is not Northern basketball. He'd be up against some real competition here. Besides, his club, Bennington was slated to meet Hartford and would in all probability be eliminated in the very first round. Why just previously hadn't Hartford swamped Bennington by some ten points? No, the kid was definitely out. The chips were stacked too heavily against him. He couldn't possibly do anything in only one game of tournament play.

But Fate is a strange individual, and like all females, is unpredictable. She can be cruel and she wouldn't have it so. Well—it happened last Saturday afternoon at the Auditorium. Or rather it started the previous day when Hartford and Bennington met on the court. To shorten a long story, Bennington (pardon us) Levin pulled the upset of the day. Hartford eliminated. Jerome was all over the floor. He passed, he shot, and he scored. Mostly scored! The score book showed that he had accumulated twenty-two points. Fair, but still nothing to get excited about. It still didn't mean a thing as Bennington's next opponent was Cathedral. Merola & Co. were the favorites, the sure tournament winners. They were giving 10 to 1 that Cathedral would win easily, by ten points at least.

But something went haywire. The game wasn't a Cathedral walkaway. The Bennington team was inspired. They played much over their heads and fought with blood. The closing minute of the game found Cathedral ahead 35-31, and Levin with twenty points. Then before you knew it the score was tied and about five seconds to play. The whistle blew and Levin found himself standing at the foul line. He had been fouled and had one free shot at the basket coming to him. Just picture the set-up. The game was practically over and the score was tied. If he sunk it, his team would win and probably go ahead to take the championship from a weaker Burlington team. Moreover his individual scoring total was now forty-two points. This point would be number forty-three. And he'd have a full game, in the finals, to score at least two points and break the record. And boy, in one more game he'd break it like it had never been broken before. . . . There was a hush in the crowd as Levin got set (every one knew the significance of the shot). The ball left his hands. It seemed to be suspended in air, until it finally came down—he missed.

So Cathedral went ahead to win and later to become champions. So the kid lost his golden opportunity and Sheridan's record still stands. And so we have this little story to tell. All with due thanks to Her Excellency—Madam Fate.

Random Shots

Incidentally, it was the record of none other than Howard Prentice that Sheridan broke in 1924. The year previous, the former scored forty points in tournament play to become king. . . . We see where both Bellardinelli and Corely made all-Vermont in collegiate circles. And Taylor deserved his spot on the second team. . . . Although snow is still on the ground as we are writing this, we still can't help but worry as to who will be filling Kimball's shoes at the "hot corner" this year. And what about outfielders? Taylor seems a sure bet but who else? . . .Not only will the Vermont baseball team play William and Mary down South this year, but the latter will be in Burlington for two games in the early part of May. . . . Along tennis circles it seems as though the first three spots will go to Booth, Walk, and Simpson—in that order. . . . Ho kum, less than three weeks to vacation!

Classes Necessary For Average Student

Chicago, Ill. (ACP).—Are you just an average student, or one whose grades are below "C"? If so, you had better go to class.

Are you in the upper 25 per cent of the grade brackets? If so, it doesn't make much difference whether you go to class or not, you'll be likely to pull down "A's" and "B's" just the same.

This is not mere advice. It is statistical information compiled by assistants of Dean Aaron J. Brumbaugh—of the University of Chicago from the records of college students, 204 of whom had taken "R's" in one or more survey courses, and an equal number of whom had done the work in the course. An "R" grade indicates a student took the course but not the final examination.

The statistics also proved that university women don't get as good grades in the college as men. Dean Brumbaugh said that one possible answer might be that they participate more in extra-curricular activities than men do. He didn't offer other possible explanations.

The table of results of the survey also revealed that there wasn't a significant difference in the grades made by women who took courses for point credit, and those who only went to class often enough to get "R's." However, there was some difference between women in the upper grade brackets and women who only got average grades.

But men who took courses for quarterly grades, on the whole did better, whether they were average or bad students, than those who didn't bother to do the assigned work.

Dean Brumbaugh's reason for publishing the survey was so students could know the effects of taking advantage of the New Plan. He was not advocating that students go to classes if they didn't want to. He promised that no action to make them go would be taken, but he said that students should at least know what the effects of their action would be.

Next month, Harvard University will give a special testimonial banquet for a veteran campus policeman, Charles R. Apted.

Arguments In Favor Of College Golfing

Golf Requires Stamina and Youth

By Charles Evans, Jr.

The College Golfer with the huge letter of his university on his sweater made an unforgettable impression on me. I watched him with a great deal of interest from various parts of the course at Wakonda last year. It was my opportunity to see many distinguishing features and it was revealed to me more than ever that golf has attained a hold on colleges that will never be lessened and which will be intensified as the sport grows in college favor. College golf has come to stay, not only for the few, but for the many.

I think that every sort of a boy was entered. There were very delicate students in that crowd at Wakonda, medium, strong and very strong. There was a little hunchback who played well, and that fact brought out my contention that golf is for every sort of physique, and the college boy who would probably be cut off from every other outdoor game might become a good golfer—at least a fairly good one. Collegians must either play golf themselves or take long hikes to see the other fellow do it. There is no grandstand seat for the spectator.

Excellent Players

I found the quality of college golf great, and there are so many good players. I was amazed to see the good shots, not a few but almost all remarkably good.

Our colleges have a great reserve of fine golfing students, perfectly able to catch the best of the unaware players in an eighteen hole match. In the flurry of these at Wakonda some of the big names in college golf were beaten by the rank and file. The event was full of dark horses from the mighty army of golfers in the colleges.

Those who were defeated felt a little discouraged, that is, for a day or so. I saw some college golfers reach Wakonda quivering bundles of nerves from many sleepless overanxious nights. In spite of being defeated, many were fairly well pleased with their games; and they certainly enjoyed themselves. It was a big adventure to them.

Most of the college golfers have a very sound style, thanks to their Coaches, but there are many of them who played in bad form. A very unsound style frequently works well when the player is youthfully supple and resourceful.

The college golfer takes the best care of himself; there is no drinking, no swearing. He trains for his tournament and he is willing to make many sacrifices for his game.

Small Publicity

Through Bert McGrane, a wonderful golf reporter, the entrants at Wakonda received more newspaper publicity than would fall to the lot of many other athletes in college sports, but it soon wore off.

Collegians religiously keep score. The score card is a tell-tale, keeping the player edged up to seek constantly to improve.

I doubt if any other part of the country except Akwanok would have received so many unknown lads with such gracious hospitality and kindness as did Wakonda.

Many of the college golfers were undeterred by the fact that they had no money. It was a very light pocketbook that carried some of them to Des Moines, but never for one moment were they allowed to feel inadequacy of dress or preparation for such a journey. The college golfer shows a fine and friendly spirit around the club house. College golf began as a rich boy's game; it is now the poor boy's sport, too. I ponder no longer what these students will do with its future.

The Iowa galleries treated all beautifully and fair. I have seen some delightful galleries in my time, but it is plain that the American public wants to see the great college golfers in action. The galleries moved silently, sometimes shoutingly, up and down the uneven country of middle Iowa. It was a pleasing, inspiring sight to me.

Incentive of N. C. A. A.

In the analysis of a composite game of the college golfer, I would say that he is a tremendous driver, good out of long grass, poor out of bunkers, and a wonderful putter.

I first remember how ridiculous it seemed to think that anyone but an Eastern Collegian could win the National Intercollegiate title. Now there is a burning desire to win that Championship, founded on reason and skill, from college golfers all over the nation.

I was sorry for the senior college golfer who can never again in his life have the carefree playing days of the National Intercollegiate. The crowd of fine graduate golfers disappears, some take the long road through the gate that opens wide into business, and others lose heart and leisure for games.

One of the greatest incentives to the college golfer is encouragement; a boy needs a nudge now and then—or a near-one, to cheer him on a difficult way. The N. C. A. A. can and will prove a continual incentive to him to keep up all the best traditions of the game.

Inter-Frat Track Events Arranged

Fat Men's Race to Be Featured Again

At a meeting of the Intramural Council held Thursday, it was decided to again hold the fat men's relay race in conjunction with the regular interfraternity relay competition. This was introduced for the first time last year, and was very successful.

Each frat is asked to put out a team of four men weighing over 175 pounds each. Each contestant will run 110 yards.

Six running workouts must be completed prior to the event in order for a man to be eligible to participate.

The events for the interfraternity track meet have finally been arranged and are as follows: Friday's events, 440-yard run, 35-pound weight throw, running broad jump; Saturday's events, 16-pound shot put, pole vault, running high jump, 30-yard low hurdles, 30-yard high hurdles, 30-yard dash or 110-yard dash, 880-yard run, and the one-mile run.

Each fraternity may enter four men in the dashes and hurdles but may only start three. In the runs and field events each team may enter six men, but may only use four.

Scoring will be on a five, three, two, one basis for the first four places.

A few rules for this competition are that a contestant cannot enter more than three events during meet. A contestant cannot enter more than two running events longer than 440 yards.

Each contestant in the running events must have a physical O. K. from Doctor Kent, and must have completed six running workouts on the track. This latter stipulation is also necessary for the indoor relays.

The New England Intercollegiate Rules will be the basis for all rulings in this competition.

A student who has received a varsity award in track will only be ineligible in the event for which he won his award. A team using an ineligible which is later disclosed, will have points deducted from its score.

Top Pin-Men To Have Bowl-Off

Trophies to Be Awarded To Individual Winners

Providing a fitting conclusion to a highly successful interfraternity bowling season, eighteen top-ranking bowlers, all with an average of 100 or over for the season's competition, will compete for individual winner and runner-up trophies on Friday at 3.00 p.m. at the Bowl-a-way alleys.

Every man who has bowled during the regular season is invited to watch the competition and also to partake of refreshments which will be served "gratis" at 4.00 p.m. due to the generosity of Mr. Robert Adsit, owner and manager of the alleys. The total list of men who have bowled will be at the alleys in charge of a manager and a check of men in attendance will be taken.

The individual competitors are headed by Frankie Taylor, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, top man for the year with an average of 106.6, and R. Davis, Delta Psi, closely following with an average of 106.3. Others eligible to compete are: Sutton, Gallup, Holtzman, Story, MacDonald, Babits, Utley, Small, Rush, Kaplan, Parker, H. Long, Hyne, Lippe, J. A. White and Augustenovich.

The trophies are a beautiful sun gold cup for first place and a silver cup for second, both cups with suitable engraving, and donated by Mr. Adsit.

Rowell Speaks At Methodist Meeting

Wild Life Conservation Topic of Lecture

Prof. L. S. Rowell of the Zoology Department spoke to the Methodist College Group on March 10, on the "Why and How of Wild Life Conservation." The movement for wild life conservation was officially started in 1873 when a petition was presented to Congress; results came in 1890 when the first forest was set aside for this purpose. In 1908 under President Theodore Roosevelt more land was made into reservations. There seemed to be more or less government red tape but the American Association for the Advancement of Science was eventually set up and has done much for the solving of the conservation problem.

A reel made by "Ding" Darling one of the greatest promoters of wild life conservation was shown.

Professor Rowell mentioned several outstanding statistics such as: it takes from 30,000 to 60,000 pounds of water to produce one pound of beefsteak; fish is third in the list of food items produced in United States; sawdust and other polutions blanket the bottoms of streams, choke out vegetation and no fish can exist in these streams; there were sixty million buffalo at one time in the West, now they are nearly extinct; the elks and Carolina parakeets became nearly extinct because of the fads of the human race; in 1847 the passenger pigeons were so thick that they, when flying, would blot out the sun, now museums have difficulty in finding a pair for demonstration purposes; in 1870 there were no deer in Vermont, thirty were brought in in 1897 and protected until 1901, now there are about 2,500 shot each year; natural resources are now under conservation movements in some states; a bill has just been passed in Congress for the elimination of stream polution.

After the talk and the showing of the reel, soil conservation on the Lamoile and about the state, the destructiveness of the three types of soil erosion and their prevention, contour plowing, and strip planting were discussed by the group in general.

Bailey Class A Winner At Lake Placid Meet

Competing in the first wilderness ski meet Saturday and Sunday at Lake Placid, Ev Bailey captured a second in the open downhill, trailing Toni Matt, twenty-year-old national open ski champion, by nine seconds and was ultimate class A victor. He also took second in the combined closed slalom and downhill behind Wendell Cram, Rutland ace. Peter Patch finished third in the closed class slalom, trailed by Ev in fourth place, and took a third in the closed class combined events.

At Stowe, Ernest St. Mary, in taking seventh in jumping and fourth in cross-country, captured third place in the race for titles in the Vermont closed meet.

Pan-Hellenic to Sponsor Dance

Easter is on the way! Spring is in the air! The sorority women have felt it and instead of buying a new Easter outfit they have hit upon a different rejuvenation for flagging spirits—a new spring tonic—an intersorority dance.

Shirley Gray is in charge of this new semi-formal dance sponsored by Pan-Hellenic Council which is being held at the gym on March 23.

Even the decorations strike a newer note. The ingenuity of each sorority will be called forth, each sorority contributing a large poster with an Easter theme. Charlotte Hall, chairman of decorations, anticipates that the gym will be abounding with rabbits and chicks or perhaps Easter bonnets.

The New Vermonters, well-known local dance band, will furnish the rhythm. Prof. and Mrs. H. Perry and Prof. and Mrs. Holden Bickford will be chaperones.

Mary Letta Root promises cool refreshments for this festive occasion.

Carefree Collegian Myth Dispelled

Dartmouth College Daily Paper Does It

(Associated Collegiate Press)

We've all thought for a long time that something ought to be done about it—this business of making the life of today's collegian glamorous and carefree—and at last the Daily Dartmouth of Dartmouth College has done it! We believe you'll give a rousing second to this editorial: "It's about time somebody tried once and for all to dispel the myth of the carefree college boy. The college boy, people who are out of college, or have never been there, will tell you, lives a life which runs the gamut from pure joy to the ultimate in rhapsodic existence, and the Sunday magazine sections picture him with glass in hand, his lips creased in a gay smile, while a number of beautiful women parade past him like so much beef on the hoof. The motion pictures are doing their level best to prolong the life of this popular fiction, and thousands of young girls who stand on their feet all day behind the counters from Worcester to Oshkosh find their own particular heaven in watching some clean cut god of the Tom Brown species cavort through a land overflowing with evening clothes and exciting football finishes, strewing his fraternity pins behind him.

"The college boy may seem that way at times, and particularly when he begins to reminisce for the benefit of the home folks during vacation periods, but that is because he is learning that the only way to please is to give people what they expect, and that no one will believe, much less listen to him, if he tries to tell the crowd that he is doing a serious job of going to college, and that he has a lot of things on his mind.

"The fact is that college boys work hard, take a Saturday night off for relaxation, like to sit by the fire and read the newspaper, are ugly or good looking as the case may be, have their domestic troubles with their roommates, get broke, argue with the traffic cop, do or do not like their eggs flopped over, and call Mr. Roosevelt names, even as any average citizen who lives uphill and goes to work on Main Street. To be sure, college boys are young, and they do these things with more spirit, and harder than they will twenty years from now, but the point is that this is what they do, and it's peculiar that nobody wants to believe it.

"Just the same, we hope the day will come when some stranger will tell us that he's working in such and such a place, and we can reply that we're going to college, without catching that 'oh, college boy' look in his eye."

To which we say, "Amen!"

"Freedom of thought and of action is threatened in our world, and if we are to preserve the freedom which has been won for us at great cost, it is imperative that universities, and university men and women, be alive to the issues and alert in playing their part." Cynic To Participate In Intercollegiate Popularity Contest

All-Amer. College Queen To Be Chosen by Vote Of College Newspapers

Paramount Pictures, Movie and Radio Guide Magazine are conducting a nation-wide contest for the ALL-AMERICAN COLLEGE QUEEN through a popularity contest tieup with leading college papers. The CYNIC has been chosen to participate.

College papers are to conduct a local popularity contest in any selective method that they desire. The CYNIC will publish ballots in the issue of Friday, March 22. These ballots will be filled out by the student body and handed in on Monday, the 25th. There will be a box for this purpose near the Coffee Corner in the Old Mill. The winning entrant will submit a photograph of herself, and when the local contest is concluded, the winner's photograph will be sent to a committee of judges, composed of a group of prominent New York artists, for picking the State winners.

Photographs in Magazines

Beginning in the May 3 issue and the two succeeding issues, May 10 and May 17, Movie and Radio Guide Magazines will publish the photographs of the State winners. The readers will vote for the twelve National winners who will be chosen by the numbers of votes received.

The twelve National winners are to be the guests of Paramount Pictures, with all expenses paid from wherever they may be, at the World Premiere of "Those Were The Days," Paramount's production of the famous "Old Siwash" college stories at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., on May 21. The twelve editors of the college papers originally sponsoring the winning contestants are also to be Paramount's guests at the premiere. Paramount stars will act as their hosts. The premiere will be broadcast over a national radio network. At the conclusion of the premiere activities the twelve National winners will be judged to determine the winner of the title ALL-AMERICAN COLLEGE QUEEN.

Talent Audition

The winner will then be taken to Hollywood by Paramount Studios, with all expenses paid. There she will be given a talent audition at the studio, presented to Hollywood celebrities, visit the studios, be entertained and reside in the best hotel in Hollywood. Consolation prizes will be awarded State and semi-final National winners.

This contest may seem fantastic to the reader, but the CYNIC feels confident that there is plenty of proficient pulchritude on the campus to provide keen competition. If Hollywood is too far off, U. V. M. can certainly win in the State contest. There will be more news of this contest in the coming issues of the CYNIC.

Vermont Symphony and Middlebury Choir Will Give Finnish Concert

Michael Anselmo, Assistant Concert Master to Be Featured as Violin Soloist— Many Local People Cooperate in Affair

Tonight at 8.00 o'clock a concert will be given for the benefit of the Finnish Relief Fund at Memorial Auditorium. The Vermont Symphony Orchestra will play, aided by the Middlebury College Choir, with Michael Anselmo, assistant concert master of the orchestra, as soloist.

"In spite of the fact that peace has been signed by Finnish and Russian representatives and may or may not have been ratified at this time by the Finnish Diet, there is still an urgent need for funds for Finnish relief," declared Louis F. Dow '15, chairman for Chittenden County for the Finnish Relief Fund, Inc., in an interview recently.

More Aid Needed

"In fact," he said, "there will probably, for the present at least, be an even greater need for contributions to this worthy cause. Many, many women, old men and little children, the sick and the crippled, have been evacuated from Finnish towns long before now and the majority of these people have no means of support whatsoever. Peace or no peace, the Finns need help and need it badly. Just because peace may be signed and ratified is no reason to think the Finns will cease to need aid. It will be many long and weary months, and possibly years, before these valiant people will be able to get back to normal living and their towns and cities once again become habitable.

"Beneath the soft touch of the snows of the gloomy northern solitude lie many of their heroic dead, hidden forever, and kindly, perhaps, from the searching eyes of their surviving comrades. But their deeds will live on in memory as a timeless memorial to a race whose spirit could not be crushed by the military heel of a ruthless invader. Can we, knowing this, deny them further aid? Should we not continue our efforts to alleviate their sufferings and help them on the long road back to peace and happiness? To me, at least, this is so and I sincerely hope that contributions will continue to come in to a cause that is just and for a people that is worthy of our support."

Program Changed

There has been a complete revision of the program first released, and according to final arrangement it will now include:

Men's Formals To Be Held Tonight

Three Fraternities Entertain at Houses

With spring vacation and spring itself in the offing, the men's fraternities are again entertaining with dances, most of which are formal. Because the majority are scheduled for two weeks from today, many of the plans are not definitely organized. However, three fraternities, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Phi Delta Theta and Sigma Nu are all set for gala times tonight.

At the Sigma Alpha Epsilon House, T. K. Malone '41 is in charge of the dance aided by H. J. Rulfo '41 and E. A. Guilbert '41. The Catamounts will furnish the music for the dance which is formal. Besides Professor and Mrs. Bickford who will chaperone, some alumni including G. McCloud and Harry Colombo, bith '37 will be welcomed.

New Vermonters

Phi Delta Theta will also entertain tonight with a dinner dance starting at 7.00 p.m. J. T. Emott '41 will manage the dinner, while the dance is in the hands of H. L. Pache '41 and C. A. Shortle '42. Professor and Mrs. Millington, and Professor and Mrs. Pope will chaperone the dance, and the New Vermonters will play.

The Sigma Nus will give tonight's remaining dance. D. E. Stowell '40, chairman states that the dance will be informal with a phonograph for the music.

The remaining fraternities will conduct affairs on March 29, two weeks from tonight. Alpha Tau Omega has no definite plans for their dance as yet, while U. D. Tucker '42, in charge of Sigma Phi's, promises a really superb affair when their present plans materialize.

Kappa Sigma, with J. R. Royer '41 as chairman, will have a formal with the Collegians playing. Chaperones have not yet been decided upon.

Unformed Plans

Although they have not definitely chosen a chairman or chaperones, Delta Psi plans on having the music of the Catamounts for their formal, also to be staged March 29.

S. Levine '42 is head of the committee, consisting of B. Rynowecer '42, R. Levine '41 and B. L. Glass '43 for the Phi Sigma Delta formal dance. Nothing is definite but the date, also March 29.

At the Tau Epsilon Phi House, J. M. Rome '43 will be in charge of the semi-formal dance the twenty-ninth. On his committee are N. B. Hyne '43 and C. Joseph '43. Professor and Mrs. Bickford will chaperone.

Lambda Iota is planning a formal dance also on March 29, under the direction of D. E. Johnson '40, assisted by H. E. Thurber '43. Professor and Mrs. Daggs have been obtained as chaperones and the Black Panthers from Middlebury will do the swinging.

The Rev. Elbert Parkhurst of Williston will speak to the Methodist Church College Group on March 17 at 7.30 p.m. The topic for the evening is "Two Kinds of Temperament." Everyone is welcome.

We Give You Frances Frost Who Recently Visited Vermont Campus

. . . Frances Frost, poet and prose writer, Vermonter to the core and author of a new and different kind of writing about Vermont.

Miss Frost was born in St. Albans and has lived a great deal of her life in Vermont. She began writing at about the eighth grade and during the earliest phase of her career wrote mainly poetry. She went to Middlebury College for three years and it was in her junior year there —1926—that she made her first real impression on the literary world when she had a poem published in Bookman. This was her first important sale for which Miss Frost received $10.

Frances Frost was married to W. Gordon Blackburn from whom she was divorced in 1931. They have two children, Paul, 13, and Jean, 11. She began her literary career in 1927 as a newspaper reporter. In 1931 she received her Ph.B. from the University of Vermont and during the year 1930-1931, she taught a course in Creative Poetry. From that class have come at least two poets, Gladys LaFlamme, now Mrs. Francis Coburn and Dorothy Slayton.

Miss Frost was married in 1933 to Samuel G. Stoney, writer and authority of the Gullah negro dialect of Charleston, S. C. She is a member of the Poetry Society of America, Vermont Literary Guild, New England Poetry Club, Poetry Society of South Carolina and Delta Delta Delta. She is living now in the Greenwich Village section of New York City because she finds it "a good quiet place with everybody working like dogs."

Miss Frost is a quiet, very modest person. She is fond of music and, as her books indicate, she likes, in order of preference, woods, children, animals and the sea. The phase of being an author which she does not like is correcting galley proofs.

Miss Frost spent seven summers at the McDowell Colony in Peterboro, N. H., where she knew Edwin Arlington Robinson, Carl Carmer and several other well-known poets and authors. In 1936, she received the Mary R. Cromwell travelling fellowship to study at the University of Munich. That was the year of the Wagner and Mozart festival in Germany which made the trip doubly absorbing for Miss Frost. She is also very fond of the West Indies where she spent eight or nine months in 1933-34 on the island of St. Lucia in the British West Indies.

"Hemlock Wall," 1929.
"These Acres," 1932.

A group of former 4-H Club members who are now attending the University gave a welcome party at Southwick, Tuesday evening, for Miss Ruth M. White, new assistant state 4-H Club leader. Miss White recently joined the staff of the Vermont Extension Service. E. L. Ingalls, state club leader, and Frank C. Essick, assistant state club leader, were speakers. A 4-H candle-lighting service was held in Miss White's honor, after which she spoke briefly to the group. This short program took place in front of the lighted fireplace in the ballroom. Group games were played. Refreshments were served. The committee in charge consisted of six students of the College of Agriculture: Katherine Davis and Kenneth Estey, co-chairmen, Ellen Isham, Marion Skinner, Harold Nelson and Edson Gifford.

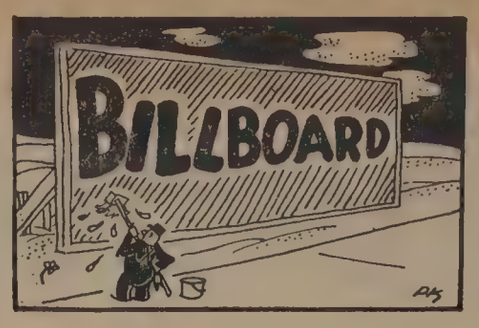
EDITORIALS

Hats Off to the Pre-Meds!

The first issue of the Pre-Medical Bulletin, which has been published by and for the pre-medical students at the University of Vermont, appeared this week and was received with much enthusiasm. The bulletin is the work of the P. M. S. (Pre-Medical Society) Bulletin Staff with the supervision and help of Prof. Hovey Jordan, Professor of Embryology and Histology of the Medical College. The bulletin is the official publication of the Society whose aims are to provide a closer relationship between the pre-medical students and the Medical College and to provide academic and scientific benefits for its members.

The bulletin contains a statement from Dean Kemp of the College of Medicine in which he congratulates the pre-meds upon their organization as a group and their new publication. He also expresses the hope that their newly aroused interests in medicine will not falter. Dean Swift's approval of the club is also printed in the bulletin.

At the beginning of the college year there were 173 students enrolled in the pre-medical curriculum which was the largest number of students enrolled in any course at the University. We feel that the organization of this large group into the Pre-Medical Society will undoubtedly provide the members with much valuable help and advice in the field of medicine which Dean Kemp says is a field which knows no boundaries.



The students on the staff of the new campus publication are Katherine Bodette '41, L. A. Janoff '40, T. DePalo '40, J. N. Houpis '41, H. J. Rulfo '41, D. J. Graziano '40, J. P. Diforio '41, E. L. Davis '40 and Rosemary Brewster '41. The seven-page bulletin which is the work of this staff is evidence of a great deal of effort and initiative on the part of its members.

In the bulletin is the proposed constitution of the recently formed club. The constitution is unique in that the chairmanship of the club is a rotating office occupied by a senior who is chosen by lot from the seniors who belong to the organization. Membership in the club is open to all pre-medical students in the sophomore, junior and senior classes.

Because we strongly feel that the new Pre-Medical Bulletin will filll a definite need on our campus and because its first issue shows a great deal of earnest effort, the staff of the CYNIC commend the "P. M. S. Bulletin" staff and wish them the best of luck.

All-American College Queen?

Today the CYNIC is launching a contest on our campus to select the "Queen of the Vermont Campus." We are sponsoring the contest in collaboration with Paramount Pictures, Inc., of Hollywood. The twelve national winners will be the guests of Paramount at the world premiere of "Those Were the Days," a film depicting college life, at Galesburg, Ill. The co-ed who is chosen as the "All-American College Queen" will go to Hollywood as the guest of the Paramount Studios. Many colleges throughout the country are participating in the contest and much publicity is being given to it on their campuses. The CYNIC hopes that the entire student body will cast their ballot for the "Vermont Queen" on March 25 when the votes will be cast.

Medical College Receives Gift

Once Owned by Famed Medical Pioneer

Dr. G. C. Berkley of St. Albans has presented the University of Vermont College of Medicine with a case of surgical instruments once, apparently, the property of one of America's outstanding personalities in medical history, Dr. William Beaumont. Dr. Beaumont, immortal for his pioneer studies on human gastric physiology, obtained much of his medical training in an apprenticeship under Dr. Benjamin Chandler, who practiced at St. Albans in the period around 1800 and for a number of years thereafter.

Studied in Burlington

Vermont may justly claim considerably more than a passing relationship with Beaumont. Shortly after settling in Champlain, N. Y., in 1807, Beaumont began his medical studies by "reading medicine" under Dr. Seth Pomeroy of Burlington. In 1810, Beaumont went to St. Albans to begin his apprenticeship under Dr. Chandler. He remained there two years, his schooling consisting of bedside experience, dissection of amputated material and extensive rearing. His carefully kept case records during this period give every evidence of an innate ability for capable and thorough research. This is later proven in his studies on the physiology of the human stomach when, as an army surgeon, a peculiar gunshot wound in one of his patients made it possible for him to study the action of the human stomach in the living subject, the first study of this kind up to his time.

Beaumont's license to practice was granted in Burlington in June of 1812 by the Third Medical Society of the State of Vermont. It was signed by Dr. Jno. Pomeroy as President and Dr. Cassius F. Pomeroy as Secretary.

Medical Surgeon

In September of the same year Beaumont joined the Sixth U. S. Infantry as Assistant Surgeon and later saw service at Sachett's Harbor, York Fort George, and Plattsburgh.

Following the War of 1812, he spent four years in private practice at Plattsburgh, after which he re-entered the army as Post-Surgeon, to be stationed first at Fort Mackinac on the northwestern frontier, where his researches in gastric physiology were carried out.

The surgical case, which bears a name plate engraved with Beaumont's signature, seems to have been handed down through St. Albans practitioners to the late Dr. Hall of St. Albans and finally to Dr. Berkley, who has now presented this important memento of the immortal Beaumont to the Medical College. Plans are under way at the Medical College to make suitable provisions for the display of this valuable and important gift.

Betsey Ross Imitated By Good Council Girls

White Plains, N. Y.—(ACP)—The legend of Betsey Ross came to life on the campus of the College of Our Lady of Good Counsel recently when the entire undergraduate body made an American flag in which every member of the student body and the faculty, both lay and religious, took a stitch.

Sponsored by students enrolled in the college's course in American Constitutional History, the purpose of the project was to re-vitalize the ideals of American democracy symbolized in the Stars and Stripes, according to Audrey Hubener, who headed a committee in charge of the work.

In this dark moment of world history, Miss Hubener said, Good Counsel believes that the principles on which this government is founded need to be re-stated and re-emphasized to American youth, and it believes the flag-making project helped to drive home their significance to Good Counsel students.

C.A.A. pilot training students have flown 80,000 hours without a serious accident. Some 3,700 students have soloed.

Pilgrim Fellowship To Have Worship Service

This Sunday evening, March 17, the young people will meet at 7.30 in the First Congregational Church where they will join the whole congregation in a dramatic worship service which will last about an hour. There will be the usual singing of hymns, and refreshments with a social hour to follow in the Parish House.

Everyone is welcome.

Two New Exhibits Of Wildlife Shown

There are two new exhibits in the showcases in the reception hall of the Fleming Museum, both of which deal with the general subject of plant and animal conservation.

In one is a tiny Virginia or White-tailed deer with a rather interesting story behind him, for he never saw the light of day. His mother was killed by an automobile here in Vermont just a few days before she would have given birth to her twins, and this little spotted fellow was mounted and given to the Museum. If he had been born and allowed to grow he would have lost his spots and would have spent his life bounding through the woods—a graceful animal some six feet long, with head and white tail ever erect.

In the other case is a beautiful Passenger Pigeon, a bird once present throughout North America in amazingly large numbers, but now extinct. While these pigeons were plentiful, hunters shot them on the wing, beat them down from their roosts at night by firelight and netted them alive to be shipped to city markets for shooting tournaments. When, in 1886, only one bird was seen throughout the entire northern breeding ground, the hunters concluded that the pigeons must have gone elsewhere and would return the next year. But they never did and the Passenger Pigeon was never seen again.

At the passing to extinction of these and others, hunters and nature lovers sought legislative protection of our wild life. In the early 1900's, for instance, the Federal Migratory Bird Law was passed, providing for an adjustment of the open season with regard to their class of birds.

However, abiding by conservation laws is not enough. We must all develop within ourselves an attitude of instinctive protection toward all forms of wild life if they are to survive.

Discovers Method To Simplify German

Austin, Texas—(ACP)—Reporting a proved method for learning to read advanced German with less than 50 hours' instruction, C. V. Pollard, University of Texas Germanic Language instructor literally has brought one of the most difficult of languages to translate to his students' finger-tips.

The result of four years' work, Pollard's novel method has passed 92 out of 94 students on language exams that ordinarily require three years' schooling, he claimed here today. Instruction times varied from eleven to fifty-one hours, averaging twenty-five.

His system, employing use of the fingers to guide the reader through the peculiar word order and long, complicated sentence structure of the German language, has been copyrighted. He will publish a book on it this summer, he said.

Pollard's system requires the learning of nine verbs and a few rules in lieu of extensive study of German grammar texts. In place of a haze of "do's and don'ts" Pollard has substituted the finger movement. The left finger is used as a guide and locates the key words, enabling the right thumb to move along the sentence, as the reader follows through. Breaks in the sentence, made by punctuation and the fact that all German nouns are capitalized, are clues used.

Dr. Albert Mackay Addresses Pre-Meds

Speaks on Antisepsis And Modern Surgery

Dr. Albert Mackay, surgeon at the Mary Fletcher Hospital and instructor in surgery of the Medical College, addressed the Pre-Medical Society, Tuesday evening at the Fleming Museum. Doctor Mackay's talk to the students followed a business meeting of the Society presided over by Everett Davis '40. A list of proposed amendments and additions to the constitution were read and accepted by the group. Don Graziano '40 was unanimously elected treasurer of the Society.

Doctor Mackay, introduced to the Pre-Medical students by Thomas DePalo '40, spoke on surgery as a career and presented an interesting account of the history of surgery. Before Louis Pasteur surgery was not considered a part of the healing art, but rather rated with the barber profession—indeed the barbers of the time did act in the capacity of surgeons. Pasteur in his studies on fermentation discovered that bacteria played an important rôle in disease and its treatment. Pasteur's work published in 1867 followed closely to Civil War when surgery in the Union and Confederate armies had been definitely limited with no knowledge of bacteria, antisepsis, and anesthesia. Doctor Mackay defined "Listerism" as including everything that applies to aseptic surgery, after Sir Joseph Lister of Glasgow who reasoned that if bacteria caused disease, disease should be prevented by the prevention of introduction of bacteria.

As a direct result a carbolic spray was used to produce an aseptic medium, and since then gradual changes have evolved to aid in preventing the spread of infection. Anesthesia has been improved, and operations make it possible to study diseased organs in living humans. The science of surgery, Doctor Mackay declared, is definitely a young one.

Doctor Mackay spoke of surgery as a career and urged the students to make a reexamination of their enthusiasm for their choice of profession. The study of surgery entails four years of college, four years of medical school and five years of special training. Considering high school this means a total of twenty-five years of schooling. Determination, enthusiasm, financial backing, health, and mental ability were stressed concerning surgery as a career. Doctor Mackay discussed the structure of medicine and outlined the course undertaken by medical students from their freshman through their senior year in medicine. In addition he presented many interesting and humorous incidents in his own career.

An interesting discussion followed Doctor Mackay's talk.

Museum to Have Exhibit In Fish and Game Show

At the Chittenden County Fish and Game Club Sports Show, to be held this year on April 3, 4, 5 and 6 at the Memorial Auditorium in Burlington, the Fleming Museum is to have one of the three educational exhibits to be shown, the rest being entirely commercial.

The theme of the Museum's exhibit is "The First Hunters" and will show prehistoric man with his stone age weapons, hunting for very existence. It will fill a booth twenty by forty feet and have as a background a mural which is being made by the Federal Art Project. Prof. Charles G. Doll, head of the geological department, is preparing fossils of starfish, crabs and other animals that date back to early geological times, and five models of dinosaurs to make the exhibit even more realistic.

The committee in charge is very enthusiastic and promises a fine display on the part of the Museum.

Physical Training Succeeds At Drake

Des Moines, Iowa—(ACP)—There is something new under the sun!

Co-educational physical education has been inaugurated at Drake University, and for the first time men and women will compete together at the fieldhouse, in the women's gymnasium and on the golf course as well as in the classroom.

Last semester two golf classes and three social dancing classes were offered for credit to both men and women. "There is no question about the success of these classes," Ruby Ana Holton, head of the women's physical education department, said. The classes are larger this year than ever before.

This semester it is planned to add badminton, bowling, horseback riding, archery and casting (for fish fans) to the schedule of courses. A future program, which probably will be enacted next year, may include canoeing, swimming and boating.

No official statistics are available on the number of educational institutions offering credit for co-educational physical education courses, but Noel H. Petree, head of the men's department, and Miss Holton say there are only "a few."

Dr. Kosler To Give Address Here Soon

Famous for Research Work With Immunology

Dr. John A. Kolmer, Professor of Medicine, Philadelphia, Pa., will deliver the next in this year's series of Osler Society lectures here. Doctor Kolmer is recognized both nationally and internationally as one of the outstanding leaders in modern medicine.

His well-deserved fame arises from many important sources. A few years ago, as a result of his careful research, a more exact standardization of the blood test for syphilis was made possible. His methods are now used in nearly all recognized laboratories in courses in immunology as a teaching model for determining the immune bodies in body fluids.

As a result of his recent researches with the newer forms of arsenical compounds in the treatment of syphilis the University of Pennsylvania developed their great institute for dermatological and chemical research for their treatment of infectious diseases. Doctor Kolmer's interests reach far beyond the chemical treatment of syphilis and he has eagerly and carefully investigated each advance made in this field. His subject for the current Osler lecture, "The Chemotherapy of Disease With Special Reference to Sulfanilamide and Sulfapyridine" is based upon his experiences with these drugs both in the laboratory and at the bedside.

In spite of the fact that his interests are and were in laboratory and experimental medicine Doctor Kolmer has always been keenly interested in medical education and has been an advocate of placing the teaching of clinical medicine, bedside medicine, at the very beginning of the medical course.

Doctor Kolmer is in great demand as a guest speaker at medical meetings throughout the land and his careful businesslike presentation of his subject matter has become the archetype of scientific papers and addresses in the medical field.

All interested groups or individuals, including physicians throughout the state are cordially invited to attend.

Track Preview

By Charles J. Katzew '42

With the melting snows of early spring, the perennial puddles form on Centennial and Coach Archie Post's migraines start. Beginning on April 20, a U. V. M. track team will contest Williams, Union, Colby, and Middlebury and will compete in the Eastern Intercollegiate Athletic championship run. Right now and every year at this time track coaches start racing on paper—that's where the migraines come in. Let's make tracks and take a look at the set-up for ourselves.

Gordie Smith is captain this year. Gordie was co-captain last year and high scoring man with over 40 points to his credit. He's a senior this year and is slated to enter West Point next year. A little military strategy is useful even if you can out-sprint the bullets.

In the Field

High jump—Last year's mainstays, Becker and Hunter will be jumping. Becker has been working out for a week and Hunter is reporting this week. Bill Pye might be bounding. He started in his freshman year but he's been a bit occupied with a couple other tough sports. Hopeful—J. A. White.

Broad jump—Wide open for new men. Becker is the only vet returning. Migraine element—looking for newcomers to take the places of the absent Herb Lowe and Dave Jones.

Pole vault—Bill Pratt and John Davis, pole vaulters.

Shot put—Not a bad looking crew in this corner: John Stone and Walt Gage back, plus Herb Long who tossed the buck shot for the frosh last year. Maybe—Warden will come out.

Hammer—Eliot Pearl has been working for three years on the hammer throw and is expected with faithful training to place well. John Stone, the muscular Longs, Herb and Cliff, and Ray Kallman should contribute a good deal, Squire and Sealey, last year's hopefuls, didn't return this year.

Discus—John Stone, Walt Gage, and the Long brothers will be assuming the pose. Akley, probably the best discus prospect to set foot on campus in a long while, is out for baseball and will be able to lend support according to the arrangement of the diamond schedule.

Javelin—Nichols will bear the brunt of competition, assisted by Herb Long. There is room for a couple more who will probably show up in practice.

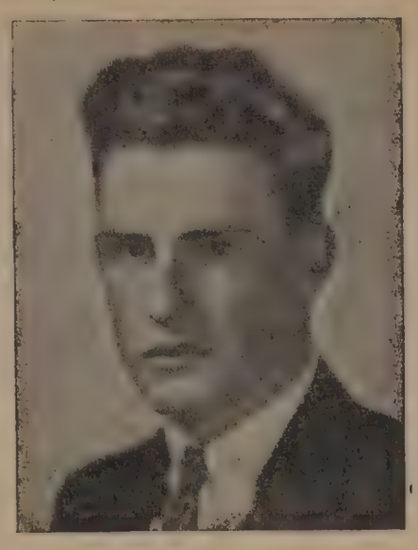
On the Track

Sprints—100 yards, 220 yards and one-fourth mile—Captain Smith will be carrying a heavy load in the absence of Dave Jones. At present the only other prospect is Nichols.

Hurdles—Great things are expected of Bob Kenney this year. Charlie Itzkowitz, a last year frosh hurdler, is being primed. Bud Allen, who did some fine work last year has been conspicuously absent from the boards so far and it is about due that he begin getting in shape soon to continue his services to the school.

One-half and one-fourth mile—Ed Robey is in the best condition so far for the one-fourth. Hard-working Jake Kaplan is beginning training. Jack Burgess, one of last year's frosh stars, will be stepping out in the higher circles this year. Sam Levine, who was out of school last year is a good possibility if he returns to track this year. Dave Stowell, last year's co-captain, will of course hold his own in the half mile. Bob Davis, Burgess, Robey and one of the phenomenal cross-country Websters are going to work on this event also. Bob Davis' brother was the U. V. M. one-half miler about three years ago.

One and two miles—The Websters of course, Dick, Clark and Lymie Gallup.



The track team is just about settled—on paper. Now for the real work—practice, coaching, injuries, etc. One package of aspirins coming up!—and if they're the same brand Archie has been using each year they sure do work!

Track Schedule:

April 20—Williams at Williamstown.
April 27—Union at Burlington.
May 4—Colby at Burlington.
May 11—Middlebury at Middlebury.
May 18—E. I. C. A. A. Meet at Worcester.
June 1—State Interscholastic Track Meet at Burlington.

Plans are now under way for the opening of the new LaSalette College in Arnolds Park, Iowa, next September.

Baseball Squad To View Movies Today

Team to Entrain for South in Two Weeks

As a prelude to the start of more intensive practice in all departments of the game, Coach Larry Gardner will provide an afternoon's relaxation for his baseball squad by taking them to the Fleming Museum on Friday, March 15, at 4.00 p.m. to view the latest big league films of both the American and National League ball teams. This starts a busy week-end for the films which will again be shown to the public at 8.00 p.m. of the same day and then on Saturday, March 16, at 2.00 p.m. they will probably play to a packed house of students from eighteen high schools in Vermont, who have been invited to attend the showing by Coach Gardner. The films, in sound, show the stars of both leagues, scenes of fundamentals in every part of the game, and even actual playing. To add to the success of the show there will also be a track picture so that an afternoon or evening's entertainment is assured for all.

Coach Gardner began the task of molding an infield yesterday when he batted them out to his aspirants for the hot corner, the initial sack and all points in between. The two weeks of batting and pitching practice have sharpened the boys' batting eyes and loosened the pitchers' arms, especially those of George Hart and Anse Belardinelli, who already look in mid-season form. There remains less than two weeks of practice and then—off to the sunny South.

Bowling Playoffs To Be Held Today

Eighteen top-ranking University of Vermont bowlers, all with an average of 100 or higher for a season's competition among the various fraternities, will prove once and for all who's the best man when a bowl-off is held at the Bowlaway Alleys in Burlington this Friday afternoon. The winner will receive a gold engraved cup, the runner-up a silver cup, also engraved. Through the fall and winter months, fraternity teams have been holding bowling matches at these alleys. Now all competitors are invited to attend the bowl-off between the top-flight eighteen whose season scores have averaged highest.

Frank Taylor, University of Vermont star athlete, who plays spectacular football, good basketball, summer and college baseball, and also skis, plays ice hockey and tennis, tops the list of bowlers with a season's average of 106.6. R. P. Davis, Morrisville, is close behind Taylor with an average of 106.3. Sixteen others are eligible to compete in the final.

Tennis Squad Reports Five Veterans Return

Despite losses of experienced men and the small number reporting for tennis, Professor Carpenter, coach of varsity tennis, expects the net men to turn in a better record than last year. The returning lettermen are captain-elect G. B. Booth '40, number 1 man on last year's team, and L. B. Whitcomb '40. Other veterans answering the call include L. F. Pine '41 and A. D. Clark '40. Lawrence Simpson, number 4 man on last year's team has left school and someone will have to take his place. Thus far practice has had to be indoors and nothing definite can be decided about the team standings until actual outdoor practices can be held.

American Skiing Has Long History

Rising and Olson Note Changes in Old Sport

American skiers, who have multiplied several hundred times in the past few years, don't seem able to decide which end of the hill they prefer—the top or the bottom. Their favorite stamping grounds have ski tows, which whisk them from the foot of the hill to the take-off in a minute or two. Then almost immediately, they start the downward swoop which returns them valleyward faster than they came. Grumbling is heard from many when no ski tow is available. But it's different, skiing in the Scandinavian countries, according to testimony from several students of Scandinavian ancestry who attend the University of Vermont.

Americans Like Steep Hills

Floyd Rising of White River Junction, for instance, a member of the University ski team and of Norwegian parentage, says he has noticed—as who could help it—that Americans, as soon as they can handle their newly-acquired skis, want to find the steepest hill possible and go down it, with all possible speed. Now in the old country, he says, skiers go in for skiing tours. They take along packs, with equipment enough for a cross-country trip, and may spend two weeks on the trail. On these tours, a good deal of mountaineering is incidental, because Norway is a mountainous country, but skiing downhill is only part of the travels of Norwegian skiers. Cross-country trails, constructed for the purpose of enabling ski travelers to cover ground, and not located only on steep hills headed downward, have been built in plenty. Also, beginners in Norway, he feels, are more likely to practice on level or rolling terrain until they get the hang of their skis, leaving mountain trails until their skill is greater.

Finns Not First

Understanding the differences between skiing in the United States and in Scandinavian countries is not difficult if the origin of the sport in both regions is considered. Finnish soldiers have mounted skis in their defense against Russian invaders and have brought to the attention of American newspaper readers that skiing is not only a sport. Back in the beginning, it was developed by the forebears of the people inhabiting Scandinavia because roads were few, transportation difficult, and skis the simplest solution to the problem of getting about a country snow-bound and ice-locked so many months of the year.

Another University of Vermont student, Floyd R. Olson of Burlington, whose father was born in Sweden, knows that the Finns are not the first to use skis in a war. Olson's father has told him of a fifteenth century conflict between Sweden and Norway, when the Swedes travelled on skis fighting the Norwegians.

Both in war and peace, skis were of great practical value to Swedes, Finns, and other Scandinavians. They were used for hunting, mail delivery, travel, when roads were scarce and transportation primitive. Even today, according to Olson, a Norwegian mail carrying service between Argentine and Chile traverses the deep snows of the Andes on skis.

In direct contrast to the development of skiing in Scandinavia from very early times as a means of transportation (skiing as a sport in Sweden, says Olson, dates from about the period of the United States Civil War, and is comparatively modern) is skiing in America, where within ten years it has been taken up by large numbers of people simply for recreation. America, owning more automobiles than any other country in the world, and having plenty of transportation facilities, never needed skis to get around with. Most skiers now use motor cars to take them to the ski spot they happen to fancy, and ski trains take week-end skiers from cities to ski centers. Depending solely on a pair of skis to take one where he wanted to go would be looked on as a queer idea by most American skiers. Skis are something to have fun with, and the quickest way to have fun with them is to find a good steep hill with a powder snow covering and head down it, full speed ahead. Climbing back up is slow and difficult for the novice, so ski tows make possible more swift descents per day and are in wide demand by the American skiing public.

In Re Skiing

Last week in a moment of weakness induced by thawing snow and sunshine we sang winter's swansong. But now we must apologize—we forfgot the ski team. They don't know it's spring. In fact last week-end Ev Bailey and Peter Patch went down to Lake Placid and proceeded to walk away with several honors. Ev captured a second in the open downhill and a second in the combined closed slalom and downhill. Pete captured a third in the closed class slalom and took a third in the closed class combined events. All year University skiers have been winning places at various meets. Now whether or not the University has an organized ski team—and it hasn't—the honors captured by University students in this sport don't do the school's reputation any harm. At this point we could shout that it's about time that skiing was recognized as a sport at this school and that skiers should be given letters—but we won't. The same thing has been said before and to say it again would be monotony.

Tumult and Shouting

We can't resist the temptation, however, to request the support of the student body in making skiing a major pastime here at Vermont. After all if the students show a little interest in skiing and work for an organized team there is no reason why eventually we won't have a ski team here. Middlebury, our rival downstate, is very active in winter sports. Every year they sponsor the high school skiing tournament. Other schools in this district where the facilities for winter sports are perfect are constantly increasing the appeal of skiing, hockey, etc., by being active organizers of the students on their own campus. Why not Vermont?

After all it's fun to engage in a sport just for the sheer thrill of it but most players like to feel that they are representing their school, they like to feel that their fellow students take an interest in what they are doing. In all other sports the team is cheered on by the school, it is an integral part of the school, it belongs. But Vermont skiers don't really belong. They are cut off from the school. Every week-end they go to some meet because they have enough initiative to enter and if they are lucky enough to win they may get a brief line in the local paper. Of course they don't ask for any more—it's enough for them to have participated in a sport which they enjoy and to be out in the open air and snow but we think that they deserve a little more than that. Maybe we're a little fanatical on this subject but we feel that someone should do a little shouting. Maybe if we shout loud enough now just when winter is ending something we shout will sink in and produce results next winter. Ah me, what an optimistic thought!

Intramurally Speaking

Turning from winter sports we glance ahead a week or two to the great intramural program coming up in the latter part of March. It seems that the Physical Education Department has cooked up something special this year. Intramural Day is going to be bigger and better than ever. Besides the regular wrestling and boxing there will be a fencing exhibition. For some time now two classes in fencing have been learning the fundamentals of sword play from Jack Couture and Norm Thompson who have volunteered their services. By the time the exhibitions roll around the fencers should be ready to give the spectators a good idea of what the game is all about. Also on Intramural day the various trophies will be awarded to winning fraternities in various competitions. We think it's a great idea to have Intramural day. Many of the boys who take part in the program have been working all year on their various activities and Intramural day is their only chance to show other people what they have accomplished. Intramural day brings sports within the reach of everyone and should be a vital force in getting students interested in athletics. Perhaps if the custom can be kept going it will be an even greater force in the future—emphasizing sports for sports sake and working for greater activity right here in our own university to supplement contests with other schools.

Apologia et Finis

Well here we are at the end of a very long and windy column and we haven't even mentioned baseball, track or tennis. Oh well, that's the editor's privilege—to talk about anything and everything and besides right now spring sports are just getting underway and there isn't much to write. (Hope that excuse sounds convincing.) See us in a week or two when Larry Gardner leads his diamond stars South and Archie Post gets his men out on the track. We'll be spouting spring sports then, providing good old Spring Fever hasn't settled in and bereft us of whatever meagre supply of ambition and pep we have left. Salve atque vale.

F. B.

Skiing An Old Sport

Although Americans did not pay much attention to skis until the last ten years, they are no new invention. According to Olson, skiing has apparently been known in Sweden since the eleventh century. As evidence he cites a stone statue of a skier standing in front of Upsala University, and dating from that period. Those early skis might not have been recognized by the 1940 skier, could he have seen them. For, says Olson, who got his information from his father, the first skis known were only about three feet long and they were made, not of wood, but of leather stretched over bone frames. As time went on, skiers found that longer skis would hold them up better and built their skis longer and longer until our present skis, taller than the skier, were developed. Wood probably was found more durable and capable of travelling faster and so was adopted, somewhere along the way.

As the skis were improved, they went faster. Skiers found they needed something to control their speed in going downhill. So they provided themselves with, first one pole, and finally, with two. Sealskins tied around skis to prevent slipping backward were used by these early skiers. They are still very useful to modern mountain-climbing skiers in this country as well as abroad.

One of the first ski meets, where ski experts gathered to compete and skiing started as a sport, was held in Telemark, Norway, according to Olson, about 1870. From that beginning, skiing spread to England, and slowly invaded America.

Olson and Rising are not the only students at the University of Vermont who come of Scandinavian parentage. There are a number of others, including Norwegians, Swedes, and Finns.

APPRECIATION

"Through the columns of the University of Vermont Cynic, I would like to express the sincere appreciation of the Headmasters' Club of Vermont and the University of Vermont Athletic Council for the assistance given by the students of the University in staging the 1940 State Interscholastic Championship Basketball Tournament on March 8 and 9.

The Band Wagon

By Bob Johnson

Kween City Kicks

Clyde Stearns back on the local front with a revamped crew. Clyde handling drums, Chum Reynolds, collegian on the 88, John Ingham on bass, look after the rhythm which features many fine tempos. Milt Webber exhibits fine technique and drive on tenor and clarinet. Ray Dorey furnishes the main boot with his vibraphones, playing fine conceptions in grand taste. The vibes help to differentiate the band from other jam combines—and it's great jam . . . . give a good, substantial listen. Milt expects to leave soon.

In answer to questioners: No. Jack Collins divorced himself from the Modernaires several months before the fire which made his fame. No. He didn't rush through the roaring flames and stifling heat to rescue the instruments. Yes. He did call up the boys in the band informing them that the hotel was burning and if they wanted their stuff they'd have to hurry. Yes—good publicity stunts are often fakes.

Charlie Barnet

Charlie's tenor and alto are well known for their tone, simplicity and astounding push. The band itself is great in all sections. The arrangements are beautiful and every tune—sweet or swing—really rocks. Mary Ann McCall vocalizes even better than in her Herman days—a coming thrush. The outfit—our 4-star boot for the first three months of '40.

By the by the brass figures of today were played by Ellington more than ten years ago. Barnet's idolizing of the great sepian without losing any of his own feelings and style—all very intriguing—especially to this corner.

Up—Down—Up Again

That's the story of Bunny Berigan, ace trumpeter. He rose to fame with Goodman—and T. Dorsey ("Marie"), organized his own band three different times. Those of you who heard the trombonists airing March 3 know that Bunny has rejoined that bespectacled gentleman of swing. This takes the form of a mourn for Bunny and his band—a real comer—and a rave for the improvement in the T. Dorsey band. Bunny will handle both hot and lead assignments. We're looking for the band to climb back to the heights of its former days. Berigan was a big factor in that rise.

Discussions

Miller releases lead the way in popularity with "Tuxedo Junction" leading the rest.

Barnet's popularity on the wax is rapidly rising with his original and different treatments.

Ellington's "Grievin" is truly great. We also go for "Little Posey" and "Lady in Blue."

Herman's "Love's Got Me Down" with Carol Kay warbling rates as one of the finest vocals in the past few months.

Personality of the Week

The aforementioned Ray Dorey—who just left Clyde Stearns—they all do—. Ray is not only a fine vocalist but a sensational vibe man—a ready wit—always hep—no mean ability on guitar and piano—announces on the local ether—a lively wife (in case you're too interested).

Red Nichols?

Rumor—Red Nichols and band will appear locally by the end of the month—brought by the Elks. Nichols' cornet is always pretty and he has a fine tenor and a good dixieland crew within the band. (Gram used to think Red was swell—which is enough for us.)

Where we came in—draggin' a broken-down embouchure and thirteen "bound to please" mouthpieces. Now for an hour's workout.

Haverford College has a new program to train students in work of relief, rehabilitation and social reconstruction.

The educational clinic of College of the City of New York has trained 22,000 "problem" children since its founding in 1913.

Rev. R. J. Carothers Gives Lenten Message

The Rev. R. J. Carothers of the Methodist Church of Middlebury was the Chapel speaker on Wednesday, March 13. His message was appropriate for Passion Week. He said that no life ever needs to end in desolation, and that no man ever prayed without receiving some help. Out of seeming defeat comes triumph if one only has the depth, courage, and skill to seek and find it.

The selection "Tenebrae Sunt" by Palestrina was very beautifully sung by the choir under the direction of Professor Kirby.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the Cynic:

In the last issue of the Cynic put out by the old staff the members of the new staff were named and the statement was made that Maywood Metcalf was the first woman editor-in-chief of the Cynic. Since then it has been discovered that in the college year 1918-1919 Catherine F. Casey of the class of '19 served in the above-named capacity.

As editor of the Cynic at the time at which the story appeared, I wish to offer an explanation for the misstatement. I do not wish to place any of the blame on the shoulders of the reporter who wrote the story for I am sure that he followed his instructions and checked the old Cynic files as he was directed. As will be explained below anyone so doing might very easily overlook the fact that Miss Casey was once the Cynic editor-in-chief.

A person checking the files for a list of past editors would quite naturally turn to the first issue of each year in order to find out the name of the editor for that year. Unfortunately, this method would not show that Miss Casey had been editor because of the fact that she was not elected at the beginning of the year but took the place of the editor who had been elected for the year.

It seems that Leon I. Patten '19 was elected to serve as editor for the school year 1918-1919. He returned to college in the fall of 1918 and took up his duties as editor. He did put out several issues that fall which accounts for his name appearing on the masthead, but the duties of the Student Army Training Corps made it impossible for Mr. Patten to continue with his Cynic work. This, you must remember, was war time and the men students were forced to spend much time in training.

As almost every male student was occupied with the intensive training required by the Corps it was obvious that if the Cynic were to continue to go to press, the women of the University must take over. Accordingly, Catherine F. Casey was made editor-in-chief and although almost her entire staff was made up of other women students she was successful in her difficult undertaking. Her first issue, according to the files in the Billings Library, came out on November 16, 1918. From that time on until May 17, 1919, when the new editor, Perley J. Hill '20, was elected, Miss Casey's name was carried on the masthead as editor-in-chief.

This, I feel, may serve as a satisfactory explanation of the entire matter. It will at once be seen that Miss Metcalf is not the first woman editor-in-chief of the Cynic; Miss Casey was the first one to act in that capacity. A more exact statement is that Miss Metcalf is the first woman regularly elected to serve in that capacity for an entire year. However, Miss Casey was the first woman editor.

Yours truly,
Carl H. Schofield '40.

To the Editor of the Cynic:

At the last meeting of the Interfraternity Council, an open discussion took place in which members of the Council, with Professors Evans and Carroll, talked on the heavy burden of extra-curricula activities upon the student body and upon fraternity men in particular.

Discussion evolved around such points as higher grades for admission to honorary societies, more strict regulation regarding admission to the University and lastly on the problem of the Traynor trophy. It is upon this last point which I wish to dwell.

The Traynor trophy had as its original aim, the objective of promoting good feeling among the various men's fraternities. It sought, by placing a competitive goal of excellence, to attain friendship, fellowship and cooperation among the Greek-letter societies. Perhaps it has done this, but in my mind its objective has turned in the opposite direction. In fact the fraternity that wins this cup today finds itself not in a position which commands envy and respect but rather in one where jealousy and dislike abound.

I know of no other college or university where such a system is in operation and it seems to me quite desirable that such competition should come to an end. By eliminating Traynor Trophy I do not mean that we should discontinue intramural activities, Kake Walk, etc., but what I do mean is that we should try to eliminate this underlying idea of winning these events merely for the idea of getting the grand prize.

I can say, I think, with a reasonable amount of assurance, that the faculty looks upon this competition as quite disdainful. It is noticeable to them that such activities have a great effect on a student's average, especially in the spring when a majority of the events take place. Now there is no need for this and I think we for our own good and for the good of the student body of the future should do something about this situation.

We could, of course, limit and cut down the events which are now in the Traynor Trophy competition, especially could we cut out Junior Week Peerade and fraternity drill squads which to me have little or no significance. This probably would eliminate considerably the burden which as I have mentioned before, comes during the second semester.

Perhaps I am all wet on this subject, but I do feel that there is something vitally wrong somewhere, which can be corrected quite simply. I hope that this letter will furnish incentive for others to offer suggestions to the problem of fraternity relations, which although seemingly trivial is quite important both to the individual and his fraternity group.

Yours very truly,
Robert P. Kenney,
President Interfraternity Council.

This is the first effort of Chittenden County to contribute anything to the relief of the Finnish. Interesting to note is the fact that the two Finnish flags to be used as decoration were made by women of the Finnish society in Rutland and so are authentic symbols of that country. Also donated by these women are the costumes which the Burlington High School girls who are to serve as ushers will wear. The aid of the Rutland group in making this concert a success was secured by Mrs. F. D. Carpenter, who has made several trips to the headquarters in New York and also has made numerous speeches to different interested groups.

To Provide Food

The money collected from the sale of the tickets will be given to Louis Dow, who will send it to the state house as a contribution from Chittenden County. From there it will go to the Finnish Relief Headquarters maintained by Ex-President Hoover in New York City, and thence to Finland. Now that the treaty with Russia has been concluded, it is supposed that the money will be more useful than ever in providing food and shelter for those who have lost their homes and will help provide medical help for those injured in recent campaigns.

As patrons, Mrs. H. B. Rolfe, head of arrangements, has secured most of the merchants, ministers and educators of the city.

Over one thousand tickets are out now and may be purchased from the various merchants. Students may purchase their tickets for fifty cents from Miss Harris or from representatives of the student body. Anyone selling $10 worth of tickets will receive a $1 seat, and those selling $5 worth of tickets will receive a fifty cent seat. As the concert is for those who will appreciate the music, Miss Harris will have a limited number of student tickets for those really interested and unable to purchase seats.

Pittsburgh University Has Novel Classrooms

Pittsburgh, Pa.—(ACP)—Art, culture, and traditions of European lands now at war are preserved in a unique series of nationality classrooms in the University of Pittsburgh's world-famed 42-story Cathedral of Learning, but the political credos and racial hatreds are in no way suggested. The nineteen nationality rooms, a "little league of nations," are projects of national groups in this country.

Here in the nine rooms already completed, students and faculty may enjoy the culture, art, and architecture of many countries now at war. Arts, which recognize no boundary lines, portray in concrete form the finer instincts of the peoples represented.

The classrooms, with decorations and appointments authentic and in keeping with some period in the history of the nation represented, offer the inspiration which the best artists and philosophers of the various peoples have given to the world.

There is no necessary relation between the character of the rooms and the subjects taught in them. The idea is much simpler. It is that youth, preparing for useful lives, shall see concrete evidence of other useful lives in other times and other lands.

Christ's Later Life Subject of Meeting

At Collegium Sunday evening, March 17, Doctor Ladd will speak on Christ's later life. This promises to be especially interesting because it will be illustrated with pictures actually taken in the Holy Land by a man who visited there. Following Doctor Ladd's talk, refreshments will be served. Everybody come.

Looking At Vermont

Ten Years Ago—

It seems than an eccentric New York millionaire left a will which stated that he would leave to the State of Vermont, $100,000 on condition that the universities of the state merge into a single institution under state supervision and with democratic ideals. If Vermont did not choose to comply, the money would go to Columbia University. Vermont did not.

The women's rifle team defeated the varsity sharpshooters in a shoulder-to-shoulder match by a score of 962 to 942.

"That the Emergence of Women from the Home is a Deplorable Feature of Modern Life" was the topic which the debating team used against the Colchester Grange.

They tell a story of a professor who stepped into the classroom and backed out almost instantly as he saw an eraser in mid-flight. He didn't see the window broken. We don't know whether it's true or not but it sounds like Professor Aiken.

Hayes & Carney, local outfitters, report that their contest to discover who is the best dressed man at the University has become a keen race. Four different Barrymore's from four different fraternities are now in the lead with but a few votes separating them.

A new game has taken Norwich by storm and is now very popular at the University. It is called "Christianity." The girls represent Christianity and they line up along one side of the room. The fellows who are heathens are lined along the opposite side. At the given signal, the heathens rush over and embrace Christianity.

Medical Professors Attend Conference

To Present Papers On Research Work

Dr. Harold B. Pierce, professor of physiological chemistry, and Dr. Ferdinand J. M. Sichel, assistant professor of physiology, are leaving Monday for the conference of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, which is to be held in New Orleans during the coming week. Dr. Pierce and Dr. Sichel are to present papers on research work that they have done.

Dr. Sichel will present two papers at the meetings. One is to be done in collaboration with Dr. Dugald Brown of N. Y. U. on "The Initial Contraction Process" and the other is on "The Refractory Period in the Non-Conducted Response of Striated Muscles," on which he worked alone. Dr. Pierce's paper, collaborated with P. F. Fenton, research fellow in biochemistry in the U. V. M. medical college, is called "Gastric Emptying and Intestinal Absorption of Glucose Solutions in the Rat." Dr. Sichel's papers are to be presented before the American Physiological Society and Dr. Pierce's paper before the American Society of Biological Chemists. Both of these societies, along with the Pharmacologist and Pathologist societies, are member societies that comprise the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

Miss Frost's first volume of poetry was published in the Yale Series of Younger Poets. All her poetry shows a great lyric gift and New England transcendentalism. One can see the development of her writing in the following three selections from her poetry.

Descent from Hemlock Wall

She was never very sure
That utter silence would endure
Below the earth, for she had heard
Stillness broken by a bird
In rainy lilac-tress, and known
The silence of a sullen stone
Shattered by a cricket's wing.
Quiet was a doubtful thing,
She said, and staunch in her believing,
Went down to prove her self-deceiving.

Fox of the Heart

I lay with darkness on the ground,
And in the darkness passed me by
The lean streak of a silver hound,
And a fox who ran without a sound,
Having a gold flame in his eye.

This part is from Woman of This Earth, which Miss Frost says, is an attempt to prove that the epic could be lyric. It is a narrative written in a group of lyrics.

The history of earth is a moving of leaves
in the sun
Closing behind the bodies of men, as the grasses
Close after the hare and the junipers after the fox.

Miss Frost's novels are a distinct change in form. The New England villages are seen through the eyes of children which is a fresh and interesting point of view.

In Yoke of Stars the change is from child to mature adult. It shows the artist's mind and soul and the struggle he must go through.

Uncle Snowball is in lighter vein and contrary to the stern New England grasp. It is in direct contrast to the severe austerity of the many New England novels of the past and the frantic search for quaint and eccentric local color. Miss Frost has shown that Vermonters have just as much lightness and humor as anyone else.

Miss Frost is a refreshing and delightful person to meet. She is a true Vermonter and a very sensitive poet.

Spring Fashion Show At Southwick Tonight

Friday afternoon at 4.30, a fashion show will be presented at Southwick, sponsored by Claire Rock of the class of '40. This will follow directly after the Y. W. C. A. meeting and refreshments will be served.

The newest spring fashions will be furnished exclusively by W. G. Reynolds Co. The trend in colors this year is especially toward the gay, with shaded pastels and half tones becoming increasingly popular. There are also chic outfits in neat navy blue with white accessories. These are only a few hints of the smart color harmonies.

Even newer lines and cuts are appearing in the fashions, which will not be devoted exclusively Friday afternoon to sports or street clothes, but to all styles in which every college girl is interested.

The following girls will be models at the affair: Mary Jane Hammond '41, Mary Esielionis '42, Eleanor Shandoff '41, Angeline Ducas '41, Phyllis Williams, '40, and Jean Szyman '40.

Everyone is welcome.

Vermont Teachers

Dean Mary Jean Simpson of the University will speak on "Personal Guidance," and F. R. Adams of the John T. Slack Corporation, Springfield, on "Qualifications for Employment."

In the afternoon the Vermont Art Association will meet in the Fleming Museum with Francis Colburn, art supervisor in Barton and Orleans schools, as chairman. Speaking will be Prof. J. T. Metcalf, head of the University psychology department, discussing "Art in Education," and Ronald Slayton, Burlington, telling of the Burlington Community Art Center.

Guidance Conference

Secondary school teachers will meet in conference Friday afternoon, as will elementary school, junior high, and rural school teachers. The Vermont Guidance and Personnel Association will hold a late afternoon session and round-table conferences for teachers of mathematics, modern languages, Latin, home economics, English, and secretarial subjects. Chairman of the mathematics round table is Dean Elijah Swift of the University, with Prof. J. A. Bullard of the Engineering College assisting; of modern languages, Prof. A. B. Myrick, head of the University department of romance languages; of Latin, Prof. L. M. Prindle of the University classics department; of home economics, Elizabeth L. Brown, Burlington; of English, Prof. W. E. Aiken, University English department; of commercial subjects, Prof. Catherine F. Nulty of the University economics department.

Friday evening dinners will be held at the Hotel Vermont for the Schoolmen of Vermont, and at the Ethan Allen Club for the Vermont Women Teachers' Club.

The last meeting will be a conference on Professional Relations at Southwick, Saturday morning, with Prof. Bennett C. Douglas, head of the department of education, as chairman. All members of the State Committee on Professional Relations of Teachers and others interested are invited to attend the meeting.

Fraternity Sing

a. Stage-show tactics in presentation will be allowed but will not count toward the award.
b. Soloists may be presented, but only the singing of the group as a whole will be counted toward the award.

4. Each group may be accompanied by a pianist of its own choice. This individual need not be a member of the fraternity.

The Committee also offers the following suggestions:

1. That groups be not dressed in costumes or formal dress but in full-piece suits. Sport combinations are not favored.
2. The Chairman must have the names of the songs chosen to be presented by Friday, March 15. This is to avoid duplication. In case of such duplication, the old principle, "First come, first served" will be in effect.
3. Rehearsal to be held at Southwick, Thursday evening, March 21. On this date a list of the singers from your fraternity must be in the hands of the Chairman.
4. Remember this year the Sing counts three points toward Traynor Trophy.
5. This year the Council intends to hold a mass sing of all the groups at the completion.

Carroll Cup and Traynor Credits

This year the winning fraternity will receive the Carroll Cup and receive three points credit toward Traynor Trophy. The Carroll Cup was presented to the Interfraternity Council by Professor Carroll head of the Political Science department and faculty advisor of the Council to revive the U. V. M. traditional Interfraternity Sing which was not held until last year since 1929. The cup is awarded annually to the Sing winner and will become the permanent possession of the group winning it three times. The combined incentives of Carroll Cup and Traynor Trophy credits, plus the efficient functioning of Chairman E. A. Guilbert '41 and his committee will undoubtedly make this year's Sing one of the outstanding interfraternity competitions. More enthusiasm is being shown this year than for any other group sing.

Basketball

The first Green and Gold basketball game of the tournament was played off yesterday at 4.15. The second game will be played at the W. A. A. Members Party next Tuesday evening at 8.00.

Badminton

The first round of the tournament was completed yesterday afternoon, and girls are urged to play off the second round as quickly as possible.

Mass Chorus to Broadcast

The selections by the combined choruses, which will culminate the program are to be broadcast over Station WCAX. Chairman Guilbert has contacted the Columbia Broadcasting System, of which Station WCAX is a member, in order to have the program sent out over the national network. Due to proximity to Easter and fullness of schedule this will probably not be put through this year. However, if next year's directors contact the Columbia offices in time, there is an excellent opportunity to have the U. V. M. Sing broadcasted throughout the nation.

Rehearsal Thursday Night

The only and all-important rehearsal of the combined chorus has been called by Director Louis Pichierri '41 for next Thursday evening. It is required that all groups participating in the program be present. Stanley Pike '42 will be the accompanist for the combined chorus.

Assisting with program arrangements is the following committee composed of one man from each fraternity, chosen by each group as most capable of handling its production: Donald Dunn of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, A. L. Warden of Alpha Tau Omega, Jack Williams of Phi Delta Theta, Norman Tucker of Sigma Phi, Hazen Wood of Delta Psi, Lyman Hunt of Kappa Sigma and Robert Steinman of Phi Sigma Delta. To augment the large student audience expected, members of the faculty are to be invited to be patrons of the forthcoming greatest U. V. M. Interfraternity Sing.

Committees Chosen For Easter Dance

Panhellenic Sponsors Semi-Formal Affair

On March 23 the gym will be the scene of a new type of dance, an intersorority dance sponsored by Pan-hellenic Council. Shirley Gray is general chairman of this semi-formal spring affair.

Jean Saul is chairman of decorations. Her committee is composed of the following: Pi Beta Phi, Patricia Pike '43; Kappa Alpha Theta, Barbara Mann '41; Alpha Chi Omega, Mary Germain '43; Alpha Xi Delta, Norma Preston '42; Sigma Gamma, Barbara Blodgett '41; Tri-Delt, Joené Agard '42; Delta Phi Epsilon, Anna Berman '42.

Mary Letta Root has the following committee for refreshments: Pi Beta Phi, Jane Hunter '43; Kappa Alpha Theta, June Swanson '42; Alpha Chi Omega, Margaret Wishart '43; Alpha Xi Delta, Eileen Rooney '41; Sigma Gamma, Hester Carver '41; Tri-Delt, Lucille Clark '42; Delta Phi Epsilon, Clara Griffel '41.

Mr. and Mrs. Holden Bickford and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Perry will chaperone. The New Vermonters will play.

Ping-pong

The girls have also finished the first round in the ping-pong tournament. The games at first were played off rather slowly, but interest is becoming keener, and they are moving at a lively pace now. The following girls will play this week:

Betty Myers (Alpha Chi House) vs. Gloria Oling (Mrs. McCormick).

Anne Cohn (Prospect House) vs. Helen Childs (Robinson).

Thelma Packard (Redstone) vs. Corinne Hollowell (Campus).

Jean Finney (Slade) vs. Janet Dyke (Allen).

Fraternities To Hold Song Contest On Friday, March 22

Nine Fraternities Are to Compete At Southwick

Fraternity men at the University of Vermont, having contested for c ampus championships in sports, stunts, student parades and military drills, are now preparing to test their mettle in still another field—that of song. Nine of the Greek-letter brotherhoods are polishing up on their choruses and hunting out their best tenors and basses as they get ready for the Interfraternity Sing, started last year and this year well on the way to becoming another University institution. Not only will the fraternities entering the competition this year strive for possession of the Daniel Carroll Cup, given last year by Prof. D. B. Carroll for award annually to the winning fraternity, but also for points toward the Traynor Trophy, grand climax of a year's interfraternity competition, presented each year in June.

The number of fraternities entering the competition has increased this year, and a new feature of the Sing will be the joining of all competing glee clubs in one massed chorus, which will be led by Louis Pichierri of Burlington, music education student and leader of last year's winners, Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Fraternities which will enter the singing competition are Alpha Tau Omega, Delta Psi, Kappa Sigma, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Sigma, Delta, Lambda Iota, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Nu and Sigma Phi. The event is scheduled for March 22 at the Southwick Building.

In addition to the regular fraternity groups and the massed chorus, part of the program of this year's Interfraternity Sing will be devoted to a number of soloists, among whom will be T. K. Malone of Burlington, music education student who is well known to northern Vermont audiences.

Women Students Meet On Wednesday

The women of the campus will discuss the Student Union rules in panel discussions at the mass meeting Wednesday at Southwick. Nominations for the honor societies will also take place. Mary Nelson '40 will present Mortar Board's proposed plan for a point system to effect the nominations for the heads of women's organizations. Such systems are used on other campuses and they have proved very helpful in promoting the distribution of the major women's offices.

Phyllis McGovern '40, Student Union president, is very anxious that all women who are not affected by Student Union rules also attend the meeting. The nominations for the women's honor societies should be done by all Vermont women according to the Student Union Council and Mortar Board.

Outing Club Council

At a meeting last week the Outing Club Council elected five new members, one sophomore and four freshmen. These people were carefully selected because of their interest, support and enthusiasm in the club's activities. Chester Partridge '42, Robert Stockwell '43, Janet Dike '43, Hortense Leduc '43, and Harold Pease '43 were those elected. They will serve a three-month probationary period before remaining permanently on the governing council. They will be honored at a banquet sometime in April.

Ira Allen Chapel

Rev. Charles Brown Speaks At Vespers

Yale Lecturer At Chapel on Sunday

The Rev. Charles R. Brown, author, lecturer, minister for many years and dean emeritus of the Yale Divinity School was the guest speaker at the vesper service held at Ira Allen Chapel last Sunday afternoon. Doctor Brown is the recipient of an honorary degree of L.H.D. from this University as well as holding degrees from the University of Iowa, Boston University, Oberlin, Brown, Wesleyan College and Mills College. He has been in great demand as a lecturer.

The service included the prelude by the University Orchestra, the scripture, which was read by the Rev. Charles Stanley Jones of Burlington, an anthem "Rest Ye in Peace" by the choir accompanied by the orchestra under the direction of Professor Kirby, and a prayer given by Reverend Jones.

The guest speaker was introduced by Reverend Hall. Doctor Brown's topic was "The Deeper Insight." He believed all life was centrally based upon the gifts of God, who is the power behind all the accomplishments of man. He emphasized the portion of the scripture in the nineteenth chapter of Revelations—"and he saw an angel sitting in the sun" and advised that we look up as well as down in our life's tasks.

The wealth of the world is gained only through the great gifts of God to humanity. Doctor Brown stressed the fact that mere individuals cannot build a universe fit to live in without an interest in each other and that all things worthwhile are originally from divine sources.

In closing Doctor Brown said that the world is merely the home of Our Father where we, as individuals, should do our best to make life worthwhile.

Doctor Brown's message was spontaneous, and forceful, and included many thought-provoking statements. His return again will be welcomed by all.

Scribes Meet for Varied Discussion

There was a meeting of Scribes, informal literary club, on Friday night, at Southwick. An unusual number of members were present, and the discussion was both varied and stimulating. Several short stories, an essay, and three poems were submitted for criticism.

Miss Kathrina Storms, the society's faculty advisor, was absent from the meeting, due to her continued illness.

Professor Merrick will be guest at the next meeting, which will be held on March 29. Anyone interested is cordially invited to come. There is no restriction as to membership or time of joining.

Sanford Cobb Talks On Literature In America Today

Talk Reveals That Historical Novels Are Most Popular

March 14, Sanford Cobb of the Everyday Book Shop spoke to a group of students informally gathered in the lounge at Southwick last Thursday evening. The topic of his talk was "What America Is Reading."

According to Mr. Cobb, citizens of America are now particularly interested in reading historical novels. The popularity of such books as those written by Kenneth Roberts proves this fact to be true.

As a reason for this, Sanford Cobb pointed out that the public of today is weary of the present and finds pleasure in reading of the eventful past. Mr. Cobb also reminded his listeners that this year is the beginning of a new decade. Consequently, books are being written, summarizing the past decades. Sanford Cobb mentioned Allen's "Since Yesterday" and Stephen Longstreet's "Decade 1919-1929" to illustrate his point.

Mr. Cobb also compared for his listeners the best seller list of this year with that of twenty years ago. By so doing he showed the improvement in the public's taste for reading material. In 1919 the public preferred light novels such as those written by Gene Stratton Porter, Kathleen Norris and Zane Grey. This year America's best seller list favors the deeper, more philosophical novels. Some of those he mentioned were "The Nazarene" by Asch, "Grapes of Wrath" by Steinbeck, and "Portrait of Jenny" by Robert Nathan.

Mr. Cobb also gave interesting reviews of many of the most popular books of the present time.

At the end of his talk a general informal discussion of books was held by all those present.

This opportunity of hearing Sanford Cobb's views was given to the students by the Sophomore Aides. The chairman of the evening was Miriam Fiske.

Council To Employ F-S Question Box

In accordance with the action taken at the November meeting of the Faculty-Student Council and confirmed at the March meeting, a question box marked "Faculty-Student Council" will be placed soon in the corridor of the Old Mill near the private door to the Dean's office.

Questions of concern to either faculty or students or suggestions for improvement of conditions affecting the student body or any group of students on the campus may be dropped into the box at any time. It is hoped that all such questions will be signed by the writer, but lack of a signature will not preclude the consideration of any question which presents a problem of real importance. Such questions and suggestions will be brought before the Faculty-Student Council for discussion and action or referred to the University Council, as the case may be.

It is the hope of the Faculty-Student Council that this device may encourage a free expression of public opinion which will, in turn, serve to guide faculty-student action on the campus.

Be sure and get your dates girls. Remember intersorority dance is Saturday night and you don't want to get left.

Mortar Board to Propose Limitation of Offices

Point System to Be Discussed at Mass Meeting on Wednesday

During the past years there has been a feeling among the members of Mortar Board that there is a definite need for the wider distribution of the activities at college to bring out leadership among more women and to insure a higher quality of service in the office held. This year from experiences of the past and present the members of Mortar Board believe that some system of limiting the activities which one person can do should be attempted. They believe that an effective point system would safeguard the academic interests of the students as well as the health of those who are carrying a load of outside activities and college work which is far beyond their strength.

The 1940 Chapter of Mortar Board has been working on this project of which the campus has felt the need and have finished a plan for such a system to be in effect for the elections this spring. This plan will in all probability need changes and additions another year and Mortar Board wishes all women students to read over the plan and understand what it is attempting so that they may offer their suggestions for improvement.

As the system is now planned, the presidents of the women's organizations will hand in their slates of nominations to Mortar Board, who will simply check them to see if there are any conflicts. The plan is to stagger the elections so that if a girl is nominated for two and loses the first one, she may have the opportunity to stand for election in another organization.

The system for apportioning the different points to the different offices is explained below. Under this plan a girl will be allowed only one major office (those in group one), and her total number of points should not exceed twenty-five. The number of points which a position merits is based on the time involved and not the prestige of the office.

Students To Aid In Picking Queen

Dramatic Ability and Personality Important

There is perhaps a bit of the fantastic in a Vermont girl competing in a contest sponsored by Paramount Pictures . . . a shade of the unreal but not the artificial. For America, during the last decade or two, has had Contest-inal Grip. The exotic excitement that emanates from any kind of popular competition, be it gold fish swallowing, amateur hour, photography or landscape painting, is part of the American democratic whirl. Only the intellectual snob who has sternly built a prop for himself above the crowd, refuses to pick up his ears when a contest is announced. To be impervious to any sort of nation-wide or local competition, is to deny that experience has validity. The Vermonter and every other United States citizen, despite what the parlor-pinks lazily state, have equal chances and opportunities.

The Paramount Contest is not for the girl with beauty alone; she must have dramatic ability and personality as well. It is left entirely to the student body to pick that girl who would make the All-American College Queen most acceptable. It is up to each individual on the campus to see that he or she casts his vote on Monday the 25th. The CYNIC will publish ballots in the preceding Friday issue and there will be a box, in which to cast the vote, near the Coffee Corner in the Old Mill on Monday.

Debating Teams Have Full Schedule

Men's Varsity Team To Debate Tonight

Men debaters, women debaters, and freshman debaters at the University of Vermont who have been following a full schedule for the past two weeks are faced with an even heavier program from now until the start of Easter vacation, March 30. Even with the arrival of vacation, the debaters will not be finished with their duties, for both men's and women's teams have spring trips scheduled which will take them southward on wide swings across country.

Washington and Jefferson debaters will be the opponents of the men's varsity team today (Tuesday, March 19). There will be a three-judge decision. Canisius College sends a team of debaters for a contest March 20. This argument will be held at the Southwick Building. A three-judge decision between the teams will be rendered.

Women debaters face contemporaries from Houghton College on March 27. These three contests are all home debates and will all concern the question of the desirability of America's maintaining a policy of strict political and economic isolation from nations outside the Americas who are engaged in war within or without their national boundaries.

Yearling debaters are just as occupied as their elders on the varsity teams. Last night (Monday, March 18) they clashed with the Northfield High School debating team in Burlington. Last week they contended with teams from Essex Junction High School and from Green Mountain Junior College,

Three Fraternities Hold Spring Dances

The Sigma Alpha Epilson house was the scene of a festive formal last Friday evening. The novel lighting effects and the gay St. Patrick decorations made their dance an outstanding social event of the spring season. T. K. Malone '41 was in charge aided by H. J. Rulfo '41 and E. A. Guilbert '41. Professor and Mrs. Bickford chaperoned. The music was furnished by the popular student band "The Catamounts."

The Phi Delta Theta's entertained their guests at a dinner dance last Friday evening which they considered one of their best dances. Many alumni and guests were present inluding Larry Dogwood of the California Beta Chapter. The New Vermonters furnished the syncopation.

The chaperons were Professor and Mrs. Millington and Professor and Mrs. Pope. J. T. Emott '41 was in charge of the dinner and H. L. Pache '41 and C. A. Shortle '42 headed the dance committee. To the many guests, the big polar bear on the front lawn, seemed to be the center of attraction.

The Sigma Nu's held an informal "vic" dance Friday evening. Mr. Archie Post and Mr. and Mrs. Larry Gardner chaperoned. D. E. Stowell '40 was in charge.

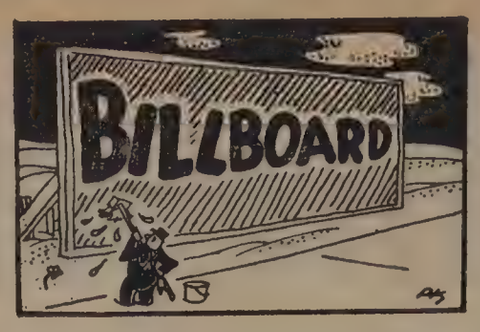
The March Man

Eighteen days of "windy" March have passed without any spectacular move on the part of the "March Man"—Herr Hitler. On March 21, 1933, the Reichstag passed an act giving Hitler dictatorial powers for four years. Hitler publicly announced the death of the disarmament clause of the Versailles Treaty in March, 1935. A year later he remilitarized the Rhineland on March 11, 1938, and made his spectacular seizure of Austria. The occupation of Czechoslovakia took place just a year ago last Friday. All of the civilized people of our planet are asking the question, "What is the 'March Man' going to do this year?"

According to the people who are best qualified to answer and to guess, Hitler's next move is unpredictable. Because the Germans can muster between 150 and 200 divisions behind her Westwall as compared to the Allied 85 to 150 and because Finland's fall leaves Russia free to turn her energies elsewhere, Hitler's land forces are undeniably superior to the Allies. In the air the Reich is also superior and many observers feel certain that Hitler's March move this year will be an intensified air raid offensive which the German air attack last Saturday would seem to verify to some extent.



The Balkans and the Scandinavian countries are making desperate efforts to remain neutral, but they both fear that Hitler may launch an offensive in their regions. Economically the Balkans are essential to the Reich and with Russia designated as the "flanking power in the east" and Italy protecting the south, the Germans apparently feel certain that they can stop French and British attempts to make the Balkans a new field of battle. Scandinavia with the signing of the "Finnish death warrant" last week was shaken to her foundations for Scandinavian independence rested on a balance between Russia and Germany which is now gone. Russia, the north countries believe, attacked Finland to gain naval bases to defend herself against Germany in the future. Will Hitler make his big move this March in these territories?

On the western front Germany's program will depend on whether her leaders believe she has a reasonable chance of winning a decisive victory by a great offensive and whether they think that the British blockade prohibits a victory in a long war and makes a powerful offensive necessary to win the war. Yesterday Hitler and Mussolini conferred at the Brenner Pass. What did they decide? Will Italy change her rôle from a passive sympathizer to an active helper?

All these factors make it very difficult for anyone to even make a good guess as to what Hitler will do this March, but when we recall the list of important acts that Hitler has made in the month of March in former years we are constantly waiting to hear what the "March Man" is planning.

Prizes for Ice Sculpturing

The excellent snow and ice figures that various groups made in front of their houses at Kake Walk time have led many students to express their wish that some kind of reward might be made to the group who makes the best figure. At Dartmouth and Cornell, where winter carnivals are held each year, very beautiful ice pieces are photographed and published in leading newspapers throughout the East, giving very valuable publicity to their schools. We suggest that next year's Kake Walk directors put up a prize for the best ice sculpturing.

Co-eds Have Pets For New Hobbies

Hour exams—research papers—outside readings—inhumanly long assignments—all this plus the persistent winter weather has had a peculiar effect on some of U. V. M.'s co-eds. They have become pet-conscious. Nette Trottier '43, Wilder and Madeline Puffer '42 from Townsend have been concentrating diligently on the taming of a mouse which they have christened Adrian. The task hasn't been easy but now success is in sight. Recently Adrian allowed himself to be temporarily housed in a paper bag. The latest report is that he has taken up permanent residence in a waste paper basket.

Gerry Waldo '40 of Norwichtown, Conn., who lives at Slade Hall, brought her pet cat to live with her last fall. On March 5 the cat proudly presented the dormitory with two sets of twins, one set gray tiger, the other black. The family is very popular and the kittens have all been promised to future owners when they grow up. Their foster mother reports that they are doing nicely and that two of them already have their eyes open.

Confucious and Artistole have a very simple philosophy of life which consists mainly of eating, scratching, and sleeping. After all, one couldn't expect much more from a couple of baby chicks. They belong to two freshmen, Helen McLean, Jamaica, and June Hall, Derby, and the girls say that they really aren't much bother. The main difficulty is that one of the girls has to get up at three o'clock in the morning to heat some water for their hot water bottle. The chickens live in a large cardboard box and have already learned to jump out of this and run around the floor. The two young philosophers enjoy all the attention they receive and especially enjoy perching on someone's finger. Helen and June say that Aristotle sings beautifully and is as good as a canary but all Confucius says is "Peep, peep."

Intersorority Sing To Be Held April 20

The girls on the hill are planning an Intersorority Sing which will be held at Southwick April 20. This will be the first sing of its kind, and will correspond somewhat to the Interfraternity Sing which is being held on March 22.

Last week representatives from each sorority met under the direction of Janice Spear '41 and Betty Cole '41, who first organized the idea, and plans were discussed. The sororities will not combine to sing in one group, but each will present their separate selections in unique style. The independent girls will also offer several selections.

A cup will be awarded by Pan-Hellenic Society to the sorority which offers the best performance in quality, form, and unity. There will be community singing following the program, and no admission will be charged.

John Dewey Club To Meet Thursday

There will be a meeting of the John Dewey Club Thursday evening, March 21, at 8.00 o'clock at Southwick. Professor Collier will discuss "Hypnosis." Those who want to retain their membership in this organization must attend this meeting.

Track Practice Has Begun For Spring

Hope to Set Some New Indoor Records

Track men are beginning to work the winter kinks out of their legs at the University of Vermont. A few good men from last year's state championship squad have been lost, but Coach Post has the bulk of his men left, as well as some capable freshmen, with which to open this year's campaign.

Heading the Vermont group as it goes into its five-meet schedule next month, will be Captain Gordie Smith of S. Ryegate, who was good for 40 points last year, making him high point man. One of the problems of the squad is to find another sprinter as running mate.

The weights are fairly well taken care of with the Long brothers of Oakfield, N. Y., Johnstone of White River Junction, Walter Gage of Burlington, Ray Kallman of Woodmere, N. Y., Elliott Pearl of Swanton and Elmer Nichols of Westminster teaming up on the various events. Carl Akley of Lyndonville, baseball man, is the best discus thrower in college, and may be worked into some of the meets.

In the high jump and the pole vault the team is well set, but the broad jump is wide open. Becker of Burlington and Hunter of Randolph will lead the high jumper pack, with Pratt of Rutland and Davis of Brattleboro swinging the pole vaulters.

The team abounds in long distance material. The phenomenal Webster brothers of Orleans are on hand, as is Dave Stowell of Bellows Falls, co-captain of the team last year. Dick Clark of Burlington also shows promise, while Edgar Roby of Montpelier and Jack Burgess of Burlington will be in the running somewhere from the 440 up.

Strong in the distances, and well provided for in the field events, the sprints seem to be in greatest need of a few extra performers. Captain Smith is good for a number of firsts, but would be helped by one or two second and third placers. Bob Kenney of Auburn, R. I., in the hurdles, also needs support.

Vermont Ski Team In Stowe Meet

The Vermont open and closed downhill and slalom and combined events took place at Stowe under ideal skiing conditions over the week-end. Hutchinson of Barre came away with top honors for the meet. Peter Patch, in placing fourth in the slalom and eleventh in the downhill, took sixth place in the men's combined while Ev Bailey took an eighth in the combined with a sixth in the downhill and eighth in slalom. Dave Collins, the only other man representing the University, won a fourteenth in the downhill and a fourteenth in the slalom for another fourteenth in the combined events.

On the Central Missouri State Teachers College campus, cornerstones of all but one campus building bear the Masonic emblem.

Intersorority dance—novel, new and different. No one wants to miss a good time so make your plans early and be on hand for the fun.

Webster Breaks Indoor Track Record

Stoddard and Livak Also Give Promise

Working out strenuously every afternoon in preparation for the opening meet in the not-too-distant future, Coach Archie Post's track charges give promise of toppling quite a few long-standing indoor meet records this year.

Running a practice mile with Norm Stoddard and Frank Livak, diminutive Charlie Webster showed he was in mid-season form when he hit the tape in 4:52⅖, unofficially breaking the indoor track record by six seconds. Stoddard and Livak also gave promise as they finished in 5:15 and 5:16 respectively.

Working out separately in preparation for the hexathlon, Frank Swift and Dick Ladd also were in the five-minute bracket as they completed the mile in 5:40. Another six-minute breaker was A. Clark, who, in preparation for Sigma Delta Psi, honorary athletic society, one of whose qualifications is to run the mile in six minutes or less, completed the sixteen laps in 5:50.

In the shorter distance the only time trial to date has been the 440-yard run in which Gallup traversed the distance in 61 seconds.

According to official observation both the half-mile and shot-put records should fall this year and Coach Post will also give C. Webster, F. Webster, Livak and a few other entries a good mark to shoot at when he sends them out after the two-mile record of 10:24.4 made by C. Harwood in 1935.

The following is a list of indoor records which the track men will attempt to change this year:

30-yard dash—3.6, R. Costine '27, R. Bonce '30, P. Billings '32, K. Smith '33, A. Wesoly '34, D. Jones '36.

440-yard dash—57.4, J. Delfausse '34.

880-yard dash—2:15.6, H. Shepard '20.

1-mile run—4:58, D. Suitor '33.

2-mile run—10:24.4, C. Harwood '35.

30-yard high hurdles—4.2, Howard '27, Billings '32, Trudeau '34.

30-yard low hurdles—3.8, C. Douglas '27.

16-lb. shot-put—40'6", R. Chutter '20.

35-lb. weight—40', A. Ross '36.

High jump—5'11", Trudeau '35.

Broad jump—20'3¾", Bellerose '20.

Pole vault—11'9", Whitten '25.

Women in Sports

Members Party

The W. A. A. Members Party will be held tonight at Southwick. This promises to be one of the most successful get-togethers W. A. A. is sponsoring this year. Already one hundred of the girls on campus who are members of W. A. A. and have taken an active interest in sports here, have accepted their invitations. There will be a buffet supper served at 6.00 o'clock. This will be followed by a short program, a few dance selections by Miss Hazard, and a presentation of the members of the council who have been active in sports during the past year. Everyone will join in playing the miniature golf game, which proved such a success at Freshman Camp. The highlight of the evening will be the basketball games played by the first and second Green and Gold teams. If necessary, to decide the winner of this Green and Gold tournament, a third game will be played Thursday afternoon at 4.15. Winners of these games will receive credits toward the Green and Gold candle, presented at the end of the year.

Basketball

The girls are off to a good start in the Green and Gold basketball tournament. The first games were played last week, when the Greens copped the honors in both team games.

In the first-team game the score was 9-5, with the following girls playing:

Gold—Bayley, Potter, Holden, Gorney, Howe, Taylor and Spear. Green—McLean, Shaw, Shine, Metcalf, Quimby, Savage, Peterson and Libby.

High scorers: Green, Shaw, 5 points. Gold, Gorney, 4 points.

The second-team game was exciting to say the least. The Golds, handicapped by lack of players, kept the lead until the last few minutes of the game, and finally bowed under the final score of 7-8. The following girls formed the respective teams:

Gold—Coderre, Wishhart, Livingstone, Redman and Orr. Green—Robinson, Spiwak, Doton, Welch, Cobb and Bates.

High scorer: Gold, Wishhart, 4 points. Green, Spiwak, 8 points.

The second games in the tournament will be played at the Members Party this evening. If, because of tied scores, it is necessary to play a third game, it will take place Thursday afternoon at 4.15. Otherwise the challenge game will be played at that time, when Robinson will try to take the title from Town Team (2).

Council Meeting

There will be a joint W. A. A. Council meeting at Southwick Thursday night at 7.15.

An Open Letter

Van Ness Hotel,
Saturday, March 16, 1940.

Dear Chief:

We certainly got a break tonight when we got your assignment to cover the Block "V" dinner. It was a swell affair and we really had a good time there. Unlike most banquets, the food was tasty, the speeches short and sweet, and the entertainment good. In general, we liked the whole atmosphere of the affair.

The first and most important thing that happened was that we ate—and we mean ate. Then Doc Lawlor got up. (Remember him? He used to play football for your Alma Mater years ago.) He acted as toastmaster—and he did a pretty good job at that. Then a funny thing happened. He introduced the first speaker. But this speaker wasn't present! He was President Bailey, who was unable to attend, but who, nevertheless, was determined to personally congratulate the "brawn" of Vermont. It seems that they hooked up some arrangement by which he spoke over the telephone in his own home, and his voice was amplified by some sort of jiggermerig which was held close to the phone. Chief, you should have heard the hand the president got! Then we ate again. You know, speaking of food, they started us off with grapefruit. Then we got something which we call soup. But they called it consommé julienne. Anyway, we had one heck of a time figuring out which was julie and which was the other.

Finally Professor Butterfield spoke. He pulled a honey about Doc Lawlor. The incident took place when the Doc was interning. We were told that there was an overabundant supply of wood alkie around (dear old prohibition) and the internes were having their hands full. Well, a certain patient was brought in and he was plenty inebriated. Lawlor grew alarmed and rushed to his superior, exclaiming that the man was black in the face and probably dying. Of course, the fact that his superior came in, looked at the man, and found him to be a negro (who should have been black in the face), may not seem funny to you now. But we thought it was good. It was the way the story was told that got us.

Then came the boys' big moment. Each coach got up and presented his men with certificates and gold awards. Gold footballs, basketballs, little gold track shoes—you know what I mean. When it came time for the rifie team to get its awards, something happened which made us feel pretty good. Remember Sergeant Connor? Oh, you must remember him. Why, he's been on the hill for nineteen years and in active service for over thirty. They tell me the "Sarge" is ready to call it quits. He's applied for retirement and this may be his last year on the hill. So they took this opportunity to pay tribute to him. Although he isn't coach of the rifle team, he was permitted to hand out the awards. He easily got the biggest hand of the night. Chief, it did our hearts good to experience that moment. And we'll never forget it.

By this time we were finished with our pie (it was pie à la mode, too). So we sat back and listened to the entertainment that "Sab" had cooked up for us. They had a ventriloquist who made Charlie McCarthy look like a box of toothpicks. They also had brought up Paxton, the memory marvel. He used to be with Ripley. And has he got a memory! He could tell you the population of almost any city. He looked hastily at the serial numbers of about ten one-dollar bills. After fifteen minutes or so he proceeded to recite each and every one of them. He gave them forward, backward, two at a time, and every other way imaginable. (Do you think we can get him to cram our organic for us?)

So, chief, this just about wound up the business, and we went home to write this. Thanks again for sending us out and any time you have something else like this—why just let us know.

Your ace reporter,
"Cill Bunningham."

P.S. We got free cigarettes, too.

Random Shots

We heard where Charlie Webster, in a recent time trial, did the mile in 4:52.4. Considering that the official record is 4:58. or so, it isn't bad. Not at all! . . . . We see by the papers that the best high school basketball teams still come from Connecticut. Anyway Cathedral got into the semi-finals this year. . . . . And don't we all sympathize with Frankie Livak in his silent protest against the so-called "Women's Wasp Waists." . . . But hasn't the time passed quickly! Frosh track meet about a month away, and Larry's men take the field in less than two weeks. See you next week.

Women Students Start Point Systen In Elections

Dean Simpson Explains New System; Further Suggestions for Improvement of System and of Student Union Discussed

The first day of spring, March 20, ushered in another Student Union mass meeting of all U. V. M. girls, the third of the year.

The meeting was opened by the recitation of the Vermont Pledge, which was followed by the reading of the minutes of the last meeting by Frances Abell. As president of the Student Union, Phyllis McGovern urged all to patronize the Intersorority Sing to be held on April 20. The main feature of the meeting, the newly organized point system, was discussed and explained by Dean Simpson. This project was made possible through the efforts of the 1940 Chapter of Mortar Board for the purpose of making the distribution of college extracurricular duties more equally among the girls. This system also has a purpose of rendering more leaders, thus being able to give to the school better results of leadership, initiative and imagination which otherwise might be put to no use. Too, the more the leaders, the less the work of each. Then Dean Simpson went on to say that the number of points given each girl is judged upon the amount of time that is taken for the performance of her duty. No one can have more than twenty-five points; only one major office is allowed. As now planned, the various women's organizations are to submit their nominations for their officers to Mortar Board as a check against too many offices for one girl. The time for the first use of this point system is set at the spring election. Unless revisions are made, the following plan will be maintained:

Major Offices—15 Points

Counting as 15 points these offices are listed: President and chief justice of Student Union, editor-in-chief of the Cynic, managing editor of the Cynic, president of W. A. A., president of Y. W. C. A., and social service chairman of Y. W. C. A.

The following offices count 12 points: President of Pan-hellenic Council, editor of Winnowings, women's editor of the Ariel, Student Union house chairman.

U. V. M. to Send Students to Meeting

U. V. M. will probably send a delegation to the "Conference on Careers in Government and Community Service" which is to be held at Harvard on April 12 and 13. Several students have indicated their desire to go to this conference the purpose of which is to point out to students opportunities for jobs in government and community service.

Prof. E. C. Moore, Professor Emeritus of the political science department and head of that department until this year, with Mrs. Moore is visiting in Boston.

Dr. A. E. Nuquist of the political science department will speak at the Intercollegiate Alumni Club on Tuesday evening, March 26, on the subject of "American Neutrality."

Mr. G. L. Millikan of the political science department is planning to go to Washington, D. C., during the spring vacation for research work in the archives of the State Department.

Three Co-eds Aspire To Medical College

Misses Bodette, Doton, Brewster, Seek M.D.'s

Three aspiring co-eds of the University of Vermont have submitted their applications for entrance to the College of Medicine. They are: M. Catherine Bodette '41 of Vergennes, Elizabeth Doton '41 of Woodstock and Rosemary Brewster '40 of Underhill.

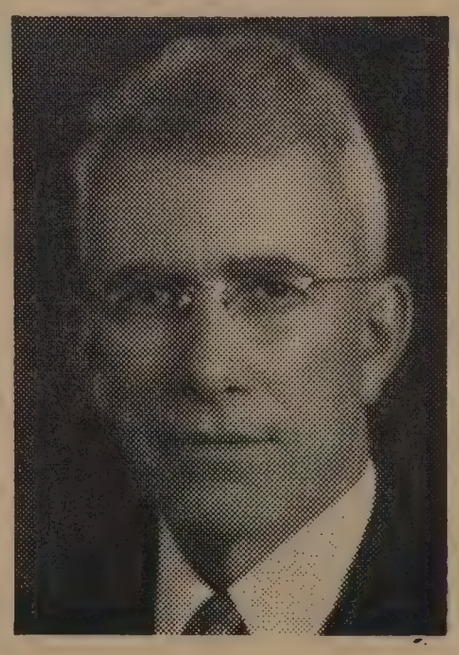
M. Catherine Bodette is unique in that she is just eighteen years old, probably the youngest girl ever to apply for admittance to medical school at Vermont. She is secretary of the Pre-medical Society. She is not sure of just what influenced her in her choice of medicine for a career. She believes she would like to specialize, but that choosing a definite field at this time would be rather premature.

Rosemary Brewster transferred from Green Mountain Junior College. There seems to have been quite a definite influence on her choice of a career, but that influence is not a family one, as Miss Brewster is the first member of her family to undertake that. Although not sure of what her specialty will be, she is sure that she does want to be a specialist. Her interests at Vermont include the Health Council, Photography Club and the Pre-medical Society.

Elizabeth Doton is also a member of the Pre-medical Society. She is a member of Alpha Chi Omega and interested in the Press Club and has played basketball and hockey. Miss Doton originally intended to go into nursing, but changed her mind the spring before she came to U. V. M. At present she believes that she would like to be a general practitioner, but says that she will probably change her mind several times before she is through with the study of medicine.

We wish the best of luck to all three girls and sincerely hope that they will all succeed in gaining admittance to the College of Medicine at U. V. M.

A T O Province Chief Visits Vermont Campus



Earl Bennet, province chief of Alpha Tau Omega, was a guest of the local chapter on Saturday afternoon, March 16. He was entertained at a dinner at the fraternity house Saturday evening.

Mr. Bennet graduated from the University of Maine in the class of '28 and later held a fellowship at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is now a professor of soil testing at Maine University and also a civil engineer in the State Highway Department of Maine.

He spoke of the coming conclave of the fourth province, of which he is chief, to be held at Durham, N. H., on March 30 and 31.

There will be a French lecture Tuesday, March 26, at 8:00 p.m., at the Fleming Museum. The public is invited.

Students to Vote For College Queen

Campus Winner's Photo To Be in "Movie Guide"

The University of Vermont is to represent the State nationally in the all-American college queen contest. Word has just been received that U. V. M. is the only college representing the Green Mountain State. This means that the girl who is elected on Monday will have her picture in the May 3, May 10 and May 17 issues of Movie and Radio Guide. The twelve winners will be determined May 15 and advised by wire immediately. So Vermont is already among the forty-eight state winners and is on her way to being one of the twelve national winners.

Among the New York artists who are to assist in the judging in the contest include McClelland Barclay, Russell Patterson and Dean Cornwell.

The polls will be open on Monday in the Old Mill from 8.30 to 12.00 and in the afternoon from 1.30 to 4.00.

The ballot for the Vermont candidate will be found on page 5.

Kathleen LeBaron '41 and Evelyn Fuller '41 were recently elected to Omicron Nu, the honorary home economics society. Miss LeBaron is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta and an officer of Y. W. C. A. and W. Governor Aiken Will Attend Sing Tonight

Carroll Cup and Traynor Points at Stake; Pichierri to Lead Mass Chorus in "Finlandia" Varied Program to Be Broadcast over WCAX

Starting at 8.15 tonight at Southwick Memorial, the annual Interfraternity Sing held under the auspices of the U. V. M. Interfraternity Council will fulfill one of the most spirited of the various intergroup competitions of the year. A large audience of over 700 students, faculty and guests is expected, the biggest audience yet to attend an annual sing. Governor and Mrs. Aiken are planning to attend the performance, plus other members of the gubernatorial staff and Mayor Burns of Burlington.

Carroll Cup and Traynor Points

Competition is expected to be keen for the awards of the Carroll cup and merits toward the Traynor trophy, which is presented each year to the fraternity piling up the greatest number of points for scholastic and extracurricula activity. This year, with several close positions for the Traynor trophy, the three points awarded to the sing winner will be very significant. Also, since the Carroll cup remains the permanent possession of the group winning it three times, the Sigma Alpha Epsilon group is expected to put up a fight to gain the award for the second time.

Pichierri to Lead Mass Chorus

At approximately 9.15 o'clock at the completion of the fraternity presentations, the combined choruses under the direction of Louis Pichierri '41, well-known music student at the University, will present four classical choral arrangements. This will be broadcast over Station WCAX.

Inter-Sorority Dance In Men's Gym

Sponsored by Panhellenic Semi-Formal Affair

On Saturday night, March 23, the first inter-sorority dance on this campus will be held in the men's gymnasium. The affair is sponsored by Pan-hellenic Council and Shirley Gray '41 is general chairman. The dance is semi-formal and the New Vermonters will provide the music.

Jean Saul '41 is chairman of the decorations which promise to be extremely novel. The theme will be Easter and each sorority will contribute a gay mural. On the decorations committee are Patricia Pike '43, Pi Beta Phi; Barbara Mann '41, Kappa Alpha Theta; Mary Germain '43, Alpha Chi Omega; Norma Preston '42, Alpha Xi Delta; Joené Agard '42, Delta Delta Delta; Anna Berman '42, Delta Phi Epsilon; and Barbara Blodgett '41, Sigma Gamma.

Refreshments will be served and Mary Letta Root '41 has the following committee: Margaret Wishart '43, Alpha Chi Omega; Eileen Rooney '41, Alpha Xi Delta; Lucille Clark '42, Delta Delta Delta; June Swanson '42, Kappa Alpha Theta; Jane Hunter '43, Pi Beta Phi; Hester Carver '41, Sigma Gamma; and Clara Griffel '41, Delta Phi Epsilon.

Mr. and Mrs. Holden Bickford and Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Perry will chaperone the dance.

Preceding the main dance the Alpha Chi Omega and Pi Beta Phi sororities will hold tea dances. Lucy Williams '42, is in charge of the dance at the Alpha Chi house, and Mary Skinner '42 is in charge of the Pi Phi dance. The music will be supplied by "Vics."

John Dewey Club Discusses Hypnosis

The John Dewey Club held a compulsory meeting at Southwick on Thursday, March 21. Professor Collier gave an interesting talk on "Hypnosis" with discussion following.

W.A.A. Holds Party For New Members

More than one hundred girls on campus gathered for the Members Party at Southwick Tuesday evening to have one of the most enjoyable times yet to be listed on the calendar of W. A. A.'s social events this year. The purpose in inviting all the members of W. A. A. and those girls who have been actively interested in sports this year was to create not only greater interest in the doings of the Association, but to form a deeper fellowship and good feeling among the girls.

The group gathered in the ballroom of Southwick for a buffet supper which was prepared by Laura Hawley '41 and Jeanette Whipple '41. After the meal, Mary Howe, president of W. A. A., spoke about W. A. A. activities and presented the girls who had helped make it a success this year. Miss Hazard then presented a modern dance, after which the group went downstairs to the gym and played a miniature golf game. There were nine holes, with different feats to perform at each hole, such as knocking down duck pins with tennis balls, hurling arrows at a catamount, playing shuffle board, and carrying beans from one end of the hall to the other on the end of a straw. Esther Gove '43 had the lowest score, and won first prize. Because Liz Gurney '41, who was in charge of the affair, was unable to attend, Betty Myers '40 supervised the sports.

The high spot of the evening was the basketball games of the Green and Gold teams, playing the second round in their tournament.

U. S. Bureau of Census Seeks Aid Of College Students In Its Work

That census taker is coming around again—this year it's to take the sixteenth decennial census! As if he didn't have enough trouble listing all the aunts and uncles, mothers-in-law, and sons-in-law, this year he has to make sure that all the sons and daughters away at school are enumerated properly. Of course we all see the value of this when we realize that some day we'll want this information for proof of our age, for social security benefits proof of residence, for passport purposes, and any number of other things like that. To the end that this problem may be met with success, the Bureau of the Census is asking your cooperation.

Uncle Sam is asking college students to write home during March and remind their folks that they're still part of the family, for, though absence makes the heart grow fonder, it also makes the mind forgetful. He wants to avoid such scenes as the following:

Students to Benefit

The census taker approaches the Jones house, which, during vacations shelters Mr. and Mrs. Jones, Mr. Jones' mother, and Jean, John, and Sally, all away at school now. Mrs. Jones, who has been interrupted in her cake-making, negligently answers the census taker's questions as to how many are in the house, with "just Mr. Jones, his mother, and myself." She forgets entirely the three children away at school.

Feeling that college students, like every other section of the population, will benefit from a reliable national inventory, the U. S. Bureau of the Census is ask-

Point System

Mortar Board's attempt to distribute and equalize women's activities on campus has been met with a great deal of enthusiasm. The benefits derived are universally accepted but very few realize the difficulty of launching such a program.

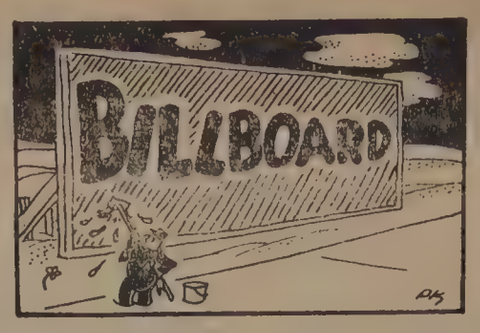
Already the major activities are realizing that they have been very dependent for leadership upon a mere handful of girls. The problem of choosing from this year's Junior class will be the most pressing since the girls of this class are already branded as being outstanding or not outstanding, and it is rather late to start training the latter group to hold office. The Sophomore and Freshman classes will be easier to handle.

For the past several years Mortar Boards have discussed the possibilities of the points system but that is as far as they have gone. This year's organization is the first to bring this dream into realization. They have drawn their system from the needs of the University and the past plans of former Mortar Boards.

One of the issues most debated has been the position of sorority president in the system. Certainly this position requires a great deal of time and attention, but it is agreed, membership in a sorority is in a way an honorary position and presidency of such an organization is even more than an honor. Similarities between the presidency of a Greek letter society and the women's honorary society are pointed out, and if honorary societies are not to count, neither should sorority president. There are, however, several points of difference and after as much discussion and thought as Mortar Board has put into this system, it should be the best judge.

Everyone recognizes the importance of the points system and future student organizations should profit greatly by it if students accept its provisions with a truly helpful and cooperative attitude. R. S. '41.

Let's Change Our Habits



Wednesday is Chapel Day on our campus but we feel that far too few students attend the chapel exercises. Professor Hall who is in charge of securing speakers, brings many fine ministers from all over the state to our campus. These speakers always give the students food for thought, often provoking students' minds out of the mental rut that results from the constant grind of preparing lessons.

Many colleges have compulsory chapel services every day to which all students must go. Middlebury is an example. We at Vermont are given the opportunity to go to chapel once a week and it seems to us that everyone should take advantage of his chance to hear an experienced speaker present his philosophy of life.

The choir and the chapel orchestra are two of the finest musical groups in the state and it is a genuine pleasure to listen to them. Our chapel is one of the most beautiful architectural buildings on any American campus and a few brief minutes spent in the quiet repose of its interior are inspiring.

The entire chapel service lasts for only twenty brief minutes. Little studying can be done in this short time and the library is much too noisy and crowded to be conducive to study.

Many students use the chapel hour to gather in Coffee Corner frantically trying to buy a nickel's worth of coffee. Infinitely richer would these students be if they interrupted their stalemate round of lectures by attending the chapel services and listening to fine music and an excellent speaker who would leave them with a provocative thought.

SPRING RECESS will begin Saturday, March 30, at 11:50 a. m. and close Tuesday, April 9, at 7:30 a.m.

On Saturday, March 30, classes in the three academic colleges will meet in accordance with the following schedule: (Military Science) 7:00-7:50; 8:00-8:50; 9:00-9:50; 10:00-10:50; 11:00-11:50. Classes in the College of Medicine will meet at the usual hours.

The above dates and hours should be carefully noted to avoid unnecessary absences.

The attention of all students is called to the following extract from the University Regulations:

II, 4 b "A student who absents himself without permission (secured in advance from the Dean of his college), from any University exercise or exercises on the day immediately preceding or following a recess or holiday may be placed on probation." Note that this applies to all classes March 30, not merely the last, and all classes April 9, not merely the first.

Students desiring excuses for absence should note and be guided by the following statement:

(1) Application must be made in writing, must indicate mail address, must set forth reasons in full and be filed with the Dean of the College in which the student is enrolled (men) or with the Dean of Women (women), not later than Wednesday, March 27, at NOON. The responsibility for proper and prompt filing lies with the student. It should be clearly understood that belated applications will not be considered.

(3) Excuses will be granted to men by council vote; to women by the Dean of Women. EXCUSES WILL BE GRANTED ONLY FOR IMPERATIVE REASONS. Students should not waste their own time or that of the Council by citing trivial reasons.

(3) A student contemplating employment should file a written statement, signed by the employer on his letterhead, indicating date and time of day of reporting, place where he is to work and the nature of the work to be done and setting forth the need of reporting prior to March 31.

(4) Applicants will be advised of council action not later than Thursday evening, March 28.—ELIJAH SWIFT, Secretary.

DEAN SWIFT has received a letter from the Rutland Railroad stating that on Saturday, March 30, the "Green Mountain Flyer" will leave Burlington at 12:25 p. m. instead of the regular time of 12:15 in order to accommodate those members of the student body who may wish to travel by this train. The Railroad is providing ample coach accommodations.

SCRIBES will hold its next meeting on Tuesday, March 26th, at 7:45 p. m. at Southwick, instead of on March 29th, as previously scheduled. Professor Merrick will be present at this meeting. Anyone interested in coming is cordially invited.

Student Opinion

By JOE BELDEN, Editor
Student Opinion Surveys of America

Austin, Tex.—As a group, college students are giving the tobacco growers a good business, for well over half of them report that they are smokers. Less than a third, however, smoke habitually, and half of the women who attend the nation's colleges and universities say they never indulge in cigarettes.

Sending out its scores of interviewers to talk to students of all types, the Student Opinion Surveys of America has compiled statistics that show the tobacco habits of collegians.

"What is your favorite brand of cigarette?" a scientific cross-section of the colleges was asked. And this is what they answered:

Lucky Strike	12.1%
Camel	10.4
Phillip Morris	8.0
Chesterfield	6.9
Old Gold	2.9
Pall Mall	2.3
All others	2.9
No particular choice	9.8
Smoke pipe, cigars only	3.4
Don't smoke	41.3

Both men and women in greater percentages prefer Luckies over any other brand (14.1 men, 8.8 women). But the girls placed Phillip Morris second with 7.6 percent, 7.1 percent selecting Camels. The preferences of men run in exactly the same order as those for all students above.

Any caricature of the typical college woman as a habitual smoker appears to be erroneous, for only 21.6 percent declare that they smoke regularly. Men use cigarettes, pipes and cigars out of habit to quite a larger extent than the co-eds, 34.3 percent, or over a third. The complete tabulations follow, statistically representing the entire United States college and university enrollment:

	Men	Women	Both
Smoke regularly	34.3%	21.6%	29.5%
Smoke sometimes	30.0	28.0	29.2
Never smoke	35.7	50.4	41.3

Interesting differences in cigarette preferences were noticed in looking over the U. S. map—perhaps due to the influence of advertising in different sections. More students in the west central, southern, and far western states say Luckies are their choice. But as one goes north and east one finds Camels forging ahead as the favorite of the largest number in these sections. Phillip Morris, third nationally, showed its greatest strength in the West. Although there is the possibility that a few students may have wished to withhold the correct answer to the question, "Do you smoke regularly, sometimes, or never?" no interviewer detected any apparent desire to conceal information about smoking.

Good Posture for Good Health

Madison, Wis. (ACP).—Maintain good posture and you'll feel better.

That's the prescription of the University of Wisconsin's Dr. Frances A. Hellebrandt, a member of the medical school staff.

"To stand correctly is extraordinarly cheap from the viewpoint of its energy needs," she said.

"If the posture is relaxed, standing is practically indefatigable. It costs little more energy units to stand propertly than to beat an egg, although nearly three-fourths of the muscles in the body are being used," Doctor Hellebrandt continued.

No person can stand without swaying, she found. "A person's center of weight falls remarkably close to the center of the base of support between the two feet," she said. "Although nature is a good engineer, the center of weight dances to and fro as we stand, producing gravitational stresses which must be met by the muscles of the legs to keep us from tottering."

Experiments with high heels showed that the higher the heels the more pronounced was the oscillation of the body. Although not apparent to the naked eye the swaying was detected by instruments constructed for the experiment by Prof. L. E. A. Kelso of the engineering department.

"Good posture can't be achieved by the application of a blanket rule," Doctor Hellebrandt warned. "It is something the individual must strive for."

The men have been waiting for a statement like this for a long time, but they never believed it would be made.

When a man was reported to have entered a University of Pennsylvania women's dormitory, that institution's dean of women allayed the fears of gals and cops with the following:

"The men had more to fear than the girls—because 150 women are their own protection."

Long known for their two-bit words and ominous sounding phrases, the medical professors of our institutions of higher learning have come in for a bit of ribbing because of them.

Western Reserve University's Dr. Frederick C. Waite made a special survey and recently found that fifty-five United States medical schools have devised 33 different kinds of titles for their 2,40 professors.

Here are a couple of stumpers from his list: "professor of cardiovascularrena diseases" and "professor of otorhinolaryngeology."

Harvard and Yale naval R. O. T. C. students aren't as tough as they ought to be, in the opinion of one member of Congress—and he thinks something ought to be done about it.

At a recent House hearing on navy department appropriations, Rep. C. A. Plumley (Norwich '96) told the committee "I can tell you something that you do not know about the R. O. T. C. at Harvard and Yale. They are gentlemen's clubs and they do not get the hard-boiled training that the navy needs."

Annual Class Plays To Be Presented

Dramatic Club Members Hold Final Rehearsals

Final rehearsals for the Dramatic Club plays which will be given Thursday evening, March 28, are under way. These plays are all of one act and include a cast entirely of women. They will take place at Southwick.

The freshmen are presenting a historical drama entitled "When the Whirlwind Blows." This is directed by Doris Kinsley '40. The cast is as follows: Josefa, Huddee Zwick '43; Madame Androya, Janet Hackwell '43; Anna, Betty Preston '43.

The sophomore women's play is under the direction of Margaret Crowley '41 and Jane Lyons '41. It is a farce, "No Man's Land." The following girls will take part: Janet, Barbara Butterfield '42; Helen, Mary Rose Kelty '42; Peg, June Swanson '42; Emmy, a servant, Catherine Peterson '42.

Charlotte Hall '40 and Louise Mann '41 have charge of the philosophical play, "Overtones," which the juniors will present. The characters will be portrayed by the following girls: Harriett, Mary Letta Root '41; Hetty, Ruth Connor '41; Margaret, Elizabeth Doton '41; Maggie, Jean Stewart '41.

Posters are being made by Gratia Pearl '42; Dorothea Smith '41 and Maywood Metcalf '41 are in charge of publicity; Barbara Smith '40 is property manager; and Laura Hawley '41 will look after make-up.

The student body and the public are invited to attend.

Point System

Counting as 10 points, these offices and activities are listed: Members of Student Union Judiciary, Chapel Orchestra, Choir, president of University Players, president of Home Economics Club, president of Classical Club, president of Dramatic Club, president of International Relations Club, president of French Club, president of John Dewey Club, president of Press Club, and Glee Club.

The following offices count 8 points: Student Union Council members, Y. W. C. A. Cabinet members, W. A. A. Council and sports managers, Outing Club Council, senior staff and news editors of CYNIC, Pan-hellenic Council members, officers of departmental clubs, and debating team.

Neither membership in an organization nor women's honor societies counts in this system.

Dean Praises Work

Dean Simpson closed her talk by congratulating the 1940 Chapter of Mortar Board for their excellent work. Suggestions for improvement of the plan were urged and the maintenance of the support of all was asked.

Jean Butler gave directions to the girls for election of members for the honor societies.

The mass meeting was then divided into ten groups for the purpose of discussing two topics: First, the question, is the present Student Union satisfactory and effective? Secondly, suggestions for the improvement of the point system were to be introduced. Personal opinions from these discussions are to be used by Mortar Board and Student Council for further perfection in their plans.

Officers Nominated For 1940 Press Club

On Monday afternoon the Press Club held a meeting in the Y room for the purpose of nominating officers for the year 1940-41. Nominations were as follows: President, Angie Ducas '41 and Miriam Fiske '42; secretary and treasurer, Ruth Miller '42 and Hester Rice '42; social chairman, Ruth Connor '41 and Christine Martin '42. Elections will be held at a later date. It is necessary to make another cut, and the new list of members will appear after vacation.

Campus Horizons

In response to various requests from members of the student body, we have decided to start a column dealing with news from other colleges. We would appreciate any suggestions or criticisms concerning it from the readers.

Boston University News—Long-nosed Cyrano de Bergerac, Edmond Rostand's witty hero, went for a musical sleighride at a university orchestra concert, Monday, March 18. Prolific Serge Dankevich, music graduate student, penned the original overture about that tragic comedian.

We learn from The Scarlet that the biology department at Clark University is to have a salt water aquarium. A small experimental tank, containing a number of the more common invertebrates found along the north shore, has been running since March 8. The large tank is still awaiting a cooling system.

Mass. Collegium—Twenty student guinea pigs will establish or explode the hypothesis that ozone is a mental and physical stimulant in an experiment conducted by Doctor Glick, professor of psychology at Massachusetts State College.

From The Vidette we learn that at Illinois State Normal University, buildings as well as co-eds are getting new outfits for Easter.

Temple University News—Temple University may have a new song soon—that is, if Fred Waring receives favorably a petition from the University.

The New Hampshire reveals that plans are now being made to celebrate the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the University of New Hampshire, next year.

The Alabamian—Freshmen at Alabama College are going Dutch for their dance which will be held March 30. Decorations are Dutch to the tiniest detail, including windmills, canal boats and red tulips. Even the orchestra goes Dutch and plays from a large wooden shoe.

From the Florida Flambeau we learn that waltz-lovers at Florida State College have organized a Strauss Club.

Yale University has more endowment per student than any other United States college or university.

On the Ohio University campus, only 17 percent of the students have no dates during an average month.

History Prize to Be Given in April

April 15 is Deadline For Contributions

The Emerson memorial prize of $100, the largest offered by the University, is given each year for the best essay submitted by an undergraduate on any topic in the field of history. This includes the history of any time or subject.

The essay, which is due on April 15, has no limits as to either minimum or maximum length, but must be written double spaced on standard typewriter paper. A bibliography or some indication of sources should appear, and the paper should be signed with a fictitious name and handed in with the real name in an envelope which bears the nom de plume outside.

The papers will be judged first by the history department which selects the best essays. The final decision will be made from those selected and will be made by an outsider.

Concerning this award, Prof. P. D. Evans of the history department feels that, "since this is the first year the prize has been open, and since it was contributed by the donor in the hopes of stimulating interest in the various fields of history, we hope that a fair number of students will participate and submit essays of high quality."

Chapel Notes

The Rev. R. G. Worster of the Waterbury Congregational Church was the guest speaker in the chapel service on Wednesday, March 20.

His message was based on words from the Lord's Prayer, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done." He said that the kingdom of heaven was not a democracy because not all men were equal. "There is an aristocracy of nobility of character and goodness. The ruler of that kingdom is a King, eternal and all powerful. We must not confuse the heavenly kingdom with political systems. The kingdom of heaven which we talk about so glibly must come on earth through you and me, for we are the only media through which God can work." Reverend Worster's message contained many thought-provoking statements which were very impressive.

The choir, directed by Professor Kirby, sang "Rest Ye in Peace" by Bach.

M. Sibuet to Give Lecture in French

On Tuesday, March 26, at 8.00 o'clock there will be a French lecture at the Fleming Museum. Monsieur Laurent F. M. Sibuet will speak at this time on the subject, "Le rire en France de Voltaire à Courteline et Tristan Bernard."

Of this eminent lecturer, the New York Times says: "L. Sibuet is known wherever the French language is spoken for the eloquence and timeliness of his discourses."

Two prizes of $15 and $10, respectively, will be given to the students who write the best essays on the French lectures of this year.

Hazing, European Style, Shames Ours

Pullman, Wash.—(ACP)—Collegiate hazing, European style, makes American college freshman hazers look like Little Lord Fauntleroys. Such is the observation of Miss Joop Ruurs, a Washington State College exchange student from Amsterdam, Holland.

The blonde, blue-eyed Dutch Miss related that at some of the European universities she has attended—she has studied at Amsterdam, Munich, Cologne and Paris—freshmen are hazed unmercifully. They must shave their heads completely, wear green caps and ties, and jump to do the bidding of any upperclassman who stoops to give any order to the lowly frosh.

One of Miss Ruurs' brothers, during his shaven-headed, green-capped period, was made to hold on to a rope with his hands and hang on as the rope dangled three stories from the ground. His hazers then began lowering the rope slowly. At the end of twenty minutes, when his hands and arms were almost numbed from the strain, he finally got his feet on the ground.

Easter Rabbit Show At Fleming Museum

Rise of Easter Custom Shown in Novel Exhibit

Is it really true that the Easter rabbit lays eggs once a year—the eve of Easter? According to children and the ancient Angles and Saxons, it is.

The story of the Easter egg had its beginning among the ancient peoples of Rome, Greece, Persia and Egypt, to whom it was the symbol of life and of a new beginning, and it was used in the celebration of the new year (then on April first) and the vernal equinox. To them the egg represented the renewed life that took place during the spring season both in man and in nature.

The early Christians borrowed the idea of the egg from their pagan ancestors, and used it as a symbol of the new life granted to them by the Resurrection of Christ. They painted them in gay spring colors, exchanged them with friends, and incorporated them into their games just as the ancients had, and just as children do even now.

This Easter egg story is the theme of the new special exhibit in the reception hall of the Fleming Museum. Before a background of flowers is an Easter rabbit, and around her a bevy of multi-colored eggs, reminding all who see it of the true significance of the Easter egg.

Coach Gardner Cuts Baseball Squad

Southern Trip One Week Off

With the annual pre-season southern trip but one week off, Coach Larry Gardner today whittled down his generous sized baseball squad to enable concentrated work by the strongest men. The cut squad contains twenty-four men, fourteen of which will battle it out for the coveted berths on the yearly sojourn southward.

Practice in Cage

Those remaining after the elimination are: Pitchers, C. V. Akley, A. Belardinelli, A. J. Caldwell, Carlson, Conrad, Clausing, Zellinger, Strassburg and A. R. Pesarik; catchers, M. J. Boucher and J. B. Corbett; infielders, T. DePalo, M. J. Lawrence, D. W. Maley, H. V. Middleworth, J. J. Spasyk, F. H. Utley, H. Ward and J. J. White; outfielders, G. M. Broutsas, S. Sysko and F. M. Taylor.

With but three men at present out for garden jobs, Carlson and possibly Conrad might be shifted to the outposts. Evidently missing are Kimball, who has left school, and Beauchemin and Crossley, who remained but are ineligible for spring competition. With Berry and Nicholson out of the inner circle the possibilities are high for sack-job scraps. The batteries are well charged and should ably spark the developing infield and outfield.

To date, all practice has taken place in the cage. The boys appear to be in fine state but have yet to undergo some actual outside playing. Coach Gardner says, "We have a fine looking bunch of lads out for the team this year that for this stage of the game compares very favorably with last year's team. However, there has been no opportunity for outdoor practice and it remains to be seen how the team will click under actual playing conditions."

Fourteen on Trip

To compensate for inability to practice on the diamond due to climatic conditions, the annual southern trip has the function of giving the team preparation for the fourteen season games played against northern opponents. This arrangement works definitely to the advantage of the Vermonters as they get in practice not always available so early to a northern team. Although only fourteen of the squad of twenty-four will make the trip, team positions are not at all clinched and the remaining ten members have an unlimited opportunity for play during the season. The choosing of the lucky fourteen is based on the only available evidence — cage practice — and Coach Gardner, realizing that the choice is a gamble, does not recognize any inequality of ratings at the beginning of the season. Says Coach Gardner, "Upon our return from the trip those men who stayed at home should come out as enthusiastically as before if they have the competitive spirit that is the requisite for any successful ball club."

The team will leave Burlington one week from today and will travel by train to Annapolis to compete against Navy on Saturday afternoon. Following the Navy game eight other southern trip games will be played against U. of Maryland, U. of Virginia, William and Mary (two games), U. of Richmond, George Washington, Drexel Institute and New York University.

Quotable Quotes

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"In the present 'limited national emergency' educational freedom is being curtailed. Teachers of social studies particularly are being told what they may say and what they may not say in their classrooms. Unless we are on our guard it will be impossible to organize for educational freedom. Let us not repeat our behavior of the last war when we went down like ninepins before the barrage of propaganda." The National Advisory Council on Academic Freedom has already begun its battle to keep education free during anticipated times of future stress.

Williams College students have voted to retain hazing as part of the college's fraternity program.

Track Squad Slowly Rounding Into Shape

The glint in Coach Archie Post's eye bodes no good for the laddies from the schools scheduled to come up against his trackmen this spring. Archie refused to be quoted further than to comment, "Unh," when asked for some forecast of the shape-up of the track team. We understand this to be a significant comment.

The brightest spot on the horizon is the case of the amazing Webster boys. Charlie breezed around the track the other day in six seconds under the record. He said he ought to be able to get a little speed with practice.

Lyman Gallup has been showing some of his old form in practice. We hope to see him in the quarter-mile helping out Ed Robey and Jake Kaplan. Of course Sam Levine is a good man in this event. Dave Stowell, last year's co-captain, makes the fur fly in the half-mile. Bob Davis will also keep his chin above water.

Bob Kenney is getting the kinks out of his legs in preparation for a fast time on the hurdles. Charlie Itzkowitz, last year's freshman standout, shows signs of a greyhound ancestry.

Herb Long has been practicing for weeks with a thirty-five pound practice hammer.

Women in Sports

The Green and Gold basketball tournament was brought to a close Wednesday night at the W. A. A. supper when the girls of the Gold first team emerged victorious over those of the Green with a score of 9-7, and the second Green team beat the Gold by a score of 30-5.

High scorers for these first teams were: Gorney (Gold) and McLean (Green). The following girls made up the teams: Gold—Taylor, Holden, Gorney, Bayley, Howe and Spear. Green—Shine, McLean, Metcalf, Savage, Peterson, Gallagher and Shaw.

The second team was the highlight of the evening for excitement, each team playing with three forwards and two guards. When all the scores were tallied up, Green had 30 to its credit and Gold only 5.

High scorers for the second teams were Quimby (Green) and Packard (Gold). The Green team was made up of Quimby, Spiwak, Robinson, Bates, and Cobb; and the Gold, Redman, Livingston, Wishart, Orr and Packard.

In the second round of the ping-pong tournament B. Myers '40 of Alpha Chi and J. Dike '43 of Allen House have emerged victorious. Still left to play in this round are A. Cohn '42 and H. Childs '43 of Robinson; and C. Hallowell '43 of Campus House and T. Packard '40 of Redstone.

For all those girls interested in improving their tennis or in practice coaching, Miss Crowe is having a class on Monday afternoon at 4.15 at Southwick.

Frosh Net Men Report For First Practice

The University of Vermont freshman tennis team met for the first time Wednesday night in the gym. Prospects for the coming net season are not bright because several hopefuls were lost at mid-years and others are under the scholastic ban. C. E. Barber, R. C. Hay, and R. L. Swift are among the leading candidates.

The varsity netmen are practicing intermittently on the gym surface, but as yet no competitive matches have been held. After the Easter vacation the contestants will be given a chance to show their wares, but no final decisions will be made until the outdoor practices get under way.

A new course in the study of war causes has been instituted by the College of New Rochelle.

Frank Taylor Wins Annual Hexathlon

Sets New Point Record, Spasyk Is Runner-up

Most people around the University of Vermont thought Frankie Taylor of Brattleboro was the leading athlete of the student body, and now he has proved it. Frank has been a football star at the University for two years, plays good basketball and baseball, and goes in for track when he has any time left over. Then he has to his credit such minor triumphs as playing ice hockey with his fraternity team, winning winter sports events in skiing for his fraternity, winning intramural bowling laurels, and turning in a good game of tennis now and again. But this week he captured the official title of "Best All-Around Athlete on the University of Vermont Campus" by winning the annual hexathlon contest. Not only did he win the hexathlon, but he broke all former records in it to score a new high point total. His total for the six events of the hexathlon was 6,684.79, as against the 6,452.66 of Johnny Spasyk, Pittsfield, Mass., his nearest competitor. Taylor's mark broke the record set by John Webster of Burlington in the 1936 hexathlon of 6,659.91 points.

Winning the 110-yard sprint, the shot-put, broad jump and high jump, and placing second in the mile run and fourth in the rope climb, gave Taylor the championship crown. He set a new hexathlon record for the shot-put by heaving the iron ball 40 feet 3 inches, and was only three inches short of breaking the University indoor record of 40 feet 6 inches set in 1920 by Bob Chutter, now principal of Pittsford schools. Taylor's heave was the closest approach to this indeer record since it was set up.

Spasyk, second-place winner in the hexathlon, took first place in the rope climb of 20 feet, reaching the top in 7.6 seconds, beating out Lyman Gallup of Saylesville, R. I., by eight-tenths of a a second. Gallup took third place in the hexathlon. Arthur Clark of Burlington was fourth in the contest and Frank Swift, Brooklyn, N. Y., fifth.

Figuring for the total score was done by using a "mean" time or distance for each event, with the mean equalling 1,000 points, and the person's time or distance go over or under 1,000 according to his standing with the mean.

Sportsmen Show to Be Held in April

Modern nimrods will get a look at the kind of weapon popular with the first hunters of the human race at the annual Sportsmen's Show of the Chittenden County Fish and Game Club in Burlington early this April, when the Fleming Museum of the University of Vermont puts on an exhibition of stone tools made and used by early Stone Age man in various parts of the world. The theme of the exhibition will be "The First Hunters." Background motif will be a large painting in oils, showing a family of seven, early Stone Age man or Neanderthal Man. The picture has been painted by Marion Guild of Essex Junction for the Federal Art Project of Vermont, Pierre Zwick, director. The painting is a copy of a mural in the American Museum of Natural History, New York City, and is nearly full size. The stone age family are shown at the entrance to their abode on a ledge overlooking the river. A small group of woolly rhinoceros is glimpsed by the men of the family as the animals are about to cross the river and the head of the group is setting forth with his spear to try to capture some food.

Dinosaur Models

The permission of the American Museum of Natural History has been secured to reproduce and display the picture. Dr. Henry F. Perkins, director of the Fleming Museum, finds the painting so well executed that he expects it will be made a permanent exhibit at the Fleming Museum.

A group of small models of pre-historic dinosaurs which, although they antedated the appearance of Neanderthal Man, still serve to carry the visitor back through the milleniums and put him in a suitable mood to enjoy the exhibits of early stone implements, will be displayed. A diminutive figure modeled on the same scale as the dinosaurs and proportioned to represent a six-foot man, is to be displayed with the dinosaur models in order to show more clearly their relative sizes. The figure will represent a modern man, not one of the primitive types, and is used merely for size comparison. These models are an exhibit of the Department of Geology and Mineralogy, with Prof. Charles G. Doll in charge. This is the first time this department has participated in the Sportsmen's Show.

Fossil Fishes

Pierre Zwick, director of the Federal Art Project in Vermont, is painting a background representing the mesozoic era, when the dinosaurs of the display lived, and the models will be shown against this as a backdrop.

The Geology and Mineralogy Department is also showing a group of fossil fishes of several million years ago, which will be of especial interest to fishermen. These fish, Professor Roll states, have the same type of bony structure as fish of the present period. One of the fossil fishes is a member of the perch family. With the fish will be shown a fossil crab and shrimp and starfish.

Eight members of the museum staff will, in turn, preside at the museum booth during the Sportsmen's Show and will also operate the feature movies with museum equipment and will show films selected and secured by the museum.

There will be a meeting of the I. R. C. Wednesday, March 27, at 7.30 in the North Lounge at Southwick. Mr. F. D. Carpenter will speak on Finland. Election of next year's officers will take place at this time. All members are urged to be there. All students are invited to attend.

Ten To Go

The calendar on the wall says, "Wednesday" (Friday when you read this) and Wednesday means only ten more days until—Spring vacation. Frankly we can't wait. We want to go home and relax—loaf—do nothing all day but soak up sunshine (we trust there will be some by then). Speaking of spring vacation reminds us of spring sports. Larry Gardner and his squad are looking forward to that southern trip. The lands of the Grapefruit League beckon. Archie Post and his track men are looking forward to the time when the ground will be more or less visible and more or less dry. That being the case this seems to be the logical moment to make a spring inventory and make out a balance sheet for spring sports. Here goes—one prayer for plenty of black ink and a scarcity of red.

The Diamond Situation

Taking baseball first of all we find that the schedule is no breather this year. On the southern jaunt the boys will play eight games between March 30 and April 9—add that up and it means eight games in nine days. That's a lot of baseball. In between times the boys will be busy shuttling back and forth—all the way from College Park, Maryland, to New York, New York. Later in the year the team will meet such outstanding outfits as Dartmouth, Amherst, Springfield, and Tufts. The southern itinerary includes an opening tilt with Navy and a closing homecoming battle with N. Y. U. This reads as a tough schedule in any language and in any system of bookkeeping.

Item two—the squad. Elsewhere on this page appears the final roster of men who are to go on the trip south, but since we handed this in before said list was released we (for the purposes of this article) are completely in the dark as to who will represent Vermont. However, using a little mental addition and crystal gazing—we infer that it must be a better-than-average aggregation. Larry is smiling more than ever (if possible) these days and that must be a good sign. On the asset side you can put down a good pitching staff—veterans Belardinelli and Pesarik plus a good bunch of recruits up from last year's yearling nine. In the field—Frankie Taylor, plus another bunch of recruits, as yet untried. In the infield—Healy, Spasyk, Waley, DePalo, White, Utley, Middleworth and Lawrence. Needed—one third baseman to guard the "hot corner" left vacant by the departure of Bud Kimball. Catchers—Corbett, Boucher both veterans of last year's squad. And that's that for baseball. A tough schedule, plenty of veterans, plenty of reserves—all of which should add up to an interesting year for baseball hungry Catamounts.

Along the Cinders

The track business isn't bankrupt this year either. Archie Post is putting quite a sizable squad through its pace over at the gym. The general consensus of opinion seems to be that a close auditing of the books would reveal a decided deficit in the "sprint" department. Gordie Smith, captain and star sprinter, is badly in need of running mates. Bob Kenney also needs a little company in the hurdles. The long and middle distances are well stocked—the Webster boys in the mile; Dave Stowell, Jack Burgess and Roby in the half and the quarter miles. Nate Abbott will be missed in the pole vault but Pratt and Davis can carry on where he left off. High jump—veterans Becker and Hunter will be on the job. Weights and javelin—leave them to Nichols, Gage, Kallman, Johnstone and the Long brothers. That closes the track account. With a fair amount of luck and plenty of that type of coaching Archie can so well provide, the cinder men ought to show plenty of stuff this year.

Last But Not Least

All of which brings us to—tennis. Right here the bookkeeping gets a little difficult. As yet the net men have had little chance to practice and it's hard to judge a tennis squad until they get out on a real court, but with veterans Booth, Wolk and Simpson on hand and such men as Foti up from the frosh this year's tennis team has a good start toward a successful year. We don't dare say any more than this—further information can be had from Coach Carpenter.

Finis a la Conan Doyle

Slightly dizzy from all this calculation and wondering just what the conclusions are that we have reached we draw the last blue line and slam the ledger shut. Quick, Watson, the needle.

Novel feature of this year's sing will be the organized community sing at the end of the program, participated in by the whole audience and led by John N. Houpis. This event was initiated at last year's sing and was accepted with such gusto by the audience that wide-awake sing director Edward Guilbert is repeating it.

BT-9's, Training Ships for Uncle Sam's Future Military Pilots

Low wing monoplanes, known as BT-9s, are used at Randolph Field, Texas, for the secondary phase of training of future pilots for the United States Army Air Corps. The Flying Cadets, reporting to the "West Point of the Air" after completing their first three months of flight training at one of nine civilian flying schools throughout the country, are assigned to these counterparts of modern day combat planes. Powered with a 400 horsepower engine, the BT-9s are capable of speeds up to 170 miles per hour. In addition, these planes are equipped with a complete radio transmitter and receiver, landing flaps and a two position adjustable propeller in order to obtain maximum speeds. During the Flying Cadet's Primary phase of training at the various civilian schools, experienced army officers are in constant attendance to supervise his work on the PTs, the Air Corps designation for Primary Training planes. He is taught the fundamentals of military flying in about 65 hours of flying time, more than half of which is solo. The transition from the comparatively simple primary plane to the complicated Basic Trainer is a gradual one, several hours of dual instruction with an instructor being given before solo in this type plane. However, the Flying Cadet, having been well grounded in the fundamentals, readily acquires the necessary technique in about four or five hours, and from then on his training is partly dual and partly solo. Night flying, during which radio is used to instruct the student pilot on landings, is one of the important specialized forms of aerial training. Finally, the secondary phase of training is completed and the class of Cadets are again advanced to the final stage of the nine months course at Kelly Field. Three more months are spent there and then he is graduated, a full fledged military pilot, and commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the Air Corps Reserve.

Bureau of Census

ing them to do their part in making the census a success. The Bureau needs their help in the gigantic task of assembling facts about 132 million Americans in two ways. First, by making sure that their parents will report them to the census enumerator, and second, by supplying their parents with certain information which they will need to report on them accurately. This latter precaution is advisable even for students living at home, since they may be at class when the enumerator arrives.

Send Information Home

Offhand, it might be thought that parents would know everything which would be called for in the census. The questions which are being asked in 1940, however, are somewhat more complex than those of previous years, reflecting the need for facts bearing on the problems which have arisen in the United States during the eventful decade just closing.

The queries which parents are most likely to be uncertain on, after they've been notified that you're still part of the family, are those relating to employment status. Information is wanted on the following points:

1. Number of weeks the student worked in 1939 (equivalent to full time weeks.)
2. Number of hours he worked during the week of March 24-30, 1940.
3. Present, or if seeking work, last occupation.
4. Present, or last industry (kind of store, factory, etc.)
5. Present, or last class of worker (wage or salary worker in private work, wage or salary worker in government work, employer, working on own account.
6. Whether at work in private or non-emergency government work during March 24-30, 1940.
7. If not, whether assigned to emergency work (NYA).
8. If neither, whether seeking work.

The only other questions which parents might have trouble answering concerns the place of residence of student on April 1, 1935. If student was away from home at that time, prep school, college, or elsewhere, parents are still to report his permanent residence.

Students at West Point, Annapolis, and other training institutions of the War Department, Navy Department, and U. S. Coast Guard, and student nurses living at nurses' homes or hospitals will be enumerated at those institutions.

All this information will be used solely for statistical purposes. For example, it will be possible to determine from the 1940 census figures the number of college graduates in various occupations, the number of unemployed college graduates, and a great deal of other heretofore unavailable information. Not only will census material of this type, directly bearing on the student's prospects, but will furnish sociological data of considerable value to students doing research.

Thus cooperation with the 1940 census enumerator will pay dividends. Will you help him?

Spiritualist Society To Hold Easter Seance

There will be a special Easter seance in the form of a Memory Lane next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in the American Legion Hall on Church Street. The Rev. Helen Graham, pastor of the local Spiritualist Society, will conduct the service.

This Memory Lane service is something new in the observance of Easter. The seance will open with special Easter music and will be followed by the message work. Messages and readings will be given from flowers only. Anyone wishing to lend cut flowers or potted plants for a reading is asked to bring them so that they may be used in the Memory Lane decoration. They will be returned after the service.

Memory Lane is a unique custom which is carried out in all Spiritualist societies in the southern states. Much effort is being made to produce a beautiful and impressive service. It is not necessary to be a Spiritualist to attend. Followers of all religious denominations are welcome.

During the supper hour a light lunch of salad, sandwiches and tea will be served. A small fee of twenty cents will be charged to defray the expenses of the lunch. Directly following will be the regular Sunday evening lecture service. This is preceded by a vesper service. Special music is being planned.

Since this Easter seance is being held at the request of a large number of University students, it is hoped and expected that a large number will attend.

Shortly after the spring vacation, Mrs. Graham is planning a special billet message seance for the University students. This seance, which will be held at Southwick, will be announced in the CYNIC after vacation.

The World Front

Thoughts on Welles

Sumner Welles' little European peace junket has come in for considerable comment and speculation in the newspapers the country over and people everywhere are talking about it. The weekly "Parade of Opinion" released by the Associated Collegiate Press has some interesting comments to make on what college students all over the country are thinking about this new Roosevelt peace gesture. The consensus of opinion seems to be that "there's no harm in trying," to quote the Butler University Collegian.

Most of the universities view the trip as a "serious fact-finding perusal of European conditions and war trends by a qualified observer." Also the view is expressed that though the visit may not produce immediate results it will nevertheless help clear up the international muddle in which we now find ourselves. Full information and adequate insight in the background of the troubles in Europe will no doubt be of value when the time comes to draw up a peace.

Drawing Conclusions

The political implications of the trip are scouted by the University of Minnesota Daily on the grounds that the risk of failure is so great that politically the move would not be worth taking a chance on. All in all, it seems that college opinion is definitely for Sumner Welles' mission on the ground that if nothing else is accomplished it will at least secure us some valuable information.

It is a reassuring indication—this bulletin issued by the Associated Collegiate Press—that college students all over the country are at least giving some thought to other things besides jam sessions and athletics. It shows that college students can draw their own conclusions about world events—and not such far-fetched ones either. Maybe if we can build up an alert-minded youth in this country with a knowledge of what is going on in the world we can steer clear of some of the dangers we waded into during the last international mess.

Getting Suspicious

In this troubled world it would seem that there is enough dust floating around before our very eyes without bothering to look under the rugs for any more; yet we can't help thinking of what a beautiful propaganda story that recent crossing of the Atlantic by the liner "Queen Elizabeth" made. Not that we're saying the purpose of the trip was propaganda but it certainly didn't do the British cause in this country any harm. The stirring tale of English sea dogs guiding a beautiful unarmed "queen of the seas" through mine and submarine infested waters thrilled all American hearts. Such occurrences, intentional or not, help to build up sympathy and marshal public opinion on one side. Although this time we think that it won't be as easy as in the last war to drag the American public into a war. There's no denying it our sympathies are with the Allies, but we're looking at things a little more carefully today. We hope that we can maintain our sympathies and at the same time not lose our heads. After all, we can still applaud a liner's crossing of the Atlantic and yet not go off in a burst of enthusiasm for British daring and seamanship. There's plenty of that stuff in all countries.

Intersorority dance—novel, new and different. No one wants to miss a good time so make your plans early and be on hand for the fun.

Alpha Tau Omega Honors Founders

Celebration Features Presentation, Banquet

Celebrating their seventy-sixth Founders' Day, Alpha Tau Omega fraternity held a banquet at the Paragon on March 14. Forty-five people were present, including the following alumni: Professor Tupper, Mr. Northrup, Mr. Pease, Professor Jordan, Mr. Stanley, Mr. Lanahan and Mr. Berry.

George Bicoulis '41, president of the active chapter, introduced Professor Jordan, who acted as toastmaster.

The highlight of the evening was the presentation of the gold circle certificate to Mr. Northrup, who was the twenty-fourth member of Alpha Tau Omega at this University. This award is given to those who have been members for fifty years. Professor Tupper, who received his certificate last year, made the presentation. Founders' Day week-end was further observed by a visit from the province president, Mr. Edson Bennett, on Saturday, March 16. He discussed the plans for a convention to be held at Durham, N. H., on March 30-31. J. Wysolmerski '40 was elected to represent the University of Vermont, with H. Noyes '41 as alternate.

The conclusion of Founders' Day was celebrated with the initiation of A. Haritois '40, R. Kilburn '43 and W. Dudley '43, into Alpha Tau Omega on Sunday, March 17.

R. Thomas '40 and J. Diforio '41 were co-chairmen of the events.

Sorority gals, don't forget to get your dates for the dance Saturday night. Don't miss the opportunity. It's free, too.

Gus Dorais, University of Detroit football coach, has been elected a member of Detroit's city council.

Fordham University next year will celebrate the centenary of its founding.

Rev. Parkhurst Speaks To Methodist Group

The Rev. Elbert Parkhurst of Williston spoke to the Methodist College Group Sunday evening on "Type Analysis." Reverend Parkhurst has made some study of types of person, and in his talk he classified some of the members as to introverts and extroverts, with sub-classification in intellectual, imaginative, executive, judiciary, and emotional types. The idea that marriages between opposite types as most ideal was stressed. Pictures of noted people whom Reverend Parkhurst had classified were passed around and a discussion of types in the group was carried on later.

Sunday evening, March 24, the group will meet at the Methodist parsonage and go in a body to the service at the Baptist Church.

Quotable Quotes

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"The individual most in demand is one who can get along successfully with other persons, control his emotions, and the like. Mere skill and knowledge no longer suffice. Employers insist that social facility is now an indispensable factor in occupational success." University of Wisconsin's Prof. A. H. Edgerton, vocational guidance expert, urges college students to become versatile and adaptable.

"People still have faith in education, but now they want it rationalized, and they ask why should education keep on with a rising curve of expenditures." Dr. C. S. Boucher, University of Nebraska president, believes that "easy money" is no longer available for educational institutions.

Modesty Feature of Spring Fashions

"Cover-up" Theme to Be Emphasized This Year

In a fashion preview release dated March 15 the features of the March Harper's Bazaar are previewed. Prominent for evening wear are "cover-up" fashions, indicating that modesty will be the acme of fashion this year, according to the experts. There is a Balenciaga dress of sheer purple crepe with pallette bands across the bodice and swinging tabs of pallettes above the hips. Another Balenciaga dress has a white lace bodice over a black faille skirt. The sleeves of this dress are topped with enormous rows of ruffles. The least sophisticated dress of the group comes from Paquin. It is a flowing creation of lace rivuleted with white organdie ruffles. The sleeves are brief cascades of ruffles over the shoulders and the neckline is high and straight from shoulder to shoulder.

From Alix comes a complete opposite, a dress of white silk jersey, draped and clinging, with a low decolletage and a very full skirt front. Schiaparelli has one dinner dress of Chinese-red printed with white kangaroos. It has an 1820 top with low full bust and full cap sleeves. The rest of the dress is very fitted and is accentuated by a long, flowing sash. There is a sleek black crepe dinner dress, also from Schiaparelli, with a very high neckline and very brief plain sleeves. The costume is topped by a hat of black ostrich.

Pilgrim Fellowship to Have Musical Evening

The Pilgrim Fellowship has planned a musical evening to be held in the Stone Room of the Parish House on March 24 at 7.30 o'clock. After a short devotional meeting there will be an opportunity to sing any song desired. Special musical numbers will be rendered by members of the group. Refreshments and social hour will follow.

Be sure and get your dates girls. Remember intersorority dance is Saturday night and you don't want to get left.

In the preview, there were only two daytime fashions. One was a navy wool dress from Molyneux. The dress had a coat effect because of full-length trimming down the front. This was a narrow band of white wool which was also used to edge the three-quarter sleeves. A youthful black cloth coat from Balenciaga had a plain fitted top with covered buttons over a slightly flared skirt. On this model were two surprising pockets at the hip which tied to form a bow over the stomach.

The two hats of the preview are not particularly unusual. One was of black milan straw with velvet streamers while the other was a Suzy turban of black silk jersey with open crown and two blue ribbon bows.

Americans Send Aid To Chinese Refugees

NEW YORK CITY — (ACP) — American college students have collected approximately $5,000 for the aid of student refugees in China, Miss Molly Yard, secretary of the Far Eastern Student Service Fund announced last week. Of this amount, $3,000 has already been cabled to Dr. J. Usang Ly of the National Student Relief Committee in Shanghai.

With a campaign goal of $50,000 Miss Yard reports, that 81 colleges already have held campus campaigns and nearly 200 others expect to do so during the second semester. Dances, bazaars, and lectures have featured most of the drives. Contributions have come from Smith, Vassar, Mount Holyoke, Randolph-Macon College for Women and smaller institutions.

The Far Eastern Student Service Fund has been asked by the Chinese students to help establish temporary universities in western China to replace the 54 institutions partially or totally destroyed by Japanese bombardment. At least 30,000 students are in need, Miss Yard declares. She recently returned from China where she represented the United States on an International Student Good-will Delegation.

S. A. E. Again Winner Of Interfraternity Sing

Delta Psi Awarded Honorable Mention; Reception for Gov. Aiken Follows Sing

For the second consecutive time the Sigma Alpha Epsilon chorus under the capable direction of Louis Pichierri won the annual Interfraternity Sing, held Friday night before a crowd of 600 at Southwick Memorial. Second award of honorable mention was given to the Delta Psi chorus.

The prize winners were awarded the Carroll Cup donated by Prof. Daniel B. Carroll of the political science department and also were credited with three points toward the Traynor Trophy. The prize selections were "Sword of Ferrara" by F. F. Bullard and "Violets-Friends" medley by Hill. Delta Psi won honorable mention with a skilful presentation of "Two Grenadiers" by Schumann and "Champlain" by C. S. Putnam. The decisions were made by judges Prof. A. M. Blume of the German department, Prof. W. G. Kirby acting head of the music department, and Mr. J. F. Lechnyr leader of the school band.

Pichierri Leads Choruses

Following the fraternity presentations, the combined choruses under the direction of Louis Pichierri sang four selections. This portion of the program was broadcast at 9.30 over WCAX. Paul Poulin '41 and Thomas Malone '41 were the soloists and Stanley Pike '42 accompanied the chorus on the piano. After the mass chorus performance, Professor Carroll, head of the Interfraternity Council under whose auspices the Sing was held, announced the judges' decisions and presented the Carroll Cup to Sigma Alpha Epsilon. Then John N. Houpis led the audience in a rollicking community sing. This feature, introduced last year and repeated Friday night, was received with much enthusiasm and seems to have won a permanent place in the annual competition.

Capacity Crowd Attends

This year's Sing, which was the most widely attended of any yet, was presented before an almost capacity crowd of over 500. The guests of honor for the evening were Governor and Mrs. Aiken, and Mayor Burns of Burlington. The University faculty were patrons of the Sing. Director of this year's program was Edward Guilbert '41 of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, who energetically planned and executed the most successful Sing yet held.

Assisting Director Guilbert was a committee composed of one man from each of the fraternities on the hill: Robert C. Steinman of Phi Sigma Delta, A. L. Warden of Alpha Tau Omtga, J. W. Williams of Phi Delta Theta, Donald Dunn of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, L. C. Hunt of Kappa Sigma, Norman Tucker of Sigma Phi, John White of Lambda Iota, Jack Goldman of Tau Epsilon Phi, R. L. Williams of Sigma Nu, and H. P. Wood of Delta Psi.

Paul Rand Chosen By Johns Hopkins

Prof. Ralph M. Holmes, head of the physics department here at U. V. M., announced last Saturday that Paul C. Rand '38 has received an appointment as assistant in physics at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md. Mr. Rand is to be candidate for the Master of Science degree from the University of Vermont this coming June. His new position at Johns Hopkins will give him a chance to continue his research work, making it possible for him to be a candidate for the Doctor of Philosophy degree.

Officials Investigate Fire at U. V. M.

Following an investigation of the mysterious fire which damaged a University of Vermont barn last Monday, Burlington Fire Chief C. N. Lavery stated that the indications seem to point to the fire having been deliberately set.

Deputy State Fire Marshal Francis S. Regan and Chief Lavery conducted an investigation of the fire last Tuesday but failed to unearth any information concerning the cause of the fire.

"We do know that there was no cause for any fire in that barn," said Chief Lavery, "the investigation is still open. Unless we can find the cause of the fire, we must assume the blaze to be of incendiary origin." Regan made a similar statement.

The wiring in the barn was new and in first-class condition, the chief pointed out, adding that no one had been in the barn since early morning so far as he could determine.

Dr. H. B. Ellenberger, director of the University farm, said he was unaware that any investigation into the fire was under way.

Women Will Present Plays at Southwick

Plays Include Tragedy, Farce, Serious Drama

The annual class plays will be presented Thursday evening, March 28, at 8.15 at Southwick. They are all one-act plays and all the players are women.

Charlotte Hall '40 and Louise Mann '41 are directing the junior play "Overtones." It is rather psychological in nature, revealing the dual personalities of two women. The overtones in their characters make a big difference between the way they appear to others, and their real selves. The cast includes: Mary Letta Root as Harriette; Ruth Connor as Hetty; Elizabeth Doton as Margaret; and Jean Stewart as Maggie.

Margaret Crowley '41, and Jane Lyons '41, are the directors of the comedy being presented by the sophomores. The title of the play is "No Man's Land," and concerns two college girls who are determined never to see their beaux again. However, due to the efforts of a scheming friend, the girls change their minds. The parts are taken by: Barbara Butterfield as Janet; Maryrose Kelty as Helen; June Swanson as Peg; and Catherine Peterson as Emmy, a servant.

Doris Kinsley '40 has charge of the freshman women's play "When the Whirlwind Blows," a tragedy. The action takes place in the cottage of a peasant woman in Russia during the Bolshevik Revolution; and depicts the struggle between the Aristocracy and the Workmen's Council. The cast is as follows: Josefa, Huddee Zwick; Madame Androya, Janet Hackwell; and Anna, Betty Preston.

Dorothea Smith '41 and Maywood Metcalf '41 are in charge of publicity, and Gratia Pearl is making posters. Barbara Smith '40 is property manager, and Laura Hawley '41 will look after the make-up.

A lot of work has gone into the preparation of these plays on the part of both the directors and the members of the casts. Both tragedy and comedy will be presented to suit everyone's taste.

The student body and the public are cordially invited to attend. Admission is free but a collection will be taken.

Sally Rome Chosen As U. V. M. Contest Queen

Picture to Be Sent to New York Artists For Selection of Queen and 12 Runners-Up

SALLY ROME '42

Sally Rome, a member of the sophomore class, was chosen yesterday by popular vote of the student body as the U. V. M. candidate for the title of All-American College Queen. A picture of Sally, who is a member of Delta Delta Delta, and a slender blue-eyed blonde, will be entered in a nation-wide popularity contest sponsored by college newspapers to determine the co-ed having the most beauty, charm, and dramatic ability.

When informed of the news by Huddee Zwick, CYNIC reporter, Sally could think of nothing to say except, "Oh, how nice! Oh, gee! Such a surprise—you don't know how surprised I am!"

Picture in Magazine

As U. V. M. is the only college representing this state in the contest, Sally Rome will have her picture in Movie and Radio Guide Magazine in the May 3, 10 and 11 issues. The readers will vote on the state winners to determine the twelve National winners. This will be determine by the largest amount of reader votes. Taking into consideration that all the college students can qualify as "readers," the entire Vermont campus will be able to give the desired impetus. The twelve National winners along with their college editors will be guests of William Holden (Golden Boy), Ezra Stone, Bonita Granville, Judith Barrett and other Paramount players in Galesburg, Ill., for the world premiere of "Those Were the Days," George Fitch's story of college life in 1905. At the conclusion of the premiere activities in Galesburg, the twelve National winners will be judged by a committee headed by Jay Theodore Reed, producer and director of "Those Were the Days" to determine the winner of the title "All-American College Queen."

Talent Audition

The winner will then be taken to Hollywood by Paramount Studios, with all expenses paid. She will be given a talent audition at the studio; meet some of the leading screen actors and actresses; visit the studios; and generally feel the Western warmth. There is nothing of the fairy tale in this contest; it is purely a part of the opportunities that America offers. Participating in this, both as contestant and voter, is to help show those subversive complaining sofa sitters where to get off . . . those people who complain of the lack of equal chances in America.

First Intersorority Dance Held in Gym

Pan-Hell. Sponsors Informal Easter Affair

On Saturday night, March 23, the first intersorority dance was held on U. V. M. campus. The affair, sponsored by the Pan-Hellenic Council was a great success.

Easter Murals

The gym was the scene for this semi-formal dance and the New Vermonters provided the latest dance melodies. The decorations were most unique, transforming the usually barren hall into a gay Easter scene. On the wall behind the band the banners of the different sororities were hung, and on either side of the stage were huge wheelbarrows, one filled with brilliant colored balloons, the other with jelly beans. Around the hall were placed Easter murals which had been designed and painted by the different sororities. They were all carefully arranged, displaying a touch of artistry and humor, sometimes irony, as the one of the Sigma Gammas, depicting a duck in an Easter bonnet, with a woolen muffler around his neck, peering out through a frosted windowpane at the sub-zero temperature! Then there were pictures of bunnies (Tri Delt) a family of chickens going to church, dressed in their Sunday best (Alpha Chi Omega), bunnies dressed in plaid ginghams (Alpha Xi Delta) and bunnies with a wheelbarrow full of eggs which had the insignia of Greek-letter sororities imprinted on them. Pinocchio with his associates was there (Delta Phi Epsilon) and a Petty drawing of a bunny girl talking over the telephone.

Shirley Gray in Charge

All the sororities had representatives on the committees of which the following were in charge: Shirley Gray '41, general chairman, Jean Saul '41, decorations, and refreshments, Mary Letta Root '41.

Mr. and Mrs. Holden Bickford and Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Perry were chaperons.

Two tea dances were held preceding the main dance. The Alpha Chi Omega sorority entertained from 5.30 to 8, serving a buffet supper. Lucy Williams '42 was in charge of the arrangements. Prof. and Mrs. Leeder chaperoned. At the Pi Phi House, Mary Skinner was in charge of the dance which lasted from 6 to 8. A buffet supper was also served, and a very large crowd was present. Prof. and Mrs. Millington and Mr. and Mrs. Fuller chaperoned.

Y. W. C. A. Holds Party For Rock Point Girls

Among the many varied activities with which the Y. W. C. A. is concerned is the Rock Point School for underprivileged girls. Tuesday evening at 8.30 they are giving their annual party for these girls at Southwick. The girls who range from ten to eighteen years of age will enjoy all the amusements which Southwick can offer—basketball, ping-pong, roller skating, dancing, etc., and then will be served refreshments. Jean Morse '40 is in charge of these and Peggy Bodette '40 is managing the affair. The girls who signed up for Rock Point at the beginning of the year will help throughout the evening and other Y. W. members will attend to transportation difficulties. This is but one of the many activities which the Y. W. C. A., under the capable leadership of Florence Wade '40, carries on and does so well.

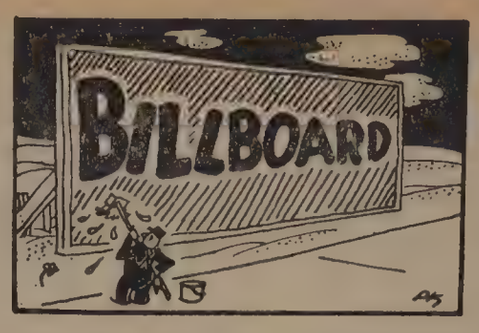
Waves the Green and Gold

The second annual Interfraternity Sing was a most successful and enjoyable concert. A large amount of credit is due to the general chairman and his committee who worked so industriously arranging and executing the plans for the sing. We feel, however, that much praise is due the fraternity men who spent many hours rehearsing their selections and who cooperated exceedingly well with the committee.

On our campus where competition among men's fraternities is stressed so much we were exceedingly glad to see the emphasis put on cooperation in the mass sing. To the audience it was a downright thrill to hear such a large group of men singing with such evident enjoyment songs which were familiar to everyone.

To that rather intangible quality we call "school spirit" the Interfraternity Sing furnished another medium for expression. We have noticed that when people sing in a large group they never fail to feel more united and animated and the mass sing was no exception.

Everyone in the audience, including Governor Aiken, joined in the community sing. As the singing progressed the volume and the enthusiasm of the singers increased to such an extent that they were reluctant to break off their singing in order to allow the judges to announce their decision.



The obvious popularity of the community sing and the fact that such mass singing is an excellent means of effectually promoting school spirit have led many students and some members of the faculty and the administration to suggest a College Sing for all U. V. M. students. The library or chapel steps would seem an ideal place to hold such an informal performance. Some warm spring evening (if it ever becomes warm) in the early part of May would probably be the best time.

Many college campuses have such group singing and they have proven tremendously popular. At Middlebury, the women students participate in an annual "step singing" competition, which is written large on the campus calendar. At Dartmouth and Princeton similar sings are well-liked annual spring events.

Such a "step-singing" would be a simple but effective means of fostering and promoting pride in our University and a spontaneous widespread development of "campus good will" among all the students. Valuable, too, would be the opportunity in such an "all-campus sing" of learning our college songs of which U. V. M. has a large number, many of which are unfamiliar to the majority of the students.

Another good factor would be the presence of the faculty at the "campus sing." Such an informal gathering would promote a means of becoming better acquainted with our faculty members whose acquaintance many students have not made outside the classroom. The faculty would aid the singing too, for several of their members are excellent singers.

U. V. M. needs a "campus sing" for all the students and judging from the popularity of the mass and community sing at the Interfraternity Sing such an informal gathering would be readily received. Student opinion is being sounded out on the campus and it is hoped that everyone, realizing the benefits to our school spirit which can be derived from an all-campus sing and the large amount of response and enjoyment mass singing can bring, will endorse the suggestion for an All-Campus Sing.

The above dates and hours should be carefully noted to avoid unnecessary absences.

The attention of all students is called to the following extract from the University Regulations:

II, 4 b "A student who absents himself without permission (secured in advance from the Dean of his college), from any University exercise or exercises on the day immediately preceding or following a recess or holiday may be placed on probation." Note that this applies to all classes March 30, not merely the last, and all classes April 9, not merely the first.

Students desiring excuses for absence should note and be guided by the following statement:

(1) Application must be made in writing, must indicate mail address, must set forth reasons in full and be filed with the Dean of the College in which the student is enrolled (men) or with the Dean of Women (women), not later than Wednesday, March 27, at NOON. The responsibility for proper and prompt filing lies with the student. It should be clearly understood that belated applications will not be considered.

(4) Applicants will be advised of council action not later than Thursday evening, March 28.—ELIJAH SWIFT, Secretary.

DEAN SWIFT has received a letter from the Rutland Railroad stating that on Saturday, March 30, the "Green Mountain Flyer" will leave Burlington at 12:25 p. m. instead of the regular time of 12:15 in order to accommodate those members of the student body who may wish to travel by this train. The Railroad is providing ample coach accommodations.

SCRIBES will hold its next meeting on Tuesday, March 26th, at 7:45 p. m. at Southwick, instead of on March 29th, as previously scheduled. Professor Merrick will be present at this meeting. Anyone interested in coming is cordially invited.

We Are Not Alone

By "POOH"

As the ice turns to slush, and the slush to water—which comes catapulting down the hill like the charge of the light brigade—and the water turns back to slush, and the slush takes a dose of gelatine and becomes solid—not to mention slippery—well, as all of these things happen, daily, we begin to reflect on the justice of things. The conclusions we finally reach is that it must be nearly spring. So let's hear what Frances Frost has to say on the subject. She calls her poem "Winter's End":

"All that is left is a hint, a flash
Of cold burned down to a glitter of ash;
All that is left is the silver tint
Of frost on a field like a fingerprint."

Now that we have disposed of the state of the union, it might be interesting to take a trip across two thousand miles of not very seductive ocean—to London, in fact, and see what British humor was like, way back last summer. It can't have changed much since then—because it took centuries to build it up in the first place. This is Michael Barsley speaking, through the London Time and Tide. Say—get back there, stop crowding! Give him air! . . . All right—let 'er rip!

"Grabberwocky"

'"Twas Danzig, and the swastikoves
Did heil and hittle in the reich,
All nazi were the linden groves
And the neuraths julestreich.

'Beware the Grabberwock, my son
The plans that spawn, the plots that hatch!
Beware the Jewjew bird, and shun
The furious Bundersnatch!'

He took his aryan hords in hand,
Long time the Gestapo he taught,
Then rested he by the Baltic Sea
And stood awhile in thought.

And as a Polish oath they swore,
The Grabberwock with lies aflame,
Came goering down the corridor,
And goebbelled as it came.

Ein jwei, ein zwei, one in the eye
For Polska folk, alas, alack.
He left them dread and as their head
He came meinkampfing back.

'And hast thou ta'en they lebensraum?
Come to my arms, my rhenish boy!
O grabjous day! Sieg heil, be gay!'
He strengthened in his joy.

'Twas Danzig and the Swastikoves
Did heil and hittle in the reich,
All nazi were the lindergroves
And the neuraths julestreich."

And that's that. Unless someone wants to volunteer a Russian version. Rally round, ye disciples of Swift!

I. R. C. to Meet at Southwick March 27

Elections for next year's officers of the International Relations Club will be held at the meeting at Southwick on Wednesday, March 27, at 7.30. The speaker for the evening will be Mrs. F. D. Carpenter who will discuss Finland and her visit there last summer. All members are requested to attend and everyone is welcome.

Opportunity For Social Work

Anyone who is interested in doing a real piece of creative social work this summer will be provided the opportunity through the Summer Projects of the Vermont Church Council. There are many communities in Vermont where the children, young people, and adults have no mental or religious stimulation, and have no provision for health or hygiene. Young women from colleges in Vermont, or Vermont girls from other colleges like Smith and Vassar go into these backward communities, offering a program of Bible school, recreation, health clinics, and community service, helping Vermont's future citizens who are living under wretched social conditions that will handicap them for life and result in delinquency and crime. The Council pays for the expenses of these volunteers whose program lasts one month or six weeks.

You may be able to help many such families as this: A migrant family was discovered in a hollow in the mountains not far from one of our wealthiest summer resorts. The mother, not much over thirty-five, has only one tooth, the children had been to school only five days during the past winter. There is a great need in these neglected areas, and any service that is offered is eagerly received by underprivileged people.

If you are interested in finding more about this work, you may meet Miss Borden from the Church Council at Allen House on Friday afternoon at 4, March 29. This will give you an opportunity to talk with your parents over vacation if you are interested.

If any girl would like more information please see either Flossie Wade or Doris Kinsley.

The flag of Clark University will be planted at the South Pole by a member of the new Byrd expedition.

The end of this week will find the 1940 edition of the baseball team well on its way down South. There will be plenty of new faces in the line-up. . . . Beauchemin won't be at the initial sack, Crossley won't be at second, Kimball will be missing at third, and the garden will be minus Berry and Nicholson.

It may be a little too early to be talking about the tennis team, but the latter will also be making its "southern trip" in about a month. At Vermont, tennis is in a funny predicament. Inevitably, the tennis men are never able to get any outdoor practice until the first actual match. By this time the opposition has had anywhere up to two weeks of outdoor practice. Of course the results are obvious. . . . But unlike the baseball team, the schedule of the tennis team does not include over twenty matches. So what usually happens is that the racqueteers are unable to overcome the two strikes against them before they start, and the season, as far as wins and losses are concerned, is called a flop.

Don't let anyone kid you by saying that the lack of outdoor practice can be compensated by the indoor sessions on the gym floor. . . . We heard it from a good source that the only benefit really derived from this indoor practice is the fact that the players limber up the muscles of their arms and legs.

This last week-end also saw the finalé of the indoor track meet. And speaking of track in any form, of course the topic immediately turns to Charlie Webster. It seems as though the boy thrives on records (i.e. thrives to break them). His latest accomplishments were to officially break the interfraternity records for both the mile and half mile. In the mile event not only did he break the standing interfraternity record but the standing indoor record. His time was 4:56.4.

Speaking of the intramural track meet, there is one thing we don't understand. It seems so inconsistent. We can see perfectly where 440 men, who have earned their varsity "V" in that event are ineligible to compete in the same in intramurals. But here's the catch! These same varsity men are allowed to run the same distance, the 440 yards, as part of their fraternity relay team. There's definately something screwy somewhere.

In the intramural wrestling tournament held over this past week-end a peculiar fact was that not a single champ from last year retained his throne. . . . Strange that there was no boxing show this year.

Rugby rumors are floating around again. They say that the Rugby team will definitely go to Cambridge on April 20 to play the Harvard Rugby team.

Junior Week Play Selection Announced

"What a Life," by Clifford Goldsmith, has been the play selected by the University Players for the annual Junior Week play presentation.

The University Players met Thursday afternoon for the purpose of choosing a play. After much deliberation, "What a Life" was chosen.

"What a Life," opened at the Biltmore Theater, New York City, April 13, 1938, for a very successful engagement and continuing through the summer and into the fall of the year. Betty Field and Ezra Stone played the leads assisted by Arthur Pierson, William Mendrick, and Ruth Matteson.

The critics, among them Burns Mantle and Brooks Atkinson, gave excellent reports on the play. The University Players are to be commended for their selection of such a play. "What a Life" is a comedy using the trials and tribulations of high school as its main theme. This play is a most entertaining piece of drama and the University players, who have done so admirably in the past, are sure to produce a success in their interpretation of it.

George Babits Wins Wrestling Title

Last Thursday the finals in the Intramural wrestling tournament were held at the gymnasium. The bouts were marked by good, clean sportsmanship and an averaging number of upsets.

In the unlimited weight class George Babits, sophomore from Greenfield, Mass., scored an upset win over the favored "Lefty" Warden of New Barnet, Vt.

The 190 pound Babits was much more agile than Warden and succeeded in obtaining sufficient time advantage to even the bout with a time margin of three minutes, 55 seconds.

In the 165-pound class, the aggressive tactics of freshman Harry Porris of Ashland, Mass., gave him a time advantage decision of one minute, 59 seconds over E. O. Eaton, junior from Waitsfield.

Abe Swartz, Boston, Mass., sophomore, put on a real fast bout with N. A. Beecher, freshman from Mt. Kisco, N. Y. The bout went seven minutes, 32 seconds, during which both boys were fairly evenly matched until Swartz caught Beecher with a half-nelson, followed by a body press to earn the 145-pound title.

In the 135-pound class, scrappy little Meyer Levin of Burlington bear-hugged his opponent, "Shorty" Cohen, into submission in two minutes, 30 seconds. This was a real upset as Cohen was the title holder last year.

The final bout of the afternoon also proved to be an upset as last year's king of the 155-pound class, H. A. Chesney of Island Pond, was uncrowned with a body press in four minutes, 26 seconds of his bout by N. Partridge.

Intersorority Sing Postponed Until May

The Intersorority Sing, originally scheduled for April 20, will be held at Southwick on May 3 and will correspond to the Interfraternity Sing which was held so successfully on March 22.

Sponsored by Pan-Hellenic Council, which offers a cup to the sorority which best answers to proper quality, form, and unity, the sing will be free of charge and will be followed by community singing.

Betty Cole '41 and Janice Spear '41 have organized the activities and preparations to date and are in charge of further matters connected with its production.

The sororities will not combine in a mass sing, but each group, including the independent girls, will present three separate selections, in the form best befitting the entitled winner of the cup.

Track Practice In Full Swing

Thoroughly reviewing his indoor meet records of the past week prompts Coach Archie Post to make the statement, "Prospects are good this year, but there still remains a good deal of smoothing up to be done."

Eaton, running the event for the first time, ran a fast quarter mile and looked very good in doing it. Close behind were Gallup and Burgess, the former, gaining more confidence with every meet he enters should go well in either the quarter or the half mile and the latter has already shown his worth in freshman track.

The results of the weight events showed Coach Post that he can count on strength in the field this year. Johnstone shows promise this year and is a really valuable man. Pearl, with a little more coordination, can be sure of placing, and H. Long, even though this is his first try at the hammer, has plenty of ability and with a little more experience will go far.

In the shot-put Johnstone should average over 40 feet and Long will back him up with heaves that will come close to the former's marks.

In the distance events there are the Webster boys, of course, Frank Livak, and a newcomer, Corliss.

Charlie Webster showed he is in top form when he broke the indoor mile record and brother Fred was not far behind. Coach Post's problem is how to split these boys in the distance events in order to get the most out of both of them. Livak, hard, steady runner that he is will undoubtedly place and Corliss, a newcomer with no running experience at all looked like a find in the mile run.

The high hurdles offers no new prospects and the brunt in this event will be borne equally by Bud Allen and Bob Kenney. They are a good running duet and should give each other enough competition in practice to develop rapidly.

In regard to these running events it might be well to say that because the track is so narrow and sharp turned, the men can't train to run properly. Indoor track practise on this track only offers body condition, not training in running.

The high jump was very gratifying in that it showed a number of capable men.

Bill Pratt and Arnie Becker are back from last year and Bill Pye is expected to prove an added asset. With these three men great things are expected.

The pole vault brings back Davis and Pratt and the latter looked exceptionally well in his form and condition.

The caliber of work is much above average this year and Coach Post looks forward with hope—if the weather changes.

S. A. E.'s Win Track Meet

Charles Webster '42 Breaks Mile Record

On Friday and Saturday of last week the annual Interfraternity Track Meet was held. This year's competition was a very sucessful one in that there was heated competition in all events resulting in record-breaking times and distances. In previous years, the fight for the meet was generally narrowed down to two or three fraternities. This year five or six frats were right in the battle up to the final event. The interest shown in this meet was very keen, and a large number of men competed in the various events. The fraternities that participated were Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Kappa Sigma, Alpha Tau Omega, Phi Sigma Delta, Sigma Nu, Delta Psi, Sigma Phi, Phi Delta Theta and the Independents.

The S. A. E.'s won the meet with 24⅔ points, Sigma Nu second with 18¼ points and Delta Psi third with 15½ points.

In this meet four new records were made. Diminutive Charlie Webster set a new college record in the mile run with 4:56.4 and a new interfraternity record in the 880-yard run with a thrilling 2:15.8.

Bob Johnstone tossed the 35-lb. weight 41 feet, 7 inches to better the college record by one foot, seven inches. Frank Taylor fell just one inch short of tying the college indoor record of forty feet, six inches in the shot put. However, Taylor set a new interfraternity mark for future generations to aim at.

The final tabulations were:

440-yard Dash—Won by Eaton, S. A. E.; Gallup, D. S., second; tie for third, West, S. N. and Burgess, S. P. Time 59 seconds.

35-lb. Weight—Won by R. Johnstone, A. T. O.; Pearl, P. S. D., second; tie for third, H. Long, S. N. and Otto, S. N. Distance 41 feet, 7½ inches.

Broad Jump—Won by Becker, P. S. D.; Wanvig, D. S., second; Burgress, S. P., third; Smith, S. N., fourth. Distance 19 feet, 5 inches.

Pole Vault—Won by Vreeland, S. A. E.; Spasyk, P D. T., second; tie for third, Cross, K. S.; Massuco, S. A. E.; O'Connell, S. A. E. Height 10 feet, 3 inches.

16-lb. Shot Put—Won by Taylor, S. A. E.; Otto, S. N second; Parker, S. N., third; H. Long, S. N.; fourth. Distance 40 feet, 5 inches.

One-mile Run—Won by C. Webster, Ind.; F. Webster, Ind., second; F. Livak, Ind., third; Corliss, D. S., fourth. Time 4:56.4.

30-yard High Hurdles—Won by Hamilton, S. P.; Shortle, P. D. T., second; Becker, P. S. D., third; Otis, D. S., fourth. Time 4.8 seconds.

30-yard Dash—Won by Wanvig, D. S.; Spasyk, P. D. T., second; tie for third, Taylor, S. A. E. and Fleming, S. N. Time 3.7 seconds.

High Jump—Four-way tie for first between Pratt, P. D. T.; Grosvenor, S. A. E.; Taylor, S. A. E.; and Pye, S. N. Height 5 feet, 7 inches.

880-yard Run—Won by C. Webster, Ind.; tie for second, Smith, S. N. and Gallup, D. S.; Burgess, S. P., fourth. Time 2:15.8.

Final point score: S. A. E. 24, Sigma Nu 18¼, Delta Psi 15½, Independents 15, Phi Delta Theta 11¾, Phi Sigma Delta 10, Sigma Phi 9½, Alpha Tau Omega 5, Kappa Sigma 1.

Quotable Quotes

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"Qualitative education as it starts upon its mission is not interested merely in perfecting the body of knowledge or the processes by which that knowledge may be obtained, but being social, thinks in terms of life and how it may adjust itself to the age and environment in which it lives." But, maintains Cornell College's Pres. John B. Magee, there is something lacking in this quality when it allows the present world situation to develop.

John Dewey Club Hears Prof. Collier

At a meeting of the John Dewey Club on Thursday, March 21, Professor Collier, of the University's psychology department, spoke on the subject of "Hypnosis."

Having been introduced by President H. Durfee '41, Professor Collier began his speech with the statement that the subject of hypnosis does not have full fledged acceptance among men of science and psychologists hesitate to use it for research.

Then Professor Collier gave the history of hypnosis beginning with the discovery of the first trance among the primitive folk in 1798, and continuing with various discoveries unto the present day. In tracing these events Professor Collier mentioned many men of science and their contribution to the cause. He pointed out the distrust and fear of the people in the theory of animal magnetism and its results.

After devising a new name, neurohypnology, society accepted it. However, the advance of hypnosis was hindered in medical circles by the discovery of chemical anesthesia.

Phenomena of Hypnosis

Hallucinations, visual, induced or tactual, post-hypnotic suggestions and rapport are phenomena of hypnosis. Professor Collier explained these terms and added that there was no sharp demarcation between the hypnotic trance and the waking state so far as the responses to direct suggestions occur.

In reply to some questions from the group, Profesor Collier made some experiments on the circle. Having drawn a diagram on the board, he asked the students to concentrate and look directly at the diagram. During this procedure Professor Collier gave suggestions as to their actions and feeling. The result was to be the closing of the eyes and the clasping of the hands, until the subjects were told to open them. This experiment was fairly successful.

Individual experiments were performed on L. Janoff '41.

Following these experiments an open discussion was held.

The meeting adjourned with the serving of refreshments.

Alpha Zeta Initiates Seven New Members

The Alpha Zeta honorary agricultural fraternity held its annual initiation banquet at Oakledge Manor last Friday evening, March 22, in honor of its newly elected members. These members were chosen from the sophomore class of the Agricultural College. They are chosen on the basis of scholarship, character and leadership. The initiation ceremony preceded the banquet.

The newly elected members are as follows: Floyd W. Campbell, Strafford; Robert L. Carlson, S. Ryegate; Arnold C. Smith, Barton; Glenn C. Streeter, E. Concord; John M. Thomas, Rutland; John H. Pratt, Jr., N. Clarendon; Fred H. Webster, Coventry.

Dean's List Girls Honored at Supper

Sunday evening at Southwick about eighty of the elite women students attended Mortar Board's Smarty Supper which was given in honor of those who have attained the dean's list by an excellent scholastic average.

Before the supper there was an enjoyable musical program by some of the students. Nora Hill '42 rendered two piano solos, and Mary Letta Root '41 gave a reading. Betty Cole '41 and T. K. Malone '41 each sang a solo.

Following this program a delicious buffet supper was served before the open fire in the ballroom.

Betsey Marlow '40 and Betty Myers '40 were in charge of the supper. They were assisted by a food and serving committee of Staff and Sandal members with Phyllis McGovern '40, Shirley Mayforth, '41, Margaret Crowley '41 and Grace Meeken '41. The Sophomore Aids fulfilled their duties on a committee with Harriet Nelson in charge assisted by Gratia Pearl, Kay Holden, Louise Davis and Jean Woolley.

Six Fraternities Plan Spring Dances

Gala Affairs Will Usher in Vacation

Despite the fact that spring still seems far away to most of us, we will witness the unveiling of spring fever and sulphur and molasses very soon. An ideal time would seem to be at the dances being held by the majority of the fraternities on the hill on March 29.

At Sigma Phi Place we will find Johnny Davis and his Pennsylvanians direct from the Hotel Penn in Philadelphia playing for a formal dance that is in charge of N. D. Tucker '42. The chaperons have not as yet been decided upon.

R. Davis '41 is directing the formal dance at the Delta Psi house. Dr. and Mrs. Robert Jenks and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Perry will serve as chaperons. The music will be furnished by the popular Catamounts.

Prof. and Mrs. L. S. Rowell will chaperon the formal dance at the Phi Sigma Delta house. Henry Press' orchestra will supply the music. Many of the alumni are going to be present. S. Levine '42 is in charge and aiding him are B. Glass '43, who is promising something novel and original by way of decorations, and R. Levien '41.

An especially gala formal is expected at the Kappa Sigma house. Peter Snardus and his brother from the Alpha Lambda chapter at Dartmouth will be present as well as many alums. J. R. Royer '41 is in charge and Red Dower's orchestra will play. Prof. and Mrs. F. D. Carpenter and Mr. and Mrs. Putney will be the chaperons.

Tau Epsilon Phi is holding a semi-formal "vic" dance at the house. The ever-popular Prof. and Mrs. H. Bickford will chaperon. The committee in charge consists of J. M. Rome '43, C. Joseph '43 and N. B. Hyne '43.

Alpha Tau Omega is also holding a semi-formal. A. D. MacDonald '40 is directing and the New Vermonters will play. The chaperons have not yet been decided on.

Debaters to Meet Seven Schools in 2000-Mile Trip

Becker, Durfee, Cohen And Huntley Will Represent Vermont

On Monday, April 1, the men's debating team of the University of Vermont will leave Burlington on a two-thousand-mile debating trip which will carry them through six states en route South to Ashland, Va. The debaters will return to Burlington on April 11.

The men making the trip are: Arnold H. Becker, manager; Harold A. Durfee, assistant manager; Taze R. Huntley; and Julius G. Cohen.

Debates with seven schools are planned. The Vermonters will first meet Rhode Island State College, then Drew University, Upsala College, Muhlenberg College, Randolph-Macon College, Georgetown College, and Washington College.

Mr. Becker, Mr. Durfee, and Mr. Huntley are veteran debaters, this being their second year of varsity debating. Mr. Becker also went on the spring trip last year. This is Mr. Cohen's first year of varsity debating but he shows much promise. Mr. Cohen and Mr. Huntley both hold debate scholarships and three of the men are members of Tau Kappa Alpha, honorary forensic society.

During the current season the team has maintained the successful precedent established during the past four years, wherein the Vermont debaters have been engaged in over one hundred debates with but one defeat.

Arnold H. Becker '41 of Burlington, is enrolled in the pre-medical course. He is manager of debate, secretary of Key and Serpent, junior honorary society, president of the Vermont chapter of Tau Kappa Alpha, a member of the varsity

Men to Hold Spring Formals Tonight

With spring vacation definitely in view the majority of the fraternities on the hill will celebrate this fact with formals this evening. What more appropriate way could be found to start this grand season.

N. D. Tucker is in charge of a formal dance at the Sigma Phi place where we will find Johnny Davis and his Pennsylvanians direct from the Hotel Penn in Philadelphia.

At the Delta Psi house the music will be furnished by the popular Catamounts. This is being directed by R. Davis '41. Dr. and Mrs. Robert Jenks and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Perry will serve as chaperons.

Henry Press' orchestra will furnish music at the Phi Sigma Delta house where Prof. and Mrs. L. S. Rowell will chaperon. S. Levine '42 is in charge and aiding him are R. Levine '41 and B. Glass '43, who is promising something novel and original by way of decorations.

J. R. Royer '41 is in charge of a formal at the Kappa Sigma house where Red Dower's orchestra will furnish the music. Many alums are planning to be present and an especially gala time is expected. Prof. and Mrs. F. D. Carpenter and Mr. and Mrs. Putney will be the chaperons.

Tau Epsilon Phi is holding a semi-formal "vic" dance at the house. Prof. and Mrs. H. Bickford will chaperon. The committee in charge consists of J. M. Rome '43, C. Joseph '43 and N. B. Hyne '43.

The New Vermonters will play at a semi-formal being held at the Alpha Tau Omega house which is being directed by A. D. MacDonald '40.

Sigma Gamma Leads In Scholastics

One after the other, all seven sororities at the University of Vermont ranked higher in their studies than the ten men's Greek-letter societies on the campus. The standings, released by the office of the registrar of the University, are based on the grades of all members of the organizations, averaged for the fraternity rating. Sigma Gamma sorority took first place, leading all seventeen men's and women's fraternities, with Alpha Chi Omega second and Pi Beta Phi third.

Following the sororities, Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity led the men's groups in scholastic excellence, followed by Delta Psi and Sigma Nu.

Alpha Xi Delta sorority took fourth place, Delta Delta Delta fifth, Kappa Alpha Theta sixth, and Delta Phi Epsilon seventh. Following Tau Epsilon Phi, eighth, Delta Psi, ninth, and Sigma Nu, tenth, the other men's fraternities rated in the following order: Phi Sigma Delta, Alpha Tau Omega, Lambda Iota, Kappa Sigma, Phi Delta Theta, Sigma Phi, and Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Yea! Vacation

Mortar Board to Sponsor Annual Spring Formal

Women Are Urged To Select Escorts Before Vacation

With the coming of a very late spring to the Vermont campus this year, the Saturday after vacation is just the time to greet warmer weather and usher in the gay spring season. In order to do this in the best possible manner, the 1940 chapter of Mortar Board cordially invites you to its annual spring dance which will be given Saturday evening, April 13. The price is the traditional one for all Mortar Board dances, $1.10 a couple. As usual the affair will be semi-formal; just the occasion for the girls to display new spring finery.

The members of Mortar Board promise all the requirements for a supper dance; smooth music, novel decorations of springtime, light refreshments, and the romantic atmosphere of Southwick's ballroom.

The girls on the Vermont campus are asked to remember that gentlemen expect to be asked to Mortar Board, and that this year of grace 1940 is leap year. Before finishing up the academic and extra-curricular work of the winter term, be sure and get your date for the Mortar Board dance. It is essential that this be done before vacation, because the most eligible young gentlemen of the University will be taken if you wait until after vacation is over.

Within a day or so after the holidays, the members of Mortar Board will be selling tickets. So, please remember to ask the gentleman of your choice before vacation, then secure in the knowledge of a fine time on April 13, you may enjoy next week all the more. Be ready to usher in the social season of the last lap of the school year with Mortar Board.

Baseball Squad Leaves For Annapolis Today

Six Hurlers on Squad of Fourteen N. Y. U. To Be Final Game of Trip

Terminating a month of active indoor practice, a squad of fourteen baseball men, Coach Larry Gardner and Co-managers Robinson and Schofield today left Burlington for their first engagement of the annual southern trip. The team will arrive at Annapolis some time tomorrow morning and will play its first game of the season tomorrow afternoon against the highly touted Navy team.

Traveling Squad of 14 Men

Due to limitations on the number of men that can be taken annually on this trip, Coach Gardner has taken but fourteen of his squad of twenty-two. The following were chosen to make the circuit: Pitchers, Pesarik, Hart, Belardinelli, Conrad, Carlson and Akley; catcher, Boucher; first base, Lawrence; second base, Spasyk; shortstop, Healy; third base, Wood; outfielders, Taylor, Utley and Sysko. Spasyk will alternate with Boucher as receiver. Utley, in this case, will be pulled in from center field to second base and Carlson will patrol the garden. This gives Coach Gardner a chance to bring along the maximum amount of hurlers—just in case.

Navy First Outdoor Play

The team up to date has held all its practices in the cage and tomorrow's game will be the first outdoor playing this year. In comparing this year's team practices in the cage with those of other years, the prospect looks good for a snappy club. However, only these first outdoor games will truly show whether the Gardner aggregation will click with its present line-up or not. Those men who are remain-

Museum Plans Series of Broadcasts

WCAX to Present Vermont History

The Museum of the University of Vermont plans to start a series of radio programs to be given over Station WCAX of Burlington. These programs will include chapters in the development of the state of Vermont, and will also include musical programs in cooperation with the musical department of the University. The selections for this will be secured from the library of musical recordings of the University, for several months. Later, it is hoped that some of the more prominent artists of the state can be secured for fifteen-minute recitals. Senior students of the music department will act as commentators.

Under this new arrangement, a special theme song for the museum, which has been chosen from the concerto for two violins in D minor, the second movement from the Bach concerto. H. B. Eldred, assistant director of the Museum, will act as master of ceremonies.

So far, the plans call for a series of broadcasts alternating factual history with musical programs. At the end of these, time will be allowed for announcing Museum activities of timely interest to the public.

The programs, so far scheduled, are as follows: April 4, a historical program, "April 4, 1640," by H. B. Eldred; April 11, a musical program with Mary Lechnyr of Burlington as commentator; April 18, a subject in Vermont history "Samuel de Champlain's Lake," given by Prof. L. W. Dean of the English department; April 25, will herald another musical program with comments by Joyce Gardiner of Cabot; on Memorial Day, a broadcast will be presented featuring observance of the holiday.

Dr. Pierce Addresses Pre-Medical Society

Dr. H. B. Pierce, Professor of Physiological Chemistry at the Medical College, was the guest speaker of the Pre-Medical Society, Tuesday evening, March 26. E. M. Burkowitz '40 presided.

Doctor Pierce spoke to the Pre-Medics on the topic "Biochemistry and Medicine." Beginning with the relative composition of the human body in terms of water, protein, fat, ash, and carbohydrate (the actual cash value of which is very small), Doctor Pierce said that this composition must be maintained and is done so normally by means of food. Food includes protein, carbohydrate, fat, ash, water, vitamins, condiments (flavor) and organic acids. In sickness medicine and therapies is added to this. The function of these substances is to furnish energy and maintain a functioning structure. Doctor Pierce discussed each of the items under food, stating their importance in the bodily functions.

In an interesting discussion of the vitamins Doctor Pierce traced the derivation o fthe term "vitamin" from vital (essential to life) and amine (compounds similar to the amines). The term "vitalamine" was later shortened to vitamin. Vitamin K which is related to the napthoquinones is

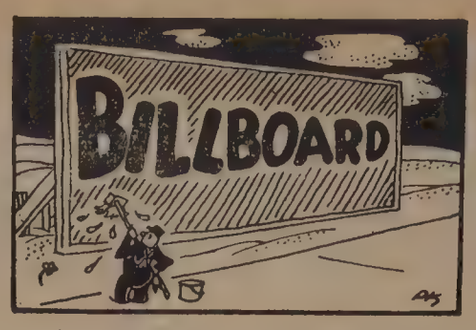
Æsop and Frankenstein

We do not know for sure, but we think Æsop had something to say about biting off more than you can chew—and Æsop was pretty nearly right. We also recall the comparatively current cinema thriller entitled "Frankenstein," and together, hand in hand, Æsop and Frankenstein should tell us a thing or two about the situation at the University of Vermont.

What the situation is should be obvious after a cursory review of the second semester social calendar. Starting with Kake Walk, which takes up at least four weeks of concentrated effort, continuing with interfraternity basketball, interfraternity bowling, interfraternity relays and track meet, interfraternity baseball, intramural wrestling, fraternity formals, all of which take up the students' spare time, between his work on larger ventures such as Interfraternity Sing, military drill squads, Junior Week, the program for the second half of the year is exceedingly crowded, and lest anyone think differently, these so-called extra-curricular activities are actually providing ready channels into which primary efforts of fraternities are directed and are tending to regulate study to a secondary position in campus life. That diversion is necessary is undeniable. The old adage of poor Jack who worked all the time, never played, and became a dull boy is a tragic testimonial of this, yet unless the over congested condition of the second semester's social calendar is relieved, there will be many Jacks, and quite a few Jills who will very unceremoniously leave school.

And to what may we attribute this tendency to supplant school work with outside activity? We feel that Traynor Trophy competition is in part responsible, for in their effort to "cop the cup" more than one fraternity has replaced scholastic standing by other interfraternity competition, and the smaller fraternities, who feel as they should that it is their duty to fully cooperate by participating in such things as Interfraternity Sings and Kake Walk must make every man carry a double burden, which, in many cases proves too heavy, with catastrophic consequences.



At a recent meeting of Key and Serpent, the donors of the Traynor Memorial informally discussed this problem with respect to the feasibility of eliminating all interfraternity competition, except scholastics in the Traynor race. Whether this is rushing to the other extreme or not is hard to tell, but certainly Traynor competition has become the monster that is overcoming its own ideals and original benefits, and certainly the time is ripe for something that will alleviate the situation.

It has been suggested that Junior Week Peerade be omitted this year from Traynor competition. We wholeheartedly agree, but rather than to go out on a limb, we propose the rearrangement of the calendar's functions, with Interfraternity Sing, for example, occurring in December and the possible shifting of other second semester activities to the first semester.

Any fraternity man or independent who has wholeheartedly participated in the competition of the second semester realizes that a great strain is placed upon him, and his school work suffers in consequence. Each fraternity must feel, deep in its heart, that Traynor Trophy racing does exert a definite pressure on the group, a pressure of dubious value when weighed against the effort and money put into some of the Traynor ventures, and so back to Æsop and Frankenstein again. The question is, are we biting off more than we can chew, and is the Traynor Race growing so big, that the spirit, ideals and principles behind it will be hidden and lost?

We think so.

During the Easter vacation, the Billings Library will be open week days, except Saturday, from 9-12, 2-4. Saturday, 9-12 only. The Library will close on Saturday, March 30, at 1 p.m.

Reserved books may be taken out for the vacation period provided the Library has more than one copy.

The first day after vacation, April 9, the rehearsals for the Brahms Requiem will start according to the regular schedule.

Rehearsals for April 9: Choir, 7-8 p.m.; Brahms Orchestra, 8-9 p.m.

There are only two and one-half weeks of rehearsal time left for the Brahms Requiem and it is important that members of both chorus and orchestra realize that this is a great undertaking and that attendance at every rehearsal is imperative.

SPRING RECESS will begin Saturday, March 30, at 11:50 a. m. and close Tuesday, April 9, at 7:30 a.m.

On Saturday, March 30, classes in the three academic colleges will meet in accordance with the following schedule: (Military Science) 7:00-7:50; 8:00-8:50; 9:00-9:50; 10:00-10:50; 11:00-11:50. Classes in the College of Medicine will meet at the usual hours.

The above dates and hours should be carefully noted to avoid unnecessary absences.

The attention of all students is called to the following extract from the University Regulations:

II, 4 b "A student who absents himself without permission (secured in advance from the Dean of his college), from any University exercise or exercises on the day immediately preceding or following a recess or holiday may be placed on probation." Note that this applies to all classes March 30, not merely the last, and all classes April 9, not merely the first.

Students desiring excuses for absence should note and be guided by the following statement:

(1) Application must be made in writing, must indicate mail address, must set forth reasons in full and be filed with the Dean of the College in which the student is enrolled (men) or with the Dean of Women (women), not later than Wednesday, March 27, at NOON. The responsibility for proper and prompt filing lies with the student. It should be clearly understood that belated applications will not be considered.

(3) Excuses will be granted to men by council vote; to women by the Dean of Women. EXCUSES WILL BE GRANTED ONLY FOR IMPERATIVE REASONS. Students should not waste their own time or that of the Council by citing trivial reasons.

(3) A student contemplating employment should file a written statement, signed by the employer on his letterhead, indicating date and time of day of reporting, place where he is to work and the nature of the work to be done and setting forth the need of reporting prior to March 31.

(4) Applicants will be advised of council action not later than Thursday evening, March 28.—ELIJAH SWIFT, Secretary.

DEAN SWIFT has received a letter from the Rutland Railroad stating that on Saturday, March 30, the "Green Mountain Flyer" will leave Burlington at 12:25 p. m. instead of the regular time of 12:15 in order to accommodate those members of the student body who may wish to travel by this train. The Railroad is providing ample coach accommodations.

There will be an old-fashion dance by the Newcomers Club of the ladies of the faculty of the University. Attempt has been made to invite members of the faculty, other than members of the Newcomers Club, who might be interested. If there are any interested who have not been contacted please get in touch with Mrs. D. C. Henderson, 2789-M, or come to Southwick, March 29, at 8.30 p.m. It is necessary to charge a small fee to defray expenses.

Fifty Women Students Attend Southwick Party

Dean Simpson and Assistant Dean Harris entertained about fifty women students who board themselves Monday evening at Southwick.

This party was for the girls to get better acquainted with each other. It is thought that these girls miss many of the college activities.

Games were played and three one-act plays were presented by the girls. Refreshments were served at the close of the party.

Alliance Française Sponsors Lecture

The French people laugh to keep themselves from crying, according to Mr. Laurent Sibuet who spoke Tuesday night at the Fleming Museum. Speaking of French humor from Voltaire to the present time, he commented upon their attitude toward trouble and sadness. Even now with all their troubles the French still laugh.

The lecture, which was given in French, was sponsored by the Alliance Française. After the lecture Prof. and Mrs. R. F. Doane entertained the speaker and several friends at their home on Cedar Lane.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

In response to your "Student Opinion" column of March 22, 1940, I would like to say that the survey mentioned was one of national character and in no way applies to the University of Vermont. It was stated in this article that differences in cigarette preferences were due to the influence of advertising in several sections of the country. Here at Vermont Chesterfield cigarettes seem to be the most in demand, not only among the students but among the residents of the city of Burlington in general.

We have no evidence that any Vermont student participated in the "Student Opinion Surveys of America" and therefore we should not consider ourselves included in this survey, which is supposedly a cross-section of American college students. Although we have not the actual figures to prove Chesterfield's popularity, we may say with a reasonable amount of assurance, that it is by far the most popular cigarette on this campus.

The results of this race are not yet attainable at the time of writing, but the marks they are shooting at are a 10:24.4, record college run, set by Cliff Harwood in 1935, and an interfraternity record of 10:48, made by O. T. Wood way back in 1925.

now used for the prevention of hemorrhage in operations.

Doctor Pierce considered the rôle of hormones in the body and mentioned a skin disease, psoriasis, with which certain unsaturated acids are connected. A new hormone, lipocaic, found in the pancreas with insulin is believed to aid in reacting against the acids that cause this malady. The carcinogenic (cancer producing) compounds are closely related to the sex hormones and it is thought that an overproduction of sex hormones might produce the proliferation of cells that constitute cancer.

The lecture by Doctor Pierce served to familiarize the pre-medics with the extreme importance of biochemistry in medicine.

Rugby Squad Plans To Play Harvard

Having formed a tentative schedule, the University of Vermont Rugby Club has commenced preparation for its initial game. This game, to be played against the Harvard University junior varsity combine on April 20, is the result of efforts of a small but compact unit of men. The group, led by Mr. F. J. Fayette and Mr. H. J. Macomber, Jr., two practicing attorneys in Burlington, and assisted very capably by P. J. Whalen '40 have succeeded in gaining membership for the club in the Eastern Rugby Union.

After a lapse of a year, the club was brought into view again by having rugby selected as a fall elective for men taking Physical Education. The response to this was gratifying, what with some thirty men electing. Halfway through the football season, this group gave an exhibition of the game between the halves of the Vermont-R. P. I. football game. Received rather well—but soon forgotten—the exhibition brought the fall rugby season to a close.

Continued efforts, however, brought about two things. The first was admittance to the Eastern Rugby Union, and the second was the formation of a tentative schedule.

Twenty men are now looking forward to their first outside encounter. This will be followed, in all probability, by games with Long Island University and the Boston Rugby Club. By the time May rolls around games will have been arranged with outside teams to be played at home. Centennial Field will be the scene for these encounters.

Those experienced, who have answered the call, are led by P. J. Whalen '40. Experience is added to the squad by the presence of H. G. Twitchell '43 who has played rugby in England at Tonbridge school.

Why Orchids?—Or Something

If we thought that boys had any use for orchids we'd trot downtown and buy one for Charley Webster but we just can't picture him with an orchid. You know this orchid-giving business has always bothered us anyway. We just try to picture a person's actions upon receiving one and it makes us dizzy. Or maybe its being 12.30 has something to do with it (being dizzy we mean). Say, where were we? Oh, yes.

Well orchids or no orchids, this department thinks Charley will stand praising. The seeming ease and savoir-faire with which he breaks records is nothing short of miraculous. It used to be that he was content to break one record at a time, but that was when he was a timid freshman. Now that he is a sophomore he is getting bolder and bolder; last week just for the heck of it he broke two records. Some people, we guess, just don't know where to stop—which is a darn good thing for track here at U. V. M.

And since we are on the subject of records we might mention that Bob Johnstone set a new record in the weights and Frank Taylor ditto. Sapristi—it must be a disease—or better still an epidemic (we hope).

Points South

That hand we're waving (we are waving our hand, you know) is a farewell to Larry Gardner and his diamond cohorts. Somewhere down in Maryland is their first port of call—Annapolis, home of America's midshipmen. The squad will probably not go undefeated but who cares—it will be great training for a tough schedule. (Methinks we said this before but as Shakespeare once said "What's new"—for further information see the song title by the same name.) Even then we expect that the team will come home with several scalps in their belts—that pitching trio of Pesarik, Belardinelli and Hart looks mighty good to us, ditto the whole squad. We'll be right with them via the Burlington Free Press and other newspapers. All aboard for the South.

Why Not?

Switching suddenly to a new subject—it's amazing how we can jump around—and at the risk of being or appearing oratorical and crusading again we should like to mention badminton. It seems that the sport has grown in popularity here at the University. More and more people are electing it in their phys. ed. courses. Why not some sort of badminton team? Ed Keenan and Louis Pine, two of the leading badminton players here, are greatly interested in making this sport something more than just an intramural affair. Ed Keenan has been informed that Middlebury would be interested in scheduling matches with other schools, also St. Michael's and other schools might be interested. Why don't all you badminton fans get together and boost the idea? After all, it's a fast sport that everyone can enjoy playing. Competition with other schools would add to the fun and sport. The more sports we have the more chance there will be for all students to take part in this side of school activities. A little interest and cooperation by the students and wonders can be done. A year ago rugby wasn't even mentioned on this campus; today plans are being made for a match with Harvard. Why not badminton?

Jiminy Cricket!

If you've seen "Pinocchio" you know that Jiminy Cricket hops around something like this ⩘⩘. Well that's what this column reads like—if you get what we mean. Lack of sleep and more than anything else approaching-vacation-feeling is responsible. Therefore we say—see you in ten days. Maybe we'll have had some sleep by then—maybe. Au revoir.

Strong Pitching Staff

This year's roster displays one of the strongest pitching staffs in several years. Pesarik, Hart and Belardinelli are back from last year's team and Akley, Carlson and Conrad, up from the frosh nine, show outstanding promise. Boucher, another vet, will do most of the receiving, occasionally being relieved by Spasyk, who doubles on the sack and mask. Lawrence at first is expected to go places this year since being moved in from the field. Healy, Taylor, Utley, Sysko and Wood are assigned the heavy batwork. The batting order for the trip is as follows: Sysko, Spasyk, Wood, Taylor, Utley, Lawrence, Healy and Boucher.

Following the Navy game the squad is scheduled for eight other southern games:

Bowling

The Green and Gold bowling tournament has been started, but will not really get under way until after the spring vacation. However, the first round of this tournament was played Wednesday afternoon at the Bowlaway Alleys. The following girls have been chosen for the first teams:

Green—Klinger, Harte, Taylor, Wray and Wright (sub.).

Gold—Holcomb, Skinner, Crane, Witham and Gordon (sub.).

Basketball

There was a misprint in the last CYNIC issue concerning the honorary varsity basketball team. Sophie Gorney's name was misspelled. Sophie has shown outstanding work on the Gold team, being high scorer in most of the games, and earning with merit her place on the honorary varsity team.

Catholic Girls Meet To Form Organization

Last Sunday, March 24, a large group of girls met at Southwick to form a Catholic Girls' Organization. They were under the temporary leadership of Sally Rome '42 and Helen Witham '42. Their first meeting is to be held April 14, at 2.30, at Southwick. A short talk and discussion will be given on "Catholicism and Medicine" by Dr. Katherine McSweeney. All Catholic girls are invited to attend.

Debaters Active In Two Contests

The Oregon style of cross-examination debate was used for the first time on this campus on March 19 when the men's debating team opposed the team from Washington and Jefferson College, Washington, Pa. The debate, held at Fleming Museum at nine o'clock, was of the non-decision type. The speakers for Vermont, who upheld the negative of the Isolation question, were H. A. Durfee '41, and J. G. Cohen '42.

On Wednesday evening, March 20, the men's team defeated a team from Canisius College, Buffalo, N. Y., by a 2-1 decision, in a debate held at Fleming Museum. The debaters who so ably upheld the negative for Vermont were A. J. Caldwell '41, and F. Bardossi '42. This debate was the last home debate but not the close of the season. The team is now preparing for the Easter trip which will begin on April 1 when the men will leave for Kingston, R. I.

The freshmen ended their season on March 18 with a home debate against the Northfield High School debaters. The women's debating team is now in the far South, with a debate scheduled for tonight at the University of Miami.

Sally Rome Wants To Meet Gable

Sally Rome '42, U. V. M.'s candidate for the title of All-American College Queen, was born in Newburgh, N. Y., which she says is a very famous town. However, the family—there are eight other children—soon moved to Dobbs Ferry where she has lived ever since. There were many factors that led her to choose U. V. M. and she is very glad that she followed them.

Her activities on campus are numerous. She is a member of Delta Delta Delta; secretary of the Y. W. C. A.; a member of the Sophomore Aides; a member of John Dewey Club; and co-manager of tennis for W. A. A.; this year's Kake Walk Queen and one of the winners of last year's Beauty Contest.

She has many hobbies to fill any spare time that she may have. They include sports of all kinds, keeping her scrapbook up to date, reading, caring for her two turtles, and doing social service work. She admits a great liking for peppermint ice cream, and claims that the thing she enjoys least is writing letters. After she graduates she wants to be a social worker, preferably having to do with children.

Naturally, she is very pleased to represent the University of Vermont in this contest, but she seems to feel that she won't get as far as California. However, if she does go, she is particularly eager to meet Loretta Young and Clark Gable. She says she made her last dramatic effort when she was in the sixth grade.

Don't forget to watch for the May 3, 10 and 17 issues of Movie and Radio Guide, because her picture will appear therein.

Omicron Nu Pledges Elizabeth C. Isham

In a special ceremony Monday, Elizabeth Isham '41 was pledged to Omicron Nu, national home economics honorary society whose members are chosen for scholarship, character and promise of future attainment. Laura Dustan '40, president of the Vermont chapter, performed the ceremony at the Mary Fletcher Hospital where Elizabeth is recovering from an appendectomy. A native of Burlington, she is a member of Sigma Gamma.

Rev. Bryant at Chapel

The speaker at Chapel on Wednesday, March 27, was Homer C. Bryant, secretary of the Baptist State Convention. His talk dealt with how human suffering may be lessened by the realization that there are others everywhere suffering from similar burdens and afflictions and it was indeed a privilege to hear him.

The choir gave a fine rendition of Alleluia, Amen.

Pilgrim Fellowship Plan Novel Party

No regular meeting of the Pilgrim Fellowship will be held until April 14. All those who will be in Burlington on March 31 will be interested to hear Miss Ruth Isabel Seabury of the American Board Boston, Mass., speak at the Chittenden County youth conference. This is to be held in the First Church and there will be afternoon and evening sessions.

On April 14, a "Kiddie Party" is planned for the first meeting after vacation. The announcement is made now in order that some costumes suitable for children six months to ten years in age may be secured during the vacation period Come back to school all prepared for the good time that is planned for you

Illustrated Lecture On Art to be Given

Sheldon Cheney Noted Authority is Speaker

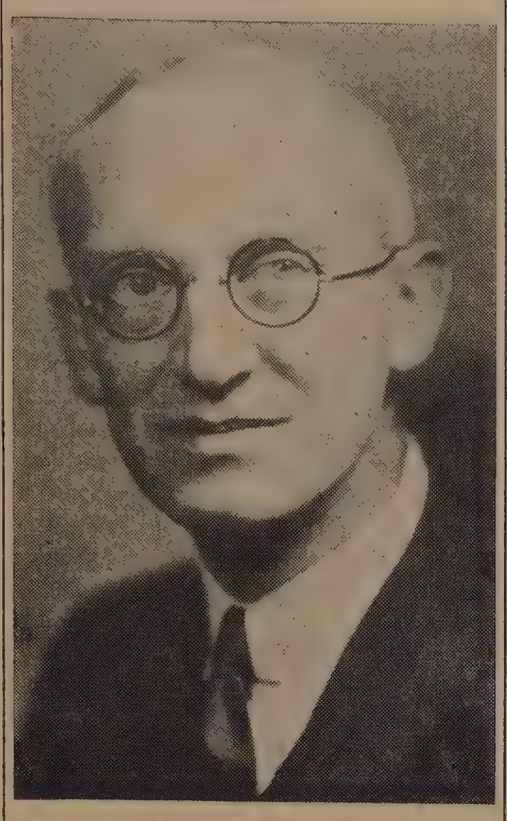
Sheldon Cheney, acknowledged by the civilized world as a progressive spirit in the Little Theatre movement, and as an authority on modern art and the history of art, will give an illustrated lecture at the Fleming Museum this coming Thursday evening at 8.00 p.m. The public is invited. His subject will be "Art and Life Through 30,000 Years."

The lecture will cover much the same ground as Cheney's "A World History of Art," published in 1937. This book brought fresh acclaim from educators and critics alike, being hailed as "extraordinarily rich" and the author as "most judicious." Beginning with the remarkable drawings found on cave walls of the Reindeer Age (late Glacial Age), Mr. Cheney traces the story of the chief arts through all the major civilizations down to the current modernism. Mr. Cheney uses his fine critical capacity to interpret, rather than present a pedantic analysis. Art in its infinite variety is taken up in due order and perspective. No aspect is ignored; the magical and monumental, pictorial and symbolic, decorative and functional, all find interpretation.

There is a wealth of slides to go with the lecture. The pictures have been selected for aesthetic value as well as to show the various genres and changing trends in the expression and appreciation of art.

Folowing graduate work at Harvard under Prof. George Pierce Baker, Mr. Sheldon Cheney took a leading rôle in the progressive movement, founding in 1926 the Theatre Arts Magazine and editing it until 1920. Among his books are "The Theatre: 3,000 Years of Drama"; "The New World Architecture' "Expressionism in Art"; and collaborating with his wife, "Art and the Machine."

Professor Merrick To Speak to Scribes



Prof. Elliot Merrick of the English department has added cement to the newly organized Scribes. Besides being a writer of some renown, Professor Merrick is capable of handing over valuable experience by way of mouth to aspiring writers, as well as to those who appreciate good literature. He will again be present at the next Scribes meeting, to take place at Southwick on Friday, April 12. The newly chosen co-chairmen for the two next meetings, Phyllis Lake and Huddee Zwick, intend to start the meeting on the dot of 7.15. It has been necessary to start the group at an earlier hour due to the intriguing congeniality that is aroused which forces some of the attenders to clash with Student Union regulations.

There is nothing of the "tuxedo or tails"; everything is spontaneous. Some members bring poems, short stories or essays to be read and criticized; others merely bring themselves to listen and help criticize constructively. The discussed subjects literally soar, but there is always an attempt made to land them to the realm of the practical.

Doris Jareckie, secretary, has been working on the file for the original manuscripts; and the club plans to work in conjunction with Winnowings, the campus literary journal, during the coming college year. Any student is welcome at the meetings.

There will be an important rehearsal of all Independent girls taking part in the Intersorority Sing at Music Building, Wednesday, April 10, at 4 o'clock. If you are unable to come get in touch with Nora Hill or Marjorie Southworth.

Y. W. C. A. Elections To Take Place

Mary Letta Root and Shirley Gray Nominated

Nominations for officers for Y. W. C. A. for the year 1940-41 are as follows: President, Shirley Gray '41 and Mary Letta Root '41; vice-president, Joyce Gilman '43 and Elisabeth Kulka '43.

Both Shirley Gray and Mary Letta Root have been very active in Y. W. C. A. work. This past year Shirley has been vice-president of the organization. As social service chairman she has been in charge of sending girls down to help at the Settlement House. She has also had charge of the girls doing typing and other secretarial work at the Howard Relief Agency and has been chairman of women's deputation.

Both Candidates Well Qualified

Mary Letta is at present social chairman and as such has helped with programs for all special events which have included the Freshman Mixer and the Doll Dressing Bee. She had complete charge of the women's vesper service last fall.

Jane Judd is now assistant social service chairman. She has charge of the girls who entertain at the Old Ladies' Home once a month, of the girls who amuse babies at the Elizabeth Lund Home once or twice a week, and of collecting old clothes from college girls for distribution to the needy.

Sally Rome is now Y. W.'s secretary. She is also in charge of the Handicraft Club at the Settlement House. Sally helped in collecting money for the Far Eastern Student Relief Fund.

Two Frosh Women Nominated

Joyce Gilman and Elisabeth Kulka have both been members of the Y this past year and have taken part in several of the social service projects. Elisabeth has been in charge of a special group of girls at the Settlement House who meet once a week.

Both the girls nominated for treasurer have been active in Y work, especially social service. Betty Cooper was in charge of the Handicraft Club for a while and Anne Cohn is in charge of the pre-school group at the Settlement House.

Elections will take place either this Friday, April 12, or on Monday and Tuesday, April 15 and 16. Voting will be from 8.30 to 12.00 in the morning and from 2.00 to 4.15 in the afternoon. There will be a notice on the Y bulletin board as to the exact date. It is hoped that all Y. W. members will remember to cast their votes.

Freshmen Win in Play Competition

Tragedy Directed by Doris C. Kinsley '40

The Dramatic Club presented its annual class plays on Thursday evening, March 28, at Southwick Memorial. The class of '43 won the competition with a dramatic tragedy, "When the Whirlwind Blows," much to the approval of the large audience.

The freshman women combined an admirably written play, very capable directing, and excellent acting to hold the audience's interest throughout, and to receive the votes of Prof. J. T. Metcalf and Prof. L. W. Dean, the judges. Doris Kinsley '40 was responsible for the direction and did a professional job. Janet Hackwell as Madame Androya, the aristocrat; Betty Preston as Anna, the revolutionary; and Huddee Zwick as Josefa, the peasant, played their parts excellently, portraying each character clearly. An appropriately grim setting and sound effects rounded out an enjoyable play.

Charlotte Hall '40 and Louise Mann '41 directed the junior girls' play, "Overtones," a psychological drama on the humorous side. Mary Letta Root as Harriet, a cultured lady of society, together with her real self, Hetty, played by Ruth Connor, combined to entertain the audience and the dual personality of Margaret and her real self, Maggie, played by Elizabeth Doton and Jean Stewart, respectively. A rather slow pace marred the capable acting and clever lines.

The sophomore play was a farce, "No Man's Land," directed jointly by Margaret Crowley '41 and Jane Lyons '41. Catherine Peterson as Emmy and June Swanson as Peg managed and mismanaged the love affairs of Mayrose Kelty as Helen and Barbara Butterfield as Janet. The subject matter suffered by comparison with the other plays, but the same high level of acting was evident here.

Louise Mann '41 announced the plays, and Professor Dean, with the aid of his hat and a persuasive talk, launched the collection taken to cover the expenses of the performances.

Student Union to Elect Officers

Voting for the officers of Women's Student Union will take place on Thursday and Friday, April 11 and 12, in the Old Mill. The following is the list of nominations:

President—Dorothy Emerson '41 and Laura Hawley '41.

Chief justice—Margaret Crowley '41 and Jane Allen '41.

First vice-president — Barbara Gallagher '42 and Frances Abel '42.

Second vice-president — Louise Davis '42 and Harriet Nelson '42.

Secretary—Barbara Burns '43 and June Hoffman '43.

Treasurer — Mary Germain '43 and Janet Hackwell '43.

Scholarship chairman — Judith Perry '42 and Joan Agard '42.

The addition of a town representative will give the town girls a vote on the Student Council, which is the executive body for Student Union.

"Scribes" will hold its next meeting April 12 at Southwick. Professor Merrick of the English Department will be present. Everyone invited.

Women Debaters Win Two Contests

Participate in Seven Debates on Southern Hop

The women's debating team of the University of Vermont returned to the home campus Monday evening after a successful Southern trip during which they were given the decision in two of three decision debates, and lost the third by a narrow margin. Two Eclipses at the Same Time

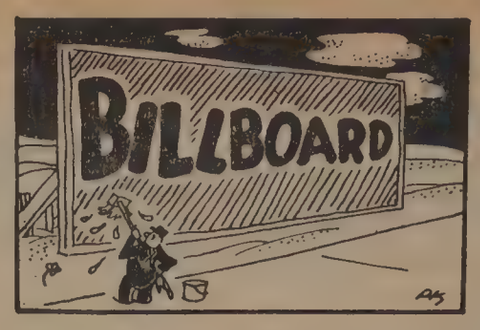
Vacation is over. For nine brief days studies and textbooks have been eclipsed by pleasure, recreation and relaxation. Now we all must "dig in" and study so that our light will shine in the classrooms. Only six short weeks remain before finals which, with the publishing of the preliminary examination schedule, seem to loom large in the future. Although young men's fancies may turn toward other things at this time of the year, the Vermont professors keep their attention focused on the students' work.



Our short vacation may be compared to the eclipse of the moon which occurred Sunday when two million people along a path which stretched from Southwestern Texas over the southern part of the country saw an annular eclipse. Not until 1994 will such a phenomenon take place again. A thin, glowing ring of sun was always visible which was enough to outdazzle the aureole with its streamers which is called the corona.

Because they could not see the corona and because what little they could see taught them little that they did not already know, astronomers in previous years would not have becomed excited by an annular eclipse. This year, however, the major observatories sent expeditions to the best localities and minute measurements were made with super sensitivity. Dr. A. M. Skellet's "Coronaviser," a kind of television apparatus which has a small artificial moon of its own to complete the task of obscuration that was beyond the real moon on this occasion, was used to make excellent pictures of the eclipse. An excellent tribute to the engineering skill of the astrophysicist are his new means of studying and measuring the sun which has always baffled man.

Our sun, which is a fairly typical star in that it is neither especially big nor especially bright, gains its claim to attention from the astronomer's standpoint because it is only 93,000,000 miles away and because it takes only eight minutes for a ray of the sun's light to reach us. To college students a study of the sun is important because it is the giver of light and life and without it we would not be here. If we knew more about "this pygmy of the orbs," its great red tongues of flaming hydrogen, its sudden flash spectrum, its infra-red radiation and the effect of the "sun spots" which have been causing such havoc with our radio reception, it would make it possible for us to understand better our environment and eventually increase our understanding of the ninety-two different kinds of matter with which we are familiar.

Sunday the moon glided between the earth and the sun causing an annular eclipse. For nine days our vacation glided between studies and more studies and eclipsed work with pleasure.

Now the phenomena are over. Let's all "come out" and shine.

May 15 and 16 have been set as the dates for the Annual Military Inspection this year.—E. Swift, Secretary.

All suggestions for Orchid of the Week recipients should be put in a box for that purpose in the CYNIC office.

There are only two and one-half weeks of rehearsal time left for the Brahms Requiem and it is important that members of both chorus and orchestra realize that this is a great undertaking and that attendance at every rehearsal is imperative.

Rehearsals for week of April 8:
Tuesday: Choir, 7-8 p.m.; Brahms Orchestra, 8-9 p.m.
Wednesday: Men's Glee Club, 7-8 p.m.; Women's Glee Club, 8-9 p.m.
Thursday: Brahms Chorus, 7-8.30 p.m.; University Orchestra, 8.30-9.30 p.m.

Girls don't forget to get that date for Mortar Board Dance, April 13.

Mrs. F. D. Carpenter Addresses I. R. C.

The International Relations Club met at Southwick on March 27 with T. R. Huntley, the retiring president, presiding.

The first step of the meeting was the election of permanent officers for the year 1940-1941. The results were as follows: President, Margaret Drum; vice-president, Frank Crimmin; secretary, Anne Bottomley; and treasurer, John Evans.

Prof. M. H. Laatsch made the announcement that during the ensuing year Mr. George L. Millikan will assume the position of faculty advisor for the club.

Mrs. F. D. Carpenter spoke on Finland, a subject with which she is extremely familiar, having spent a large part of last summer in that vicinity.

Mrs. Carpenter stated that Finland was a great deal like our own Vermont, the weather and scenery in the mid-summer season being similar, the people well poised and efficient. The Finnish language, she observed, is an oriental language, having no articles, no prepositions, and twenty cases; the average word consisting of from 20 to 50 letters. Mrs. Carpenter then commented on Finnish sports, Finnish customs, music (Finlandia in particular), art, architecture, hospitals, and schools.

Following this discussion she passed many brilliantly-colored postcards among the audience and accompanied them with numerous interesting bits of information.

The meeting was brought to a close following a period of discussion during which Mrs. Carpenter answered many questions concerning Finland.

Quotable Quotes

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"I am deeply sympathetic with youth today coming to earning age in a jobless society. I do not wonder that they meet in congresses. . . . I wish to put no obstacles in their way. It is not so important what we think of them. I just wonder what they think of us as they look about a world in ruins—two-thirds of all the people involved in war, and here in peaceful America millions hungry, miserable and hopeless. It seems strange that in an American Congress it should be pertinent to remind members that our capacity to reflect, observe, and study, and to use our minds leads some to accept a political philosophy foreign to others. Who constituted anyone in this free system the judge of other men's opinions?" Oregon representative Walter M. Pierce has his own perspective on the A. Y. C. Congress.

The Band Wagon

By BOB JOHNSON

Laugh of the Month

Guy Lombardo (Lumbago?) attempting to swing via the trombone route—all pretty ludicrous especially with the vacillating tone of the sax section, lack of a rhythm section. Our verdict—honey, sugar, too clogged by tar to mean anything or amount to anything.

Mourn of the Month

The apparent passing of the Jimmy Lunceford band from the center of things. Part of this may have been caused by the departure of Sy Oliver, trumpeter and arranger. However the stuff is still there as it has been for the past ten years. The band has a different style but has made no recent releases.

The old Lunceford records stood up among the best sellers. Remember "Charmaine," "Coquette," "Annie Laurie," "The Old Gray Mare"?

Artie Shaw Again

This new outfit which is on the fire will be interesting to hear and watch. It might be enhanced by the appearance of Mrs. Shaw (Lana Turner, please), who copped no small share of the Shavian publicity—playing really smart.

This new combo will feature bassoon, oboe, bass clarinet, etc., giving plenty of extra color in the reed section as well as being well rounded in the other departments.

Kicking the Local Gong Around

Harry Harris apparently is never at a loss for a better than average brass man. After losing one to Tommy Reynolds another pops up equally as good.

"Father" Jarvis, whose subtlety on the black and whites has always gotten us.

"Tempie" Conner, whose horn emits the wild passages which typify the current hot style for brass men. A real boot!

Juke box operators tell us that Miller, Barnet, and Savitt lead the takes on local machines.

Earl "Red" Hartigan joining the Stearns crew on the 88 replacing Chum Reynolds who found the books bearing down on him. Red plays some fine piano also on the subtle side.

A new tenor man in town—Mel Gullis—a Barnet idolizer.

Casa Loma

Hitting its old stride at Dailey's "Meadowbrook." Some tempos are a little too rigid but on the whole the goods are there—their sweet stuff is the mellowest. Kenny Sargent and Pee Wee Hunt consistently rate up in the top notches of all vocalist.

Ebony Etchings

A coming sepia swing outfit is the K. C. Harlan Leonard band. Its first waxings are fine—a bit like Basie and feature fine rhythm, trumpet, tenor, and alto.

Buck Clayton's trumpet (Basie) gets better and better as his range of moods seems to be increasing.

A fine thing—the apparent spirit of cooperation in most of the better black bands.

Louis Armstrong—"Confessin'"—featuring his usual horn of plenty and some fine Higginbotham trombone as well as a brilliant alto—and one of those husky pleading vocals we go for.

Savitt Socks

His latest releases top the month's flow of wax. The best Austin trumpet yet, fine trombone and excellent ensemble work.

James' Jumpers continue in their popularity under their new label.

Krupas Kats are plenty solid—a great kick.

Goodman suffering from sciatica but still commercial enough to "love jitterbugs." His current slump (so-called) is due only to few records, no scheduled time on the air waves and the band's vacation.

Georgie Auld—forsaking his "All Stars" and taking his tenor over to Tommy Dorsey where his former boss, Bunny Berigan, toots also.

Philbert knocking no out with his own version of "Farewell Blues," featuring his own imbecilic grin. . . . Where we came in . . . . 'cause here comes Gran with a fryin' pan.

Girls Basketball Season at End

Green Team Victor In Final Tournament

With windy March blowing to a close our basketball season, we look back with admiration at the accomplishments in this field of sport, not only here on our own campus, but all over the state. First, off campus, in the high schools of Vermont—Miss Barbara Crowe of our Physical Education staff, who is chairman of the State Basketball Committee and Miss Olive Krogman, who is chairman of the Official Rating Board have been holding demonstration meetings for the interpretation of basketball rules all over the state. These meetings are sponsored by the State Basketball Committee and this year thirty schools were contacted. Miss Crowe and Miss Krogman worked out a map, distributing centers at the most suitable places, so that all the surrounding towns could attend these meetings and practically the whole State of Vermont would be covered. There were two meetings held at Burlington, and one meeting at each of the following centers, at North Bennington, Bellows Falls, Hartford, Cabot, and Lyndon Institute.

New Rules

At these meetings the difficult rules as well as the new ones appearing this year were demonstrated to the high school students and coaches. The girls then practiced these rules on the basketball floor, and tried to understand them by working them out by themselves. A supervised game followed in which the girls were stopped for fouls, corrected, and advised as to the best method for overcoming their difficulties.

Mary Howe assisted at a few of these meetings. Mary received her national official rating which gives her the privilege of refereeing any girls' game not only in Vermont but in the whole United States. These examinations which are extremely difficult are under the direction of the Woman's National Official Rating. Three of the meetings for examinations were held this year, two at Burlington, one at Rutland. More will undoubtedly be held next year, as this movement is progressing rapidly, and there have been many new developments just in the past few months.

The sport of basketball is among the athletics under the direction of the National Section on Women's Athletics of which Miss Rosemary Hazard, also of our Physical Education staff, is the Vermont representative, and is therefore in charge of all the athletics in this state for the Section of American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

The purpose of these meetings, demonstrations, and examinations is to spread throughout the State of Vermont correct interpretations of girls' rules and to have the students as well as the coaches understand these rules.

Green Team Winner

Under the National Survey of Girls' Basketball, it has been noticed particularly that here in Vermont basketball does not play as important a part in the gym activities of the high schools as formerly. Many concentrate on individual and outdoor activities, and on intramural participations. Therefore there are distinct advantages in taking courses in techniques which the college offers in preparation to going out in these schools and having to coach many of these sports.

The Interzone Basketball Tournament really began the competition side of basketball rolling, and aroused great enthusiasm among the dorms, which really had a good opportunity to play under the double elimination system. Two town teams were formed, and at present Town Team (2) is the victor of this tournament, until the game in which Robinson is challenging their title, is played, they are the holders of the cup.

The Interzone Tournament was followed by the Green and Gold Basketball Tournament, in which the Greens were victorious. The Green first team won two out of three games, while their second team won the first two contests. From this tournament the honor Varsity basketball squad was chosen:

First Team—Shaw (Green), Gorney (Gold), Metcalf (Green), Shine (Green), Holden (Gold), Gallagher (Green), Libbey (Green), Peterson (Green), Taylor (Gold), Savage (Green).

Second Team—Spiwak (Green), Wishart (Gold), Quimby (Green), Kelty (Green), Livingstone (Gold), Bates (Green).

And so our basketball season closes, with pleasant thoughts for past accomplishments, and bigger plans for future ones.

CHAPEL NOTES

The speaker at Chapel on Wednesday, April 10, was Bishop Vedder Van Dyck, the head of the Episcopal Church in the State of Vermont. Bishop Van Dyck is a resident of Burlington and was formerly the pastor of the local Episcopal Church. Bishop Van Dyck gave the students a very commendable address which was most provocative in its thought.

Ruth Maurice Gives Pointers on Reading

"How long did it take you to do your history?"

"Me? About twenty minutes."

"Gosh, I spent two and one-half hours on it last night after I finished reading psych. and even then I wasn't through. I just can't understand how you crack an "A" in the course while I barely get an "X" and study five times as long as you do!"

It is Fran, your roommate, who is complaining. There are thousands of Frans all over the American campuses . . . . thousands of students who are unable to read with speed and thorough comprehension. Fran is not a dull student; merely there is lacking the necessary mastery of a fundamental tool: that of reading. There is more to reading correctly than meets the eye. Fran got started wrong in reading and has never been put right.

Miss Ruth Maurice '38, who took special honors in psychology here at U. V. M. and was one of the most active members of her class, now teaching psychology at Knox School in Cooperstown, N. Y., is working for her M. A. degree at Harvard for specializing in problems of remedial reading. Miss Maurice was in Burlington a while ago, and besides giving a fine talk and leading discussion in the Adult-Child Relationship group sponsored by the Burlington branch of the A. A. U. W., she has given some practical advice to the CYNIC for helping the University student in his studying habits.

If there is the will to do it, anybody's reading can be improved. Naturally, the more one reads the better reader will result. Miss Maurice pointed out that the best way to start is by reading that which holds the attention. If you enjoy a good detective story, read it; if a historical novel is more to your liking, read that. Your mind will stay on the material and you'll get through quickly. After practice, this will eventually carry to your studying.

Miss Maurice stated that a small vocabulary may be enlarged by other means than memorizing a list of words with their meanings. Jot down the new words that you run across in your reading and look them up later. Of course, if that new word should hold the key to the sentence, turn to the dictionary immediately. She stressed that a word is useless unless it is actively used. Make up sentences to go with the word, if you must; but let it become a part of you. Even your roommate might at the same time augment his paleological glossary!

Do you know how to concentrate? A lot of eyes turn a distant blue when the math book is opened up, and odd little thoughts hold sway and permit only fringes of the mathematical meat to be grasped. Concentration is a habit; self-training is absolutely essential. Ruth Maurice said to stop working as soon as the mind starts to wander. Think through what your mind has been worrying about and then return to your work. There is bribing sort of a way to develop the habit of concentration. Miss Maurice had a friend who tried it and is now able to concentrate an entire afternoon without being distracted. She used to promise herself a piece of candy after each half-hour of concentrated studying, gradually working it out so that there was a sweet meat only after every two hours and so on until her goal was attained. A brisk walk or eighths of oranges might be substituted for the candy if desired.

Miss Maurice stressed that there is an inner speech, called vocalization, that is detrimental to many reader. Some people can actually be seen pronouncing each word as they silently read and other people do not actually move their lips but do pronounce each word to themselves. As the mind works much faster than the voice, when each word is pronounced as it is read, the mind is forced to slow down to the voice and poor reading results.

Many students read "Gone With the Wind" in the same manner that they read their Political Science lesson. There are four definite kinds of reading, each with their own particular purpose. Skimming is used when you want to find out the general contents of the book, as when browsing in the library, or when finding out the date of something. Rapid reading is for fairly easy material or for substances that is already familiar. It permits you to get the main idea and disregards the details. The Normal Rate of Reading allows you to get the details when there is no particular rush. It is for the fairly easy material. The Slow Careful Rate, or mulling, is for the material that is of high degree of difficulty, when it is necessary to note the minor points.

By the CO-EDITOR

As we go to press, the Cats have played the first seven games of their Southern trip, with N. Y. U. still to be opposed. . . . Of course the fact that the Cats dropped five out of the seven contests is just as expected. In fact it is surprising that they did win two. The Cats got the call over the Navy 3-2 and after losing the first game to William and Mary, "Lefty" Pesarik turned around and hurled Vermont to a lopsided victory.

Looking at batting averages (up to the N. Y. U. game) we see where only two regulars are batting over .300—both men, Spasyk with .333 and Wood with .304, are sophomores. In number three spot is Sig Sysko with a .280. . . . The Cats have already been getting their share of hard knocks from Lady Luck. Bob Carlson pitched a four-hitter against William and Mary but lost. And when Bellardinelli comes through with a five-hitter against George Washington, the Cats don't hit and are whitewashed 3-0. . . . The series with William and Mary now stands at one game apiece. Two more games to be played at Centennial some time next month will decide the issue.

* * *

The frosh got Fuzzy's call the beginning of this week and will take over the cage for the time being. . . . Any month now the snow will be off Centennial and outside practice will be possible.

* * *

We see by the papers that not only Vermont athletes have their scholastic troubles. Four Boston College football greats including Charlie O'Rourke, one of the outstanding backs of the East, and Lou Montgomery, the colored flash, have been cut by the "professor's axe" and have been rendered ineligible. . . . But we are taking all bets that the latter will all be in uniform by the early part of next fall. Make-up exams, summer school, etc.—you know what we mean.

* * *

Recently there was some talk about replacing interfraternity baseball with a soft ball or indoor baseball league. Although we don't object to baseball as an interfraternity sport, we think the switch idea is pretty good. The diamond on the back campus isn't exactly another Centennial, and the larger ball used in soft ball might get away with it.

* * *

Start looking through the drawers for the old ticket book. Less than two weeks now before three U. V. M. teams get into full swing. The tennis, track, and baseball teams take one more trip and then open at home. . . . By the way, speaking of schedules—finals are less than six weeks off!

We Are Not Alone

By "POOH"

Vacation is over. (This is a Sad and Mournful Tone.) There is n't really much to say. (Also Mournful.) There isn't really much we can do about it, except carry around a portable pin with us, to wake ourselves up with, every so often—to plunge ourselves, as it were, back into the world of reality with a loud bang. In other words, Spring Fever is upon us.

What we really need is a NOISE, to wake us up:

"Noise, by Pooh"

"Oh, the butterflies are flying,
Now the winter days are dying,
And the primroses are trying
To be seen.
And the turtle-doves are cooing,
And the woods are up and doing,
For the violets are blue-ing
In the green.
Oh, the honey-bees are gumming
On their little wings, and humming
That the summer, which is coming,
Will be fun.
And the cows are almost cooing,
And the turtle-doves are wooing,
Which is why a Pooh is poohing
In the sun.
For the spring is really springing,
You can see a skylark singing,
And the blue-bells, which are ringing,
Can be heard.
And the cuckoo isn't cooing,
But he's cucking and he's ooing,
And a Pooh is simply poohing
Like a bird."

There. That was A. A. Milne—so don't blame me. Which, therefore, gives me the privilege of saying: "Hey! Not bad! In fact, wonderful!" (Which is what comes of not writing your own poetry.) Try it sometime.

Incidentally, this is the best time for writing poetry. Just try looking around you. Ethen Allen Park is the best place. You'd be surprised how many ascetic individuals you can run across in one day, wandering around in the mud searching for violets with a rapt look upon their faces and a notebook and pencil clutched in one hand. It's a mania. It is often, in fact, at this time of year that young men decide to grow their hair. Possibly to keep their necks warm in case of unexpected spring frosts. They often, also, effect the open-necked shirt, and take great care of their hands. Even among football heroes this has been known to happen.

So take heed! Invade ye the five-and-ten for notebooks—and pencils. Green ones. The color must be symbolic and poetic. Put on your rubbers and mob the wooded hills for inspiration. Trample not upon the violet nor the skunk cabbage, for great is the disaster which descends upon him who desecrates the beauties of Nature!

Allons!

Men Debaters Take Southern Trip

Team at Four Engages In Seven Contests

The men's debating team left Monday, April 1, for their annual extended southern trip. The trip was a two-thousand-mile one, which carried them through six states. The varsity debaters that made this trip are: A. H. Becker '41, manager; H. A. Durfee '41, assistant manager; T. R. Huntley '41; and J. G. Cohen '42. Following the newest policy in intercollegiate debating, six out of the seven planned debates were of the non-decision type. The first college to entertain them was Rhode Island State College and then the team headed westward into New Jersey where they competed against Drew University and Upsala. The men then headed south competing against Muhlenberg College, Randolph-Macon College, Georgetown University, and Washington College.

All of the men who made the trip have had much experience in the art of debating.

Arnold Becker gained much experience by debating on the Burlington High School team and this is his third year of debating for the University of Vermont. Mr. Becker is the only member of this year's team that participated in last year's spring trip, and he also went to Chicago this year to a debating conference where he represented Tau Kappa Alpha, honorary national forensic society, of which he is president.

Taze Huntley has had two years of college debating plus a great deal of experience gained on the Morrisville High School team from where he received a scholarship for debating.

Harold Durfee has also had a great deal of experience in debating. He comes from Bennington High School where he earned his early experience. He was on the freshman and sophomore Bailey Cup teams and he is now assistant manager of the squad.

Julius Cohen started debating when he was but a sophomore at Burlington High School in which year he received a University of Vermont scholarship for proficient debating. Mr. Cohen then debated two more years in high school before attending Vermont when as a freshman he competed in the Bailey Cup debate. This is Mr. Cohen's first year of varsity debating and he shows promise of becoming one of the best debaters in the college.

Army Training Airplane in Night Flight

This remarkable night aerial photograph of a Basic Training airplane was made by the Randolph Field, Texas, photographic department while the plane was flying at an altitude of several thousand feet over the main airdrome. This is the type of plane used for the secondary phase of training of flying cadets at the Air Corps Primary Flying School. Future pilots of Uncle Sam's air force receive a thorough course in the art of flying military aircraft before their graduation from Kelly Field, the Advanced Flying School. After their primary course, which will be given at nine civilian flying schools throughout the nation, the flying cadets are transferred to the "West Point of the Air" for training on these BT-9s, as shown in the photograph. Sixty-five hours of flying time, more than half of which is solo, will be acquired by each cadet during Primary Stage. Then, in the larger, faster basic trainers, they acquire additional skill in aerial acrobatics, night flying, and blind flying. During the course of instruction at the various schools, the flying cadets are paid $75 per month, in addition to their food, slate blue uniforms, lodging, etc. Young men between the ages of 20 and 27 are eligible for enrollment as flying cadets. Those who have at least two years of college education are exempt from a written mental examination. Upon completion of the course in flying, the cadets receive their coveted "wings," insignia of a military airplane pilot. They are then commissioned as a Second Lieutenant in the Air Corps Reserve and transferred to tactical stations of the Air Corps for duty.

Rollins' Offers Courses in Drama

A notice has come to the CYNIC which is of interest to all students interested in drama. At the start of its fifth season, the Rollins Studio of Acting announces a new eight-month season of classes in Acting, Playwriting, and the Dance. Heretofore the Studio season has been confined to July and August at East Hampton, L. I., with public performances there at the John Drew Memorial Theatre. This year the Studio will extend its season through September and October, at East Hampton, and four months additional at the Rollins Studio in New York, making eight months in all.

The course will culminate in a series of productions in a New York theatre. While the Studio expects pupils to enroll for the course of eight months, some pupils will be taken for two-month periods.

The Rollins Studio offers an opportunity to act and study under the best teachers. Margaret Webster, director of Maurice Evans' productions, will be one of four guest directors at East Hampton. Director of production for the season will be Curtis Canfield, director of dramatics at Amherst College. Fifty-two percent of the graduates of the Rollins Studio are currently earning their living in the theatre.

Students of the Rollins Studio are chosen in a series of auditions held by Leighton Rollins, director of the Studio, at schools and colleges throughout the country, or by interview. The Rollins catalog can be obtained by writing the Studio at 106 East 52nd Street, New York City.

Word has been received from the American Guernsey Cattle Club, Peterborough, N. H., that the Guernsey cow, U. V. M. Rosebud 478236 has completed an Advanced Registry official record in Class FF (two and one-half years old) of 12,898.4 pounds milk and 669.9 pounds butterfat. Rosebud was bred, developed and is owned by the Vermont Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College, Burlington, Vt.

The sire of Rosebud was Green Meadow Reliance whose daughters have been making excellent production records in the Station herd. The record of Rosebud is the highest completed by one of his daughters to date. However, two others have finished records with over 600 pounds butterfat while four have produced between 500 and 600 pounds as first calf heifers. One of these, U. V. M. Rosalind, holds the state record in Class GG with 585 pounds butterfat.

Women's Debating

Everywhere they were greeted with southern hospitality. They were entertained at two teas, one at Florida Southern College which was given by a sorority and a fraternity of that campus, and one at Westhampton College of the University of Virginia which was sponsored by the college debating society. At Miami the team was entertained at a gala dance.

At Richmond, Va., the U. V. M. women met the U. V. M. men. The baseball team was playing there on the same afternoon that the women's debating team arrived in Richmond, so the debaters watched part of a game. At Washington, D. C., the women received cards of admission to the Senate from Senator Austin of Vermont and paid a visit to the Senate Chamber.

The women who made the trip are all veteran debaters and also active in other organizations. Gertrude Johnston, enrolled in the General Science course, is a member of Tau Kappa Alpha, the honorary forensic society and won the Butler Debating Prize her sophomore year. Her other activities include Y. W. C. A., Outing Club and Home Economics Club.

Eleanor Brody in the Secondary Education course was the women's editor of the CYNIC and belongs to Delta Phi Epsilon.

Gwendolyn Blanchard in the General Science course, is a member of W. A. A. and the Badminton Club.

Spring Formals Held By Six Fraternities

In an effort to hasten the spring recess or perhaps as a parting salute to winter, several fraternities held their formal dances on March 29. All told, six houses were the scenes of gala affairs.

Johnny Davis and his Pennsylvanians made Sigma Phi Place their first stop after the Hotel Penn in Philadelphia. N. D. Tucker '42 was in charge of the formal dance.

R. P. Davis '41 directed the affair at the Delta Psi house, where the popular Catamounts held forth. Dr. and Mrs. Robert Jenks and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Perry were the chaperones.

At the Phi Sigma Delta house S. Levine brought Henry Press and his orchestra and original decorations to the formal dance. Prof. and Mrs. L. S. Rowell were the chaperones, and R. Levine and B. Glass were responsible for the decorations.

Many of the alumni were present at the formal at the Kappa Sigma house, where Red Dower's orchestra furnished the rhythm. J. R. Royer '41 was in charge, and Prof. and Mrs. F. D. Carpenter and Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Putney chaperoned.

Prof. and Mrs. Holden Bickford were the chaperones at the semi-formal victrola dance held at the Tau Epsilon Phi house. J. M. Rome, C. Joseph and N. B. Hyne, all '43, were the committee in charge.

Alpha Tau Omega greeted the spring with a semi-formal dance directed by A. D. MacDonald '40. The New Vermonters furnished the music for an enjoyable evening.

Choir, Glee Clubs And Orchestra to Present "Requiem"

Hilda Ohlin, Soloist; Chorus of 100 Voices; Enlarged Orchestra

As a climax to the year's musical activities the Choir, Glee Clubs, and Chapel Orchestra are planning to present Brahms "Requiem." This performance, which will take the place of both the Lenten-Easter concert and the opera usually put on in the spring, will be held in the Ira Allen Chapel on Sunday evening, April 28. There will be no admission charge and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Due to the magnitude of this work, the chorus has been greatly augmented by interested faculty members and townspeople, totalling about 100 singers. Miss Hilda Ohlin, of New York City, has been engaged to sing the soprano solo part. The orchestra has also been increased to about forty-five pieces, to fit the requirements of the original score, by the addition of players from the Vermont Symphony and from New York and Boston.

All the efforts of the musical organizations have been devoted to this undertaking since early February and cencentrated rehearsals will be held during the remaining two weeks.

It is the first time that this great work has been given in its entirety at the University, although separate movements have been sung on several occasions by the University Choir in the past.

Sororities Plan Spring Formals

With the approaching warm weather, many sororities on the hill have commenced planning their annual spring formals, but as yet all arrangements have not been completed.

Plans for the Alpha Chi, Pi Phi, and Sigma Gamma formals have not as yet been disclosed.

The Alpha Xi formal will be held at the Burlington Country Club on Friday, April 26, 1940, with Jack Collins' orchestra furnishing the music. Eleanor Shandoff '41, assisted by Grace Weaver '40 and Eileen Rooney '41, is in charge of all arrangements.

The Tri-Delt formal, under the direction of Joené Agard '42, is to be held April 26, 1940. Although the location of the dance has not been determined, the local Catamounts will provide the music.

The Thetas are holding a dinner dance at Oakledge Manor, Friday, April 26, 1940; Cliff Agnew's orchestra will play. Louise Mann '41 is chairman of the committee in charge.

The Delta Phi Epsilon Sorority is holding its annual spring formal on the roof garden of the Hotel Van Ness. Henry Press and his orchestra will play, and Jean Saul '41 is in charge.

Further arrangements are to be made in all cases, either in committee or at ensuing meetings.

Mrs. Mills, Delegate At Art Conference

Mrs. Isabel Clark Mills last week represented the University at the Eastern Arts Association at Philadelphia. She also visited many of the art galleries in New York City. Mrs. Mills reported the trip as a most interesting and profitable one and brought suggestions, material, and reports of the conferences to others in the Art Department.

Barse Miller Speaks to Vermont Californians

The Californian alumni of the University of Vermont met last week in Los Angeles for a reunion and banquet. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Barse Miller. As a speaker, Mr. Miller spoke enthusiastically about the summer campus of the University of Vermont and also concerning his favorable impression of Burlington. He will return to the University summer session in July, bringing with him another Californian artist, Rex Brandt, who also will teach painting in the summer Art Department.

Alpha Chi's Attend National Convention

Meet Cary Grant in Williamsburg, Virginia

Ten active members and three alumnae of Alpha Chi Omega attended the national convention held in Williamsburg, Va., on April 5 and 6. Betty Cole was the official delegate and was accompanied by Mary Howe '40, Elizabeth Watts '40, Betsy Marlow '40, Barbara Smith '41, Louise Peters '40, Eleanor Bayley '40, Elizabeth Doton '41, Miriam Fiske '42, Margaret Wishhart '43, Ruth Jones, Olufa Jones and Elaine Griffith.

Visit White House

The girls left on the first Monday of our vacation and traveled to Ridgewood, N. J. Tuesday evening they arrived in Washington. They spent Wednesday there, visiting the Supreme Court, Senate, House of Representatives and the Library of Congress. The girls had passes to different rooms in the White House, given to them by Senator Austin. They took a two-hour tour around the whole city, seeing many unusual sights which slip the gaze of a casual sight-seer. Thursday they traveled through the western part of Virginia on the Skyline Drive and in the afternoon visited Thomas Jefferson's beautiful home, Monticello, and the University of Virginia. The girls spent the night in Richmond.

Friday morning they reached their destination, Williamsburg, the quaint city so like the old South of Civil War days, the home of William and Mary College. The girls enrolled at the convention in the morning, and attended a luncheon that noon held in Williamsburg Lodge, at which the National Vice-president Mrs. Adams spoke. In the afternoon everyone went on a sight-seeing tour around Williamsburg. A dance was held that evening at William and Mary College with a rather special attraction—Cary Grant attended this dance and even stood in the receiving line, so all our Vermont girls met him personally! He is there at Williamsburg making the new picture, "The Tree of Liberty."

Attend Conferences

Saturday was filled with conferences, which were attended by the delegates. The formal banquet was held Saturday night at Williamsburg Inn, with Dorothy Brown Reitz, a former national councillor as speaker.

Sunday the girls visited old Jamestown and Yorktown, then headed north again, after their too brief week of beautiful new scenery, meeting new people, and enjoying a touch of the spring we are just beginning to feel this week.

Delta Delta Delta will hold a fashion show tomorrow at three o'clock at Southwick. Six models will show spring fashions in sports, afternoon, and evening wear.

Barbara Butler and Jean Young are co-chairmen of the show. Refreshments will be served. The price is fifteen cents for students, twenty-five cents for others. The public is invited.

Catamounts to Play For Mortar Board

Women Invite Men To Semi-formal Dance

Saturday night at Southwick, Mortar Board will sponsor a gay spring dance. The theme, very appropriately, will be April showers and, of course, there will be novel decorations.

The chaperons will be Dean Simpson, Prof. and Mrs. G. Dykhuizen and Prof. and Mrs. H. B. Bickford.

The Campus Catamounts will provide the music, and refreshments will be served by members of the Y. W. C. A.

Florence Wade '40 has charge of programs and tickets, and Betsy Marlow '40 and Mary Nelson '40 have charge of decorations.

Tickets may be obtained in the Old Mill on Friday and Saturday, or from any member of Mortar Board.

It is hoped that a large number will turn out to welcome spring by dancing amid the "April Showers."

French Club Plans Important Meeting

There will be an important meeting of all members of Le Cercle Français on Thursday, April 18, at 7.30, at Southwick.

At this meeting the constitution which was drawn up by a committee under the direction of Gunhild Isackson '40, will be amended and adopted. There is to be a new system inaugurated and all interested in its execution and in the future of the French Club are invited to attend. It is hoped that Le Cercle Français will become an important and necessary supplement to the modern language courses.

All members and those who wish to be invited to join next year must be present. Light refreshments will be served.

Collegiate Opinion Favors Campus Sing

"What do you think of having a campus sing?" is the question which in the last twenty-four hours has been put to many students by an inquiring reporter, and the answers have been almost entirely favorable to the idea. One sophomore added that she hoped it could be held on the chapel or library steps on a fine May evening. "Of course," everyone qualified his answer, "it would only go over if everyone were behind it," and Greek-letter people felt that the cooperation of all fraternities and sororities, independents and "Vt." and "Y" groups would help immensely. On other campuses, when spring fever gets the majority of the student body under its spell, campus sings have become an institution which is greatly enjoyed. Further suggestions can be sent to the CYNIC office.

Doctor Sisson to Speak On People of India

The Rev. O. H. Sisson will speak to the Methodist college group Sunday evening, April 14. The topic of the evening is "Interesting Personalities in India." Morris Newton Wins A.S.M.E. Contest

The seniors of the Mechanical Engineering Department present every year articles on some topic following their studies. On April 10, four of these papers were read at the A. S. M. E. meeting. Morris Newton's topic on the "Influence of Notches on the Fatigue Stress of Welded Joints" was selected by the society as the one containing the best material, arrangement, and having the best deliverance. Newton will deliver his article at the annual meeting of Student A. S. M. E. which is to be held at Worcester Polytechnical Institute. The prize offered has not as yet been announced. The paper that received second place was written by Forrest Johnson. The topic chosen was the "Determination of Stress in a 4-Fluted Screw-tap by the Photo-Elastic." The other papers read were by Elliot Hawkins on "Gasoline Distillation" and Louis Zambon on "Vapor Jet Refrigeration."

The meeting was presided over by the chairman, Richard Story. Professor Susskdorf, faculty adviser, and Professor Lucarini attended.

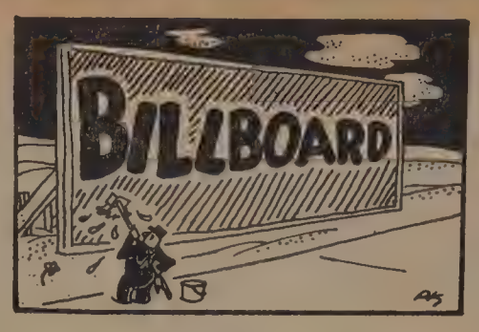
A Young Man's Fancy

Well known and beautiful is the large, imposing campus of our University. Justly proud should all Vermont students be of the college grounds which are considered by many qualified observers to be one of the most outstanding and beautiful in the eastern part of the United States. It has recently been called to our attention, however, that several sections of our campus are in a deplorable condition due to the neglect of the students to give the proper consideration to the University grounds.



Because the majority of students have a thoughtless, indifferent and careless attitude toward the campus lawns, it has been suggested that the students at Vermont sponsor a "Campus Week." Such a program would necessitate the wholehearted cooperation of the entire student body in compliance with the "Keep Off the Grass" signs on the campus and an active program of work on the part of the students to improve certain sections of our campus. For example, the sections between the "Old Mill" and the sidewalk around the building could be spaded by Aggie students, rolled by volunteers under the direction of Key and Serpent, planted with shrubs, bulbs and grass by the women under the supervision of Mortar Board and the undergraduate honor groups and roped off by other volunteers under the leadership of Gold Key. Various other groups on campus such as the A. S. C. E., the civil engineers' society, might investigate the possibility of restoring the University's fountain for use.

The success of such an extensive program would rest entirely with the degree of cooperation which the students and the faculty gave to the plan. On several campuses, the University of Connecticut, for instance, classes are suspended for an entire day during which all the students and the faculty work to improve the campus grounds. Professor Carleton, who formerly was on the University of Connecticut faculty, told us that he spent an entire day shoveling gravel in a pit for that University's poor campus roads which were greatly improved by the work of the students and the faculty. If wholehearted support and enthusiasm for a "Campus Week" program were shown by Vermont students our University administrative officers might approve a similar campus improvement plan here.

Pride in the University grounds and its buildings and an aroused consciousness of the students' obligation to use the campus walks would result from the proposed program for campus improvement. Cooperation from the honor societies and the spirit and enthusiasm of the U. V. M. students would be absolutely essential. If such a program were well executed the cost of grass seed, shrubs and other material for such a program would not be large and might well be divided between the many student organizations or members of the faculty on campus. Careful planning and organization on the part of the honor societies in charge would necessarily have to accompany a successful "Campus Week." The agricultural students might select the shrubs, grass seed and flower bulbs to be used and local nursery owners could be consulted.

The best time for "Campus Week" we believe, would be the week of April 28 with special activity centering on May 1, Founder's Day at the University.

The new Waterman Building is to be an excellent improvement to the beauty and the facilities of our campus and to the administration and Mr. Waterman we owe great thanks. Why can't the Vermont students also take an active part in campus improvement by sponsoring and cooperating in a "Campus Week"?

"Scribes" will hold its next meeting April 12 at Southwick. Professor Merrick of the English Department will be present. Everyone invited.

May 15 and 16 have been set as the dates for the Annual Military Inspection this year.—E. Swift, Secretary.

All suggestions for Orchid of the Week recipients should be put in a box for that purpose in the CYNIC office.

Girls don't forget to get that date for Mortar Board Dance, April 13.

Tickets for the Mortar Board dance will be on sale in the hall of the Old Mill all day Saturday.

Southwick will be open all Sunday afternoon. From 3.00 to 4.00 there will be a coffee hour with John Houpis playing the piano. Everyone is invited to come and spend the afternoon.

All instructors are invited to Open House at the Museum, Sunday, April 14, 5.15 p.m. as well as the associate professors, assistant professors and professors who have received invitations by mail.

SCRIBES will meet on Friday, April 12, at 7.30 p.m. in the South Lounge at Southwick. ANYONE interested in writing or discussion is invited to come. Bring along something you have written, Scribes!

W. P. A. Publishes Free Press Index

President Bailey Writes Foreword for Volume

The first volume of the Index to the Burlington Free Press, covering the years 1848-52, has been published by the Historical Records Survey of the Work Projects Administration in Vermont. The volume, now available for use by research investigators, forms a complete index of news items and editorials and vital statistics, with a representative index of advertising.

It is estimated that there will be about twenty volumes to the completed index. The work is being done in cooperation with the Billings Library of the University of Vermont under the general supervision of Merrill C. Perry, state supervisor of the Historical Records Survey. The immediate work on the index is being directed by Joseph T. Stearns and a staff of fourteen assistants. The advisory committee for the University consists of Prof. Leon W. Dean, chairman; Prof. Paul D. Evans, Prof. Julian I. Lindsay, and Miss Helen B. Shattuck, Miss Mary R. Bates, Mrs. James E. Donahue, librarians.

The Historical Records Survey undertook the making of this index to facilitate the work of historians and other professional and casual research workers. Volume one contains some 330 pages of references which touch upon the personalities and interests which were attracting the attention of the State in the late forties and early fifties of the last century. It constitutes an excellent compendium to the life of Vermont at that period, shows the connection between the affairs of Vermont and those of other states, and reflects the attitude of Vermont toward national questions. The exhaustive indexing, with reference and cross-reference, places the mass of information for the first time at the ready disposal of those who are interested in it. The inexpensive but attractive format, including clear mimeograph typography, makes the book the more usable.

The volume carries a foreword by Pres. Guy W. Bailey of the University of Vermont, a preface by Mr. Perry, and a comment by Harrison J. Conant, state librarian.

Other issues of the Free Press are now card indexed up to 1880, and the second volume of the series is nearly ready for publication.

Volunteers Wanted For Social Work

Girls, if you are interested in volunteer social work this coming summer, here is your opportunity! Many of the Boston hospitals are asking for clinic clerks, librarians, and volunteers who will work with convalescent children in the wards. Several of the settlement houses will be having summer schools beginning July 5, and volunteers are needed to teach such things as arts and crafts, music, dancing, dramatics, cooking, sewing, and athletics. Other agencies which have not sent in requests yet may also need volunteer workers.

This is a splendid opportunity for training in social work as well as for serving others. If you would like to make tentative plans for such volunteer service this summer, you may secure registration blanks from the office of the Dean of Women.

Class Dissects Snakes, Alligators, Opossums

This week the Comparative Anatomy class in the Zoology Department is studying and dissecting three embalmed opossums and two alligators that have just been received from Florida. As the opossum belongs to the marsupial family it was especially interesting to find seven small opossums in the pouches of each of the two females.

The rest of the class is working dissecting snakes.

New Book Published On Vermont Houses

A State Committee has been maintained by the Fleming Museum of the University of Vermont in connection with its Old Buildings Project, whose most recent accomplishment has been spring publication of the book "Old Vermont Houses," by Herbert Wheaton Congdon of Arlington. Comprising the State Committee for the Old Buildings Project are Miss Catherine Bingham, St. Johnsbury, Horace Brown, Springfield, Miss Anna Benedict, Windsor, Herbert Wheaton Congdon, Arlington, Mrs. William Englesby, Burlington, Miss Shirley Farr, Brandon, Mrs. Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Arlington, John French, Burlington, Arthur Healy, Middlebury, Mrs. Harold Mayforth, Barre, H. Quotable Quotes

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"The chaos of modern civilization can scarcely be attributed to acts of God. The structure of human society is not rotten but sound. It is the defective utilization of human culture that lies at the bottom of our present trouble. The most exigent task in education today is the appraisal of the biological and consequent social capacity of the individual so that his proper niche—if any—can be found and he can be stuffed into it." Harvard University's anthropologist, Dr. Ernest M. Hooton, presents his own blueprint for Utopia.

News Correspondents To Hold Conference

Town newspaper correspondents and press secretaries of women's clubs will hold a conference Friday, May 3, at Southwick Memorial. The University is cooperating with the northwestern district of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, which is sponsoring the conference. Mrs. Harriett C. The conference will begin at ten o'clock with the mornings devoted to talks on newspaper work, particularly as it applies to local and club correspondents. In the afternoon until four o'clock several discussion groups of individual problems will be conducted. Two of these groups will consider the writing of personals and the technique of news stories. The other groups will inclube club news, photography and feature stories. The program will be arranged so that several of the discussion groups can be taken in during the afternoon by those attending.

U. V. M. Holstein Sets New Record

The Advaced Registry record for U. V. M. Mutual Polly, received from the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, shows a 365-day, Class B, production of 26,976.3 pounds milk and 863.8 pounds butterfat at the age of three and one-half years, setting a new Vermont State record from this age and class.

U. V. M. Mutual Polly is owned by the Vermont Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College. She is a daughter of Newmont Mutual Ormsby Lad, one of the best-known sons of Ormsby Sensation 45th. It was the excellent production of this group of cows, all of the herd of milking cows except three are daughters of Lad, that made possible last year's herd test average of 12,740 pounds milk and 457.9 pounds butterfat.

At twelve years of age Newmont Mutual Ormsby Lad was classified "Excellent," while three of his daughters, including Polly, have classified "Very Good," four "Good Plus," and one "Good," all as first calf heifers.

Vermont Alumnus To Give Address

Walter Dane '03 is Founder's Day Speaker

The speaker to deliver the address at Founder's Day this year, the annual ceremonies of which will be held at the Ira Allen Chapel, on May 1, will be Mr. Walter Alden Dane, a Boston lawyer, who graduated from the University of Vermont in the class of 1903. Two years ago, when the alumni presented a portrait of Prof. Frederick Tupper, head of the English department here, to the University, Mr. Dane made the presentation speech at the alumni luncheon celebrating the occasion.

Mr. Dane was born at Newport, Vt. He studied for two years in the George Washington Law School, after his graduation from the University of Vermont. In 1937 he received an honorary degree of LL.D. from Norwich University. As a climax to his educational career, he was also elected a member of Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic fraternity.

He is now associated with the law firm of Abbott, Dane, Buffum and Howe, in Boston. Early in his career he served in the important position of confidential secretary to the United States Secretary of the Navy. In 1912 he was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar, and began practice in Boston. His home is located in Newton Center, Mass.

Mr. Dane is an associate member of the Association of the Bar, in New York City, and also a prominent member of the American and Massachusetts Bar Associations.

Baseball Team Returns From Southern Trip

Beat Navy 3-2 Tie New York U.

The U. V. M. baseball team has just returned from its annual trip to the sunny (?) climes of the warm southland, which by now has become ivy clad tradition at the University of Vermont.

Each year a squad of about fifteen baseballers makes the pilgrimage which initiates the first outdoor work of the season for the Vermont nine.

This year a squad of fourteen men, Coach Larry Gardner, and co-managers Robinson and Schofield journeyed South, and returned with a record of five losses, two wins, and one eleven-inning tie. On paper this may seem an unimpressive record, but it is absolutely no indication of the real appearance of the club. The outfits which finished the opposition on this trip all had seen at least two weeks outdoor practice, as compared with exactly no outdoor work for the Catamount nine. This accounts for the seemingly large number of errors made by the Vermont team.

On April 1, the Cats played outdoors for the first time this season when they met the Navy team at Annapolis. Instead of the warm southern climate expected, a rainy day was waiting for them.

Navy drew first blood in this game by making a tally in their half of the second, but the boys from up North showed real baseball stuff by immediately retaliating in the third inning with two runs. The game then became a pitcher's duel until the seventh when Vermont scored again.

In the ninth the latent Midshipmen suddenly came to life and almost capsized the boat. With Vermont holding a two-run lead and two men down for Navy, Niles got a life on a dropped third strike. Bradford and Warner followed with successive singles, scoring Niles. Falcover filled the bases on a walk. At this time things certainly looked black for "Lefty" Pesarik standing in the pitcher's box. Werner, a powerful hitter held hitless all afternoon, strolled to the plate. "Lefty" proved himself to be a real pitcher by forcing him to ground out and end the game.

Batteries: Vermont—Pesarik and Boucher. Navy—Schoerbaum, N. C. Smith and Anderson.

Score by innings:

U. V. M.	0	0	2	0	0	0	1	0	0—3

With this stimulating win under their belts the Northern boys came up against a perenially powerful Maryland outfit. Belardinelli got the nod to take over the pitching chores. Anse was not yet limbered up from his winter's hibernation, however, and yielded fifteen hits before Akley came in to help him in the sixth inning.

Belardinelli got through the first inning without giving a hit but in the second frame he was blasted for seven runs before the side could be retired. Two Vermont errors, plus three singles, and a double by Maryland in this inning did not aid the cause any.

Maryland got three runs off Akley, who relieved Anse at the start of the sixth, on the four passes, a single and a double.

This game did not show the mound staff to any advantage, but the Catamounts played an exceptional game in the field, holding up well defensively, committing but three errors in the seven innings played.

Sig Sysko, a sophomore who is a heavy striker, knocked out two singles in this game. The first Vermont marker of this game was made by Johnny Spasyk in the fifth inning when he traveled to third on a fielder's choice and was knocked in by one of Sysko's singles.

Sysko got his other single in the eighth and scored on a booming drive to right field by Frankie Taylor.

Against the University of Virginia, pitcher George Hart went the full route for the rambling Vermont men. He protected a one-run lead for them until the fifth canto when the Virginians staged a two-run rally that gave them a lead they stubbornly would not relinquish.

"Ace" Healy started the scoring parade for Vermont by occupying first base on an error in the third inning, Marty Boucher flied out, George Hart singled, pushing Healy to third. Johnny Spasyk followed with his first of two hits to score Healy, and took second with Hart scoring when his single was muffed in the Virginia outfield.

Sig Sysko fouled out to Harman, but Wood gained a life on an error, Spasyk scoring. Frankie Taylor blasted the longest drive of the day to right field, scoring Wood from first, but Taylor was nipped by a perfect relay from right field as he attempted to stretch his three-bagger into a home run.

Virginia collected three runs in the third, two more in the fifth and made the score 7-4 in the seventh.

Vermont made a valiant attempt to recapture the lead they once had. Spasyk drew a walk but was forced at second by Sysko who moved on to third base on Hazen Wood's double down the left field line. Sysko scored after Taylor's fly was caught in the deep outfield, and Utley's single drove Wood across the plate. Boots Lawrence grounded out to end the rally.

Virginia tallied again in the eighth and another Vermont uprising in the ninth was squelched, leaving Lefty Pesarik and John Spasyk marooned on the sacks.

Batteries: Vermont—Hart and Boucher. Virginia—Nichols and Harman.

Innings:	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9—R
Vermont	0	0	4	0	0	0	0	2	0—6
Virginia	0	0	3	0	2	0	2	1	*—8

Sophomore Bob Carlson, starting his first varsity game for the University of Vermont, hurled a brilliant four-hitter against William and Mary in the first game of a two-day series.

Only one man of the southern team was able to get to Bob all day, but he was enough to cause Carlson to lose a heart-breaker by a score of 3-2. Jim Howard was the man, and he hit a double in the first and a triple in the third that accounted for all three Indian scores.

Vermont scoring was done in the sixth inning. Taylor led off and grounded out. Utley reached second on an error. Boots Lawrence grounded out. Both Healy and Boucher drew walks and the versatile Carlson smashed a clean single to center field to score Utley and Healy. Spasyk ended the inning by striking out. From then on the pitchers had the situation well in hand.

Spasyk sparkled in the field, cleanly handling four chances.

Batteries: Vermont—Carlson and Boucher. William and Mary—Merritt and Chalko.

Innings:	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9—R

In the second game of the series with William and Mary, Vermont showed tremendous batting power, that until now was latent, by hitting three hurlers out of the box while amassing sixteen hits. Lefty Pesarik pitched the entire game for Vermont and allowed only six scattered hits.

Spasyk again starred in the game, both at bat and afield. He collected a single, a double and a homer in five trips to the plate. He handled four fielding chances without error and made two putouts. Singles by Wood, Taylor and Pesarik gave the Cats two runs in the first, and Spasyk's long homer to left field drove in Boucher for two more U. V. M. scores.

Again in the fourth Spasyk proved himself the hero of the day by smashing out a double to bring in Lawrence and Healy who had singled.

Singles by Spasyk, Taylor and Conrad combined with wildness on the part of William and Mary hurlers netted five more Catamount runs in the eighth inning.

Boots Lawrence showed his stuff at first base in this game by making two double plays, one unassisted by catching a hot liner and then doubling a man off first.

Batteries: Vermont—Pesarik and Boucher. William and Mary—Wallach, Dennis, Purtell and Chalko, Dennis.

Innings:	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9—R
Vermont	2	2	1	2	0	0	0	5	4—16

Once again on this trip tough luc reared its ugly head and a Vermont tea which had led the University of Rich mond by a score of 4-3 up until the six inning went down to a 14-4 defeat.

Clarence Akley started the game, w successful in maintaining a lead up un the eventful sixth, after which he w blasted for six runs in the sixth a seventh innings. Hart relieved him in t seventh and was immediately touched f four hits. This was Richmond's six straight victory.

Vermont scoring came in the four when Wood walked, was pushed to thi on a double by Taylor. Utley was by a pitched ball and Lawrence scor Wood on a freak infield hit. Healy bunt and Taylor was tagged sliding hom Utley and Lawrence scored on Bouche double to left.

Track Practice In Full Swing

First Meet In Eight Days

All is hustle and bustle in the cage and outdoors as thirty-seven track and field candidates feverishly ready themselves for the first varsity meet, eight days hence.

With the snow gone and the weather improving every day, Coach Post deems it advisable to give the men as much of the outdoor practise as they can get. The runners, especially the distance men, have been jogging outside for the past two days and the weight men have also been practising on the platform in back of the Science Hall. The men who throw the shot, and the jumpers and pole vaulters, however, are still confined to the cage. The weight department of track found another new addition today in the person of "Big" George Babits, one of Coach Sabo's huskies last fall. He has had no experience but shows promise.

Medical Student

Also Edson, a sophomore medic, who attended New Hampshire University for three years and then left without a degree to attend the University of Vermont Medical School, has been working out the past few days. He took part in freshman and varsity track for two years at New Hampshire and may do quarter and half mile work here.

Since there is a great deal of work to be done and the time is very short the varsity men must actually force themselves to get in shape for what Coach Post expects will be a hard meet with Williams, due to their better facilities and greater man power. Coach Post doubts whether there will be any time trials and the men will get further experience through "skirmishes" with each other.

To add to his worries, Arnie Becker has not yet returned from his debating trip (at this writing), Bob Kenney has not returned yet from his vacation and Hunter has to make up a lot of training, which he lost because of his pursuit of aviation, in order to get into shape.

Jack Burgess Out

Still more sad is the very great probability that Jack Burgess, freshman star of last year and a great prospect this year will be lost to the team this year due to a spike wound, received while jumping, which became infected and finally resulted in blood poisoning. Beware of slight wounds, you athletes.

To add to the confusion in the cage these days, twenty men reported to Coach Roy Wietz for freshman track. A few more men are expected, some of whom will probably come from the frosh baseball squad. Coach Wietz will spend the first two weeks in fundamentals, such as starts and body movements of jumpers, and therefore will take no time trials during this period.

The distance and middle distance runners are working outside now and probably will go down to the track at Centennial field next week. The weight men present only one experienced man, Parker—in fact, the whole squad offers only one or two experienced but untried men. The rest of the squad may come under the head of inexperience. These boys will have to work furiously with their coach for the next two weeks since they meet Burlington High on April 26.

Schedule Scrutinizing

Vacation is over! That, alas, is too true. The old merry-go-round begins to twirl and we're on it getting dizzier every minute. But we should worry—at last after months of prophesying on our part—spring is really here. Those baseball men just back from the South put the clincher on it. And what a trip that was. Maybe Larry isn't going around patting himself on the back, but we'll bet he isn't exactly in the dumps either.

Take a close look at the results of the trip and you will find that Navy and William and Mary were taken over the hurdles by the Catamounts. Also there is a satisfying tie with N. Y. U. Of course a tie doesn't look like much on paper, but it's quite something just the same. The Violets rank as fast company in collegiate baseball. Alex Campanis, their captain and second baseman, has been a member of the St. Albans Giants in the Northern League for two years. Ed Boell is a nice man to have on the mound—if he's pitching for you. Summers he twirls for the Rutland Royals. So a tie with the Violets isn't exactly spilled milk. Looking at the schedule even more closely we find several very close contests. Wasn't there a four-hit game turned in by Carlson? Wasn't there an equally fine performance turned in by Hart? Put the schedule down in terms of wins and losses—it isn't much. Put it down in terms of actual performance—it's something to cheer about.

Soaring in the Clouds

Even more encouraging is the surprisingly fine showing of Larry's new recruits. Johnny Spasyk, Sig Sysko, Bob Carlson and H. Wood certainly catch on fast. They were right at home on the varsity from the very start. Fact is they were not only at home but they were pretty prompt in paying their board. Yes siree—we're looking ahead to plenty of red-hot baseball by the Catamounts this season.

The pitching squad looks like a winner. Veterans Pesarik, Belardinelli and Hart plus Carlson—A1. Infield and outfield equally as good as last year's once the rough edges are smoothed off. Batting—well, there's Spasyk and Wood above the .300 mark and Sysko not far behind. Maybe this is painting the picture in bright colors—but, then, sports editors get so few chances to be wildly optimistic that we'll take a chance just this once and soar in the clouds.

In Other Camps

And lest we forget—the big leagues will soon be blowing the lid off a new season. The Hot Stove League is coming out into the sunshine and sniffing the air. Another week or so and the good old wirelesses (radios to you) will be rocking with shouted news of stolen bases, homers, strikes and balls. Those "Bronx Bombers" are still the favorites in the American League. Old Marse McCarthy just sits in the sun and worries because he hasn't got any worries. Although those pesky Dodgers did put a spoke in the wheels of the Yankee Juggernaut when they not only walked off with a 10-6 decision but also put Lefty Gomez on the shelf with a sore knee. Of course, rabid Red Sox fans will tell you that the Fenwick Park boys will cop the pennant. Rumors also drift to us from Cleveland that the Indians are putting on the war paint and preparing for a scalp hunt. Well—mebbe so. But we're conservative—the larruping McCarthymen look plenty good to us.

The National League, as usual, is a nightmare. Anyone's guess is good. The Reds some say are a cinch to repeat. Out in St. Louis they say the "Gas House Gang" is about to unleash a super-super gang war on the rest of the league. The Cubs are sniffing the air and Dizzy Dean is delightedly informing everyone that the "old soup bone feels better than ever." Larry MacPhail is injecting the "old fight" into those rough-and-ready boys from Brooklyn and across the tracks Bill Terry is holding court, firmly convinced that the Giants are still right on the ball. So we don't know what to think. We're lost in a sea of propaganda and training-camp bulletins. We adopt the line of least resistance—we're neutral. May the best team win.

What of the Panthers?

That seems to dispose of the baseball situation which is about the only situation right at present. If only that sun keeps shining maybe Centennial Field will be dry in a week or two. Then, indeed, can we delve deep into the potentialities of the track squad. Over at Middlebury they're also waiting for the dry season. The Panthers are strong on javelin and discus tossing this season. They also boast veterans in the pole vault and high jump. Chances are Vermont will have its greatest strength in the track events. All in all, it seems that Middlebury might be a tough opponent. But that is just a little hazy crystal-gazing.

Again—Last But Not Least

Lately it's become a habit with us to wind up by commenting on tennis. Why, we don't know. We hope that you don't think that is any reflection on the tennis team, because it isn't. Tennis, we feel, deserves as much notice as baseball and track. Chief difficulty right now is lack of definite information. However, we have been told that competition for varsity positions is now underway. Stand by for further notices.

And so we have come to the end of another column. Long is the road and weary and uphill all the way. But we love it (we think).

F. B.

Truth and Tradition

Believing that very few students in the University of Vermont know much of anything concerning the origin of traditions surrounding this campus, this so-called column will attempt, in the future, to show how these traditions started and how they attained their growth.

However in addition to the aforementioned knowledge vending, Grub and Grab wish it known that they have a particular and possibly slightly eccentric mania, upon which they wouldst discourse to the student body.

Now practically everyone is aware of various BMOC'S and BWOC'S, and of the fact that this BM lugged the pigskin up and down the gridiron, or that BW strove valiantly on the field hockey team, but it is quite possible that very few realize the existence, on campus, of many students who do things just as interesting and often much more unusual, but whose efforts are somewhat obscured for various seasons. This column knows of several of these obscure ones and they may rest assured that they will be obscure no longer, to their everlasting joy or regret.

The Forgotten Men

Now of course it is evident that Grub and Grab cannot uncover all these unknowns, hence the two humble ones would really appreciate any suggestions from readers as to interesting and unusual personalities, along with their little known sidelines. Then—presto!—the identity of these budding geniuses will have blossomed forth—.

With subject picked and our decks cleared for action, G. and G. will commence the dissertation, arriving at our first hero, Norman, better known as "Gubber" Tucker.

You no doubt would recognize this lad, even if his cognomen were among those missing, for his is an illustrious and star-studded ancestry. Swearing violently of the statement's truth, he would have us believe that his uncle and aunt are, respectively, Orrin and Sophie Tucker. Also, in this connection we are advised that the grandfather of this amazing young man ran away from home at the age of twelve and remained in the adventurous state for thirty years, following a most radical existence. From this heritage our subject has derived a philosophy of life that is truly wonderful. A more carefree individual cannot be found. Whatever happens, whether good or bad, he attributes to the fates.

It would further give it away if G. and G. let it slip out that he is one of the class of '42's more rotund members (which he vigorously contests) and that in a recent campaign he risked his chubby neck skijoring madly about the town as well as peerading around the Coffee Corner on the back of a wild beast.

Master of Bridge

Our hero is a master of one of the greatest of indoor activities—bridge. But nineteen years of age, he has written a bridge book, which appeared on March 4, published by Macmillan Co. In three years of college life not only has he astounded more than a bridge expert with his psychic bidding, but he has compiled a tome which he claims sold so fast that McAuliffe's didn't even have time to put it on their shelves, much less advertise the fact. Said epic volume was no doubt the most revolutionary thing of its kind in history, and will without doubt put to shame Messrs. Culbertson, Lenz, et al.

All questions as to bridge problems should be forwarded to this column and Grub and Grab will gladly forward them to the Great One.

Next issue will be devoted by this column to campus and college traditions, and the following one again to an obscure personality.

All right men, break it up—.

Faculty Members In Medical College

In addition to the changes and increases effected in the Medical College the first semester several new men have been added to the faculty. These include two local physicians and staff members from the Worcester and Springfield Hospitals where University medical students spend time under arrangements concluded last fall.

Dr. Ferdinand J. M. Sichel has been promoted from instructor to assistant professor of physiology. Local appointments made were those of Dr. John F. Lynch to be instructor in clinical surgery and Dr. James P. Mahoney to be instructor in clinical medicine.

Dr. John Abajian, Jr., now full-time anesthetist at the Mary Fletcher Hospital is instructor in anesthesiology replacing Dr. E. J. Ford.

Three members of the pediatrics staff at the Springfield Hospital have been appointed to instruct the obstetrical section in residence there. They are Dr. Walter B. Adams, assistant professor of clinical pediatrics; Dr. Norman A. Pokorny and Dr. Nelson J. Newmark both named to the rank of instructor in clinical pediatrics. From the pediatrics staff in Worcester Dr. Gardner N. Cobb is named assistant professor of clinical pediatrics, with Dr. Thomas P. Cunningham and Dr. Alfred S. O'Connor receiving appointments as instructors in clinical pediatrics. This makes possible more work on the care and treatment of premature and new-born infants.

At Worcester work in clinical dermatology in the outpatient department under Dr. Edward P. Disbrow has been arranged. Through the appointment of the urology staff under Dr. W. D. Biederbach, assistant professor of clinical urology, Dr. Lester M. Felton, Dr. S. M. Lilyestrom, Dr. Olney D. Phelps, and Dr. Nicholas S. Scarcello, all of the Worcester City Hospital, have received appointments as instructors in clinical urology.

A poll of University of Texas women shows that the average cost of the Texas co-ed's wardrobe is about $230 per year.

Outdoor Classes In Sport to Start

Outdoor sports are due to start on April 22. Lists are posted now for the girls to indicate their choice of sports. This should be done as soon as possible.

All excuses must be made up before the spring sports start. Make-up classes will be held on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday of next week for this purpose.

Here's something new in bowl games: University of Dayton students are planning a "pansy bowl." The game'll be between the "Dazzling Day Dogs" and the "Battling Border Rats."

Which doesn't sound a bit pansy-like to us!

Boy, you really need those extra smokes per pack, if you're an Emory University student. A survey there revealed that if you buy one pack, you're almost sure to have one-quarter of the twenty bummed before the last one is gone.

Definitely, two can't smoke as cheaply as one!

Here's something new the Democrats are being blamed for these days. The editor of the Wheaton College Record received a letter which said: "Dear Editor (You Democrat): We never froze at homecoming when Coolidge and Hoover were presidents."

An Ohio State University sociology class survey shows that the social distance between members of a class is great—but there was a high degree of "interaction" reported between students and their teachers.

Which explains why "An Apple for the Teacher" is a popular theme song!

"Rhett" Influence In Men's Spring Hats

Comfort, Practicality Emphasized This Spring

Men's hats for spring, 1940, are feeling the influence of a moving picture, and just as surely, it's the best picture of the year. There is no doubt that the swashbuckling Rhett, as portrayed by Clark Gable in "Gone With the Wind," has done a great deal toward setting men's hat styles for this spring. Colors are making real news in men's hats this spring, and chief among the newcomers is blue-green. Then, too, we have the blue-gray and the green-gray, both of which are proving extremely popular. Covert cloth, khaki and olive, which might be called "tan-grey-green," are gaining steadily. The preferred colors for spring center on the in-between shades, the round telescope with pinch front, and the pear-shaped semi-telescope, which is creased somewhat lower in back. The telescope hat is being worn by young men, and more mature men, too. For spring, a general increase is noted in the use of regular ribbon bands, following several seasons of extreme novelty trim. For real news in brim edges, we have seen the felt-bound edge, which has been a college specialty hat for several years, and the saddle-stitched edge, which is even newer than the first.

Matching Suits and Hats

When describing the most popular new clothing colors this season, it's hard to say whether the hats match the suits, or vice versa, but the same colors are winning in both fields. There is a definite trend in conservative business clothes toward greys, blues and greens, which will supplant the darker winter shades. There are good-looking combinations of these favorites, too. You'll find all of these new colors in the best suiting materials this season. Clear-finished hard worsteds are the most practical for wearability on the warmer spring days. All of the unfinished fabrics are good for business wear, as well as tweeds, which will be seen in the best of offices throughout the country. For the more conservative business man, we suggest the single or double breasted three-button suit. They're always correct for day-after-day wear and they're the kind that can be put on and forgotten. For the man who wants something more distinctive, there is the double-breasted drape which is proving very successful this year.

The sportswear and spectator side of the material picture grows in popularity. Joseph's coats of multi-colored stripes and Morocco stripe outing coats have their place. As successors to the plaid sport coat, these should be worn with contrasting colored slacks, and—knicker suits are attempting a comeback in your hit parade.

Colorful Accessories

Our style source for spring accessories advocated color and more color. Shirts in checks, plaids and stripes in fine linen for the "impeccably dressed" look. In fact, anything goes in shirts this spring. Latest wrinkle is underwear shorts to match shirts. An item to watch in men's shirts and shorts for summer is a new material called Nile cloth. At the moment, it is expensive, but no doubt there will be popular priced imitations coming along.

Ties and hosiery go native, too, with unrepressed splashes of color. Unusual are printed inanimate object designs on the ties. Bow ties are worn "for emphasis" on shirts in casual sports wear. Crocheted ties are in again, too. Figured patterns and Dali designs in socks are a good hunch for spring. Anklets, those short socks, are slowly but surely taking over the sock parade.

Cool, Washable Shoes

Blucher shoes are tops with adjustable width for normal or heavy sports hosiery wear. The heavy soles herald a new element in style and utility. Shoes with fringed flaps are noted. The shoe feature of the season might be classed as novelties—sandals, moccasins and mesh oxfords. Chief features are crepe soles, cool comfort, and above all, their soap-and-water washableness.

Good taste is still, of course, the only indispensable requisite of good appearance. Emphasis is decidedly on style plus comfort and practicability, and our parting style shoe is: Be sure your clothes and accessories harmonize, and don't be influenced too much by so-called "smart" color recommendations. Stick to the colors that are becoming to you. If you don't know what these colors are, take your wife or girl friend along, or ask the clerks—most clerks have color sense.

Against George Washington University the University of Vermont team was handed its first whitewashing of the 1940 season. Belardinelli hurled a scintillating five-hitter but his teammates failed to aid him with their batting power.

Walks at inopportune times to the Washingtonians followed by timely hits enabled the Southerners to cash in for a victory.

Frankie Taylor added further proof to his versatility by making two brilliant field plays. Once he caught a long fly and then demonstrated a powerful arm by throwing to third base and completing a double play. Another time he snagged a hot liner and cut off a run at home plate for another double play.

The Catamounts traveled to Philadelphia only to find its game with Drexel Institute was cancelled due to wet grounds.

The University of Vermont team wrote a glorious chapter in conclusion of its annual Southern jaunt. The Vermonters, led by the rookie sensation of the trip, Bob Carlson, played the highly touted New York University team to a 5 to 5 deadlock only to have the game called at the end of the eleventh inning on account of darkness.

The Catamounts made a thrilling ninth inning rally to steal a 5 to 4 victory from under the noses of the powerful N. Y. U. Club and gain a five up deadlock which sent the game into overtime.

The game contest opened when Sig Sysko reached second on a two base error and came home on a right field clout by Frank Taylor. The Violets were not to be outdone, however, and took a 2-1 lead in their half of the canto. Manganiello scored on a home run by Fottrell off Carlson.

Fottrell again got in the Cats' hair by smacking out a single in the third inning, going to second on an infield out, and scoring on a Vermont error. From this point on Carlson showed some real stuff in muffling the New Yorkers' bats until the seventh inning. Meanwhile Auer of the Metropolitans had been doing somewhat of the same thing to the Vermont batters.

Backstop

BOUCHER

In the seventh, however, the mountain boys were not to be denied and pushed over three runs to give U. V. M. a 4-3 lead. Healy got a life on first, moved to second on an error. Auer was worked for a walk by Boucher and Carlson popped out attempting to sacrifice for the first out. Spasyk came through with a line single to right scoring Healy and sending Boucher to third. A wild pitch by Auer sent Boucher home, and a wild throw by the N. Y. U. catcher as he attempted to nip Boucher, sent Spasyk home. Sysko grounded out and Wood hoisted a foul to end the Vermont rally.

Carlson put down the Violets in order in their half of the inning and Ball, a relief pitcher, did the same thing to the Cats in the first of the eighth.

Carlson's arm tired in the latter half of the eighth and allowed the New Yorkers to gain a one-run lead before Pesarik came in to put out the fire.

Carlson gave up only seven hits in the seven and two-thirds innings that he toiled.

Pesarik did a three and one-third inning stint to finish the game, yielding but one hit and striking out five men in the short time.

In the top of the ninth, with two out and Ed Boell, rated one of the best college pitchers in New York City, in the game to relieve Auer, Alex "Lefty" Pesarik, Vermont captain doing a relief job shot a clean single to centerfield. Johnny Spasyk grounded to Leahy at shortstop, who threw wildly to first, allowing Pesarik to score the tying run and sending Spasyk to second. Sysko grounded out to end the inning.

Vermont threatened in both the 10th and 11th frames, but runners died on base. Conrad singled with two away in the 10th, but was forced by Boots Lawrence, and in the 11th Ace Healy led off with a single, but both Boucher and Pesarik lifted high flies and Spasyk grounded out to end the inning.

An eleventh inning rally by N. Y. U. was started by Rifkin when he singled to center, but Pesarik bore down and struck out Leahy and Marty Boucher threw a perfect strike to Spasyk at second base to catch Rifkin attempting to steal.

The game then was called due to darkness.

Scholarship is More Important Than Work

IOWA CITY, Ia. (I.P.)—If you don't actually have to work for self-support, don't do it just because it now seems to be the vogue at the University of Iowa.

Instead, realize that scholastic work is the most important and deserves all the time which possibly can be given to it. Such is the advice given to university students by Lee Kann, manager of the employment bureau.

Mr. Kann took time off recently during his busiest period to make several points clear about the current job situation at the university. "Many entering students overlook the fact that a college education involves four years or more. They think they must get a job as soon as the year begins. They should make a budget on a four-year basis.

"If a student is just average scholastically, forget outside employment for the first year, if possible. Then later, when in the swing of things, he can work and can reduce by half the four-year cost of an education," Mr. Kann declared.

From knowledge acquired in four years of experience in his position, Mr. Kann judges that many parents are not being co-operative in assisting their sons and daughters with college plans. "Some parents seem to expect their children to cut loose and carry on for themselves, thereby handicapping them at the beginning. Even if it involves sacrifices, it would be better in the long run for parents to help financially at first. Later the student can work," the university man said.

Vermont Alumni Council Holds Dinner and Dance

Approximately eighty-five U. V. M. alumni from Burlington and vicinity gathered at the Paragon Restaurant, Saturday evening for a semi-formal dinner and dance, arranged by the Alumni Council. The purpose of the affair was to raise funds.

The alumni secretary, Mrs. Isabelle Gallup, assisted by Miss Margaret Rice, was in charge of the dance.

Mr. Norman H. Myers was chairman of the decorating committee. The University colors, green and gold, furnished the color scheme.

Prof. Lyman S. Rowell was chairman of the ticket committee; Frederick J. Reed, chairman of the admission committee; William M. Lockwood, chairman of the reception committee; and Preston C. Cummings, chairman of the floor committee.

Miss Crowe Attends Health Conference

Miss Barbara Crowe of our Physical Education Department attended the annual convention of the Eastern District Society of the American Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, held from March 26 to March 29 at the Hotel Statler in Boston, Mass.

On Tuesday, March 26, after enrollment a demonstration was given at Bouvé Boston School of Education. That evening a most unusual and interesting talk was given by Dr. Hooton, professor of anthropology at Harvard, and early American dancing completed the first day.

Wednesday morning, Dr. Abraham Myerson, a professor of neurology at Tufts Medical School delivered a lecture. In the afternoon Miss Crowe went to Wellesley College where demonstrations were held in volleyball, softball, badminton, golf and the new game of battleboard tennis. Wellesley has a new athletic building which is one of the finest in any of the colleges of today. It has all modern equipment and a beautiful swimming pool, where exhibitions in individual and group swimming were given, as well as diving techniques.

J. B. Nash of New York University and Captain Bryant of the American Red Cross lectured on camping Thursday morning. There was also a meeting for discussion and demonstration of skiing and skating. An alumnae luncheon was followed by a modern dancing program presented by the high school groups of Newton and Boston, the Y. W. groups and college groups of Wellesley, Pembroke and Bouvé girls. Following that Anton Dabbas spoke upon the "European Situation and Its Importance for Us." At the banquet held that evening at the Statler, Bill Bingham, director of the athletics at Harvard was the guest speaker.

Movies of all sports, followed by discussions were held Friday morning and also the officers' election. Miss Crowe was elected secretary for the coming year. At the luncheon Miss MacAfee of Wellesley spoke on "Healthy Education." In the afternoon the elementary and junior high schools arranged a modern dance program. A demonstration by Sargent College of Physical Education closed the convention, which was not only a pleasant meeting for all athletic directors, but a chance for new ideas of teaching to be brought forth and expanded.

"Education will not change a person's basic personality; you cannot educate a person out of the life he is born to live," Dr. Paul Popenoe, University of Southern California, believes, however, that education can broaden a person's outlook on life and help him to appreciate the world he lives in.

Bob Zurke's Band Chosen For Junior Week

Former Soloist With Bob Crosby to Bring Delta Rhythm Boys to Vermont Campus; Chosen Pianist in Collier's Star Band

Leader-Pianist

BOB ZURKE

Assuring equal enjoyment for "ickys" and "gates" alike Bob Zurke, foremost exponent of "boogy-woogy" and his Delta Rhythm Boys have been selected to supply the harmonies for the approaching Junior Week dance. Zurke, recently chosen as pianist for Collier's All-American Orchestra by Paul Whiteman, will be supported by a hand-picked ensemble and and is sure to display a brand of music seldom equalled at a campus dance.

Formerly with Bob Crosby

After several seasons of sensational solo work with Bob Crosby's Bob-Cats, Zurke last year struck out on his own and formed the first draft of the now well-developed Delta Rhythm Boys. In the class with Meade Lux Lewis, Albert Ammons and Pete Johnson, Bob Zurke in his own right is assurance of proper strains for a campus hop and a good band built around him provides a double indemnity. Sterling Bose who has cut many a platter with Tommy Dorsey and Benny Goodman, plays lead trumpet with the Delta outfit and is fully capable of satisfying the sweet and swing tastes of the student body.

Paderewski Pro-Zurke

Bob Zurke started his key rambling as a serious concert pianist at the austere age of five in Detroit. In fact, after the concert Ignace Paderewski came backstage, complimented him, and predicted a bright future for the lad in classical music. Breaking away from "longhair" work about ten years later, Zurke took up modern music equally seriously and now, although only twenty-seven years old, has piled up a record of playing top-grade piano with some of the best outfits in the country. Bob makes all his arrangements and from all evidence his performances are a wow.

Program chairman W. I. Pye '41 and financial chairman R. O. Slack '41 are responsible for this promise of a super-gala Junior Week dance . . . . thanx.

Gerhart Seger to Address I. R. C. On European Crisis

New Officers Will Preside at Meeting On Thursday, April 18

Gerhart Seger, former member of the German Reichstag, will address an open meeting of the International Relations Club on Thursday, April 18. The topic will be "What Will Become of Europe?"

The meeting will be in accordance with the usual policy of the I. R. C. with an open forum following Mr. Seger's talk. The newly elected officers of the club will preside.

This is an opportunity for everyone to hear an authoritative opinion on a very timely topic and everyone is most cordially invited to attend. The meeting will be held at Southwick at 8 p.m.

In Concentration Camp

On March 12, 1933, Mr. Gerhart H. Seger, a member of the German Reichstag, was arrested by the Nazis without any charge and spent three months in jail and six months in the first Nazi concentration camp Oranienburg near Berlin. In December, 1933, he escaped to Czecho-Slovakia. His wife and seventeen-months-old baby were then arrested and taken to Rosslau, a men's concentration camp near Anhalt, where Mrs. Seger was the only woman prisoner and was finally released in May, 1934, after the intervention of the lady members of the British Parliament. Following his escape, Mr. Seger wrote his book "Oranienburg," which has been translated into six languages. The American edition was published under the title, "A Nation Terrorized."

Mr. Seger came to the United States in 1934 and has taken out his first papers in order to become an American citizen. During this time he has lectured extensively throughout the United States, having lectured in all the states of the union.

Third Visit

His lecture here Thursday evening will be Mr. Seger's third appearance on the campus. Those who have heard him when he has been here before are unanimous in their opinion that he is one of the best lecturers that we have had in recent years. His address "What Will Happen to Europe?" is extremely timely in the light of the Scandinavian situation because Mr. Seger is thoroughly familiar with all three of the Scandinavian countries and for years has had many close connections with their governments. He is a personal friend of Prime Minister Th. Stauning of Denmark. Mr. Seger will be in a position to explain the Scandinavian aspects of the war as fully as possible.

The Prize Speaking Contest is open to men of freshman and sophomore classification. Here is a fine opportunity for men to demonstrate their oratorical ability at a profit, for the best declamation will be given a prize of twenty-five dollars, with a second prize of fifteen dollars and a third prize of ten dollars. These prizes are the Kingsley Prizes in Elocution and are awarded annually to freshman and sophomore men for the best declamations of passages of oratorical prose. The Prize Reading Contest is open to women of any class and will provide fifty dollars in prizes for the best reading of approved selections. The first prize of twenty-five dollars, the second of fifteen dollars, and the third prize of ten dollars are given by the administration. They are in a sense the continuation of the Julia Spear Reading Prizes awarded in former years.

Master Sergeant Conner Retires

Had Been With U. V. M. R. O. T. C. Twenty Years

Master Sergt. Raymond T. Conner retired March 31 from active service with the University of Vermont department of military science and tactics, a division of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps. Sergeant Conner had worked in the University division of the R. O. T. C. for nearly twenty years, entering it August 27, 1920. He was promoted to the rank of technical sergeant October 2, 1935, and this January received promotion to master sergeant, the highest non-commissioned rank which can be held by any man in the Army. At present Sergeant Conner is remaining in Burlington, but he is planning to leave at a later date. He has maintained a residence in Tennessee, where he was born and where he enlisted in the Army at the age of seventeen.

32 Years With Army

Master Sergeant Conner has an outstanding record, covering almost thirty-two years of service with the United States Army. He enlisted September 26, 1908. In all the time between then and March 31, 1940, the date of his retirement, he has lost no time A. W. O. L. (away without leave) and spent in all only seventeen days in hospital. On all his certificates of discharge from the Army is high commendation received only by those Army men who have earned it by service of a high order. They read, "Character, Excellent."

Accepted for enlistment at Chattanooga, Tenn., in 1908, he was first a private in Troop E, Third Cavalry, and did garrison duty at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., and patrol duty at the border on the Rio Grande River. In 1909 he reenlisted with the same unit. He was appointed corporal in 1910, and promoted to sergeant in 1911. He was discharged as sergeant in 1912. It is the custom of the Army to discharge

Cheney Talks On World's Art

Accompanies Lecture With Slides on Art

"Thirty Thousand Years of Art," which was Mr. Sheldon Cheney's topic in his lecture, presented at the Fleming Museum, on April 11, is a lot of space to cover in one hour and one-half. Considering he is a mortal, Mr. Cheney did a remarkable job. Without talking down, he spoke so that the entire audience could comprehend. His lecture might be compared to a magazine reproduction of a painting. The pigments were there, but color was missed in the slides that accompanied his talk; there was a perspective present . . . covering a view of art from the late Glacial Age; through the both massive and delicate Egyptian works; to the intricate and graphic Assyrian phase and into the Greek age; tantalizingly revealing the Oriental works which are, alas, so unfamiliar; then from the 14th to the 19th century which stressed realism and naturalism; finishing up with modern art which abandoned naturalism and imitationism, making form more important than strict conformation to nature, ostentating simplicity, primitivism and a dash of abstraction.

Mr. Cheney stressed the modern art, feeling that it would help any conservatism bending towards bigotry that might have been among his Vermont audience. He emphasized that too many people look for a likeness in a piece of art. One must take into account that in understanding modern art, it is spiritual rather than materialistic. There must be a stillness of the spirit in approaching it. Cheney brought out that the abstraction is something that the outer mind does not grasp, but it strikes a chord of understanding which lies deeper than the senses.

Much of what Mr. Cheney said, had more sides than what he presented. Not all of the audience agreed with him, but he struck a responsive chord, taking into consideration the discussions that followed the lecture.

There will be a meeting of the Independents at the Art Library of Fleming Museum, Tuesday evening, April 16, at 7.30 o'clock. All Independent men are urged to attend.

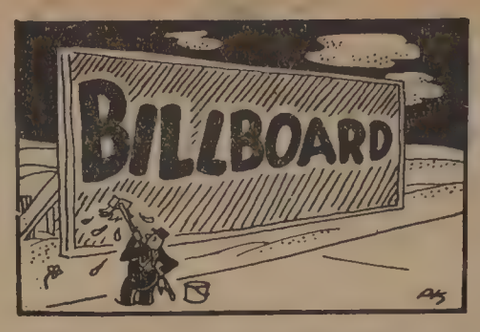
"We should consider any attempt on the part of European powers to extend their system to this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety, ... and should regard it as a manifestation of unfriendly disposition towards the United States." This has become known in history as the Monroe Doctrine, one of the most important documents ever passed regarding the welfare of the Western Hemisphere.

Sunday was Pan-American Day, the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Pan-American Union, of which the Monroe Doctrine is the binding tie. It is interesting to note that the late John Barrett of Grafton, Vt., played a vital part in the early stages of the organization. Epecially significant this year was Pan-American Day because it emphasized the necessity of continuing the good will which now exists between the twenty-one republics of North, Central, and South America who are members of the Pan-American Union.

The Pan-American Union is not a cultural tie, for Latin America is closer culturally to those countries in Europe whose languages it speaks. Neither is the union political, for some of the republics to the south have true democracies, while others do not have firmly established democracies. Before the war England and Germany shared with the United States an important place in the foreign trade of Latin America. Thus, Pan-Americanism consists of the desire and determination of the peoples of the Western Hemisphere to conduct their affairs in their own way and work out their problems without the traditions and inhibitions of the other older nations.



When we look across to Europe and see its nations clawing at each others' throats and hurling destruction and havoc into the lives of millions of people, we should feel a genuine thrill and a great amount of satisfaction in the realization that bonds of peace and friendship and not Maginot Lines cement together the twenty-one republics of the Western Hemisphere.

Heil and Farewell

Another excellent opportunity is being given Vermont students to hear an eminent and popular lecturer, Mr. Gerhart H. Seger, former member of the German Reichstag, discuss the topic, "What Will Happen to Europe?" A well-known lecturer and author of "Oranienburg," which has been translated in six languages, Mr. Seger has given addresses in every state in the union. His visit on our campus Thursday evening as the guest of the International Relations Club will mark his third appearance at Vermont. Students who have heard him on previous occasions say that he is one of the finest speakers who have visited our campus in recent years.

With the "war in earnest" at long last breaking out in Scandinavia last week, Mr. Seger's lecture is of special importance since he has close connections with the governments of the Scandinavian countries. He is a personal friend of Prime Minister Stauning of Denmark and he will be able to tell many new facts to his audience.

Mr. Seger was induced to come to the University through the efforts of Prof. Melvin Laatsch of the Political Science Department. He is particularly anxious that a large number of students take advantage of the opportunity of hearing Mr. Seger. We sincerely hope that the students will attend the lecture en masse.

Plans Being Completed For Lilac Day May 18

Complete plans for Lilac Day which will be held Saturday, May 18, have not yet been issued, but the Dance Workshop Group has been working on the dance part of the program since last fall. Last week a group of freshmen met to be in the chorus dancing. Miss Sullivan is now conducting classes in choral speaking from whose members the speaking chorus for Lilac Day will be selected.

The Band Wagon

By BOB JOHNSON

A Propos

Somewhere—the last couple of columns have disappeared. Sometimes—I think maybe it's just as well—or is it.

In the center of the stage we see Glen Gray and his Casa Lomans kicking out at the Meadowbrook. Their sweet stuff is truly great. Their swing ditties are a bit too stiff and unrelaxed to go over with this department, however. McEachern on trombone is the only real go man—occasionally helped out by Hutchenrider on clarinet. Kenny Sargent and Pee Wee Hunt have their host of admirers and the band is fronted by the ever genial Glen—"he even buys their socks."

Miller—a sell out—at Paramount.

Dorsey—T-bone brother—doing a follow-up—featuring the lip trilling Berigan trumpet. Reported as not too good due to shifts in personnel and possibly too much riffin' of rye.

Harlan Leonard

Another Kansas City krew—rising out of the old Ben Moten band of the "golden era." Featured men are Price, a really fine hide hitter, a good tenor, an exciting trumpet, some xcellent alto, and a rhythm section that really boots.

With the Colleges

Glenn Miller on top—but the orks of Savitt and Donahue rapidly rising in popularity. Erskine Hawkins leads the sepian outfits in campus favorite circles.

Will Bradley—Ray McKinley—have an up and comer which could boot a bit more but is surprisingly versatile considering its short life to date. Carlotta Dale—whose "Twilight Interlude" was one of last year's best vocals—capably handles the warbling department with a little help from Ray. The Bradley trombone is spotlighted—with a lesser glim on McKinley.

Discs

Artie Shaw (Mr. Lana Turner) falls xceedling flat to these ears with his new waxings by his reputedly 31 piece ork.

Barnet's discs are jumping into the big money lists as a result of increased sales.

Grab an earful of the latest Krupa Killers as well as those of another ex-Goodmanite—Harry James.

While inferior to his treatments in former years, Louis Armstrong's latest needlings are refreshing and feature some good alto as well as Louis trumpet and Higginbotham's trombone.

Battin' the Bacon

Kostelanetz—asking "what is swing?" After trying to define it—well frankly we just can't. It's one of those things with too many subtle and not so subtle aspects.

Something tells me—this is a pretty low note to wind up on but Philbert has a jam session in progress and "de rhythm am rockin'—de brasses am sockin'—feed it to me man—you know what ah mean."

Mountain Club Is Host To Outing Club Council

The Council of the U. V. M. Outing Club as guests of the Mountain Club enjoyed a delightful sugaring-off party at Middlebury College, Sunday, April 14. The sixteen members left here at eight-thirty and proceeded to the sugar bush from Middlebury's campus at nine-thirty. The maple grove was located on a farm on Breadloaf Mountain. At a spot in the center of the grove of large maple trees two iron kettles were hung up over fires and the sap was boiled down on the spot. Lunches, doughnuts and pickels were provided. After lunch the group hiked cross-country to Broadloaf Inn and then down to the cars. The Vermont Council returned to Burlington at four o'clock.

Spring Style Show Held by Tri-Delts

Saturday afternoon in the Southwick ballroom the Tri-Delts gave a Fashion Show featuring dresses from Mary White's Town and Country Shop and hats from Mrs. Mabel O'Neil's.

The latest things in spring fashion were shown. Some of the pieces of sports-wear shown included slacks, sweaters and skirts, blouses, smart sport dresses in linen and jersey. The new spring pastel plaids were in evidence in skirts and jackets. In afternoon and street dresses the redingote dress is most popular this spring. Several distinctive dresses of this type were shown. Attractive silk prints were also shown.

In evening gowns, silk jersey, cotton, and the feminine ever-popular lace and net were shown.

The hats ranged from tiny handkerchief size models, to stunning, wide-brimmed ones. Straws, felts, crêpes were all shown with flowers appearing here and there ingeniously placed.

The models were: Jean Brehmer '40, Betty Terrill '40, Carol Westall '40, Ruth Williams '40, Barbara Butler '41, Sally Rome '42, Sarah Wilson '42, Phyllis Cook '43, June Hoffman '43 and Eleanor Thomas '43.

Barbara Butler and Jean Young were co-chairmen of the show.

Mr. Shumway Addresses Seniors on Job Finding

Mr. William H. Shumway of Boston addressed members of the senior class Monday afternoon at the Fleming Museum. His topic was "Techniques of Job Finding." Mr. Shumway is well known on the University campus from his previous visits. He is an authority in aiding students to choose their vocations and in finding jobs.

It will be possible for seniors to have conferences with Mr. Shumway by appointment, Tuesday, April 16, and Wednesday, April 17. These appointments for personal enterviews must be made in advance through Dean Swift's office.

In order that no seniors miss this opportunity of seeing Mr. Shumway a senior committee has been chosen to canvass the class during this time.

Forty Frosh Out For Baseball

First Game Slated For April 26

Approximately forty first-year men reported to Coach "Fuzzy" Evans in response to the call for freshman baseball candidates. Little can be told of the quality of the men yet but the turnout includes six pitchers and three catchers.

Among the hurlers are Iby, a star of Burlington High; Alberghini of Orleans; Abbot of Weston, Mass.; Towne of Charlestown, N. H.; Hamilton of Williamstown; and Karelitz of Haverhill, Mass. On the receiving end are Koladza of West Haven, Conn.; Cain of Burlington; Lincoln of Winchendon, Mass.

The final status of this group is not certain, however, because the eligibility of both Hamilton and Lincoln is undecided until their make-up marks have been turned in.

The remaining candidates are out for the seven other positions, with the practice sessions being held in the cage until spring weather comes.

The first few days were devoted to batting practice, since the pitchers have been out for three weeks already, and sliding practice. The end of the week was devoted to batting and fielding, in which Coach Evans alternated three infields.

The first cut which had been planned, after a scheduled game between the freshman and varsity ball teams has been postponed until this week due to the fact that the game was called off because of adverse weather conditions. This cut, necessary because of the limited space to practice in and because of the difficulty of working with too large a squad will leave twenty men on the team. None of the battery men will be cut at this time since they develop more slowly than the other players. These twenty-two men will later be reduced to sixteen players who will make up the final squad.

If bad weather still persists Coach Evans will devote most of his time to the pitchers and will probably spend most of the time with the other players on blackboard talks since the varsity will probably take over the cage for practice.

Since the schedule, starting April 26 with Clark School, calls for games on Friday, Saturday, and the following Wednesday, Coach Evans will concentrate on getting four pitchers in shape and is looking for three starting hurlers.

U. V. M. Students Visit Harvard

On Friday and Saturday, April 12 and 13, a number of students from U. V. M. attended the conference on "Careers in Government and Community Service" held in Cambridge, Mass., and sponsored by the Phillips Brooks House Association of Harvard University. The advisory committee of this conference is made up of prominent professors from many of the large eastern colleges. Prof. Daniel B. Carroll of the Political Science Department serves on this committee and attended the conference. This conference presented students from many colleges valuable information on preparing for certain occupations, the salary that could be expected, and chances for continued and advanced employment. The conference opened Friday evening at 8 p.m. and continued through Saturday afternoon. The meat of the discussion was that held Saturday morning in the form of a round table. One of the prominent speakers at these discussions was Mr. Arthur Fleming, Commissioner of U. S. Civil Service Commission.

Among those who attended from U. V. M. were Margaret Crowley '41, Mary Arms '40, Charlotte Hall '40, J. T. Doheny '41, R. L. Tracy '40, S. K. Gilbert '40, D. W. Thayer '41, T. F. Grimmin '41, and W. W. Suojanen '42. These students will hold a meeting in the near future which will be open to all students who wish to hear the report of the delegates.

Interfrat Baseball Replaced by Softball

As a result of several requests for the substitution of softball for baseball, this spring, it was decided by vote of the members of the Intramural Council to replace baseball with softball.

The schedule is now being made out. It is suggested that the fraternities start limbering up their material. The games shall be played according to schedule, even though snowshoes may have to be used.

Conner Retires

men at the close of their enlistment prior to reenlisting them. At this period of his service he went from his first unit to Troop E, Fifteenth Cavalry, then Co. E, Second Battalion, Engineers; Troop K, Sixth Cavalry. Discharged again, as Private First Class, he reenlisted in Co. M, Third Battalion Engineers. These posts involved duty from Fort Leavenworth, Kan., to Fort Riley, Kan., then Galveston, Tex., Vera Cruz, Mexico, and then Canal Zone. In 1919 he enlisted again in Troop E, Third Cavalry, and on October 1, 1919, was discharged at Fort Ethan Allen Vt. Again, throughout this period, he traveled from one post to another with short stops at each one. He had never spent more than six months at any one place until he reached Fort Ethan Allen. Joining the military department at the University of Vermont in 1920, he has been here almost twenty years.

From 1915 to 1919, Sergeant Conner was located at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., Fort Ringgold, Tex., Fort Brown Tex., and again at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. October 16, 1917, he sailed for England, landing at Liverpool and spending a few days at Camp Borden, just outside Aldershot. Crossing the English Channel, he went to the First Corps machine gun training school at Gondracourt, then to Army machine gun school at Langre, a walled town dating back to the time of the Romans. He was an assistant instructor at the Second Corps school at Chattillion-sur-Seine, and at the Third Corps training school at Chamecy.

Never Saw Live Enemy

The only time he approached the war zone was when he made a trip up the St. Die, where he experienced one of only two occasions in his army career under fire. During thirty-one years in the army, Sergeant Conner says he fired not one shot at the enemy, nor did he "ever see a live enemy."

After the war, Sergeant Conner sailed from Brest, landing at Boston. From Fort Devens, Boston, he came to Fort Ethan Allen, and thence to the University of Vermont. He married a Vermont, girl, Martha Phillips of Burlington, and they have lived here during the twenty years of Sergeant Conner's service with the University R. O. T. C.

While Sergeant Conner did not participate actively along the firing line during the war, the great majority of those he instructed in the machine gun training schools did. Ninety-nine percent of these students, he says, came from machine gun battalions which were soon to go into the fighting line. The eagerness of these students to learn was such that after spending a full day in class, many of them would stay until midnight in the classroom, asking for all the instruction they could get. This, says Sergeant Conner, went on for weeks.

A Southerner who came North and for twenty years has been a good Vermonter, Sergeant Conner can tell many an absorbing story of his travels with the United States Army and the men he knew in the service.

By the CO-EDITOR

Vermont or Vermin Weather

We originally intended today's column to be a dissertation on "Vermont Spring, Its Beauties and Enchantments." But for obvious reasons we thought it best to exchange the title to either "Spring—Gone With the Wind" or "Centennial—A Hidden Vision." . . . . The irony of it is that the last snowfall followed the putting up of the signs in front of the library and chapel saying, "Keep off the grass." (We are writing this Sunday night.) If the snow should suddenly disappear and if there should be no trace of it by the time this issue comes off the press, don't blame us—wait a minute.

But the fact remains that the longer the adverse weather conditions remain, the longer the boys can't use Centennial, and the more woes to Larry . . . . And Archie is in no better spot. Of course, the trackmen can run around the gym and the field men can use the cage (after 5 p.m.). The only drawback is that the actual meets are not indoor meets. . . . . And on the subject of track, we warn you not to be too optimistic about the Williams meet this Saturday. The Cats were on the short end of the score in last year's meet and we very much fear a repetition. You see it's a matter of practice, facilities, etc. Down at Williams the boys practice all year around. They have an indoor schedule and quite a few of their men are entered in the big annual indoor track meets held at the Boston and Madison Square Gardens. All we can do is pray.

Self-Seeding

Speaking to Professor Carpenter recently, we learned of a novel idea inaugurated by the latter last year. The idea is that he passed out slips of paper to the squad and had the tennis team seed itself. And strange enough, these ratings and "Carp's" ratings were almost identical. . . . At this time we'll venture to say that the seeds will be sown in this order (at least for this first tennis trip): Booth, Wolk, Simpson, Foti, Pine, and either Whitcomb or Clark in the number six spot. Don't say we didn't tell you.

* * * * *

Don Maley will be making the Massachusetts trip. . . . The team leaves tomorrow afternoon and will play Amherst, Tufts, and Springfield on successive days. Tufts wasn't on the Catamount schedule last year. But Amherst won out 6-2, while Johnson, Negro Springfield hurler, lost a close one 2-1 in eleven innings. . . . We're anxiously waiting to see Bob Carlson pitch. He wasn't a freshman hurler, but we remember him from freshman camp.

* * * * *

Last year there was one "Poison" Iby pitching for Burlington High and one Herbie Cain catching for Cathedral. This year these two great rivals will play for the same team. Both are on Fuzzy's freshman squad. . . . Frankie Taylor and "Lefty" Pesarik have already signed to play with the Burlington Cardinals this summer. Taylor was temporarily taken on with the Cards last year and remained all season to become one of the league's outstanding outfielders. Frankie has one mean arm. . . . Don't give up the ship, my little readers, only seven weeks to the end.

For the second consecutive year a Rhode Island State College player has broken the national intercollegiate basketball scoring record.

Twenty percent of Boston University's students are the victims of problems arising out of our complex social and industrial order.

Six percent of the 1,300 men students at the University of North Dakota have Robert for their first name.

THIS WEEK AT SOUTHWICK

All those who are to have a conference with Mrs. Bickford are asked to remember the time.

Anyone who would like to join the class in either ballroom or square dancing may attend the next class which will be the last opportunity to do so. The next class in ballroom dancing will meet on Tuesday, April 23, from 7 to 10 o'clock, and the class in square dancing on Thursday, April 25, at the same time.

Frosh Tracksters Prepare for B. H. S.

10 Days Left Until First Meet

With less than ten days remaining until the first meet, Coach Roy Wietz is concentrating his efforts upon whipping the freshman track squad into shape. Inclement weather has added to the obstacles already in his path.

All together, twenty-one men have reported to the squad call. Lack of experience is the chief characteristic of the group. Because of this, Coach Wietz has very few definite ideas as to the line-up for the various events. Thus far, workouts have been characterized by work in conditioning and the drilling of fundamentals.

The schedule for this coming season consists of four meets. Three of these are dual meets and the remaining meet is to be run on a triangular basis.

A new comer appears on the schedule in the first position—Burlington High School. This meet will be run off on April 26. No definite line is available on the Burlington squad except that they have a relatively large squad. Following this come two more dual meets also to be run at home. The first of these is with Green Mountain Junior College. Last year, the Green Mountain boys emerged victorious. Next comes the dual affair with Bellows Falls and Springfield High School.

Winding up the season in a triangular affair, the two opponents appeared on the frosh schedule last year. They are Lyndon Institute and St. Johnsbury Academy. A review of last year's results shows that both schools defeated the U. V. M. freshmen.

However, last year, both schools were met on a different basis—they were met individually. The triangular affair this year may change the story entirely.

Women in Sports

Badminton has become one of our major indoor sports this year and great interest has been shown especially in the tournaments and Green and Gold competition games. The freshmen at the beginning of the winter sport season took this as regular routine class work, but developed such enthusiasm that many signed up for the Badminton Club which was held Tuesday and Thursday of each week under the direction of Jean Stewart '41 and Marian Rice '41, who are W. A. A. managers of this sport. Single matches as well as doubles are played on these evenings, when all the girls on campus interested in badminton come out for a few hours, whether they take the sport in regular class or not. The club held two meetings in January open to men who took advantage of the good badminton courts and came out to have a most enjoyable evening. Professors' and men's sport coaches came out as well as the students and mixed doubles were played with the girls. A few of the Badminton Club members were invited to the Y. M. C. A. one night and played mixed matches there with the woman members. Several unique ways of dividing teams were demonstrated. This week moving pictures of badminton are being taken with Eleanor Bayley, Jean Stewart, Ed Keenan and Gilly Pine giving the demonstration of a doubles match.

The Green and Gold competition tournament is getting under way, and the respective teams have just been announced by Kay Holden '42, captain of the Gold team, and Barbara Gallagher '42, captain of the Green team.

Gold—Stewart, Rice, Craig, Kyle, Finney, Hall, Dike, Wishart, Deming, Coderre.

Green—Bayley, Howe, Fiske, Harte, Klinger, Clark, Quimby, Bone, M. Witham, Goodwin.

On Tuesday evening three single matches, which will begin promptly at 7 o'clock, will be played, and on Thursday three doubles matches. Everyone interested in watching these games is welcome to come.

Bowling

The interest and activity in the sport of bowling has also greatly increased this year and the girls are bowling now, not only for credit, but for fun! Classes attended by about twenty girls are held every Wednesday afternoon at the alleys at Bowlaway. This sport is under the supervision of Miss Cummings, and her W. A. A. bowling manager, Betty Taylor '40. The girls have entered with enthusiasm into outside competitions such as the one held last week with the Administrative staff. On March 15 Mr. Adsit gave a party at Bowlaway at which the girls bowled with the boys. There were about fifteen in each group and both displayed a lively sense of rivalry. Gail Klinger '42 made the highest score among the girls that afternoon and was awarded by Mr. Adsit a very attractive trophy of a girl bowler. Martha Crane '41 who was second high scorer also received a trophy, while the boys received cups. Refreshments were served, and everyone had an enjoyable afternoon.

Catamounts to Face Amherst

Springfield and Tufts to Follow

Limbered up by their annual preseason southern trip, the Gardnermen start their regular schedule this week against the Massachusetts ball clubs.. Off on a four-day trip starting Wednesday, the team plays its first game Thursday at Amherst against a capable Amherst nine. From Amherst the squad heads east to play Tufts at Medford and then up to play Springfield College at Springfield.

Squad Picked for Trip

While on the southern trip several combinations were tried and being tested have caused Coach Gardner to plan on the following for the trip: The infield of Lawrence, Spasyk, Healey and Wood clicked well down South and will remain intact except for a possible alternation of Maley at first. Boucher will handle the receiving with Spasyk as a possible substitution. Sysko and Taylor will continue to handle the long ones with Conrad taking the place of Utley, Pitchers Pesarik, Carlson, Akley, Belardinelli and Hart are expected to ease the fielding problem.

Keen Competition at Amherst

Due to the high caliber of friendly sportsmanship exchanged between Amherst and U. V. M. diamond squads, there has developed the type of competitive spirit that brings out the best in a college ball club. The concentrated application in the Amherst-Vermont games often usually exceeds that of other games. Expecting, therefore, that the Catamount will put its best paw forward, it is reasonable that Lefty Pesarik or Carlson might draw the Amherst assignment.

No Outdoor Practice

Because of lack of spring to date, the squad has had no outdoor practice other than the games played on the southern trip. This is a serious handicap to a team as constant cage work can never provide the playing situations encountered on the field. Stymied by this last snowfall, Coach Gardner has had to abandon his plans for outdoor work yesterday and today and cage work has constituted the only practice.

The squad leaves tomorrow at 4 p.m. and is due to play Amherst Thursday afternoon.

Dr. Ober of Boston Addresses Pre-Meds.

Is Introduced by Dean Kemp

Dr. Frank Roberts Ober, eminent orthopedic surgeon of Boston; Mass., addressed a well-attended meeting of the University Pre-medical Society in the Medical Building, Friday evening, April 12.

Doctor Ober has been John B. and Buckminster Brown clinical professor of orthopedic surgery at Harvard University Medical School since 1937 and is dean in charge of courses for graduates there. He is professor of orthopedic surgery at the University of Vermont Medical School; surgeon-in-chief of the New England Peabody Home for Crippled Children; and consulting orthopedic surgeon at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital.

Need of Broad View

Dean Hardy A. Kemp of the Medical School introduced Doctor Ober to the students. In an interesting and direct manner Doctor Ober spoke of the medical field and the qualities requisite of the successful doctor and included humorous yet meaningful incidents from his own career. With regard to the preliminary education of the medical student it is essential that it be broad, for the doctor must have a fundamental foundation. This accounts for the pre-medical courses that are being offered today.

In the medical school itself Doctor Ober said the study of anatomy is most important and must be visualized as well as memorized. Otherwise the student will lose his knowledge with time, since it has been but memorized. Physiology, the science of function is the next most important study, though chemistry in medicine presents an extended field today. Chemical disturbances due to chronic emotional upsets may often precipitate more serious ailments. Doctor Ober discussed the profound chemical reactions that may be caused by fear.

Doctor's Interests

The doctor, Doctor Ober advised, should be an avid reader of literature as well as of medical subjects, taking an occasional vacation, going back to his medical school and attending medical meetings. His position in the town is an important one, and he must become acquainted with the town people and interested in town affairs. It is important that he have a hobby, whether it be boating, fishing, athletic games, painting, sculpture, or the like. Doctor Ober told of one group of doctors that made up their own symphony orchestra.

Doctor Ober urged the student not to plan to be a specialist, since he will tend to study only those things in which he is interestetd. Success in medicine, Doctor Ober said, depends upon the doctor producing something, doing his job, and treating his patients well, without overtreatment. This means unending work on his part with extreme interest and attention in the face of medical fees which are lower today than they were ten years ago.

V. C. A. to Sponsor Razz-Dazz Saturday

Vermont Christian Association offers to you an excellent opportunity to make the contribution you wish to the Far Eastern Student Service Fund. This fund aids in the maintenance of education in China.

Do you realize that the five cents you spend for a coke would give a Chinese student shelter for a week? If you would contribute the fifteen cents that you spend for your frosted chocolate, a Chinese fellowman could be assured of food for a week. Girls, the five dollars that you are spending for a spring permanent will give sixty Chinese students adequate winter clothing. Perhaps you are feeling very generous, if so, we suggest that you send a check for ten dollars. Your check will give support to a Chinese student for an entire year.

To help you with the task of contributing, the Vermont Christian Association is having a Razz-Dazz and Fun Nite Saturday evening, eight-thirty until twelve, at Southwick. For only ten cents you may have an evening which will please the most varied tastes, and your money will be a contribution to the Far Eastern Student Service Fund. More detail of the Razz-Dazz and Fun Nite will be found in another column in this issue.

Of course if you have any separate contributions to make Kenneth Johnson will be glad to receive them.

Rev. Sisson Speaks To Methodist Group

The Rev. O. H. Sisson, pastor of the local Baptist Church, spoke to the Methodist college group on "Interesting and Important Personalities in India" on Sunday evening.

Doctor Sisson had chosen three of these characters to talk on—Ghandi being one of them. He gave brief account of their lives and why he considered them among the greatest people of the world. That there were four general castes in India and that Ghandi came from the bottom of the third caste, from which he had fought his way up to his present position in spite of caste position was brought out.

One of these three greatest men was an outcast, therefore, he could not be legally educated, but due to his persistence in staying around school buildings he was given an opportunity to get an education, and is today teaching students of the highest castes in India. Doctor Sisson brought out that it was the "Love of God" that put the outcasts on their feet.

Reverend Sisson emphasized that India was more to be compared to Europe than to any one country of Europe, and that there are more languages and dialects in India than in Europe. A short discussion of the caste system, would it ever be abandoned and England's Indian problem completed the very interesting subject for the evening.

"What a Life" is Junior Week Play

Cast Chosen for Comedy By Clifford Goldsmith

"What A Life," a three act play by Clifford Goldsmith, has been selected as the annual Junior Week presentation and is to take place Thursday evening, May 9, 1940, at Southwick Memorial. Although this play is not outstanding from a literary point of view, it is, nevertheless, a typical Junior Week play—very life-like, natural, humorous, and definitely written to entertain the public.

It treats the difficulties that one high school student can get into, and tends to bring the individual onlooker back to his or her comparatively carefree pre-college days. No scene or incident is used that has not happened some where in our own lives; no member of the imaginary faculty is very different from our own high school teachers; and no character is too remote from our unlimited array of acquaintances.

Rehearsals for "What A Life," got under way Tuesday, April 16, 1940, although all of the characters have not been definitely cast as yet. At present the cast of characters reads as follows:

Miss Shea, Barbara Tucker '43; Mr. Nelson, George Noonan '40; Mr. Patterson, undecided; Miss Pike, Janet Rust '42; Bill, C. Marks '42 or P. Poulin '41; George, P. Poulin '41 or C. Marks '42; Miss Egglestone, Marian Stoughton '43; Miss Johnson, Anne Bottomley '42; Vecchitto, unfilled; Henry, Roger Hunting '42; Barbara, Janet Hackwell '43; Gertie, Patricia Page '43; Mr. Bradley, Hank Middleworth '40; Miss Wheeler, Barbara Butterfield '42; Mrs. Aldrich, Louise Mann '41; Mr. Ferguson, S. Sirkin '42; and Mary, a student, Patricia Pike '43.

The presentation is under the able guidance of Mrs. C. I. Taggart, and features the largest cast required in many years.

Although numerous vacancies have appeared in the ranks of the veteran artists due to outside sports and heavy schedules, many freshmen have been introduced into the cast, thus adding new blood to the organization, and it is expected to work out very nicely on the whole. With an excellent cast and an expert director, "What A Life," promises to be one of the most brilliant, star-student dramatic efforts to make its appearance on the hill.

William Shumway, Vocational Guide, Addresses Seniors

More Jobs This Year For Students Who Know How to Apply for Them

"There will be more jobs this year," thusly did Mr. William Shumway, president of the Personal Analysis Council in Boston, strike the keynote in his annual spring lecture to the seniors of the University of Vermont last Monday evening at 4.30.

The topic of Mr. Shumway's most interesting and informative lecture was "Techniques of Job Finding." Mr. Shumway limited his lecture to the four successive steps in the securing of a position.

"Know what you have to sell" was the first step, and Mr. Shumway declared that this step is a very important one since one must definitely know what he wishes to sell before taking a position.

A market survey was the second step outlined in Mr. Shumway's lecture. He said that many prospective jobs can be secured by reading in between the lines of a newspaper and he cited various examples regarding this method. Mr. Shumway then told the seniors the what and the whatnots of application letters for jobs. Mr. Shumway warned the seniors not to write an "I" letter but to write a "you" letter. In other words, do not be egotistical or praise yourself, because the prospective employer will not believe you. He also cautioned the seniors not to write sob stories, as most employers have enough sorrows of their own without having to listen to anyone else's.

Mr. Shumway then advised the seniors as to how an application letter should be written. He did this by giving a model letter which should contain but four essential things; namely, age, education, experience, and finally, a request for an interview. Mr. Shumway then gave a few valuable hints which might help a person in receiving a job. Some of these were putting in a self-addressed envelope in your application, the reason being that the prospective employer might feel a moral obligation to answer the letter, also one should send his letter in the middle of the week and to use commemorative stamps because they attract attention.

The third step in Mr. Shumway's plan was advertising yourself. This can be done by looking up business firms in directories and writing them letters,

Because Mr. Flanders is greatly interested in the economic future of this country, as well as its relation to engineering problems, his lecture should be of widespread interest.

Razz Dazz to Aid Chinese Students

Square Dancing Added To Evening's Program

Saturday evening, April 20, until 12 o'clock at Southwick, there will be a Razz-Dazz and Fun Night sponsored by the Vermont Christian Association. For only ten cents there will be a evening of pleasure which will satisfy the most varied taste. The ballroom will be the scene of dancing for which an amplified victrola will supply the music. Excellent recordings of the top notch bands will be used. Most interesting of all is the plan to have a original lighting device which will serve as decorations. In the gymnasium, from 10 o'clock until 12 o'clock, there will be old-fashioned square dancing for those who do not know how but wish to learn these dances. There will be people to help you. Even the music will be true to the old-fashioned square dancing style, a piano and a violin. Everyone knows how much fun one has when square dancing.

Y. W. C. A. is planning games for the friends who do not care to dance.

This Razz-Dazz and Fun Night is not only for students. We, hereby, invite all members af the faculty and of the administration to attend the V. C. A. Fun Night.

This Razz-Dazz and Fun Night is the second in a series sponsored by V. C. A. for the student body. It is hoped that there will be interest and support enough so that the old Razz-Dazz might be revived, and Fun Night be a definite part of next year's social calendar. Everyone is assured of an enjoyable evening whether you come as couples or stags. The ten cents that you contribute will be for the Far Eastern Student Service Fund. This fund is used for the relief of Chinese students. Ten cents would guarantee a Chinese student food for a week. Now is your chance to contribute to the fund very easily. If you have any separate contributions to make K. Johnson '41 will be glad to receive them.

We wish to invite again those members of the faculty who would care to have an evening of pleasure and to become better acquainted with the students to attend the Razz-Dazz and Fun Night.

Chairman of the dance is K. Hoffman '40; music arranged by W. M. Colehamer, '41; tickets, H. Thurber, '43; lighting, H. Tatro, '43.

Professor and Mrs. Bickford and Mr. and Mrs. Marvin will chaperone.

Refreshments will be sold by the Y. W. C. A.

Remember the date, Saturday, April 20, at Southwick, 8.30 until 12 o'clock. Your ten cents will help the Chinese.

EDITORIALS

Within the comparatively short period of its existence women's student government upon the University of Vermont campus has had to cope with many obstacles and trials. Its first one was the opposition of the faculty who believed that students were lacking in time and experience to take such a daring step as to have a vote in the making and executing of laws governing the student body as a whole.

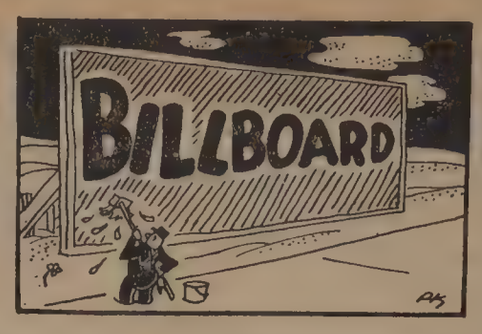
A men's student council was attempted but the male students had no desire to undertake such a project. Maybe it was such stiff opposition which differentiated the two attempts and fired the women into establishing a representative governing body.

Student Union has labored under very democratic conditions. The women's student body has selected its representatives every year from nominees appointed by the outgoing Student Council. The Student Council works hand in hand with the Faculty-Student Council which adds the more stable element to the organization.

To every woman student has been entrusted the right to bring any question before the representative bodies for discussion. These very women, however, have furnished the second great opposing element to Student Union. They complain against the attempts of their representatives to provide all the desired freedoms. They forget that their representatives are human, too, and probably desire those freedoms for themselves.

One of their chief complaints has been the monopoly of offices by a very few girls. In answer, Student Union, with faculty advice, has devised the new system of points for various offices.

The recent women's elections mark the initiation of the new system. Certainly it offers an opportunity for more equal division of work but whether more than the old run of girls can be found to perform all the duties taken care of previously remains to be seen.



—R. S. '41.

Confucius Was Right

We ran across this saying of Confucius the other day (and this is a genuine Confucius-say, not one of the collection of phonies now going around): "Life is really simple, but men insist on making it complicated."

In our tanglefooted and cross-purposed world of today, isn't this quiet word from across the ages (Confucius lived 551-478 B. C.) worth almost anybody's pondering for a few moments now and then?

Business or professional men tormented by suspicion of their associates or hatred of their competitors . . . idealists despairing of the human race because it is so human . . . married couples expecting impossibly much of each other (or not enough) . . . parents worried sick because they can't live their children's lives for them . . . young people perplexed by the world unfolding ahead of them . . . anybody who has let life turn himself too much in upon himself—to all these, we'd like to pass along this diamond that was cut and polished by the great sage of China some 2,400 years ago. It looks to us like a blue brilliant of at least 60 carats: "Life is really simple, but men insist on making it complicated."

NOTICE TO STUDENTS LOOKING FOR JOBS—If you are job-hunting, either for summer or permanent positions, won't you telephone the University News Office if you would be interested in appearing over Radio Station WCAX in a new program which may help you. We hope this program, which applies to men and women members of all classes at the University, may give prospective employers a better chance of finding you—and you of finding them. But let us know immediately if you are interested, because time is short and only a limited number of programs will be possible between now and Commencement, Monday, June 10. Speak to Prof. Leon W. Dean or Dorothy Slayton, at the University News Office in the Music Building. Telephone 1482.

All those who desire to enter the Horseshoe Singles Tournament should leave their names at the Physical Education Office this week.

Entries may be either short stories, essays, or poems. This will be a very important meeting, since plans for the literary page in the CYNIC will also be discussed. I have received a letter from the management of the New York World's Fair stating the college students may purchase admission tickets at reduced prices as follows:
1. A ticket book for twenty admissions at $3.50.
3. A ticket book good for an unlimited number of admissions at $5.
These must be purchased through the college which the student is attending.
Anyone wishing to purchase one of these should apply to me.—Elijah Swift, Dean.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the Cynic:

The following letter has been sent to the Athletic Council as a protest against the proposed replacement of Coach Sabo:

April 16, 1940.

Athletic Council
University of Vermont
Burlington, Vt.

Dear Sirs:

We, the following members of the University of Vermont athletic teams, wish to express confidence in the ability and leadership of Coach John P. Sabo.

We feel that the retainment of Coach Sabo would be an asset to the University of Vermont's athletic program.

Sincerely,
A. Belardinelli (Capt.),
H. Beauchemin (Capt.),
A. MacMillan (Capt. Track, 1937),
J. J. White,
E. J. Kodys,

P. E. Corley (Capt.),

To the Editor of the Cynic:

I think that the editorial in the April 12th CYNIC is an excellent idea and I would like to offer any assistance that I can give you.

Cleaning up the campus sounds like a big idea and a very ambitious one but if the work is divided up among the many different organizations of the campus it should be easy. I should think that if the direction of the work were put in the hands of the Faculty Student Council they would be in a good position to do the work with each of the Honorary Societies. They would perhaps divide the campus up and give each society one section or they might divide the work into sections such as grass planting, rolling the lawns, landscaping, the actual planting of shrubs, making and putting up the "keep off the grass" signs, etc. The honorary societies in turn could call on the other organizations for assistance. For instance, Key and Serpent might be assigned to the Front Campus and they could call on the engineers to put the Fountain back in order.

Money to pay for the seed and shrubs and other expenses could be raised by a tag day and probably the college administration would put some with this when they realized that we were in earnest. Possibly the Aggie College would loan the necessary implements and show the workers how to use them.

To make the whole college participate a prize or some kind of an award could be offered to the group that does the best job.

The Home Ec'ers could serve a lunch to the tired laborers when they have finished for a slight charge. Perhaps lemonade and cookies would be all they would want to venture the first year.

Since most of the activities of Founder's Day are in the morning, I think it is the ideal day for "Campus Day" and I hope that it can be initiated this year.

Key and Serpent Makes Changes

Revised Competition For Traynor Trophy

Hastily answering the need for revisions in the Traynor Trophy competition, Key and Serpent, junior men's honorary society and donors of the interfraternity competition cup at a meeting held Friday night decided to eliminate two features, revise one, and introduce another in the interfraternity race. It was unanimously agreed that points toward the coveted Traynor cup would no longer be given to the winning Junior Week Peerade Stunt and to the winning military drill squad. It was further decided that soft ball would replace baseball and that hockey, long a feature of the winter sports program would receive Traynor points awarded in the regular manner of five points to first place and three points to runner up. This action precipitated discussion that had dominated Key and Serpent meetings for several weeks and also came as at least one step in the climax to general campus discussion of interfraternity and entire college activity.

The Junior Society suggested that the elimination of Traynor awards for the Junior Week Peerade and military drill, does not, by any means, and of course could not obviate the existence of these features. However it was felt by the concerned body that as far as the trophy was concerned it would be wisest to pursue the action taken.

Consideration of the substitution of soft ball for hard ball came as a response to the Interfraternity Council's earlier discussion on that topic. It was felt that soft ball, a fast growing and nationally popular sport, would provide an equally, as satisfactory and very probably fairer form of competition.

The introduction of hockey on the Traynor list is not inconsistent with the Key and Serpent program, for hockey has long been a feature of the winter sports program and its growing position on this program has been reorganized as such by Key and Serpent.

The above revisions will go into effect this year.

Debating Teams Complete Season

Returning from some 6,100 miles on the road during Easter vacation, both men's and women's teams concluded activity in debate for the current school year. Each team, travelling to different parts of the country, participated in seven debates, though only four of the fourteen were of the decision variety, the women winning two and losing one, the men losing their only decision debate.

The men a team, composed of A. H. Becker '41, H. A. Durfee '41, T. R. Huntley '41, and J. G. Cohen, '42, travelled 2,000 miles, reaching as far south as Ashland, Va., meeting Rhode Island State College, Brothers College of Drew University, Upsala College, Muhlenberg College, Randolph-Macon College, Georgetown College, and Washington College, losing to Georgetown. The isolation question was used in all debates by both teams.

Gertrude Johnston '40, Eleanor Brody '40, and Gwendolyn Blanchard '40, accompanied by Coach Merrill D. Powers, travelled as far south as Miami, Fla., covering 4,100 miles in all. They met Duke University, John Stetson University, University of Miami, Florida Southern College, Women's College of the University of Florida, University of Georgia, the College of Lenoir Rhyne, and the University of Richmond. The women's team defeated speakers from the University of Miami and Florida Southern College, losing out to Women's College of the University of Florida.

Track Squad Off For Williams Meet

Crippled By Loss of Burgess, Kenney, Allen

Old Man Weather has been the pet gripe of Archie Post, the varsity track coach, up to the present time. Snow covered turf does not permit middle distance and sprint men to get the proper training for their events. They can only jog around the indoor track and loosen up a bit. Perhaps the balmy weather of the past few days will dry up the ground enough, so that these men can practice outdoors and the hurdles will have a chance to run their initial flight of hurdles of the season before the Williams meet Saturday. Searl is working out on the low hurdles and Charlie Itzkowitz is just beginning to round into form on the high and low hurdles after a late start.

Another loss to the squad is Jack Burgess, last year's frosh star in the quarter and half mile runs, who has just returned home from the hospital after a long illness. He will be unavailable for the duration of the season.

In the middle distances, there is a large number of aspirants, but there will have to be time trials to find the best of the group to make the Williams trip. These men are Davis, Eaton, Gallup, Kaplan, S. Levine, Otis, Robey, Stoddard, Edson, Lippe, and Cummings. Gordie Smith, last year's star is the only man so far definitely slated to start in these events.

Poor weather does not hamper long distance runners, field men, weight men and jumpers, as they can practice fairly well inside.

Some headaches are in store for Vermont's track mentor, as Bob Kenney crack hurdler, has been out ill for quite some time, and it is very doubtful whether he will be in fit condition to compete Saturday. Bud Allen, another star hurdler, is also ill with a cold as are the other hurdlers. The cold epidemic has wreaked havoc with Coach Post's hurdling squad. To fill in this gap, Arnie Becker, high jump star, may be run in the high hurdles and possibly in the lows.

Davy Stowell is slated for the half mile, but time trials will also have to decide his backers.

In the dashes, there will be Gordie Smith, Nichols and possibly Cummings, a senior.

Frank Livak is the choice in the two miles with his supporters as yet undecided.

The mile run will see Vermont strong with the Webster boys, Dick Clark and P. Corliss. Stoddard may also run the mile.

Becker and Hunter will bear the brunt of the burden in the high jump possibly aided by Pratt.

The pole vault will find Pratt and J. Davis doing most of the pole bending.

In the broad jump, Arnie Becker is the outstanding man and will be aided by any other candidates who present themselves for trial and fare favorably.

Johnstone and Herberg will heave the shot and possibly Gage. These same boys will handle the discuss.

The hammer will be thrown by Pearl and Johnstone.

Nichols and H. Long will heave the javelin.

There are a number of men who reported late who will be of considerable aid to the team when they have had a few more workouts. The Williams meet Saturday will be a good barometer to be used in judging team balance and power.

Freshman Track Team Practices Outdoors

A twist of a tendon dealt a stiff blow to the budding hopes of Coach Roy Wietz. M. A. Cozzolino, an extremely promising dash man, turned an ankle. Cozzolino had been anticipated as a sure starter in the sprints events against Burlington High School in the first meet. With the possibility now that he may be out for two weeks, a worrisome frown is beginning to crease Coach Wietz's face. The irony of the situation is that Cozzolino was merely walking when the mishap occurred.

The squad is now working outdoors. With the continuance of the present excellent weather, time-trials will be held either Friday or Saturday of this week. So far the squad, considered from the standpoint of form, has a nice gloss to it. Competition, however, may cast an entirely different light upon the group. The time-trials, at any rate, will clarify the situation to a great extent.

Other men out are R. A. Bloomer, D. M. Campbell, M. W. Crown, R. W. Early, J. P. Goss, R. P. Grosvenor, G. E. Little, W. H. Milne, E. J. O'Connell, H. C. Parker, Jr., H. N. Parris, J. C. Richardson, Jr., E. F. St. Mary, Jr., H. C. Vreeland, H. Wood, J. W. Williams, D. M. Zwick, H. J. Windall, Jr., F. R. Swift, Jr., R. S. White, D. S. M. Corliss, L. Harrington.

Women in Sports

With spring in the air—and all that—a woman's thoughts, that is, the active woman's, are turning to tennis (when she's not thinking of that tall handsome so and so!) But all is not in readiness for them to skip lightly to and fro upon the courts, now and then hitting a ball—oh no, and to take care of this time when the spirit is willing but conditions are bad, Miss Crowe and her assistants are having indoor tennis classes beginning on Monday, the 22nd. All those who have signed up for tennis, whether beginners, intermediate or advanced, should bring their rackets to class if they have them, and if not some will be provided. Valuable instructions on court positions, strokes, scoring, and anything else there's any doubt about will be given.

A coaching class for those advanced players who may be interested in methods of coaching or just in polishing up their game is being held on Mondays at 4.15. Those girls in this class who are interested will be allowed to help in the beginner's classes later on in the season, thus providing a good testing ground for their knowledge and a few extra W. A. A. points for each hour spent.

The interest in ping-pong, which waxed high among the girls while there was snow on the ground, but now is slowly being pushed back for newer sports is still being kept up by Betty Myers and Charlotte Hall, who are the finalists in the W. A. A. tournament. The game promises to be one of those nip and tuck affairs in which you want to keep changing your bets, for both girls are good and will have to work for their points. We play no favorites, but couldn't pick the winner if we wanted to, so "good luck to the both of you, and may the best girl win."

The Green and Gold teams have played several games in their tournament. The girls on the teams are as follow:

Green (1st—Klinger, Harte, Taylor, Wray (sub).

Gold (1st)—Holcomb, Crane, Witham, Skinner.

Green (2nd)—McGovern, Kelty, Boelsen, Spiwak.

Gold (2nd)—Oling, Kyle, Wood, Begun.

To be winner one team must win two out of three games. The Green team was victorious last week. Watch for the results!

Charts for signing up for outdoor sports have been posted in the "Y" room. These must be filled out before Friday afternoon, as outdoor classes begin Tuesday, April 23. Special notice is made of riding this year. The class will be held with the Burlington Riding Club at Oakledge Manor. The instructor will be Mr. J. Roberts, and six lessons will be given for $6 plus a small transportation fee. Girls who took this gym class previously have found Mr. Roberts' instruction very fine, and now there are the added advantages of riding with the Burlington Club. If you are interested, sign on the W. A. A. board before Wednesday noon. This is the dead-line time.

Mozart's comic opera, "Abduction from the Harem," will be presented in its entirety for the first time in the United States by the music department of the University of Michigan.

Coach Sabo

Coaches Evans and Wietz Offered New Contracts

The Athletic Council early this week announced decisions on the consideration of the contracts of the football coaches Sabo, Evans, and Wietz. Mr. Sabo's contract was not renewed, but Messrs Evans and Wietz were offered three year contracts. Coach Sabo has been head coach of football for six years now and during that time has taken care of basketball. It is probable that Coaches Evans and Wietz will split the girdiron management, but as yet no definite assignment has been made to the basketball post.

Squad Leaves For Massachusetts Trip

Baseball Team to Play Tufts and Springfield

Delayed one day by the cancellation of the Amherst game, the baseball squad left yesterday instead of Wednesday on the Massachusetts trip. The Amherst game being called off because of unpreparedness of the Amherst diamond, the team was slated to go directly to Medford for this afternoon's clash with Tufts. On Saturday morning, they will leave for Springfield to play Springfield College that afternoon.

The Jumbos are putting out a snappy aggregation of all veterans and the chances are that the Catamounts will find them less lumbering than the name implies. Capt. Al Hatch who is expected to draw the pitching assignment is a senior completing four years of competent hurling at Tufts. Al, leading Jumbo pitcher for the last three years played ball last summer with the Berlin White Sox in the White Mountains.

Joe Dineen for the second year is handling first base. Low last year in his batting average, Joe made up for it with some spectacular fielding to the right of the mound. Lou Gessay will handle the keystone corner for the second year. A double threat for three years on fielding and batting, George Chiros, shortstop, is out to maintain his usual .300 at the plate. Mark Hanabury is returning for his second year at third. Tommy Lee, Brony Budranas, and Sonny Raphael will cover the garden from right to left in that order. Either Ben Gaieski or Grant Curtis will receive. Both are rated about the same, but Curtis has been out sick during the first practices and Gaieski might get the jump on him.

The squad left Burlington at one-thirty yesterday and were expected to arrive in Boston at eight. They were to lodge at the University Club in Boston and travel over to Medford at two o'clock this afternoon for the game which is scheduled for three. They will sleep over again in Boston tonight and leave for Springfield tomorrow morning at eight-thirty.

Rugby Team Leaves For Boston Today

The Rugby team leaves for Boston this afternoon to play the Harvard Junior Varsity on Saturday. P. J. Whalen, president of the Rugby club, says that the required team number of fifteen will make the trip and although there are no substitutions in rugby, there is a possibility that a few more players will also go.

The team has accepted a bid to play Long Island University on May 4, and arrangements are also being made to bring the Boston Rugby Club here for a game in the near future.

Whither Weather?

Mark Twain once wrote a book in which he omitted all mention of the weather except for an introduction in which he included a description of all sorts of weather which the readers might use as they saw fit. Well we think that is the most sensible plan we've ever heard of—ignore the weather. And that is what we are going to do or die trying. We've found out that we can't win. Predict a blizzard and the robins start chirping in the sun-drenched willows. Predict a spring thaw and the ground becomes concrete, the heavens cloud up and a soft veil of snow drops on the tired earth. No, sir, we give up. From now on we will leave the weather to its own devices, we're afraid to even mention it.

Mostly Baseball

Misery likes company. So though we regret that the baseball tilt with Amherst was postponed, it also makes us feel good to know that Centennial isn't the only submerged diamond in the country. The Lord Jeffs had to call off the contest because their diamond was fit only for water polo and other aquatic sports. All of which leaves the baseball squad only two games to worry about this week-end—Tufts and Springfield. Rumor has it that the Jumbos are no pushovers. Eight lettermen are on deck and four others on the squad have had experience. Captain Al Hatch flings for the Berlin Red Sox in the White Mountains during the summer and is the Jumbo's "meal ticket" on the mound. George Chiros, shortstop is a .300 hitter and a definite threat to the opposition. Other veterans on the starting line-up include Lou Gessay, second base, a smooth fielder; Mark Hanabury, third base, good sticker and fielder and Tommy Lee, right field, speed demon and lead-off man. All of this seems to add up to plenty of baseball power. Larry Gardner will probably put Pesarik or Carlson on the mound for the Catamounts and we're looking for a great battle. This will be the first real test for the team. One handicap will be that they have had little outdoor practice excepting on the southern trip but with seven games under their belt they should be all set to uncork some red hot baseball. We wouldn't be at all surprised if the team walked off with the decision—after all this isn't exactly the weakest team ever to represent Vermont. A win over Tufts would certainly put the right hue on the diamond situation. There's nothing like getting off to a good start. As for Springfield we're in the dark—all we can do is wait for the results.

Flying Starts

Speaking of flying starts we notice that they aren't losing much time in the big leagues. Was that a no-hitter Bob Feller pitched for the Indians on opening day or are we having hallucinations? As for Lefty Grove, well frankly we think it's disgraceful for an old-timer like him to go around pitching two-hitters as though there wasn't anything to it. It sure does the heart good to see the familiar box scores in the papers again. Though we can't help pitying the poor Yanks, dropping a game to the lowly Athletics. What is this world coming to?

Something on Track

In our usual rambling style we drop around to the subject of track. Williams is first on the program for Archie's cohorts and that's one tough assignment. You remember they weren't easy last year and indications are they won't be any easier this year. And that is saying—just about nothing. But we'll be darned if we know what to say. We know Archie has a pretty good squad this year. So what? You can't tell in track until you see the men in action. So we'll just have to leave things right up in the stratosphere—maybe the Cats will pull out a win, maybe they won't. However, even a close score will be a highly favorable sign as a squad which holds Williams to a close score at this stage in the game must have something.

Bow to Rugby

It's always a pleasure to greet a new sport's appearance on the campus and we're glad to do so for rugby. At long last the rugby squad has left for its first match—with the Harvard men no less. That's something. Yes sir things seem to be booming. Here's luck to the newcomer in campus sports.

Well it seems that we have the situation well in hand or vice versa. Signing off—the printer waits us, deadline is here and almost gone.

Tennis Team to Visit Southern New England

After a period of pre-season training on the gym area the Varsity tennis team is settling down to serious preparation for the opening trip next week-end when it visits Southern New England to play Williams, Amherst and Trinity.

Capt. G. B. Booth '40, A. D. Wolk '41, and J. E. Simpson '41, will fill the first, second and third positions respectively while at present L. F. Pine '41, S. J. Foti '41, L. B. Whitcomb '40, A. D. Clark '40, and C. J. Katzew '42, are waging a battle for the fourth, fifth and sixth positions.

Coach Carpenter says the competition for the last three positions is keen and it has not been which men will be selected for the season's opening matches. The home schedule will begin on May 1, when Clarkson College visits Burlington for its annual match.

One out of every 16 persons listed in "Who's Who" is a former University of Chicago student.

Freshman Tennis Team Better Than Last Year

Under the guidance of Coach Paul Rand the University of Vermont Freshman tennis team is holding four practice sessions weekly on the gym surface. These indoor matches are being held by Coach Rand so that he can determine the calibre of his charges at an early date. At the present R. L. Swift, P. N. Sutton and W. A. West State Junior Doubles Champion are battling for the top positions, while W. J. Black, M. A. Cycleman, W. A. Towne, R. C. Hay, and M. L. Cushing are trying for the remaining places.

Indications so far show that last year's record of three wins, one loss and two ties will be bettered during the coming campaign. There is a wealth of better-than-average material some of which may be worked into doubles combinations when the squad is able to hold its workouts on the University campus courts. The first match is with Burlington High on April 27.

Capital University has an annual Liquidation Day on which all students are expected to settle their indebtedness and pay their bills.

Outing Club Council Honors Ski Teams

The University of Vermont Outing Club Council entertained the members of the men's and women's ski team and other guests at a banquet at the Paragon, April 16. The ski coaches Sepp Rusch, Otto Hollaus, the faculty advisor Mr. Prentice, and Mrs. Prentice, Vance Tartar of the Zoology Department, Mr. Lionel Hayes, and a world famous photographer, Mr. Coty, were the honored guests. After the banquet toastmaster, Ev Bailey' 40, called on Peter Patch '40, the coaches, Mr. Prentice, manager Jack Couture '41, Dot Smith '41, and Capt. Dane Collins '41, for short speeches. Mr. Coty then showed a reel of technicolor movies. It included shots of the world's and Canada's champions of figure skating, Kandahar ski races in Canada, races on the Mansfield Nose Dive, techniques of jumping, cross country competition, and some beautiful snow scenes on Mt. Mansfield. He emphasized the fact that skiing need not be just for competition, but it is also a means of discovering an artists' paradise. Mr. Coty has recently finished a reel of Sepp Rusch demonstrating touring skiing on the Nose Dive. When released it will be used to teach such techniques.

Members of the men's ski team who were present were Peter Patch '40, Hank Pache '41, Floyd Rising, '41, Dick Tracy, '41, Bud Sutton '43, and Ernest St. Mary '43. The women's team included Barbara Burns '43, Sally Peters '42, and Margaret Goodell '42.

Sixteen members of the council were hosts.

Flying Cadets "Trouble Shooting" on the Test Blocks

After the theory of internal combustion engines has been taught in Ground School at Randolph Field, Texas, the Flying Cadets go to the long row of test blocks where are mounted aviation engines of all types and sizes. Practical work is performed on these motors, including "trouble shooting," that is, determining the cause of improper operation of the engine. Minor faults in either the carburetion or electrical system are intentionally caused in these engines, and then the game of hide and seek begins with the Flying Cadets searching for the cause of the elusive misfire. In this photograph, several Flying Cadets can be seen working on the engine itself while another member of the group, in the foreground, is operating the throttle. The student pilots are protected from the whirling propeller by the heavy wire screening, seen on the extreme left. When the difficulty is finally discovered, a critic is held by the instructor in charge of the group, during which they discuss the method of finding that particular fault. This practical work in "trouble shooting," is part of the course given the future pilots, for, unless they are completely familiar with all the inner workings of the motor of their plane, they are not qualified to make decisions should an engine begin to falter while in the air. During the entire course which lasts nine months and results in the coveted pair of wings and a commission in the Air Corps Reserve, Flying Cadets receive a salary of $75.00 per month in addition to their food, clothing, transportation from their homes to the School to which they are first assigned, and medical care. Prospective applicants must be between twenty and twenty-seven years of age, unmarried, and in sound physical health. If they have as much as two years of college education, they do not have to take the mental examination, but all applicants stand a rigid physical test before being accepted for flight training.

Student Opinion

By Joe Belden, Editor

Student Opinion Surveys of America

Austin, Tex.—Although less than one-third of college students are eligible to vote in state or national elections, nearly nine out of every ten believe they should not be allowed to go to the polls before they are twenty-one.

This is shown in a national study conducted by the Student Opinion Surveys of America. Asked, "Are you for or against lowering the voting age from twenty-one to eighteen?" only 11 percent answered "yes."

That suffrage is for adults only seems to be a firmly set tradition with the American people, voters as well as non-voting students. A sampling conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion in June, 1939, pointed out that 83 percent of the nation opposed reducing the suffrage age to eighteen.

Interviewing a carefully selected cross-section of students in all types and sizes of institutions, the Surveys found:

	For	Against
All students	11%	89%
Students 21 or over	12	88
Students less than 21	10	90

The tabulations show that opinion is heavily in the opposition, and all student groups agree by almost identical percentages. It should be noted that it is the younger people themselves who are most opposed to allowing minors eighteen to twenty-one to vote. Students twenty-one or over—a group of nearly half a million—are slightly less opposed to such a change, and adult non-students are the least against. The usual reason given in the student poll was that voting should be restricted because young people eighteen or nineteen do not know enough about government. Surveys figures, however, tend to show that sometimes college students are better informed than the average voter. For example, an American Institute poll brought to light that one-third of the voters were not familiar with the activities of the Dies Committee. The Surveys found only 17 percent of the collegians had no opinion on the same subject.

Whether to give younger persons a voice in the government was brought into the headlines recently when the American Youth Commission pointed out that the constantly increasing number of aged people, who are eligible to vote, is making possible such programs as the Social Security Act, while youth, which is not enfranchised, has no power to bring about government solution of its problems.

Truth and Tradition

And Plenty of Both

Between the years 1845 and 1875 there appeared on the Vermont campus a publication konwn as the College Maul. It was published annually in late May or early June when the Sophomore Exhibition was held and dealt, at considerable length, with short-comings and "ribald" actions of the faculty, students and the three fraternities on campus. The Maul was published secretly under the editorship of persons unknown, who for the information of the college authorities and the world in general called themselves Grub, Grab and Company.

Each issue of the Maul was headed by a suitable inscription in Latin which offered comforting advice to those under fire. "Perge celeriter, if you don't want to be mauled" is the editorial advice of the issue of May, 1854. Several editions carried the following heading which appeared at the top of the first page directly below a sketch of a large wooden maul: "Terrible est fallere in handibus mauli."

The three secret societies on campus—Lambda Iota, Sigma Phi and Delta Psi—were severely scolded and ridiculed in every issue of the paper. The Owls were considered the cardinal sinners on the campus by virtue of their alleged partiality for gin. The Sigs were ordered to lay aside half-emptied whiskey bottles and reform. The Delts were pictured as standing in a pulpit with the Bible in one hand and a glass of beer in the other. The initials of each society also meant something to the Maul and Lambda Iota became "Long in Iniquity," Sigma Phi was translated into the "Sublime Fudge" and the Delta Psis were known as the "Detestables." Of all the sins possible to commit, the Maul considered gin drinking the worst. Ale and lager beer were not approved by the Maul but strong beer was looked upon more or less favorably. In fact, one of the agents for the Maul had the title "Punisher of Large Beer Venders" attached to his name. One issue devoted two full pages to a hitherto unpublished play called "The Tragedy of Five Gallons of Ale" with a cast of assorted professors and one sophomore.

The influence of the Maul was widely felt and the paper, according to the 1855 issue, had agents in Burlington, Ireland and Hades. The average cost per copy was ten cents and orders from clergymen of all denominations received the benefit of clergymen's rates—three dollars per copy. Wounded soldiers received the Maul free of charge women over sixteen and under twenty-five were assessed three cents but women past forty received the special rate of thirty-three cents a copy. To the community in general the Maul could be had for six cents. This however varied with the different editors.

Even in those days there was little love lost between Vermont and Middlebury and in 1862 there appeared in the Maul this short song for Middlebury students.

"We want but little hair below,
But want that little long."

Jokes, death notices, marriage notices and incidental information filled every nook and cranny of each issue of the Maul. For several years an unfortunate by the name of Hotchkiss was featured in many of the professor-student jokes but after a time dropped into merciful oblivion beyond the reach of the Maul. Notices of rewards offered by the Protector of Venders of Strong Beer appeared regularly. On another page, the same gentleman who offered rewards in the best interests of strong beer, offered new and striking patterns in night caps.

A seventeen year old student's decision to marry was attributed to softening of the brain and another chap's passing was attributed to sixness taken during a calculus examination.

In general, each issue contained several lengthy poems, at least two of which dealt directly with beer and assorted spirits. One column was devoted to each of the three upper classes but each of the three fraternities rated two columns generally headed by some cartoon in keeping with article. One editorial says, "We are resolved, that of you, as of the Dead, we will speak well or not at all." The editors thereupon proceed to bring to light the darkest of deeds done by anyone who had dared to move or think during the current school year.

The records of the Maul are complete up to about 1875 when it was apparently discontinued but whether due to personal lack of ambition or stringent action by the authorities it is difficult to say.

N.B.—Grub and Grab are indebted to J. H. Stephen, '42, who through diligent research, uncovered these potent facts.

Child Prodigy Who Made Good

Many child prodigies cease to be prodigies when maturity descends upon them, but here is the story of an exception to this generalization. At the age when most children are still in kindergarten this precocious individual gave a sensation his home town, and created a sensation as a concert pianist. When he was fourteen he played for the National Broadcasting Company in New York and was at that time the youngest pianist to perform this stunt. Many times during these early years he gulped his cereal and milk while seated at the piano. In fact, he still practices three hours daily. When our prodigy graduated from high school he joined Oliver Naylor's orchestra. Later he served an apprenticeship with NBC's house orchestra, and, following that, he played with Jean Goldbette, Joe Venuti, Seymour Simon, Mike Falk, and Bob Crosby. He now writes all the arrangements for his own orchestra, never looks at the keyboard when he plays with the orchestra, and answers all his own fan mail.

In regard to the man himself he has a sense of humor to which he gave out by placing a piece of limburger cheese in a saxophone player's mouthpiece. He has his little pet dislikes, one of which is the heckler who keeps bothering him when he is playing. He has his pet likes; one of them is George Gershwin, the late composer, another is his home state, Michigan. He thinks swing is wonderful but that modern composers are awful. Unlike most performers he wants both his son and his daughter to embark upon a stage career.

This brilliant individual is none other than Bob Lurke, leader and pianist of the band appearing here at Vermont for the annual Junior Prom. He and his Delta Rhythm Boys have appeared in cities all over the United States and promise to bring enjoyment to everyone who attends the Prom, for they play everything from the "boogie-woogie" to modern ultra-sophisticated swing.

William Shumway

furthermore the more letters you write the more chance you have of receiving a job due to the law of averages. Mr. Shumway warned them to write short letters and that these letters should emphasize the word "work" in them.

The fourth and final step in the technique of job finding is the actual contact or interview with your prospective employer. Mr. Shumway said that although this is the last step, you should not fall down here because this is a very important step. Personal appearance and poise carry much weight. Mr. Shumway then gave out a few "don'ts" in regard to interviews. Don't talk yourself out of a job, don't knock former teachers or professors, and don't tell the interviewer how much money you want.

Mr. Shumway then closed his lecture by stating there are more jobs this year and his business is the best it has been in twelve years, so undoubtedly this year's seniors can look at the future in a brighter light than the past few years.

Mary Nelson Awarded Fellowship At Mills College in California

"An excellent choice on the part of Mills College! 'Mary Nelson' is one of the best and most promising students that I have ever had. It's a grand thing for her. She'll enjoy it and get a lot out of it." These were the words of Prof. Paul Evans, head of the University of Vermont History Department, when asked for a comment on the fellowship bestowed by Mills College, Oakland, Calif., on Mary Nelson '40.

Has Held Many Offices

Mary is known by the entire campus. Her eager blue eyes are the neon design and her assiduous and indefatigable activity, the emblazoned letters. There is an ultimatum in her stride and a smile that could handle any Vermontish spring snow storm. Her every muscle and movement is keyed to compass. Aside from wearing the coveted Phi Beta Kappa key, Mary has probably held more responsible positions on the campus than any other student . . . entirely through ninety-nine and forty-four hundredths per cent pure work. She does not belong to any sorority. She has been a member of Mortar Board, Staff and Sandal, managing editor of the CYNIC, Bus-man and editor of the Handbook, on the Y. W. Council, president of Dramatic Club, on Kake Walk committee, and on Senior Week committee.

Mary, who is graduating in June, has majored in history under Professor Evans and minored in English and Political Science. She declared that she applied to various colleges for a fellowship with a bit of her tongue in the cheek, never dreaming that one of the outstanding western colleges would reach out its arms to her. If all goes well, next year will find her assisting the Mills College history department in reading and writing papers and teaching American History. She will get board, room and tuition gratis.

Likes European History

During the past few years Mary has been partial to European History, enabling her to view the present continental concoction with a keen and clear acumen. She plans eventually to teach, perhaps go in for vocational guidance work or even work in a Dean's office.

Woodstock is her home and Vermont, so far, her yard. A year in the West will widen her vision and also that of her associates, for Mary is not one to keep experience to herself. Whatever she will be able to share is all ready common-stock. She will make the yawning canyons wake up; the quail will learn the song of the robin and gold will be spat from the mouth of the Winooski . . . for there will be hands across the continent.

Gurney Delegate To Conference

Elizabeth Gurney '41 left Wednesday, April 17, to attend the Northeastern Sectional conference of the Athletic Federation of College Women held at Ohio State University from April 18 to April 20. Miss Gurney, as the new president of W. A. A. was sent as a representative of women's sports on Vermont campus. She will attend the conferences, discussion groups and business meetings, as well as the special features. Many outstanding conference speakers will be present: physical education instructors from Ohio State, Smith, University of Michigan, and Miss Patty Berg, 1938 National Women's Amateur Golf champion, who is now a student at the University of Minnesota.

A dance recital will be given Thursday evening and a formal dinner and banquet will be held Friday evening. There will be a mixed swimming party Saturday afternoon, with exhibition diving given by several outstanding divers. Sight-seeing tours of Columbus will be furnished during the open recreation hours.

The W. A. A. is very pleased to be able to send Miss Gurney out to this conference, as there has not been a representative from this campus for the last few years. From the suggestions and discussions of this conference, several new plans, already in the making, may be put into effect by W. A. A.

Looking At Vermont

Fifty Years Ago

A letter to the editor of the CYNIC from X, class of '90, protested against an editorial that appeared in the CYNIC previously. It seems that the editorial asserted that there is a "decadence of college spirit" and "the failure of everything that the college undertakes as a whole."

Fine Musicians In Brahms' "Requiem"

The performace of the Brahms' "Requiem," the outstanding musical event of this year, will be presented on Sunday, April 28, at 8.00 p.m., in the Ira Allen Chapel.

The combined University choir and glee clubs have been augmented for the occasion by a number of interested faculty members from the University and townspeople of Burlington. Miss Hilda Ohlin, of New York City, has been engaged to sing the soprano solo part. Miss Ohlin was formerly associated with the Chicago City Opera Company and for five consecutive years won a thousand-dollar scholarship from the Chicago Musical College. In addition to her opera work, Miss Ohlin has a large oratorio repertoire and has also made many appearances in concert with major orchestras and over radio network.

This enlarged chorus of 110 voices will be accompanied by the regular Chapel orchestra which has also been increased to forty-five members to fit the requirements of the original score. Several members of the Vermont Symphony orchestra from Burlington, Middlebury, Bennington, Rutland and other Vermont communities are participating. Among those coming from Bennington are Robert McBride, a member of the faculty of Bennington College and a composer in his own right, who will play the oboe and Carol Haynes, a student at Bennington, who will play the French horn. Two other French horn players are coming from New York City.

Miss Artess deVolt, a harpist from Boston, who is the sister of Mrs. Charlotte deVolt Elder, a member of the University's music faculty will play in the orchestra. Miss deVolt will also play a program for the annual meeting of the Fleming Museum Art Association during her stay in Burlington.

This production of the Brahms' "Requiem" in its entirety which is being presented under the able direction of Prof. William G. Kirby, acting head of the music department seems to pave the way for bigger and better activities in the music life of the University.

First Overnight Hike Planned for Tomorrow

The first overnight hike of the year will be run Saturday and Sunday, April 20 and 21 to Bolton Lodge. The trail is not too difficult and the woods are beautiful this time of year. The lodge is well equipped with "modern" conveniences. Dave Collins '42, will be in charge. The car will start from the men's gym on Saturday, April 20, at 3 o'clock. Those desiring to go will please leave their names in the Outing Club Bulletin Board (north of the Book Store) before Friday noon. Everyone bring a sufficient number of blankets and one dollar to cover the cost of food. Wear warm, waterproof clothes and be at the gym at three.

Kenneth Johnson will be the leader at Pilgrim Fellowship Sunday evening, April 21, at 7.30 p.m. He has chosen for his topic: "The Late Edwin Markham, His Life and His Philosophy." The meeting will be held in the parish house of the First Church. Following the discussion will come refreshments and a social hour. Everyone is welcome.

Music Department To Present Requiem At Ira Allen Chapel

Great Choral Work Based on Selections From German Bible

The Brahms Requiem which is to be presented Sunday, April 28 in the chapel under the direction of the Music Department is generally accepted as one of the greatest choral works of music, along with such works as Bach's "Mass in B Minor" and Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis." Its presentation here affords students a most unusual opportunity to hear this great work. The Requiem is a composition in seven movements for chorus and orchestra and is a musical setting of selected passages from the German Bible of which Brahms was particularly fond. Although it is classified as a Requiem, it is not in the spirit of despair and gloom that is characteristic of most works of this type. It reflects Brahms confidence in an ultimate triumph over death and permanence of the life to come.

The lovely fifth chorus has a solo soprano part which was written after the other six and has a romantic story behind it. Two years after the first performance of the Requiem, Brahms left his adopted city of Vienna to visit his old home in Hamburg. There reminded of the death of his mother he wrote a deeply moving section known as the fifth part and which will be heard at the presentation on April 28.

In general, the chorus and orchestra are of equal importance throughout the Requiem. There are passages where the chorus sings as only Brahms could make it in long lyrical lines of flowing beauty, accompanied by a subdued orchestra. The effect is that the listener's attention is held from the first note to the last.

Preparation for the Requiem has been met by a great deal of enthusiasm by both students and faculty and it is certain that this great undertaking will draw an unusually large number of music lovers.

Miller, Brandt, Sample To Teach Art Courses

There will be three Californian artists teaching this year at the University of Vermont Summer Session. Instructing on a full-time basis, Barse Miller and Rex Brandt will conduct courses in life drawing and painting and in landscape painting. Paul Sample, now an artist in residence at Dartmouth College, will open his studio at Lake Willoughby for two separate days of painting under the instruction of all three of the artists.

Because of the popularity of his art courses last year, Miller was unable to handle the work alone. Therefore, the addition of Rex Brandt was necessary.

Junior Play and Peerade Planned

Activities Also Include Prom, Open House

With Junior Week as point of focal interest to the entire student body drawing closer, the various Junior Week committees have covered and have drawn up plans for what promises to be the most enjoyable week-end of Vermont's entertainment history. Although many of the details of the Junior Week program are but in their formulative stages the various committee heads have taken great strides and are directing their efforts toward greater consolidation of the various Junior Week activities as opposed to the previous program of stressing the Junior Prom to the exclusion of other activities of the distinctive week-end.

Peerade Followed by Prom

The Junior Week program will include, this year, as well as in past years, the Junior Week Peerade with all fraternities and sororities presenting floats based on the title of the Junior Week play "What a Life," which is presented that evening. On the following evening the music of another up-and-coming band, Bob Zurke, with the vocal strains of his beauteous female singer, Evelyn Poe, will play at what has always been the most gala and most colorful of all Vermont formals, and on Saturday night the men's fraternities hold open house dances with the welcome mats rolled out to greet the other fraternity men as well as the old alums who make annual pilgrimages to the Vermont campus at the time that spring finally bids Morpheus adieu. The week-end is culminated by the customary fraternity picnics, which with the grace of the sun, climax the Junior Week activity.

A Dollar Drop in Admission

Of most significant importance to the student body will be the drop in price of admission for the Prom. The former price of $5.50 a couple has been reduced this year to $4.40. This has been done in an effort to draw an even greater number of students to this year's Prom. The chairmen have also announced a $10 prize to the winning Junior Week Peerade stunt in addition to the cup which is given each year to the winner.

From the Peerade to the Play to the Prom the week-end promises to be the occasion of the year for Juniors, of course, and the rest of U. V. M. as well, from the freshmen to the senior medics. And supplemented by the fraternity open houses, alumni reunions, picnics and dances, May 9-12 will be most exemplary of the spring spirit as visualized but seldom substantiated by Vermont spring weather.

Cynic Exchanges Now at Library

Through the cooperation of the librarians, an exchange table has been set up at the left-hand side of the faculty Marsh room. Students may find there the papers edited by numerous other colleges and universities who carry on an exchange system with the Cynic. The latest copies of these papers will be put there as soon as they are received, for the benefit of all those interested.

ATTENTION—Any small donations of money would be appreciated by the Y. W. C. A. for their drive to collect funds for European students. Such contributions can be left in the labeled boxes located in the library and book store.

Jean Evans Appointed Head Cheer Leader

Jean M. Evans of Burlington, a junior, has been appointed head cheer leader at the University of Vermont for next year. The Athletic Council in making the appointment named Raymond F. Darling, of Bloomfield, N. J., a present freshman, as assistant cheer leader. Numerals for cheer leading were awarded to Herbert W. Coburn, Newport; Evrone S. Germain, Burlington; Judd C. Richardson, Jr., Leominster, Mass.

Two assistant managers of varsity tennis have been appointed by the council to fill vacancies. They are M. J. Levin and D. W. Thayer, both of Burlington.

Seger Foresees U. S. of Europe

Concentration Camp Refugee Gives Speech

Gerhart Seger, former member of the German Reichstag, addressed a large, enthusiastic audience at Southwick Thursday evening on the topic "What Will Become of Europe?" Mr. Seger began his talk on a subject that ended the last World War, the Treaty of Versailles. He maintained that this treaty was not as bad as people have come to consider it, but that it had many good points as well as bad. It has become a habit, especially in the United States, to blame the Treaty of Versailles for many of the unfortunate occurrences in the world since the war. They do not stop to think that in the treaty settling the second World War many of the points of the Versailles treaty will have to be repeated, such as the restoration of Czechoslovakia, reestablishment of Poland, etc. There are even people who believe that this treaty was largely responsible for the growth of the Hitler movement in Germany; they are wrong because the treaty was dead before Hitler came into power.

The Rise of Hitler

In combating this theory of Hitler's rise in Germany, Mr. Seger presented the factors contributing to this rise in percentages. Hitler's existence is due 30 percent to the Treaty of Versailles, and to the fact that the Germans lost the war. Another 40 percent of the cause of Hitler's rise was due to the depression. Germany was one of the first countries hit by the depression, and it was shaken by it like an earthquake. It was the depression that suddenly sent Hitler's power rapidly rising. From 1920 when Hitler was the leader of the Nazi movement until 1930, he had only 13 Nazi members in the Reichstag. From 1930 to 1933, the number increased from 13 to 107. Hitler's rise to power was not through a majority vote of the people, as some people believe. When he became chancellor he was backed by only 34 percent of the German people. He then set about establishing

Cercle Will Give French Comedy Founder's Day

Mrs. Doane and J. Evans Will Present Play Wednesday, May 1

The annual French play will be presented on Wednesday, May 1, at eight o'clock at Southwick. Coming when it does, it will be a fitting climax to Founder's Day. This year Le Cercle Français has chosen "Ces Dames aux Chapeaux Verts," recommended by Prof. R. F. Doane. It will be produced and directed by Mrs. R. F. Doane, assisted by J. M. Evans '41.

The tickets, of which Millicent Clough '42 has charge, cost a mere fifteen cents. They may be procured at the Book Store, from members of Le Cercle Français and they will be on sale at the entrance.

Catherine Shalucha '40 is in charge of the publicity; the make-up will be taken care of by Margaret Crowley '41 and Shirley Gray '41. Sarah Wilson '42, Gloria Oling '42 and Alice Needham '43 are tending to the special costumes, properties and sound effects—gowns by Lanvin and Schiaparelli. The curtain speech will be delivered by Gloria Oling '42.

The play is a "sparkling comedy interspersed with tender episodes." For the benefit of the emotional members of the audience smelling salts and a stretcher, furnished through the courtesy of the athletic department, will be available. A résumé of the plot will be in the next issue of the Cynic. (Flash! The Cynic foreign correspondent has it from usually unimpeachable sources that at the last rehearsal several of the actors were rebuked for overtime in the clinches.)

The Cast

Arlette, eighteen years old, is played by Jane Slater, P.G. She portrays a kind-hearted, modern French girl who shocks her old-fashioned cousins, the Daverins sisters, with her slang and other modern attributes. In spite of the hard knocks of life which ordinarily would make one bitter, she has retained her sweet freshness. Among many things, she plays Cupid to Marie.

June Hoffman '43 takes the part of Marie Daverins, thirty-five years old. As the youngest of the four sisters, she can still avoid the stigma of an old maid; but she has already waited ten years for

Angie Ducas Elected Press Club President

The Press Club has just elected its new officers for the coming year. Those elected are: Angie Ducas '41, president; Hester Rice '42, secretary-treasurer; Ruth Connor '41, social chairman.

Angie has been quite active on campus and has participated in many activities. She is a member of the Alpha Chi Omega, Le Cercle Français, the John Dewey Club, Y. W. C. A., Press Club, Bluestockings, and W. A. A. In addition she has been vice-president in her sophomore and junior years, has written for Cynic for three years, rising from scrub to reporter to campus editor. She is social chairman, and is short-story editor of Winnowings.

Hester has been a member of the Press Club, the Home Economics Club, and the Y. W. C. A.; while Ruth has been a reporter for Cynic for three years, a member of Press Club for three years, a member of I. R. C. and of the John Dewey Club, W. A. A., Outing Club and Health Council.

These new officers plan to hold their meetings next year on the first Friday of each month. A banquet is planned for Press Club members later this year.

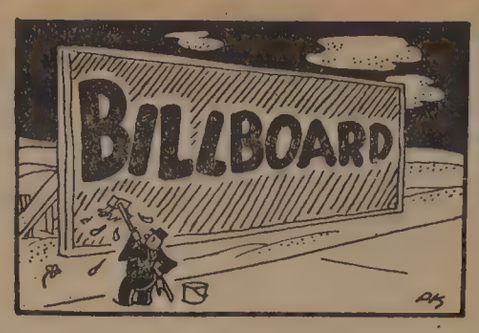
A Two-day Reading Period

We've heard a rising tide of protest growing among the students because the last classes of the year are being held on the Monday and Tuesday before the final examination period begins. The complaint is justifiable, we feel, for the present program allows the students who have exams on Wednesday inadequate time to prepare for their tests. A surprisingly large number of students have several exams at beginning of the exam period. One student told us that he has five exams in the first three days. Obviously he can't possibly do his best when he has not had ample time to study.

Many students are urging that the faculty let them all have a two-day reading period in which they could prepare for exams. Such a plan is used on numerous campuses to great advantage. Amherst gives their students a two-week reading period. We aren't asking for two weeks but two days.

Possibly the faculty feel that the students would gain a great deal by attending one more class. We disagree for obviously students who have examinations on Wednesday will not be concentrating on the professor's lecture. Thus they will profit a very little amount by attending one more class. Instead of paying attention to the professor students will probably be trying to figure out some plan whereby they can assimilate and review an entire semester's work before the next morning. They are going to be worrying in their classes, not listening.



The probable attitude of the administration is that preparation for finals should be started at least two weeks before the exams begin. A glance at the activities calendar for those two weeks, however, shows that baseball games and track meets, Junior Week, Lilac Day and many other last minute functions prevent much worthwhile studying for exams during that time.

We suggest that if the faculty cannot give the students a two-day reading period to prepare for exams classes on May 20 and 21 should be optional and a review of the course material presented for students who wish to attend class. Such a plan would fulfill the University's quota of class days and would also give ample time for the students (and there are a lot of them), who have exams during the first three days of the exam period, to prepare for their tests.

A Little Tardy?

In a recent letter to the editor of the CYNIC, several prominent members of the University of Vermont's athletic teams protested against the Alumni Council's action in not renewing the coaching contract of Coach John Sabo. Whether the Council was justified or not in their action, we feel strongly that such action should have taken place much earlier this spring. If the Council had indicated their plans earlier, Mr. Sabo would have had ample time to take a coaching position on some other campus. At the present time however, the coaching contracts have been filled for at least two months in all other colleges.

We think that the Alumni Council was unnecessarily tardy in their action and gave far too little consideration to Mr. Sabo. Whether he has been liked or disliked, for six years Coach Sabo has worked very hard against tremendous difficulties to make the University of Vermont teams the best that they could be considering the lack of material.

University Holds Speaking Contests

At the Vermont State Prize Speaking Contest held at the Fleming Museum under the auspices of the University, Prof. Frederick Tupper, Prof. Leon W. Dean and Miss Mary B. Sullivan awarded to Miss Ernestine Rowe the first prize of $50 scholarship to U. V. M. Miss Rowe is the daughter of Dascomb P. Rowe, principal of the Waterbury High School, where she is in her junior year.

Placing second and third in the finals were Miss Sylvia Shapiro of Brandon High, and Ned Thiaville of Fair Haven High.

At the preliminaries in the afternoon, judged by Professors J. I. Lindsey, George V. Kidder, R. A. Hall, P. D. Moody, R. F. Ladd, M. H. Aldrich, E. Youngert, L. A. Woodward, and M. D. Powers, seven contestants of nineteen survived to compete in the finals. These preliminary winners and their awards were as follows: Oratorial selection, Ned Thiaville of Fair Haven, "The Big Parade," $150; dramatic, first, Roger Chevalier, St. Ann's Academy, Swanton, "The Tell Tale Heart," $150; second, Miss Sylvia Shapiro, Brandon, "The Congo," $100; third, Miss Suzanne Woodfin, Rutland, "Selection from St. Joan," $50; humorous, first, Miss Ernestine Rowe, "A Night Out," $150; second, Miss Leslae Pierce, Barton, "An Unthankful Orphan," $100; and third, Miss Winona Little, Plainfield, Self Control," $50.

Dr. Riggs Tells Group Students Play Moot

Students spend 50 percent more time for recreation than for studying, according to Doctor Riggs in a talk Sunday night before the Methodist College Group. This fact was discovered by a questionnaire recently filled out by over a hundred U. V. M. students. The proportion is the same both for high-ranking students and those with low grades, so that it is not significant in determining the amount learned.

Efficient studying, however, does help to accomplish more per unit of time spent. And efficiency, psychologists have found, is greater if assignments are studied from day to day instead of in a lump the day before an hour exam. The importance of motivation cannot be over-estimated; whether the desire is for social life or a good job, it should make for increased efficiency of study.

There will be no College Group meeting next week, due to the performance of Brahms' "Requiem" at the chapel.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

I think your suggestions for an all-campus sing is great—and so do a lot of other people on the campus. The community singing often the Interfraternity Sing testified to that. I have talked with several lately about it and the response has been more than enthusiastic. Here are a few of the replies I got: Edith Libby: "One of the best ways to get people together is through music. I think it would be a lot of fun." Bill Roeder: "I can't sing and even I think it's a swell idea." Johnny Houps: "I'm all for it.... think it's a wonderful idea . . . . we'll get enthusiastic backing from the faculty."

And if Miss Harris's response is any criterion, we will. "I'm thrilled about it," she said, "and so is Miss Simpson."

Other colleges all over the country have held similiar all-campus sings with wonderful success. Cliques are forgotten and the college, faculty and students together, becomes a single unit.

Here's another suggestion that Dick Swift made—why not make it a combination Sing and Pep Rally before an important basketball game? Then even the people who don't sing can come and make noise.

However, I am confident that whichever plan is chosen it will be a big success.

Here's to you for a super All-Campus-Pep-Rally-and-Sing that will end the school year with a bang we won't forget.

VIRGINIA MITCHELL.

French Comedy

Professor Hyacinthe, and her situation is becoming desperate.

Telcide Daverins, the oldest sister (forty-eight years old), is portrayed by Marguerite Benoit '43. Because of her age, Telcide has assumed complete authority over her other sisters. To all appearances she is a martinet who insists on having her own way. She is a perfect replica of an old-fashioned Victorian, but amazes everyone when her true character emerges.

Joyce Gilman '43 acts the part of Rosalie Daverins, forty-five years of age. This sister is particularly susceptible to colds. She has a romantic nature but missed the matrimonial train through no fault of her own.

The forty-year-old Jeanne Daverins is portrayed by Mary Butler '43. She has finally become reconciled and contented in spinsterhood. Jeanne's colorless character makes the acting very difficult.

J. M. Evans '41 plays Monsieur Hyacinthe, a timid, forty-five-year-old professor who is constantly ill at ease and therefore awkward. He retired into his shell after his marriage proposal was rejected, and has been leading a lonely pathetic life since the death of his mother.

Ernestine, the Daverins' middle-aged maid, is acted by Catherine Shalucha '40. She is a typical French peasant maid who wants to be in on all of the family affairs.

S. R. Pike '42 takes the part of Jacques de Fleurville. He is twenty-nine years old, rich and quite up to date; he, like Arlette, uses slang and modern expressions. He is, in fact, her masculine counterpart and is the one who makes life interesting for her.

Monsieur le Doyen, fifty years old, is acted by Barbara Smith '40. His sole interest is in the church. He is partial to the Daverins family, whose members are the pillars of the church. He is especially cordial to Arlette in spite of her modernism and because of her youth.

A. Haritos '40 takes the part of Monsieur de Fleurville, the sixty-year-old proprietor of the Daverins house. For the past eight years a feud has been raging between him and Telcide as to who would repair the gutter.

Augustin, forty years old, is played by Ruth Hopkins '41. He is the prototype of the French school "concierge" who has the final say in admitting visitors. In a boys' school where he works, females are ordinarily kept at a distance.

May 1 is a date to be remembered.

Fraternity men at Union College spend an average of $68.80 per year more than non-fraternity men.

The dateline "Thursday, February 30" won't appear on newspapers again until 1968.

Rugby Team Plays First Game With Harvard

Vermont 3, Harvard 6; Bud Keith Scores Vermont Goal

An inexperienced, but determined group of Rugby players travelled to Harvard last week-end for an important match with the Harvard junior varsity. With the benefit of only two days' practice, one as a unit, those boys, as evidenced by the wonderful game they played last Saturday give promise of going far and of making their University Rubgy-conscious.

The game was played in weather reminiscent of Vermont and made the boys feel quite at home. A driving rain, at times threatening to turn into sleet, fell during the whole match, and to make matters worse a howling north wind numbed the fingers of all the players.

Vermont kicked off in the first half and even though defending the goal against the wind, forced the play until late in the first half. The first twenty minutes presented a furious, slashing game with brilliant defenses being put up by both teams in the shadow of their own goal posts. Beautiful runs and brilliant kicks were of no avail until ten minutes before the half ended. Then a long Harvard kick, followed by a scrum, gave the Harvard J. V.'s the opportunity of breaking the deadlock. The Harvard scrum took possession of the ball and dribbled it over the Vermont goal line, where one of the Harvard backs fell on it for a try and, consequently, three points. The kick for goal failed and Harvard led 3-0.

Disheartened, but hardly out of the ball game yet, Vermont kicked back and the half ended within a few minutes with the ball in midfield. After a five-minute rest, both teams returned to the field and then put on a tough, hard second half, making jarring tackles, improbable blocks of kicks and, all in all, putting on a wonderful spectable. Within ten minutes Vermont was knocking at Harvard's door, but a penalty kick from the 30-yard line failed. The score remained the same for only a few minutes, however. Another Vermont drive brought the ball to the 15-yard line and a penalty kick by "Bud" Keith put the ball squarely between the uprights. The score now stood 3-3. Two minutes later, however, Harvard scored when a break, resulting from a mix-up in the Vermont backfield, allowed them to get possession of the ball and again carry it over for a try and another three points. It was at this point that "Bud" Keith, making a last minute tackle, wrenched his shoulder and retired from the game and left Vermont playing with only fourteen men, since the game calls for no substitutes. With the score 6-3 against them, a drenched and numb Green and Gold still not out of the fight, they drove hard down the field to within the Harvard 5-yard line, where a forward pass, resulting in a penalty against Vermont, since it is not allowed in Rugby, gave Harvard the chance for a penalty kick which proceeded to put them out of danger. With only seconds remaining a Vermont kick went out on the Harvard 3-yard line and there the game ended, the score being 6-3, with Harvard J. V. on the long end.

Beaten, but not disheartened after the fine showing made by the first Vermont Rugby team ever to play a match, the boys have high hopes for the future. A tentative game has been scheduled for May 4 with the Long Island University Rugby team and a return match is being arranged with the Harvard J. V. Rugby team.

Saturday's game produced no stars, but did present a well-organized group of Vermont Rugby players who should go far with a little more practice and smoothing out.

It was a rather abbreviated trip that the baseball team took this last weekend, as both the Amherst and Springfield games were rained out. But in the one game that the Cats did play they surely went to town . . . . Don Maley, who did not make the southern trip, proved his worth to Larry by connecting with two hits. Ace Healey broke out of his slump by rapping out a pair of doubles . . . . Incidentally, this was number three for Pesarik. Next Saturday (providing it doesn't snow) the Cats open up at home. Boston University will furnish the opposition and Pesarik will probably start—shooting after number four.

We were glad to see the number of men who signed the petition to retain Coach Sabo. These men are men who have all played under Mr. Sabo and know him best . . . . We can remember a certain train ride one night last winter. We were covering the Vermont-Tufts and Vermont-Dartmouth basketball games. When all the players had retired, we got into a conversation about sports in general and basketball in particular. We listened for quite a time as Mr. Sabo went off on one of his famous topics—zone defense. His arguments for the latter were very convincing and he refuted each of our points against zone defense. But then again, as all chemists know, "blackboard reactions" don't count. Evidently something was wrong.

The unofficial Vermont Rugby team came home late Sunday night, after losing to the Harvard J. V. team 6-3 (two goals to one)—which isn't bad considering the short time that the club has been organized. The pertinent point isn't that the team won or lost. The fact is that the game was the start of another sport at Vermont. And if things go as expected, little by little Rugby will work itself upward at Vermont. Thus far the team is on its own, i.e., it is self-supporting. The boys pay their own expenses and supply most of the needs. However, the team got a good start when the dean granted excuses to all making the Harvard trip. A return match has been scheduled with Harvard, the game to be played at Burlington the early part of next month. L. I. U. will invade Burlington on Founder's Day. It's pretty certain that if enough interest is shown in the sport and if results are obtained in this "trial period," the sport is bound to become recognized at the University.

himself on a legal basis. To do this, he dissolved the Reichstag, which held an unfavorable attitude toward him, set fire to the Reichstag building, and when he still came out short of a majority, eliminated 117 of the democratic members to win a majority vote on the basis of which he established his dictatorship. To maintain this dictatorship and the totalitarian state, Hitler uses two very effective means—ruthless political prosecution and protective custody, which have turned Germany into a terrorized country. In the first three years alone of Hitler's régime, 229,000 people were sentenced to imprisonment for even minor charges, such as listening to British broadcasting stations. The more effective of the two measures is protective custody, which requires no charges, no jury, only the suspicion of the police. Mr. Seger estimated that 900,000 people had been in concentration camps, and he himself was a prisoner for six months until his escape. This custody is very effective, because it represents a cross-section of Germany's population; no class is immune.

He Turns to Military Side

Mr. Seger's final topic was the military situation in Europe. He accounted for the stalemate between the Maginot Line and the West Wall by the fact that during the first World War the Germans lost too many soldiers in gaining a few miles of territory, and they will not repeat that. Mr. Seger maintained that one of the most effective acts of the war so far has been Britain's policy of flying over Germany and dropping leaflets, showing the German people that they can penetrate German's defense and if they had occasion, could also drop bombs. This has likewise been one reason for Hitler's not attacking England—his attack would act as a boomerang. In conclusion, Mr. Seger said that he hoped the peace at the end of this World War would lay the groundwork for a United States of Europe, and that the United States would stay out of this war to serve as an example to the European countries.

Catamounts Beat Tufts

Track Team to Meet Williams Tomorrow

Paradoxically speaking, inclement weather did a good turn to Coach Archie Post. The prolonged winter that Vermont and Massachusetts are experiencing has brought about the postponement of the Williams meet. This meet will be run off on Wednesday of this week. Thus, three days' grace was presented to Coach Post.

This delay in plans will be advantageous to Coach Post and his men. Too few outdoor workouts had been available to the squad, and the extra few days granted to them will be snapped up avidly.

The past two weeks has been devoted to time-trials. Some good work has been turned in and, consequently, Coach Archie Post has not too much of the so-called traditional gloominess of a coach.

Twenty-three men will be taken on the trip to Williams. Since there are close to forty men out, considerable competition exists. The greater part of the competition lies in the running events, middle distances especially. The 440, in particular, is hot with competition. The half and the mile events present no cinch to its aspirants, either.

The field events, specifically the hammer throw and the discus, show well. Pearl and Johnstone, two veterans, look good in the hammer. The discus shot is ably filled by Johnstone. For the javelin event, Nichols, also a veteran from last year, will perform. The shot-put is taken care of by Gage, Johnstone, and Herb Long.

The pole vault is ably handled by Pratt and Davis, two repeaters. In the high jump, there are two fairly certain starters and two possible ones. Those who are reasonably sure of starting are Becker and Hunter. The two possible starters are Pye and Pratt.

In the running events, the 100 is rather a thorn in the nature in Coach Archie Post's side. With the exception of Gordie Smith, captain of the team, there is considerable doubt as to the men starting. The 220 is not much better, quantitatively. Smith and Nichols are the standouts in the field here. The 440 seethes with activity. The men concerned here are Eaton, Roby, Early, Kaplan, and Edson. The half-mile has two able men in Gallup and Stowell, who are backed up by Davis and Otis.

The hurdles are headed by Allen and Kenney. Kenney's position is doubtful, however, He has been laid up with grippe and in the event that he will not compete, Becker will compete. The running broad is taken over by Becker.

The mile and two-mile runs are bright spots on the horizon—what with the Webster brothers and the reliable Livak to depend on.

University of Pittsburgh's placement bureau finds jobs for four out of every ten men who graduate. Average starting salary is $130 per month.

Pesarik Holds Jumbo To Four Hits

Holding to five hits in nine innings of superb moundwork a highly touted Jumbo nine, Capt. Lefty Pesarik, Friday, led the Catamounts to a 5-1 victory in their first game of the regular northern schedule. The Vermonters crossed the plate once in the second, third, and eighth innings and twice in the fourth to outweigh the lone Tuft's run coming in the first.

Tuft's first inning splurge started off when center fielder Bennett singled cleanly through short. Chiros' foul outside the first-base line was nabbed by Maley. Lee then singled to left field, advancing Bennett to third. Budrunas went down swinging for the second out. Hannabury lined to short and a bad throw to first enabled Bennett to score. Curtis let a hook and two drops pass for the count of three.

Pesarik Scores Tieing Run

Lefty started off the second inning with a smash to left field that was good for two bases and Maley followed with a one-base Texas leaguer that pushed Pesarik to third. Healey flied out on a long one to right field and the run was scored after the catch. Boucher hit into a double play to retire the side. The second Vermont run came in the next inning after Spasyk was passed and stole to second. Wood bunted along third-base line and Spasyk came in while Hannabury was juggling the ball.

Rallies in the Fourth and Eighth

With two out in the fourth, Maley started a rally that brought in two more runs. Don singled, Healey doubled, and Boucher walked, loading the bases. Coach Nash retired Olsen from the mound and substituted Gaieski, who last week made the Harvard nine Crimson. Spasyk greeted the newcomer with a hard single down third, bringing in Maley and Healey. Sysko teminated the action by grounding out to Dineen at first. The last run came in the eighth inning after Conrad gained first on Chiros' error and was advanced by Pesarik's sacrifice. Healey poled a long one to center field, allowing Conrad to tally number five, and Boucher ended the last scoring spree by grounding to short.

Outside of the first inning the Catamounts apparently were in full control of the situation. In the second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, and eighth the Jumbos went down one, two, three. Budrunas reached first in the seventh when a strong wind curved the ball, causing Conrad in the right field to misjudge it. In the last half of the ninth, the Tuftsmen put up a desperate last minute stand and after Chiros flied out to Sysko in left, succeeded in getting two of the five hits of the game. However, this was quickly stopped when Spasyk snatched a hot grounder by Hannabury and pinch-hitter Ben Gaieski, brother of the relief hurler, found out how much territory Frank Taylor covers out in center.

SCRIBE SCRIBBLINGS

The game was the first played this season at Tuft's. The two teams and coaches marched across the field for a bit of flag raising with Coach Gardner doing the honors.

It was Patriot's Day in Massachusetts in honor of Paul Revere's ride and a good size holiday crowd was on hand. There were quite a few Vermont grads at the game.

Candid Shots—Frank Taylor grabbing a long hit to center field on the hop and throwing it in to Johnny Spasyk to rob John Gaieski of a two-bagger—Leo Wood executing a beautiful slide into third when Taylor hit the double in the ninth—Ace Healey standing on first when the pitcher threw to the bag yelling out, "What did you do that for?"—Bob Carlson coaching on third and calling to the pitcher, "He's a good hitter, throw it over easy and give him a chance"—Lefty Tovarich Pesarik giving out with some Russian ballads.

The Massachusetts trip was originally scheduled to include Amherst and Springfield. The Amherst game for Thursday was called off because the diamond is not yet ready for use and the game was rained out at Springfield, Saturday. There is a possibility that these might be fitted into the schedule later on.

Y. W. C. A. to Send Junior to Boston

Social Work Training Object of "Junior Month"

The Family Welfare Society of Boston is again offering the opportunity for a junior girl from the University of Vermont to attend Junior Month, a month spent in visiting representative social agencies of Boston, learning how all the varied forms of social work are carried on, and actually doing some supervised social work. The object of Junior Month is to give individuals as complete a knowledge as possible of the meaning of social service so that these individuals may carry their information back to their colleges and communities, and thus the public in general may better understand the value of social agencies and their work.

Each year eight New England colleges send one representative each to Junior Month, which occurs the last two weeks of June and the first two weeks of July. All her expenses are paid, directly by the Family Welfare Society, indirectly by the colleges and individuals who contribute to its work.

One does not need to be planning a social service career in order to apply. The only requirement is that the applicant be interested in social service, no matter what college course she is taking. It is also helpful if the applicant can write and speak well, for it is expected that she will do everything she can to publicize social service to her college and her community on her return.

In our modern life it is almost imperative that everyone be familiar with the field of social work, for all will eventually have contact with it, in one way or another. Therefore, this is an opportunity which no girl should pass by. In no other way can one receive as rich and as varied an experience in the line of social work, at the same time making many other valuable contacts, living in a settlement house, and associating for a month with girls from seven other New England colleges!

The most recent representatives, from the University of Vermont to Junior Month have been Charlotte Perkins '38, Joyce Bates '39, and Florence Wade '40. Flossie will talk with all junior women who are interested this Friday afternoon, April 26, at 4.15 in the "Y" room. Applications should be made in the Dean's office.

Professor Tupper To Address Seniors At Charlestown

Will Compare Colleges Of the Past With Those Of the Present Time

The College of Charlestown in North Carolina, the oldest municipal college in America, has honored Prof. F. Tupper, head of the English Department at the University of Vermont and a former student of Charleston, by asking him to address their graduating class on May 21st. Professor Tupper has chosen to speak on college life of the past and present. He is especially interested in the colleges of the middle ages, having had great fun in sifting through Latin documents to get his material.

Bread and Butter Subjects

Education as presented at the University of Paris during the twelfth century was not too dissimilar to the life in many of the European universities of today. The students attended regular lectures in the halls. But only so-called "bread and butter" subjects were taught . . . . meaning theology, law and medicine; and these were presented only in the Latin tongue. Nobody had to wait anxiously in those days to discern whether or not he had made medical college for the medicine was elementary. There was no such thing as anatomy. The methods were cruel; it was like a simplified form of murder.

Prof. F. Tupper is well known on the campus by the students as well as many of their fathers and mothers. "I've taught at the University of Vermont it seems since the beginning of the world . . . . since 1894." This means that the present freshman class will graduate during Professor Tupper's fiftieth year of teaching English here.

Growth of U. V. M.

University of Vermont has taken rapid strides numerically as well as qualitatively. In 1894 there were only 250 art students. The boys outnumbered the girls in the former English classes. Today this is impossible due to the numerous professions demanding so many required technical courses. Electives were few in those days. Professor Tupper feels that the present trend of giving students a large amount of freedom in their choice of subjects is excellent. But he cautions that this might easily be brought to an extreme.

The particular courses presented by Professor Tupper are a satisfaction to all of his students, for he gives an English panorama that augments the future cultural life of those enrolled.

Singers And Orchestra To Present "Requiem"

Hilda Ohlin, New York Soprano To Sing With University Choir

Brahms' great choral work "Requiem" will be presented Sunday, April 28 at 8.00 p.m., Daylight Saving Time in the Ira Allen Chapel, after many weeks of intensive rehearsing. The University choir, Men and Women's Glee clubs, and University chapel orchestra have combined their efforts to give the "Requiem" which is the largest musical undertaking of its kind attempted this year at the University. The chorus also includes several members of the faculty and residents of Burlington, and the orchestra has been augmented by members of the Vermont Symphony orchestra and instrumentalists from Boston and New York.

The "Requiem" itself has not been given in local circles for many years. In April 1939 the Harvard Glee Club, which early in February took part in a concert with our own Glee clubs and choir, sang the "Requiem" with the Radcliffe Choral Society accompanied by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Serge Koussevitzky conducting.

100 Voices in Chorus

The chorus for Sunday's performance is made up of 100 voices and the orchestra of 45 pieces. Most of the movements were scored originally for an orchestra of symphonic proportions, and the orchestra for Sunday's presentation is made up to fit these requirements as closely as possible. The instruments include woodwind (flutes, oboes, clarinets, bassoons), brass (horns, trumpets, trombones), tympani, strings, organ and harp. Miss Artiss de Volt of Boston will be guest harpist. Miss de Volt is the sister of Mrs. Charlotte de Volt Elder, a member of the music faculty. A well-known member of the orchestra is Mr. Robert McBride of the Bennington college faculty, who will play the oboe. Mr. McBride is also known as a composer.

The soprano soloist contributing to the performance is Miss Hilda Ohlin of New York City. Miss Ohlin's musical career with the Chicago City Opera Company and her many concert appearances makes her visit here an unusual opportunity for all to hear and see her in person. P. R. Poulin '41, will sing the baritone solos.

Orchestra Members

University of Vermont students in the orchestra are H. O. Bevins '41, Mary Davis '43, F. R. Proctor '41, Joyce Bone '43, P. C. Jenks '43, Sarah Brigham '41,

Professor Terrill To Resign in June

Dr. Florence King To Head Department

Prof. Bertha M. Terrill, head of U. V. M.'s Department of Home Economics for the past thirty-three years announced to the entire group of home economics students on Wednesday, April 24, that she will resign this June. Dean Hills then informed the group that Professor Terrill's place is to be taken by Dr. Florence King who has been in the Bureau of Home Economics in Washington for the past ten years.

Miss Terrill graduated from Mt. Holyoke in 1895 and taught Greek at Abbott Academy in Andover, Mass., until 1900. The following year she had a fellowship to study at a School of Housekeeping in Boston which is now part of Simmons College. There she studied epecially under Mrs. Ellen H. Richards whose name is familiar to all students of home economics.

During Miss Terrill's eight years of teaching at the School of Pedagogy in Hartford, Conn., she was given a year's leave of absence and a fellowship to the University of Chicago where she received her M. A. in 1906, studying especially under Mrs. Alice R. Norton.

Shortly after her return to Hartford from Chicago, Professor Terrill came to the University of Vermont where she has been for the past thirty-three years. She has had one year's leave of absence to study at Yale during this time.

When Miss Terrill came to Vermont there was no extension work in the state and no work in home economics in any of the high schools of the state except for a class in cooking at Rutland High School. Since then extension work has developed in all the counties, both in adult work and 4-H Club work; and about seventy high schools in the state now give

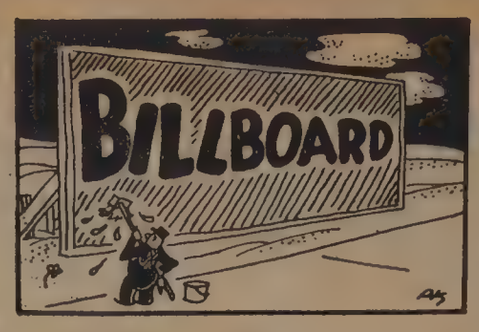
A Fine Innovation!

A chorus of 100 voices and an orchestra of forty-five pieces are to present Brahms' "Requiem" in the Ira Allen Chapel on Sunday. The work is one of the classics of all musical time and demands a great amount of persistent work on the part of the performers. For many weeks Professor Kirby and the University's musical groups have been reheasing the difficult Brahms' music. Their performance Sunday will mark the first time that the complete work of any composer has been presented on our campus in its entirety.

We understand that the University's musical groups are presenting Brahms' "Requiem" this year in place of the opera which they generally give. Such a change is a fine plan, we believe, for the quality of the music in the "Requiem" is far superior to that of any operatic work that our campus has the facilities to present.

The "Requiem" was first produced in 1868 and is regarded as one of Brahms' principal works, which number about 150 pieces. The performance of this work on our campus certainly marks a significant advance in the quality of work done by our splendid musical organizations. We are looking forward with anticipation to their performance Sunday evening of the composition of one of the finest musicians of all time.

The Lost Cause



At a meeting of the Columbia Scholastic Press Association recently Representative Bruce Barton told the 2,743 delegates that American education had been growing steadily worse since his father's time until now it had reached a weakened state marked by too many easy courses, a scattering of energies and a sad lack of mental discipline.

After urging that Greek, Latin and mathematics should be studied for the mental training necessary to a successful career in any field, the advertising executive declared:

"People will think I am trying to be funny, but I was never so serious in my life. I am a liberal in politics and a reactionary in education. I believe that education has been getting steadily worse in this country. It was better in my father's time than in my time and better in my time than in yours. We are trying to spread out and teach too much and teach a smattering of everything. I think we will see the time again when there will be more emphasis on mental discipline."

Mr. Barton made another statement which we think hits the nail on the head when he counseled youth to remember "the old fashioned idea that there is no substitute for work." The witty gentleman concluded by saying, "Nothing takes the place of work except marrying the boss's daughter, but, unfortunately, we all can't do that because there aren't enough boss's daughters to go around."

We think Mr. Barton has an excellent point here which applies to a large number of college students who are simply "marking time." If you are guilty we advise a new program for you for one certainly doesn't gain anything of value without sincere and earnest effort.

The Band Wagon

By BOB JOHNSON

Climbing board—we see a trend towards subtle swing—reminiscent of Red Norvo, Beiderbecke—now championed by Jack Teagarden, and most of all John Kirby. Kirby continues to astound this listener—a grad of Baltimore Conservatory, formerly with Henderson—a real theorist who plays great bull fiddle. His jam combo is tops and we do mean it's head and shoulders over any similar group. Mrs. Kirby (Maxine Sullivan) long noted for her plaintive, throaty voice (also subtle) adds to the picture. At the same time each individual is a great soloist. Kirby, leader and bass; Charles Shaver, trumpet, arranger; Buster Bailey, clarinet.

Don't miss their Columbia program every Sunday afternoon at 5.30 p.m.

Needle-in' the Groove

Showcases for Bob (Your Prom Band) Zurke's pianistics are his waxing of "Everybody One Step" and "Tom Cat on the Keys."

Calloway's "Crescendo in Drums" featuring drummer Cozy Cole is being succeeded by another side pulling a ditty entitled "Paradiddle" (the drummer's favorite fundamental beat).

Harlan Leonard "Hairy Joe Jump" and "My Gal Sal" are fine examples of this up and coming band. Hank Bridges is the tenor man.

Fats Waller's "Black Maria" and "Moon Is Low" are fine swing in typical manner. Especially fine is trumpet blown by Bugs Hamilton on the latter side. Cedric ———'s tenor is also a highlight.

Surprise to hep cats—the appearance of Roy Eldridge's trumpet and Benny Carter's alto and arrangements as well as the lesser known Clyde Hart (piano) on Freddie "out of the corn belt" Rich's recent discs.

Al Leopold's trombone, and "Zulu" Austin's trumpet are standouts on Savitt's "Blues in the Groove."

Bob Zurke

Bob, whose piano technique succeeded Joe Sullivan with Bob Crosby, formed this outfit about a year ago. It is fashioned along strickly Dixieland lines. The two-beat makes this a strictly white man's band. As yet it is a bit new to have sections which work together. Discipline is inclined to be slack because of Bob's happy-go-lucky manner. Zurke's pianologies are featured throughout. The Zurke swingsters are far better than any other bands which the committee could procure for the date and amount available. Aside from Crosby's one nighter here last summer it will be the first two-beat band to play here in some time.

Side Glances

George Hall—and Dolly Dawn—playing many eastern college proms.

Glenn Miller—at Dartmouth's Green Key.

Charlie Barnet—doing so much for the finest in swing—hear his tenor on the "All-star"—"King Porter"—his band packing them in—grossing at the box office. Mary Ann McCall, his finest vocaliste to date. . . "Cherokee" still stands as one of the band's finest waxings—truly great.

Joltings

Local hepsters sitting in at the "Black Cat" with the Continentals—keeping in trim—getting their kicks—over a slow week.

Plugging two more tenor men . . . . Don Hayden (Red Dower) . . . technically minded, somewhat fashioned after the style of Herschel Evans . . . plays a different style of clarinet . . . and Hal Boutilier (Catamounts)—a ride style after the manner of Barnet with tone and guts the aim . . . a fine alto man also reminiscent of Barnet and possibly Hodges.

Writing to friends in Europe? . . . Send them Goodman's late record "Peace Brother."

Campus Opinion Favors Clean-up

In an attempt to summarize the general feeling concerning the present campus clean-up movement, a number of the student body were questioned, and their sentiments and reactions tabulated as follows:

Wisty Rice '42

"A wonderful suggestion! We've been cleaning up the Kappa Sig grounds, and if you could see the results. . . . I'm definitely for it. A couple of new buildings would also be an improvement."

Janet Hackwell '43

"I think it an excellent idea. We really have a beautiful campus, and we should make the most of it."

Hank Rulfo '41

"I've read about the movement in the editorials, but really don't know too much about it. However, if everyone cooperated, I don't see why it wouldn't work out very nicely."

Martha Crane '41

"Something should definitely be done toward repairing the roads on the back campus."

John Spasyk '42

"Anything which tends to beautify the campus will undoubtedly appeal to the student body. I, personally, feel it to be an excellent idea."

Dick Healy '41

"Our campus is one of the most beautiful in New England; I can't see that anything needs to be done to it. However, if campus week does go into effect I would be only too glad to cooperate."

Mary Howe '40

"An excellent idea if it includes filling in the back roads. I don't quite see how it could be put into effect."

The general report seems extremely favorable, and with the proper supervision and student cooperation, campus week should really do wonders for the University.

Looking At Vermont

Fifty Years Ago

At present the college is being surrounded by water, and that is literally. The Old Mill is fast becoming an island and is connected to the mainland neither by bridges nor boats. A movement is on foot to provide the students with life preservers.

Exams are having a great run at the University just at present. The faculty are among the most enthusiastic admirers.

Fond Mama (to infant just learning to walk): "Now let's see Tommy take a little trot and he'll get something nice." Two years later Tommy takes "a little trot" into an exam and is given two months' vacation. (They certainly had a sense of humor in those days!)

Fifty-five per cent of the students at Albion College are working their way through school, wholy or in part.

Museum Active In Work About Vermont Houses

Book by H. W. Congdon Shows "Architecture of A Resourceful People"

While a number of books have been written about Vermont in the last few years, there had been none dealing exclusively with the architecture of the state, until the recent publication of "Old Vermont Houses," by Herbert Wheaton Congdon of Arlington, under the imprint of the Stephen Daye Press of Brattleboro. The book was published for the University of Vermont. Since more and more people, both Vermonters and visitors to the state, are every year becoming interested in these old Vermont houses, the book will fill a growing demand.

Many Photographs

Illustrated with 125 photographs of Vermont houses, the book, subtitled "The Architecture of a Resourceful People," grew out of a survey of old buildings of the state undertaken and carried through by the Fleming Museum and Wilbur Library of the University of Vermont, under supervision of Prof. H. F. Perkins, director of the Museum. Captain Congdon, an architect and photographer, was employed to photograph and collect material, historical and architectural, concerning old Vermont buildings. Included in the photographs appearing in the book are wooden houses, stone houses, brick houses, meeting houses and taverns. Vermont's oldest log cabin, in Grand Isle, is pictured and described in the book. Few log cabins are now standing in Vermont, but this one on Grand Isle, says the author, was built of white cedar logs which proved durable, being as sound today as when they were cut. In cabins built of ordinary logs, Captain Congdon explains, the bottom logs are apt to rot and the whole structure then collapses. The exact age of the Grand Isle cabin is unknown, since town records begin at 1799, but an early reference to it was made by a Connecticut explorer in 1750. This makes it Vermont's oldest dwelling now in use, says Captain Congdon, and it may be the oldest log cabin in the United States, according to him. Descendants of the cabin's early owners still inhabit it, and say that it is warmer in the piercing Vermont winters than the modern frame houses of their neighbors.

No Distinctive Style

In his opening chapter, on the Vermont scene, Captain Congdon says the charm of Vermont architecture is hard to define. While Vermont, he says, has no great architecture, no distinctive style like that of the California missions, and most of our houses do not differ markedly from those in Maine or Connecticut, yet "the true Vermonter recognizes the specific characteristics as readily as his wife knows the individual hens in her flock. It is due in part to the way simple and familiar forms are combined in an individual manner, and in part to the way the house is set in the landscape. Every touring motorist senses a change on crossing state lines, a sensation made up of a bewildering number of intangible factors, almost impossible to define. Some call it atmosphere."

Among the local points of interest are the following:

In South Burlington: Exterior, Owen House.

In Colchester: Detail of Entrance, at Dingler Farm.

In Jericho: Exterior of Chittenden-Chapin House, Hallway of Chittenden-Chapin House, Parlor Mantel of Chittenden-Chapin House.

In Richmond: Exterior, Round Church.

Prof. Dykhuizen Speaks to Y. W. C. A.

Installation Follows Talk on Christianity

On Sunday evening, April 21, there was a supper at Southwick for those members of Y. W. C. A. who have done the most work during the past year. Following the cafeteria supper which was served to about sixty members others joined the group for the program and installation service which was open to everyone.

Kathleen LeBaron '41 was in charge of the supper. Jean Morse '40 and Jane Judd '42 assisted her. The program was in charge of Shirley Gray '41, assisted by Mary Nelson '40. Sally Rome '42 took care of the invitations, and Flossie Wade '40 was in charge of the installation.

The chief speaker on the program was Prof. G. Dykhuizen of the philosophy department. He gave a splendid talk on Christianity. In summing up he advised the girls to do their social work with saintliness, intelligence, and zeal.

The rest of the program consisted of two violin selections by Joyce Bone '43, accompanied by Betty Cole '41, and group singing. Those members of the advisory committee who were present, Mrs. J. H. Perry '39, Charlotte Perkins '38 and Miss Holbrook, were introduced.

Following the program was a candlelight installation service. The old cabinet members cames in with lighted candles and, as the names of the new members were called, the latter came forward and each lighted her candle from that of the old member whom she was replacing. The retiring president, Flossie Wade '40, read to them their duties. Both old and new cabinet members lighted the small candles which had been given to all the Y. W. members present. Everyone joined in singing "Follow the Gleam."

The following officers and cabinet members have been elected for the year 1940-41: President, Shirley Gray '41; vice-president, Sally Rome '42; secretary, Joyce Gilman '43; treasurer, Betty Cooper '42; director of Freshman Camp, Elizabeth Gurney '41; assistant director of Freshman Camp, Gratia Pearl '42; editor of Freshman Handbook, Jane Judd '42; business manager of Freshman Handbook, Anne Cohn '42; assistant social service chairman, Barbara Butterfield '42; chairman of Rock Point, Mary Letta Root '41; refreshment chairman, Barbara Blodgett '41; publicity, Janet Dike '43; social chairman, Kathleen LeBaron '41.

Nickelodeon Plays Without Any Nickels

HANOVER, N. H. (ACP)—Two Dartmouth College kitchen workers recently did what man has been trying to do since the inception of the pay telephone—fool a slot machine—when they jarred the mechanism of the dining hall nickelodeon while moving it. The machine started to play of its own accord and reeled off 150 selections without benefit of nickels.

Amazed, waiters, workers, and a few dazed freshmen encircled the musical cornucopia, watched it play continuously for three hours, went home whistling "The Man Who Comes Around." A distributing firm in Fairlee, Vt., was called to repair it. Meanwhile an ironic note was attached to the machine: "Out of Order."

W. A. A. Notes

Plans were made Tuesday evening at the W. A. A. Council members for a gala stunt day to be held on Saturday, May 4. The program for the day includes stunts by each of the dorms and sorority houses and initiation of the Council members for the next year. Girls who will be initiated are: E. Gurney '41, president; B. Gallagher '42, vice-president; N. Jones '41, senior representative; J. Metcalf '42, junior representative; E. Deming '43, corresponding secretary; H. Carver '41, treasurer; D. Nichols '41, social chairman; N. Goodwin '42, publicity; C. Peterson '42, recording secretary; H. Dustin '42, health council chairman; H. Nelson '42, council-at-large; P. Savage '43, Green captain; J. Dike '43, Gold captain; S. Rome '42, editor Handbook; L. Hawley '41, sophomore representative.

Highlight of the program will be speech of E. Gurney '41, president-elect, who was the delegate to the convention held this year in Ohio. Miss Gurney should have much to say that will be of value both to the members of the body as a whole and to the incoming officers which well help to further the fine work done by the retiring officers.

Freshman Girl Sells Antiques at Her Family's Shop in Barre

When Suzanne Carter, pretty Barre girl who is a freshman at the University of Vermont, gets home this summer vacation, she'll be helping her family in their antique shop. Suzanne says she was "born and brought up" in the family antique shop. The Carters use their home as a shop, and there are antiques for sale in the living room, dining room, in the hallway, and on the stairs. Suzanne, for several years now, has waited on customers, and she has been around the shop almost as long as she can remember, learning about antiques. It was not until about two years ago, however, she says, that customers were sure she was old enough to know what she was talking about, when she told them about the antiques the shop had for sale.

"Keeping the furniture dusted and cared for is one of the worst jobs," says Suzanne, who usually attends to that when she is at home. When you keep shop at home, the dusting, sweeping, and bed-making has to be done early, on the chance that customers may arrive and wish to be shown around. This is one big reason that having a separate shop is something to which Suzanne looks forward.

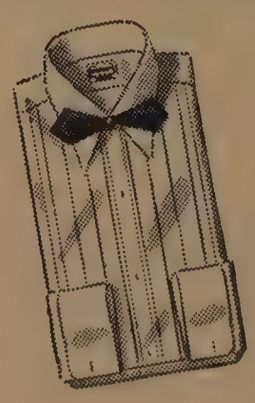
The Carter antique business, which Suzanne has helped to run since an early age, started as a hobby. Suzanne's father was originally in the granite business. He and Mrs. Carter liked antiques and collected them, until they had more than they could use. Trying to figure out what to do with them, Mr. Carter finally decided to try selling a few. They sold, and finally Mr. Carter left the granite business and developed his antique trade into a full-time occupation. He has been selling antiques for almost seventeen years now.

This way of becoming an antique dealer, Suzanne says, is quite common. Collecting antiques as a hobby not infrequently turns into selling antiques as a business.

Country auctions are sought after by many summer residents of New England who collect antiques, as well as native New Englanders who do the same. But Suzanne's father does not attend many auctions, and very little of his stock comes from them.

"People pay more for furniture at auctions than they would in the store," says Suzanne. Most of the Carter stock is supplied to them by people who make a business of collecting antique furniture and re-selling it to dealers. Old farmhouses, where many of the original furnishings still exist, are good sources too.

Correlation Between Weather and Behavior



CLEVELAND, Ohio (ACP)—A Cleveland College psychologist, Dr. Oliver H. Ohmann, maintains that a correlation can be made between police records and weather records. He states that assault and battery cases are most numerous on days of low humidity, and that suicides are most common on clear days late in the spring. Inmates of mental institutions are most disorderly during extreme variations in temperature. Further experiments indicate that teachers have the most disciplinary problems in windy weather.

First Home Game Will Be Played Against Boston

Belardinelli to Pitch; Spasyk, Healy and Wood Will Cover the Bases

The Catamount nine will play their first home game of the season at three o'clock this Saturday afternoon at Centennial Field. Before the game, the Catamounts and their opponents from Boston University will take part in the annual flag raising ceremony with the R. O. T. C. band providing the strains.

Anse Belardinelli has been given the mound assignment for Saturday's game. Although worried at the beginning of the season about a slight arm ailment Anse has been working steadily and seems to be in top shape. Wednesday he bore down in batting practice and from the display it seems that the Terriers ought to stir up quite a breeze.

With the possibility of one or two changes in the infield the same combination that beat Tuft's last week will take the field Saturday. Marty Boucher who has worked the first nine games of the season will catch Anse. First base will be covered by either Boots Lawrence or Don Maley. Lawrence handled the southern trip games but Maley did a fine job down at Tufts' and it's a tossup who will start. Spasyk, Healy and Wood will cover second, short and third base respectively. J. J. White has been working out in practice at short and may divide the work with Healy. In the outfield, Sysko, Taylor and Conrad have proved a smooth combination and will work Saturday's game.

Not much is yet known about the Terriers except that they beat Harvard Wednesday 1-0. Their run was scored when Thompson dashed in after a wild throw to first in the sixth inning. Outside of that, the rest of the game was apparently even. However Tufts whom the Catamounts easily beat 5-1 last week had previously trounced the Crimson nine and if the relation holds true the Vermonters should take their first home game.

Six Tennis Men Leave for Matches

Will Oppose Teams at Trinity and Amherst

The University of Vermont tennis team, led by Capt. G. B. Booth and Prof. F. D. Carpenter, their coach, left the cooler climes of this campus Thursday afternoon for an abbreviated trip to Massachusetts and Connecticut. Due to the cancellation of the Williams match, the team will meet only two opponents on its three day journey.

The first match, which pits our racqueteers against an opponent which annually puts out a strong tennis team, finds the boys playing Trinity College of Hartford, Conn., on April 26. A feature of this match will find John Carpenter, the coach's son opposing Sam Foote, number four man on the University of Vermont team. It is not very often that you find a coach's son giving his Dad opposition, but such is the case on this trip. The University of Vermont team is composed of Booth, No. 1; Art Wolk, No. 2; Simpson, No. 3; Foote, No. 4; Clark, No. 5; and Pine in number six position. The doubles play will find Booth and Wolk making up the number one team, Simpson and Foote, number two, and Clark and Pine the third pair.

After the match with Trinity the team travels to Massachusetts and opposes the Amherst team there on April 27, where they will probably present the same lineup.

The boys are making this excursion without the benefit of outdoor practice, but are in excellent condition as a result of their indoor competition. Whether or not this lack of outdoor practice presents a decided handicap will better be seen when the first matches are over.

The University of Wisconsin claims that its radio station, WHA, is the oldest in the country.

Freshman Tennis Stars Against Burlington

In spite of recent bad weather which makes outdoor practices impossible the Freshman tennis will oppose the Burlington High netsters as scheduled on Saturday, April 27. A probable lineup has been determined but last minute changes may be in order. The singles burden will be carried by R. L. Swift, P. N. Sutton, W. A. West, and W. A. Towne in the number one, two, three, and four positions respectively while the double's picture finds Swift teamed with West and Sutton joined with Towne. This group gives Coach Rand a well-balanced team which should make a very good account of itself during the coming campaign.

Women in Sports

Comes spring and the proverbial "spring cleaning"—well we haven't been at this long enough to have dusty corners, cobwebby pigeon-holes and cluttered attics to clean up, so in place of it a general stocktaking has come to mind, stocktaking of the various phases of women's sports.

With the birds and buds and newer, crazier hats, come innovations and refreshing changes in the many activities carried on by the women's sports department under the guiding hands of Miss Eleanor Cummings, Miss Barbara Crowe, Miss Rosemary Hazard, and the respective campus managers of the various activities. Those refreshing changes above mentioned were from ping-pong, volleyball, shuffleboard, dancing and badminton, which made up the winter's sports program, to archery, which forty-two girls have signed up for; golf, which has thirty-two girls swinging already; riding, which occupies the time of twenty-six girls; softball, in which sixty-eight stalwart Amazons will learn to strike out gracefully; and tennis, which surpassed them all in popularity gaining 118 willing tennis fans.

Starting first with archery (maybe because it begins with "A" and some sort of order is necessary in all stocktaking!) we find that all is moving smoothly toward an Intercollegiate Telegraphic Meet between the 11th and 18th of May under the management of Dawn Nichols '41. Also planned for in the near future are individual Green and Gold tournaments in which any girl may participate.

No definite plans have yet been made by Mr. Danny Wilson, golf coach, and Margaret Beattie '41, campus manager for a golf demonstration since they haven't had any outside practice yet, but from thirty-two willing and interested girls something will yet be heard.

Riding under the management of Mary Letta Root '40, and skillful direction of Mr. Jack Roberts promises to hold plenty of thrills (and possibly spills!) for each of the twenty-six who have elected it as their spring sport. Plans are yet indefinite as to what activity they will sponsor, but we look forward to a demonstration of riding skill later in the season.

Softball, coached by Miss Barbara Crowe and managed by Dorothy Manion '42, attracted the second largest group of girls, seven and one-half teams to hit "homers" this season. A Gren and Gold tournament is planned for Tuesday, May 7, and a co-recreational game of mixed teams for Thursday the 16th. Of course both these dates are subject to change if the weather man feels grumpy and decides to open the heavens on either of these dates.

Tennis, the last item on our stocktaking list, seems to have the most charms for the co-eds this year for 168 have signed up for it at present. This sport is coached by Miss Barbara Crowe and Miss Rosemary Hazard and managed by Jean Woolley '42 and Sally Rome '42. Indoor practice and perfection of strokes is all there is to offer at present but hope is held that sunny days on the courts are in the offing. Assisting these coaches, Miss Crowe and Miss Hazard, are several girls who have joined the advanced tennis and coaching class: Coderre '43, Craig '40, Desautels '43, Dike '43, Goodwin '42, Gove '43, McGrath '43, Packard '43, Rome '42, and Woolley '42. These girls help in two classes a week for which they get W. A. A. credit and pointers in coaching. The tennis tournament which was only partially completed last fall will be continued this spring when conditions are favorable and a doubles tournament is planned for which the girls interested should sign up in the "Y" room as soon as possible.

The ping-pong finals turned out to be a real exciting match, a battle to the finish with Charlotte Hall '40 emerging victor in two out of three games over Betty Myers '40. Just one more phase of winter sports tucked away in mothballs now while the girls turn to greener and fresher fields.

Winter Sports Competition

Gold and Green competition in winter sports has also been completed, but interest and enthusiasm is still running high, for the teams are very closely matched. Looking back, we find that the Green team was the victor in both hockey and basketball. But in the badminton tournament the Golds won by a score of 5-0. They won every game they played both in the singles and the doubles division. In the singles the following girls played: Stewart (Gold) and Bagley (Green), Craig (Gold), and Howe (Green), Coderre (Gold) and Bone (Green). In the doubles the the Golds, Rice and Kyle defeated Fiske and Goodwin, and Hall and Dyke defeated Quimby and L. Clark.

In the volleyball challenge game played Thursday at 4.15, the Golds were again winners with a score of 30-26 in their favor.

But returning to that very popular sport of bowling, it's another story again, for this time the Greens were victorious in both the first and second team games. A series of three games was played for the tournament, and the Greens won two. Gail Klinger, who has done outstanding bowling all winter, and averaged 89 in her winter record, was high scorer. We expect that many of the girls will visit the Bowlaway in their free afternoons, for they have shown such keen interest in the sport all year long.

Frosh Trackmen Meet Burlington This Afternoon

Freshmen Favored To Win in First Match of Season

Today the University of Vermont freshman and the Burlington High School pit their representative track teams against each other. Both squads go into the meet as the first of the season.

Coach Roy Wietz of the University freshmen has drawn up a lineup which appears on the surface to be pretty fair, considering that he has not had the advantage of previous outside competition upon which to judge.

A joint discussion between Coach Wietz and Coach Smith of Burlington High School resulted in several "tongue-in-cheek" prophecies. According to the consultation, the field events should be copped by the University frosh. The running events should go, in the main, to the Burlingtonians. The high school squad includes in it an all-state man in the hurdles, several good distance men, and a few good field men.

The tentative lineup of Coach Wietz includes in the 100, Mott, Cozzolino, Milne, Little, and O'Connell. Cozzolino's ankle appears to be fit again. The 220 has Mott, Cozzolino, and Milne entered. Zwick and Little are in the 440. Williams and Richardson fill in the half-mile run. The mile has five men representing the University. They are St. Mary, White, Brown, Corliss, and Buttles. There is no two mile run in the list of events.

The high-jump has Grosvenor, Mott, Wood, and Goss. The high hurdles include Mott and Goss. Goss is also in the lone entrant for the low hurdles. The pole-vaulters are Vreeland, O'Connell and Early. The running broad is rather doubtful in Coach Wietz's mind. Mott and Cozzolino are being considered for this.

Parker and Parris take care of the shot-put, while Parker and Caccavo are throwing the discus. The javelin is to be thrown by Winchell, Grosvenor, Elliott, and Buttles.

Trouble-shooting

"Double, double toil and trouble" (to quote Shakespeare), seems to be an appropriate motto for spring sports this year. And we're just perverse enough to hunt out a little more gloom. According to all reports spring football practice is definitely out this year. Roy Wietz and Fuzzy Evans have enough now on their hands without trying to coach the pigskin tossers. The failure of the Athletic Council to renew Coach Sabo's contract of course precludes any possibility of his concerning himself with football. All in all the gridiron situation is rather a confused one. Although Wietz and Evans have been proferred new contracts no word is forthcoming as to who will be the new head. The question also arises—will the two of them have time to handle both varsity and frosh football? Although it is still a long ways to next autumn we can't help feeling that things don't look rosy. Of course maybe we're just borrowing trouble and making mountains out of molehills. However, we think it would clear up things if the Athletic Council made some sort of a statement. Rumors floating around and wild conjecturing don't do any good. Any time that a change is made there are always plenty of people who will take varied views of the situation. A little light on a subject goes a long way towards expelling suspicion and rumor.

On the Bright Side

Reversing our field now—it's trite but true that it's all in your point of view whether things look dark or bright. Take the cancelling of the Williams meet for instance. That's bad—then again that's not so bad. Archie can now concentrate on getting his squad in top-shape for the first home contest with Union. By the time it rolls around the men will have a considerable amount of outdoor practice and should be ready to go to town.

Rumor has it that Coach Wietz has been pleased with an unusually fine squad of yearling trackmen. Fuzzy Evans is said to be quite happy over the frosh baseball situation. All's right with the world (we think Browning said that).

On the Limb

And speaking of silver linings—look at that week-end schedule. One track meet here—Frosh versus Burlington High. This one is a toss-up. Both teams are untried. Coach Dutch Smith always turns up with a good squad and this year the return of five lettermen doesn't hurt his prospects any. Relying, however, on faith we give Coach Wietz's crew the nod.

Second item—one baseball game. Varsity versus Boston University. The Catamounts have been picking up speed and should be all set for the boys from Back Bay. Larry is expected to send Lefty Pesarik to the mound. "In God is our trust." One vote for Vermont. By the way the Middlebury Panthers meet Boston University this afternoon. It will be interesting to compare results after the two games and see how the leading contenders for the state title stack up.

Third item—one baseball game. Frosh versus Clark School at Hanover. We ain't a saying. Fourth item—three contests for the tennis team, away. Handicapped by little outdoor work the tennis squad nevertheless boasts three veterans in Booth, Wolk and Simpson. We're counting on them to win some of those matches.

That seems to clean up all predictions for this week and we are now riding the proverbial limb ready for the big fall when the results come in. But that seems to be all a sports editor can do—make wrong predictions and then try to justify them, i.e., in addition to the usual benumbing occupation of hour tests. Adios.

Freshmen to Play Dartmouth Team

The Freshman baseball squad will make its first trip of the season to Hanover this Saturday. With the squad cut down from forty to twenty-one, Fuzzy Evans has been having a hard time picking the thirteen men that are going to make the trip to Clark School and Dartmouth. Fuzzy says that although the Freshmen have been able to get outside only once, the other teams will have had the same trouble. He expects a pair of battles.

Thirteen men will make the trip Friday of whom ten are definitely decided upon. There are: Doherty, 1b; Corbett, 2b; West, 3b; Layden, ss; Lincoln, c; Kaladya, c; Alpert, outfield; Alberghini, p; Hamilton, p; Iby, p; and the other three men will be decided upon before the trip.

Three pitchers will go up against Clark School, Friday. On Saturday probably Hamilton and Iby will start against Dartmouth.

Last Saturday, the first day outside, there was a game at Centennial Field. The best pitchers went with the weaker team, and the best team went with the weaker pitchers. The final score was 3-3. No blood.

Since 1776 the College of William and Mary has initiated 799 students into Phi Beta Kappa.

Movies have been taken in all the sports except in dancing and swimming. However, with Lilac Day approaching, and from what we've seen of the creative and interpretative dancing they have already worked out, excellent material will be furnished for more movies.

Interfrat Softball Stars in Earnest

Interfraternity softball started with a bang Tuesday, after a slow start due to adverse weather conditions.

In the first two games, the S A E defeated the Vermont Independents 11-2 and the Kappa Sigma defeated the Sigma Nu 8-3. The Kappa Sigma-Sigma Nu game was featured by a terrific home run clout by Misty Rice, Kappa Sigma superman.

Wednesday, the Phi Delta Theta decisively won from Sigma Phi by a 15-9 score.

Study and Recreation Needed for High Marks

Hickory, N. C. (ACP)—If you want to be an "A" student, take the advice of Harold L. Hoffman, a psychology major at Lenoir Rhyne College.

Here are the five steps to academic success that he recommends:

1. Study. Remember that those students labeled "geniuses" really study for their superior marks.

2. Love "all" the opposite sex, not just one of said sex. This tends to create a superior, "I'm all right," frame of mind.

3. Cultivate a liking for your professors and for your studies. Hard to do, perhaps, but if at least a neutral attitude is adopted toward each professor and each study, and a sincere effort is made to master the subject, success will be yours.

4. Every college student has someone interested in his success—a father, a mother, a sister, a brother, perhaps a sweetheart, an aunt, or an uncle. Develop an "I'll show you" attitude. Prove to those financial, loving, and/or spiritual backers that you are equal to the task.

5. Be a good "mixer"

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Some time ago the CYNIC commented editorially on the fact that the speakers invited to conduct Chapel services on Wednesday morning were usually from only a few of the Protestant denominations and never a single Catholic clergyman had officiated. Catholic students, it added, would welcome leadership of a Chapel service occasionally by one of their own faith.

With this request in mind, the acting chairman of the Chapel Committee invited Bishop Brady of Burlington to conduct a Wednesday service. He replied that he regretted that it seemed impossible to do so. He gave gracious permission to publish his reply to the invitation. This reply is appended.

Sincerely yours,
RAYMOND A. HALL, of the Chapel Committee.

Bishop's House,
52 Williams Street,
Burlington, Vt.
March 18, 1940.

Mr. Raymond A. Hall,
Department of English,
Burlington, Vt.

Dear Mr. Hall:

I beg to acknowledge your kind invitation to conduct the regular religious service at the University. I regret to state that I think it would be inadvisable on my part to do so. I realize fully the difficulties that you must surmount in keeping religion and moral truth before the eyes of the students and at the same time conciliate a variety of religious beliefs. The service which you hold is essentially that of most Protestant Churches and while in itself is not of a proselytizing nature, nevertheless I feel that weak Catholics might be led to consider such service an adequate religious substitute for the more definite and more exacting acts of public worship demanded by their own Faith. I feel certain that the conducting of such a service as yours at the University would cause considerable wonderment in Catholic circles compared with the slight benefits that would accrue from such action on my part.

I heartily approve of the policy of the University to inculcate a religious and moral sense in the minds of the students that is so in keeping with our early New England tradition and so necessary in this troubled age in which we live.

With most cordial good wishes and blessing upon your praiseworthy efforts in this field, I remain

Sincerely yours,
MATHEW F. BRADY,
Bishop of Burlington.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

The plan for a Campus Week which would be used to concentrate on keeping up the beauty of our campus and making necessary improvements which was presented in the editorial of the issue of April 12 seems to be a very excellent and practical idea.

The grounds around the Old Mill, particularly at the back, are in a deplorable condition, and with a little work on the part of the student body I think that a great deal of improvement could be made in the appearance of our campus. The growth of the University which is shown each year by an increased enrollment, and now by an active building program, should certainly be kept pace with by a neat and imposing campus.

I should think that a plan for Campus Week could be worked out by a committee composed of members of the men's and women's honor societies and other organizations at the University. Such a committee, perhaps under the chairmanship of some member of Boulder, could organize a system by which the work and responsibility could be divided up among the different societies which are on campus. The Aggie Club and F. F. A. would certainly be indispensable in selecting shrubs, grass seed and flower bulbs. Implements, with an absolute guarantee on their immediate return, could probably be borrowed from the University Farm.

Other campuses have successful clean-up programs, and I see no reason why we could not imitate their fine example. Certainly, with cooperation on the part of the students and faculty members the appearance of our campus could be greatly improved.

However, such a system would take a great deal of very careful planning on the part of the different organizations and, if attempted, should be started right away.

Some money, of course, would be needed, and I think that the idea of a tag day which was mentioned in the Campus Comment last week is a good one. Some of the organizations might contribute small amounts also.

If the administration of the University realized that the students were serious in their desire to make our campus more beautiful, who can visualize the lengths to which such a program might reach? Eventually, perhaps, we could have a new road behind the Old Mill, and a magnificent driveway around the Redstone Campus and Southwick.

Such a practical scheme as this should be a definite success, and if well carried out, might become a permanent tradition here at the University. Certainly we all love our campus and take pride in its beauty, but we think that it could be made still more beautiful, and the idea of a Campus Week seems an excellent method of making this scheme a reality.

MARY C. NELSON '40.

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Now that Spring is here! Anyway—on a balmy evening, 'neath cerulean skies, what could be more inspiring and thrilling than an informal spontaneous SING by the student body—plus THE FACULTY.

As a suggestion, why not assemble one or two evenings a week on the LIBRARY or CHAPEL STAIRS between 7.30 and 8.00 and warble tunes that have long been tried and forever loved.

Encouraged by the splendid response of the FRATS in the recent COMPETITIVE SING and a future similar response by the Sororities, the writer feels that a wonderful opportunity is offered of establishing a campus tradition (common at other universities), while the FIRES ARE HOT!

I can think of no more effective medium in the life of our college community than a Campus Sing, to stimulate, establish and perpetuate an ESPRIT de CORPS at good old University of Vermont. SONG MAKES THE WORLD KIN!

I should like to make this point most emphatic:—IN NO SENSE OF THE TERM IS THE CAMPUS SING TO BE REGARDED AS AN EXTRA CURRICULAR ACTIVITY. Not one minute of time is to be utilized (nor is it necessary) in preparation for these tuneful GET-TOGETHERS. Merely mimeographed copies of the words are sufficient, the tunes are universally familiar.

In addition to the concrete suggestion of mimeographed copies, to be distributed among the participants, may I assume to present for approval, disapproval, additions, subtractions or other changes a classified list of old favorites (to which naturally we should add the TOPS from THE HIT PARADE OF TIN PAN ALLEY):

Aggies Learn How To Protect Cattle

Shown How Bruises May Result in Loss

The Aggie Club in collaboration with the Home Ec Club met April 21 in the large lecture room in Morrill Hall. The meeting was called to order at 8 p.m. by Pres. Gordon Page.

A short business meeting was held in which it was voted to let the members of the Eastern States Exposition Dairy Products & Livestock judging teams of '38 buy keys the same as those awarded the teams in '39. This was done as the members of the '38 teams were largely responsible for the reserving of a fund to get the keys for last year's teams.

Miss Wyman, secretary and treasurer of the Eastern States Livestock Loss Prevention Association then showed some movies demonstrating how livestock became bruised in handling and how such bruises may largely be prevented. After the movies Mr. Eldredge of the J. P. Squires Co. demonstrated several bruised cuts of meat and explained how such bruises cause great loss. Questions were asked and the meeting was adjourned after which refreshments of chocolate milk and cookies were served.

Plan Athletics Tour Of South America

Invitations have been sent to the departments of athletics and physical education in all colleges and secondary schools encouraging them to select representatives to join the Good Will Through Athletics Tour of South America which is being sponsored by the Pan-American Sports and Physical Education Association.

The purpose of this tour is to confer with the athletic leaders of the South American countries, to study athletic facilities and programs there so that a common basis may be concluded whereby the scope of athletic competition and a firmer basis for friendship may be the result.

This tour will leave New York on the twelfth of July and return on September 3. This was announced by Samuel W. Ingram, General Manager of the Association today, after a meeting of the Board of Directors.

Swift '43, Dorothy Manion '42, Virginia Weyell '41, and W. S. Preston, Jr., '42. In addition, Miss Freda Harris and Mrs. Charlotte de Volt Elder of the faculty are also members of the orchestra.

The "Requiem" is in seven parts and all words are direct quotations from the Bible. The text of "Requiem" will be included on the programs. Members of Boulder Society will usher, and students and faculty are urged to come early for it is certain that such a musical presentation will draw a record crowd of music lovers.

Such an unusual musical undertaking as the "Requiem" can be attributed to the fine work of Mr. William G. Kirby, acting head of the Music Department. Only under the direction of such a capable director could such a big attempt as the "Requiem" be made. After noting the quality of the Christmas concert and the concerts given by the Glee clubs and choir, those in music circles here are anticipating a performance unequal to that which they have heard for some time.

We Are Not Alone

By "POOH"

Nobody has to wash socks any more. The inquiring eye of a stranger, idly cast across the broad green expanse of our campus, would inevitably encounter here and there a pair of strangely rainbow-like socks, wandering around on someone's ankles. Hmmmmm. Copying the sunsets. Anyway, it's luckly it had to be Wet this year, when colors subtle are definitely on the shelf.

Spring cleaning, as far as windows go, is having a pretty easy time of it. They are continually being automatically washed. Naturally there must be flaws in almost everything; they come out very well, except for a few slight streaks that didn't want to be there in the first place. It's a hard life—being a streak. You don't really want to exist—it's so much more comfortable being oblivious—and everybody carries a bloody hatchet around after you, when you do exist. Another one of those vicious circles. They have an unpleasant habit of cropping up continually. Vicious circles, that is. Come to think of it, streaks do, too. So the kindest thing we can possibly do for them, I suppose, is to carry around a bottle of Windex, well supplied with reserve fuel. "Mercy-killing," I believe they call it.

Now that the windows have been comfortably disposed of, suppose we rush to the next problem on hand—rugs. Rugs are the most prosecuted, down-trodden articles ever created. (We will not mention who created them.) Firstly, they have to submit to being trampled in the dust. This they do bravely. It is a fiery enough existence, all by itself. But then people had to invent Spring Cleaning. That was the limit. Secondary evils were also invented, to go along with it. Such as rug swatters. Very wieldy instruments of grave damage. To the mind's eye they look positively vicious. I'd hate to try to imagine what they must look like to the rug's eye. . . . And so now we find our poor down-trodden friend, the rug, being lifted from terra firma and hung in a frightening chasm of fresh air—and, moreover, being swatted! They tell us that the purpose of this general chastisement is to "clean" the innocent creatures. . . . Oh, well. . . . Suppose we refer the case to the Supreme Court—we'd get quicker action on it Much quicker.

During these years graduates from the home economics course here have filled important positions in teaching, extension work, club work, cateterias, institutional management, and dietetics.

Miss Terrill herself did much work in the way of lecturing before clubs before extension work developed.

Professor Terrill is also the author of a book on household managemnt and has written several U. S. bulletins.

Upon Miss Terrill is to be bestowed the honor of Professor Emeritus.

Dr. Florence King, who is to succeed Miss Terrill, has been in the Bureau of Home Economics in Washington for ten years. She received her A.B. degree at the University of Illinois in 1914 where she was a member of Omicron Nu, home economics honorary society, and of Sigma Xi. She received her master's degree at the University of California and her doctor's degree at the University of Indiana. Doctor King has taught at the University of Chicago, the University of California, Oregon State University, and the University of Illinois.

Doctor King visited our campus two months ago and made the final agreement for coming here a week ago. She has specialized in nutrition, has travelled widely, and is a person of great mental ability and personality.

Student Pilots Offered Prizes

Three Scholarships for Further Study Given

Gill Robb Wilson, President of the National Aeronautic Association, has been appointed to the National Board of Judges of the $15,000 Shell Aviation Awards competition, it was announced recently by Major Lester D. Gardner, executive vice-president of the Institute of the Aeronautical Sciences. Mr. Wilson will take the place on the Board previously held by Charles Horner, who recently retired as President of the National Aeronautic Association.

The fund, established by Shell Oil Company to provide the Shell Intercollegiate Aviation Scholarships for student pilots, and the Shell Aviation Awards for colleges, sponsors, and flight schools participating in the Civil Aeronautics Authority's Civilian Pilot Training Program, will be administered by the Institute.

The students will compete for the selection of the nation's three outstanding student pilots by means of an audit of their grades and by a nationwide flight competition on or about July 15. Seven regional elimination contests are to be held after which seven winners will compete for the three scholarship awards at Washington, D. C., at a later date.

The winner of the national competition will receive a scholarship of $1,000 to be used for advancement of his education along aeronautical lines. Students placing second and third will receive $750 and $500 scholarships, respectively.

Awards will be made on the basis of the student's record in the government flight and ground courses and his ability to execute specified flight maneuvers with maximum precision and safety. Stunt flying will have no place in the competition to select the winners. Provision is made for expenses of finalists and semi-finalists.

Other members of the Board of Awards are: Dr. Guy Snavely, Executive Director of the Association of American Colleges; Col. Edger S. Gorrell, President of the Air Transport Association; Col. John H. Jouett, President of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce; Douglas O. Langstaff, President of the National Association of State Aviation Officials; and Major Gardner.

The Shell scholarships and awards fund will provide cash awards for the flight instructors who train the seven student pilots who qualify for the finals of the competition, and engraved wrist watches will be given to the seven student pilots. Each of 49 contestants who compete in the seven regional elimination contests will receive a parchment certificate.

Dr. Braun President Of Sigma Xi Club

Dr. C. E. Braun of the department of chemistry has been elected president of the Sigma Xi Club at the University of Vermont for the coming year, succeeding Dr. R. G. Daggs of the College of Medicine. Dr. P. A. Moody of the zoology department will serve as vice-president and Dr. H. B. Pierce of the College of Medicine as secretary-treasurer.

The University of Vermont Sigma Xi Club has completed its third year of activity. Formed in the spring of 1937, the club now includes forty-six members living in the Burlington vicinity. Sigma Xi is a national honorary scientific society and membership in the local club is confined to men and women who were elected to the society in one of the Universities at which regular chapters of the organization are installed.

Under the presidency of Dr. R. G. Daggs of the College of Medicine, the club has held monthly supper meetings at which scientific papers have been presented. The climax of the year was the sponsorship, in collaboration with the University lecture series, of a public Sigma Xi lecture by a scientist of national prominence, Dr. John F. Fulton of Yale, who spoke on "The Functions of the Frontal Lobe: an Experimental Analysis in Monkeys, Chimpanzees and Man."

Students Must Go To Founder's Day

This year the Founder's Day Exercises will be held Wednesday, May 1, at 10.00 a.m., in the Ira Allen Chapel. Classes in the three academic colleges will not be held that day. By vote of the University Council attendance at the Exercises will be required of all students except graduate students and those in the College of Medicine. Attendance will be taken.

On the above day Daylight Saving Time will be in effect and the exercises will be held in accordance with Daylight Saving Time, that is one hour earlier than if Standard Time were in effect.

If the weather is fair the classes will assemble promptly at 9.30 along University Place and march into the Chapel. In case of rain the Faculty and Seniors will meet in the basement of the Chapel and members of the other classes will enter the Chapel as ordinarily, going directly to their seats.

Gowns will be worn by members of the Senior Class. Men students will be expected to wear ties and coats in the exercises. Women students will be expected to wear hats.

Scribes to Enter Literary Contest

The recent meetings of the Scribes might be compared to maple syrup on snow; for the presence of Professor Merrick has given a sapient edge to the untrodden ground of the Scribes. Every session has had a tang of its own. At the last meeting on April 19, Professor Merrick read a number of his own short stories, as did other members of the group. They gave each other constructive criticism and those who had not brought material to read joined in.

Georgiana Greene '41 and E. St. Mary '43 were chosen new co-chairmen for the coming two gatherings. Discussion was held concerning a page to be put out in the CYNIC by the Scribes. The majority of the group indicated that they were going to submit material for the tri-state literary contest which takes in the Universities of Vermont, Maine and New Hampshire. U. V. M. is to enter three essays, short stories and poems. The Scribes files, kept by Doris Jareckie '42, has proven itself invaluable in this connection.

The next meeting will be held at Southwick on May 3 at 7.15 sharp. It is imperative that it starts on time as eleven o'clock has been found too early to adjourn. Prof. Elliot Merrick will again attend. Any student on the campus is welcome.

Project Scheduled For Founder's Day

Day to Be Spent in Beautifying Campus

In answer to the numerous requests and complaints concerning our campus, a new annual event has been discussed. It is "Campus Week," designed for the innovation and carrying out of constructive suggestions which have to do with the betterment of our campus. This new event can become a reality only if the student body as a whole is willing to cooperate in every way. So far there has been cooperation along the line of suggestions, but many more ideas are expected and welcome.

The arrangements and preparations of this occasion will be in the hands of the Faculty-Student Council, which is designed to express the will of the students through its actions, and the Honorary Societies.

Founders Day has been chosen as the day of initiation and, with the student body cooperating, much can be done to improve the appearance of the front and back campus as well as the inside of our buildings.

However it would be useless to plant shrubbery and grass on the back campus, which is one suggestion, if the student body continues to recognize this improvement in the same manner in which the front campus is now regarded. At the present there is a muddy path on front campus before the Old Mill which is needless. The Coffee Corner is apparently used as a trash corner for all waste paper and dirty bottles.

If these bad spots can be wiped out and thoughtfulness and cooperation replace them, the "Campus Week" will be a success. So if any one has a suggestion, put it in the Faculty-Student Council box in the Old Mill, and watch for further news.

This Collegiate World

The Gettysburgian of Gettysburg College relates the story of the wrestling coach who patiently tried to explain the fundamentals of the grunt and groan art to his only mildly interested pupils. None seemed to understand, and the light of learning burned low. Finally in sheer desperation he wrote in bold white letters across the gym ceiling: "If you can read this you're in the wrong position."

Engineering Seniors Do Experimental Work

The seniors in the College of Engineering are taking a special thesis course, which promises to bring some interesting results. Some of the seniors are now conducting experiments which will soon be finished.

One of them is the experiment carried on by Maurice Newton and Stanley Heath who are studying the effects of fatigue stresses in notched welds. They have designed and built a machine for this purpose which they will have running by the end of this week. Newton won first prize in a speaking contest with a paper on this test and will read it at the A. S. M. E. Convention in Worcester, May 3 and 4.

Another experiment is being done by Louis Zambon. He has worked out and built an entirely new refrigerating cycle, using a refrigerant that has never been used before. His apparatus is nearly completed and is assembled in the engineering building.

An experiment on the effect of loads on taps and screws by means of photo-elasticity is being done by Forrest Johnson. Most of his equipment is already made and will be ready for tests in about two weeks.

An interesting study on the different grades of gasoline about town is being done by Elliot Hawkins. An article on this should be of interest to many, especially since so many people run cars these days.

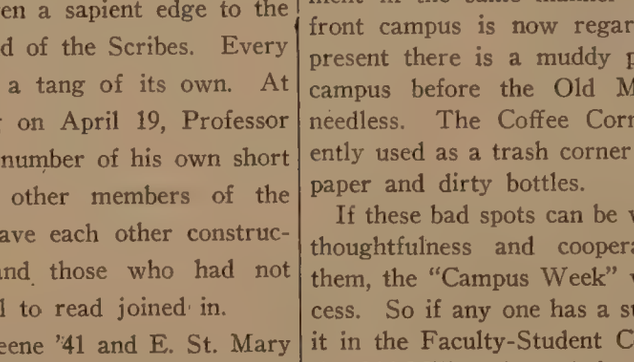
Patch and Bailey Enter Sugar Slalom

Year's Final Ski Event Scheduled for Sunday

The Co-Captains of the Vermont Ski team, Peter Patch and Ev Bailey have entered the Sugar Slalom to be held at Stowe, Sunday, April 28. This is the last official race of the year and is being run between stations 0 and 25 on the Nose Dive by the Mt. Mansfield Club. There have been about 100 entries so far, drawn from the top ranking skiers of the country. There are three classes for the women competitors and five for the men, which are Professional, A, B, and C, Classifications and Unclassified. There will be a prize for the first three of each class and a cup, donated by the Mt. Mansfield Club and named in honor of Marilyn Shaw, will be awarded to the skier with the fastest time.



Prominent contenders for the cup are Walter Prager, Dartmouth coach, and Lionel Hayes in the Professional Class, and Marilyn and Barbara Shaw of Stowe. Milt Hutchinson will be defending his record and will undoubtedly be hard pushed by Hank Simeneau who has just returned from Sun Valley, where he was one of the most popular racers during the winter.

Enter the April enlarging contest now. Three prizes given each month. Write or come in store for rules.

Prominent Lawyer Is Founder's Day Speaker

Mr. Walter Dane, Vermont Graduate, Addresses Whole Student Body

The eminent University of Vermont graduate, Walter Dane '03, who has been selected to deliver the annual Founder's Day address, is a personage of no small magnitude.

Mr. Dane was an honor graduate of the University and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. Upon his graduation from Vermont, he attended the George Washington University Law School from where he received his law degree. In 1937 Mr. Dane was honored by Norwich College which awarded him an honorary LL.D. degree.

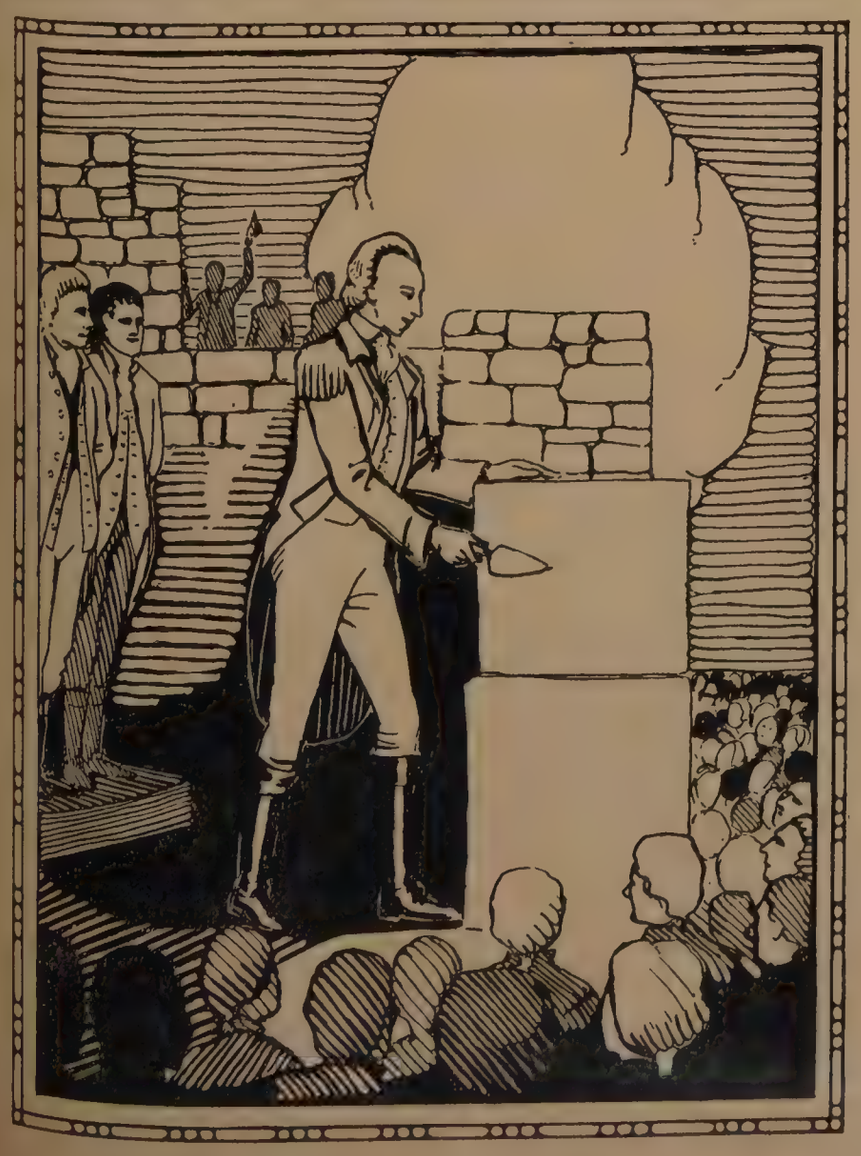
Mr. Dane has held many key positions during his career, among them being confidential secretary to the United States Secretary of the Navy. Mr. Dane was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1912 and started his law practice in Boston.

At present Mr. Dane is a member of the law firm of Abbott, Dane, Buffum and Howe. Mr. Dane is also a member of the American and Massachusetts Bar Associations in addition to being an associate member of the Association of the Bar, New York City.

WALTER DANE

Reminisces on Vt. History

It was nearly fifty years ago that Prof. John Ellsworth Goodrich, in the course of his Centennial oration on "The Life and Public Services of General Ira Allen," made the appropriate suggestion that the first of May, the birthday of Ira Allen, be designated at the University of Vermont as Founder's Day. Thus it was that for nearly half a century this day has been annually observed as a day for giving expression to our appreciation of the life and public services of the Founder of the University.



We have assembled today on the 189th anniversary of the birth of Ira Allen once again to do honor to his memory.

As the result of Professor Goodrich's suggestion, a greater appreciation of the character of the founder and the tremendous value of his services to the state and the college has been gained, and a more widespread interest than formerly existed has been aroused in the stirring period out of which the University emerged; contributing to this also was the publication of the biography of Ira Allen by Mr. James B. Wilbur, and his generous gifts to the University in honor of the Founder, which make it possible for us today to meet in this dignified and stately edifice.

Now we are about to witness the erection of a magnificent new building—the new Waterman Memorial. We should take great satisfaction and pride in this addition to the group of splendid buildings crowning this college hill, for it will be more than a structure admirably designed to fulfill its utilitarian purposes. It will serve for coming generations as a striking example of the real success which can be achieved against all obstacles by the application of the qualities of character forged in the Vermont manner which ruled the life and upheld the brilliant career of the Hon. Charles W. Waterman, who willed more than a million dollars for the use of his college.

The traditions Vermont holds are those of a people made strong in character and free in spirit by the hardening effect of a struggle to maintain life and liberty in the transformation of an unorganized mountain wilderness into a self-sufficient commonwealth.

Sorority Women Danced Friday At Spring Formals

Burlington's Best Dance Bands Play; Colorful Decorations

Members of the seven sororities on campus held their spring formals last Friday night to the music of Burlington's best dance bands, in such intriguing settings as roof tops or under indoor skies filled with a bevy of sparkling constellations and planets. The trend in dresses and corsages was definitely spring-like, and even a few men broke out in white coats or trousers. Blue seemed to be the predominant color in decorations.

The Pi Phi's held their dinner dance atop the Hotel Vermont roof garden with Red Dower supplying the music. The color scheme was blue and white, and the lattice work of the room was decorated with balloons. Place cards for the men were blue arrows, replicas of the pins, and the girls' place cards were the guards. Jane Allen '41, in pink lace and a corsage of spring flowers, was in charge, and the chaperons were Prof. and Mrs. B. C. Douglass, Mr. and Mrs. Proctor Page and their house mother Mrs. Bell.

Decorations

The Alpha Chi house was a veritable "blue heaven" with sparkling silver stars and crescent moons against a blue crepe paper background, and lighted with candles and soft blue lights. One room was "Blue Hawaii" and the stairs were converted into the "Stairway to the Stars." Co-chairmen were Helen Berry '40, in brown net with white iris, and Mary Germain '43, in pale blue crepe with talisman roses, and chaperons were Dr. and Mrs. R. A. Daggs and Miss Marjorie Perrin. The favors were tooled leather key cases with the Alpha Chi seal in one corner.

The Tri-Delt dinner was held in the Ivory Room of the Hotel Van Ness with Joané Agard '42, wearing white net and red roses, in charge. Decorations were done in silver, blue and gold, the sorority colors, and at one end of the hall was a Tri-Delt banner. Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Stultz, Mrs. Fletcher and Mrs. Swertferger were chaperons.

The Thetas had their dinner at the Paragon and danced to Cliff Agnew's music at the Ethan Allen Club. Louise Mann '41, chairman, wore pale green chiffon and orchids, and chaperones were Prof. and Mrs. M. C. Witham and Prof. and Mrs. A. C. Nuquist.

Club to Present French Comedy

Tonight at Southwick at 8.00 o'clock, "Ces Dames aux Chapeaux Verts" will be presented by the Cercle Français.

This light, fast-moving comedy shows the upsetting effect of the arrival of a "young thing" in a household of staid middle-aged women. Ultra-modern, her first thought is to ferret out a life-long romance between the youngest of the ladies and a professor, played respectively by June Hoffman '43 and J. M. Evans '41.

After their intentions of marriage have been presented to the head of the household, the erstwhile dry professor launches the young girl on a romance of her own.

The whole play is witty and well played by a supporting cast. Tickets will be on sale at the door at the price of fifteen cents.

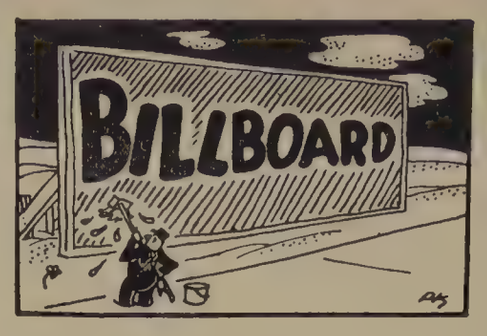
PEARL RANDALL WASSON.

Today the University of Vermont honors its distinguished founder Ira Allen, who founded our University one-hundred and forty-nine years ago. To his persistence, foresighted unselfish effort was due the founding of our institution which is the oldest distinctly State University in the United States.

As early as 1789, Vermonters urged the founding of a university but not until November 2, 1791 in the first General Assembly after the state became a member of the Federal Union was the charter for the University of Vermont granted.

Ira Allen, in addition to giving of his time and effort, gave four thousand pounds for the establishment of our University. A man of a remarkable ability, a surveyor, a soldier, an extensive business man and a statesman, his great services to the United States and to Vermont have marked him as the most important man in early Vermont history.



The University of Vermont was founded for the purpose of educating Vermont youth in the advancement of morality, virtue and learning so that they might learn the democratic ideals for which our country stands. From its modest beginnings the University has grown from a college with only four students to a nationally recognized institution of nearly fourteen hundred students and a faculty whose members are leaders in their various fields.

From the portals of Vermont have gone out men and women who have played important parts in philosophy, science, art, literature, medicine, education and in many other pursuits. These eminent people point with pride to the University of Vermont which means so much to them and which was instrumental in helping them find their places in American life.

The "Green and Gold," Vermont's colors, were chosen by her leaders not because they were a combination pleasing to the eye but for a far deeper and more significant reason. The "gold" stands not for the accumulation of wealth but for all the fine, worthy and valuable things in life for which man is always striving. The "green" was chosen because it signified "growth" which has been ever one of the essential factors of our University's history and tradition. Growth in size, growth in worth, growth in prestige, growth in tradition and growth in service. Thus typified in the "Green and Gold" are two of the most fundamental characteristics of our tradition, "growth and worth."

Studiis et rebus honestis, the Latin motto on the University of Vermont shield, which is surmounted by the lamp of knowledge, signifies a desire for knowledge and a nobility of character which were the aims and desires of its founder.

Thus today we humbly pay tribute to the memory of a great American and a true Vermonter, Ira Allen, who one hundred and forty-nine years ago founded the "University of the Green Mountains."

The Band Wagon

By BOB JOHNSON

Zaggin' With Zurke

A present Stephens collegian, and former U. V. M.-er, Jimmy Cunavelis says "He played at Stephens and was well liked. His novelties seemed to go over big." That from the land where Zurke has always been popular—the middle west—along to Mississippi. Evelyn Poe, his current chanteuse, seems to be gaining plenty of raves.

Gossip Around B-ton

Most underrated drummer in town—in the state—and one of the best as well as our fave—Wes Beaudry—(Catamounts) who has developed a great deal of flash to go with his steady drive, sound ideas and real boot. A self-effacing sort of guy—but terrific on the hides.

Jimmy Brown—at Swanton's "Riviere" featuring Jimmy's fine alto, a much improved Roy Draper on skins, Joe Duley on bass and a hep chick at the piano—Frances Bostwick. Connie Clark handles the vocal department very capably considering that it's her initial experience in the bizz. Jimmy is handicapped by having to play tenor—a horn he doesn't fell—and clarinet—rather than alto. It's a fine little band.

Jack Collins and six going into the Paragon for six weeks about May 6 (Six—six is life—ooooo—h).

Giving you time to recuperate from Philbert's pun—ignore it—I do!

Lefty Woods—piano man par excellence has rejoined Clyde Stearns.

Kicking the Gong

Jimmy Dorsey—strictly terrific on their recent broadcasts — especially Buddy "Man and His Drums" Shutz and Herbie Haymer's tenor.

Jack "Cupid" Teagarden playing many college proms—a vastly improved band.

Glenn Miller may possibly open Newport's "International Club"—a treat for northern cats and chicks.

Speaking of vocalovlies—catch if you can see through the gang of stags—an eyeful and an earful of Marianne—new Teagarden oriole.

Sororities Take Notice

Bob Crosby is on the search for a sorority song to rival "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi." A simple piano score containing words and music is all that's necessary.

Back at Bat

Teddy Powell has a really fine crew—one that has fine ensemble work—exciting solos—. They've done some fine grooving and their recent airings from the Arcadia have been a treat.

Bobby Byrne and band starting out on one-niters in New England before going to Glen Island on May 15.

Rave of the Week

Cab Calloway's Cats—featuring the ne plus ultra tenor of Chu Berry, the exceptional, exciting, exhilarating stick work of Cozz Cole—typically fine boog trumpet and some piano by a chap whose name we are now digging.

Out of our line—but—Orchids and Magnolias to Professor Kirby and the entire group for their work on the exceedingly difficult "Requiem" . . . but we're off in search of a cup of coffee—and a jam session.

Intersorority Sing Scheduled for Friday

Establishing a new precedent on the U. V. M. campus, the Pan-Hellenic is sponsoring the first intersorority sing. It will be held on Friday, May 3, at Southwick at 8 p.m.

Five sororities are planning to take part, and will offer three selections each. At the close of the program there will be a mass chorus of all participants which will sing "Dear Land of Home" from the Tone Poem Finlandia by Sibelius. Janice Spear '41, Alpha Xi Delta, will be the soloist, and the group will be led by Betty Cole '41, Alpha Chi Omega. The singing will be judged by Prof. W. G. Kirby, Mr. George L. Milliken, and Dean Freda Harris.

Admission is free, so come and lend your support. If this first sing proves to be a success, it will take its place along with the Interfraternity Sing as an annual competition.

Lilac Day History Long and Varied

Lilac Day is the most beautiful and inspirational tradition of the women of U. V. M., but how softened and hazy this tradition has become through the dusty passing of time.

Lilac Day was planned by our first Dean of Women, Pearl Randall Wasson, in 1921, with a two-fold purpose that from the planting of a lilac hedge on Redstone campus, which would increase greatly the beauty of the grounds, there would also be an increase of feeling in the girls' hearts for the ideals of service and the beauties of nature.

Memorial to Dean Wasson

The first Lilac Day was carried out quietly under her guidance. But at the second Dean Wasson was no longer with us, and Lilac Day became a memorial service under the direction of Mortar Board. A pageant was written by the Literary Club, picturing the King and Queen Redstone saddened by the lack of flowers. A prize of gold and the princess' hand was offered to the peasant bringing the most beautiful flower, which turned out to be the lilac. There could be no more appropriate setting for this first pageant, with the brilliant sunlight of a warm spring afternoon, the blue sky, bedding flowers, and hazy purple mountains in the background. The second tree was planted in the hedge between Redstone and Robinson and speeches of dedication were given by student Union officers and class officials. This pageant was repeated for several years, and in 1923, a loving cup was established by the alumnae in Dean Wasson's honor, and awarded annually to a junior girl who had been self-supporting and had held a high scholastic average.

Innovations Each Year

Interesting innovations were introduced every year in the program. Step singing after the dedication was popular for several years, and in 1925 the seniors wore their caps and gowns. In 1927, the pageant and planting of the lilac tree was held at sunset, followed by singing on Redstone steps and a lantern walk, a procession of girls, carrying lights, winding among the trees, a lovely and new interpretation of their expression of beauty. In 1928 the program was preceded by a field day at Grassmount.

There have been many different pageants, but it wasn't until 1932 that the aesthetic dancing, to us the most free and natural expression of the joy and beauty of spring was introduced. Ever since the pageants have been colored by the free interpretations of dance groups and dance soloists. This year the theme will be Keats' "Endymion." But the underlying ideal of the growth of unselfish service and love is present in every Lilac Day program.

The actual planning and carrying out, under the direction of Staff and Sandals, the junior honorary society, with the assistance of Mortar Board, but it is the participation, if not physically, at least spiritually of all the college women which makes this tradition of Lilac Day the supreme expression of beauty in college life.

Mike Howard, University of Iowa wrestling coach, was once national A. A. U. heavyweight champion for five consecutive years.

LAST WEEK IT WAS "REBECCA" next week—"Ces Dames aux Chapeaux Verts."

Lilac Day Pageant Will Be "Endymion"

As each day becomes warmer, and our studies become less intriguing, we all feel like going out and seeing the beauties of nature. And that turns us to Lilac Day, which is an almost twenty-year-old tradition on campus—a service which was first planned by Dean Wasson as a dedication to the growth of unselfish service and love of U. V. M. Each year, a pageant with this theme is presented and a lilac tree is planted in the hedge between Redstone and Robinson.

The pageant this year is to be "Endymion," and it is a huge undertaking. These are to be limitless rehearsals of the groups and of the individual dancers. The group dances are just as important as solo parts, and the girls who have been chosen, are urged to attend these practices regularly and faithfully. In many cases group dancing is more difficult for it must have perfectly timed rhythm and symmetry for the background for the soloists and therefore girls are urgently requested to learn these steps. Because spring is here and we'd much rather take sunbaths and loaf around, practices have been slipping terribly these last few days. Lilac Day is only about two weeks from now, and to make this pageant effective, it needs the interest, enthusiasm and feeling from everyone of the participants. Miss Hazard has been doing splendid work but she needs the cooperation of each one of you to make Lilac Day a success, to make it one of the most beautiful ceremonies yet to be given on Redstone campus.

First Founder's Day Was In Library

Strange and varied are the innovations which have taken place in the celebration of Founder's Day, since it was first observed on the evening of May 1, 1894, in the Billings Library. The May, 1894, issue of the CYNIC tells us the story: "President Buckham, after a few pleasing remarks about the occasion, asked Hon. Daniel Roberts to read the 73rd Psalm, after which he 'deaconed' it to the congregation who, led by the Glee Club, sang it according to the old Puritan custom." Then President Buckham introduced the Rev. Dr. Byington, of the class of '52, who "spoke of our Puritan forefathers, their character and influence, and many interesting facts about their custom of worship and daily life." "At Oxford it has been the custom for 400 years for the choir to sing a Latin hymn at five o'clock on May Day morning. The hymn sung this year was 'Hymnus Eucharisticus.'" . . . "After the exercises the audience passed a pleasant hour in conversation, thus bringing to its close our first observance of Founder's Day."

Another interesting contrast is the editorial appearing in the May 18, 1895, issue of the CYNIC, following the second Founder's Day ceremony.

"The University is to be congratulated on what must be looked upon as a very successful celebration of Founder's Day. If it is possible for the students on two weeks' notice, and under otherwise adverse circumstances, to arrange for a college observance so dignified and at the same time so interesting, it is certainly to be hoped that in the future, under more favorable conditions, the celebration on May first may be made one of the chief events of the year, and may gather about it, as it should, associations which shall unite the University, alumni, faculty, and students, as nothing else could.

"One particularly encouraging feature of the occasion was the gratifying interest manifested by the faculty. Fully one-quarter were in attendance. So unusual a display of concern in any affair emanating from the students cannot but be regarded as a propitious sign of the times. Straws show which way the wind blows, and this unprecedented display of fellowship must indicate that we are one step nearer the millennial time when the faculty as a whole will care something as to what the students do or become."

From this last quotation, it is clear that Founder's Day in the beginning was definitely a function of the students. In succeeding years, addresses were given by students on various historical subjects; sometimes as many as two, three, or four were given during one Founder's Day program. Odes, particularly Latin, were written for the occasion in these early years, and often sung. The most popular melody seems to have been "America."

After the first celebration of the occasion, the ceremony was moved from the Billings Library to the Chapel, where it has taken place ever since.

Looking At Vermont

10 Years Ago

An item was recently published to the effect that a psychiatrist had declared the college years to be practically the most unhappy in the life of the normal individual. Small wonder. After all, the satisfactions of life come from the realization that something has been accomplished; and the accomplishments of most individuals are slight indeed in the college years.

Post Coaches Successful Teams For Twelve Years

A native of Vermont and the coach of your track and cross-country teams, Archie Post, received his start in life in the small town of Hinesburg. He progressed to Burlington and entered U. V. M. in 1923.

Active on Campus

The following three autumns found Archie plodding the trails with the hill and dalers, and in the spring this young man's fancy turned to thoughts of track. Here he proved a mainstay to the team by his brilliant running and consistent point collecting in the mile and half-mile. He concluded his second track season with a record-breaking mile run against a Middlebury opponent. His record is still challenging milers on the Middlebury track.

Aside from his track activities Archie played basketball for four years, and aspired to the captaincy in his third year. He presided over his class during his sophomore and senior years, and was elected headman again at the last class reunion. He was also a member of Boulder and Key and Serpent.

Receives Track Appointment

After graduation Archie spent two years at Proctor as a physical education director, and when he left, Proctor had a track team. In 1929 he was appointed track coach here. He has attended summer sessions at Harvard and Wisconsin, and he hopes to complete his required work for a master's degree in education this summer at Vermont.

Coached Men and Track

Archie has coached track and cross-country at Vermont for twelve years, during which time he has turned out many good teams. "It is difficult to compare one Vermont team with another," said Archie, "for our only basis of comparison lies in records and owing to the fact that opposing strength fluctuates from year to year, the record is not too valuable a basis of comparison." Mr. Post then went on to say that from the records the two best track teams that he had ever coached were the teams of '37 and '39. The team of '37 won the Easterns and beat Middlebury for the first time since 1926. Last year's men fought some pretty close duels, showed well in the Easterns and took over Middlebury once more. In cross-country we hold a five-year string of victories over Middlebury. Archie's two most outstanding teams being also those of '37 and '39, both with a record of five wins in six trials.

Among the Outstanding

During his long period of working with track men Archie has turned out many stars among the most versatile of whom were Joe and Rollie Delfausse. This combination could enter a meet and place in almost every event on the card. Joe still holds a 50.4 record for the quarter mile while neither Rollie's 9.9 for the 100 nor his 21.8 for the 220 have been erased yet. Woodruff who tied Archie's own record at Middlebury, and Harwood who established a mark in the two mile run were two of the best Post coached distance men. Our own Smith and Stowell are on Archie's list, Gordie as the best combination dash man and Dave as the best half miler with whom Archie has ever worked. In the pole vault Nate Abbott cleared the twelve foot mark, while Paul Park, Austie Ross, and Bud Budzyna did more than hold their own in the weight events.

Speaking of Track

Speaking of track, Archie said, "Track offers a greater opportunity than any other sport for a diversity of ability because of the varied program of events. It offers a chance for the development of spirit and morale from two different angles, one from the direction of the individual, the other from the viewpoint of the team. A good team grows out of good individual performances. From the standpoint of the individual track offers the opportunity for development physically, mentally, and morally through the techniques and coordinations learned, the stamina developed, and through the adherence to the rules and spirit of the sport. Track is a great developer of self confidence. In competition you're on the spot, and there is no one to cover your mistakes for you. Unlike some other sports there is no opportunity in track for hidden unsportsmanlike conduct. Track is as clean a sport as there is. There is a lot of give and take in this sport, but its benefits reach out to all participants. The scrub can derive as much benefit as the star. There is a place for every boy in track if he has two strong legs and a sound heart."

Active in Intramurals

Archie's work is not all accomplished on the track. He has been active for many years in cooperating with the other members of the physical education department in developing more diverse forms of competition. He has ridden the ramifications of athletics from touch football to horseshoe pitching. Archie is a specialist in providing various forms of relaxation for all the male students of this college.

On the track and in the gym he is both a developer and a teacher. Boys like to work with him, and he likes to work with boys. No material is too raw or insignificant for him to work with. For every star that he has turned out, he has sent forth twenty others with a knowledge of sport, relaxation, and self confidence.

Archie is married now and has two daughters. He has come a long way since those Hinesburg days and has put out many good teams, but best of all, he has stimulated an interest, not in track alone, but also in other fields of athletic endeavor, and each year finds more and more applicants pounding the cinder paths under his guidance.

Frosh Netsters Defeat B. H. S.

The Freshman tennis team started the season very auspiciously Saturday afternoon by defeating the Burlington High net team by the overwhelming score of 5 to 1. The opening match proved to be the most interesting from the spectator's point of view with N. Lash of Burlington defeating R. L. Swift of the Frosh 6-2, 2-6, 6-3. In the other singles engagements W. A. Towne (Frosh) defeated C. Denton (B. H. S.) 6-1, 6-0; W. A. West (Frosh) triumphed over E. Crane (B. H. S.) 6-1, 6-2 while P. N. Sutton (Frosh) obtained a 6-0, 6-1 victory over R. Sutherland (B. H. S.).

The doubles were won equally as easy with Towne and Sutton (Frosh) defeating N. Trudell and G. Nichols (B. H. S.) 6-0, 6-3, followed by Swift and West (Frosh) downing Page and Moore (B. H. S.) 6-1, 6-1. The competition was not stiff as the results indicate but it presented Coach Rand's charges an opportunity to show their wares in preparation for the coming tilt with the strong Rutland High team which journeys here on May 4.

Random Shots

By the CO-EDITOR

The actual score of the ball game was 7-4. But the box score should read Vermont—five errors, Boston University—only one. There's the whole story in a nutshell. Bellardinelli pitched a good ball game, good enough to win. He was given a three run lead in the first inning on top of that. But in the second and third frames his infield went to pieces and blew the ball game. . . . Anso seemed to us to be very fast. In the five and two-third innings that he remained in the box he fanned seven and allowed but two bases on balls. . . . Bill DeMerritt, sophomore terrier hurler, pitched flawless ball after a rather shaky first inning.

Davie Stowell winning 880-yard run.

Saturday was quite a day out at Centennial. The track meet started the festivities, and the flag raising ceremonies preceded the ball game. The first ball was officially thrown by city hall and strange enough it reached the plate and was caught by Marty Boucher. . . . Next game notice how Larry bats right handed when hitting fungo flies to left field, and hits from the southpaw position when aiming at right field.

The track meet was close—too close for comfort. The javelin, the final event, decided the affair. The Cats needed to place one or two to assure themselves of victory. They were sporting a five point lead at this point. First place in this event went to Union. Burt Elmer Nichols came through with a toss of 167 feet to take the necessary second place and the meet went with it. . . . Freddie Webster ran one sweet race in the two-mile-run. The last lap saw him virtually walking away from Malewitz of Union as the latter could come nowhere near keeping up with Freddie's last lap kick. . . . Johnny Davis cleared eleven feet to take the pole vault event over Bill Pratt and a Union man. . . . Captain Gordie Smith scored a double in the 100 and 220-yard dashes. Bud Allen had the hurdles under control, winning both the low and high with plenty of room to spare. . . . In the running events Vermont took all but one first place. . . . Clarence Akley took time out from baseball to win the discuss and take a third in the javelin. . . . Johnstone and Pearl were out of luck as the meet was minus the hammer throwing event. . . . It seems as though Mott is the frosh's one man track team. He took four firsts in the B. H. S. meet on Friday.

Catamounts Drop First Home Game to B. U.

Vermont 4, B. U. 7; To Play Norwich At Centennial Field This Afternoon

After starting off with a three-run rally in the first inning the Catamounts succumbed to the hard-hitting Boston Terriers to lose their first home game 7-4. After allowing ten hits Belardinelli was replaced by Hart in the sixth inning. DeMerritt, eighteen-year-old B. U. sophomore, went the limit for the Terriers.

Vermont Scores in First

Vermont's three-run frolic started in the first inning when Spasyk, head of the batting order, was walked. Sysko then fanned for the first out and Wood grounded to Chambers at second for number two. Spasyk, who had stolen second, crossed the plate for the first run when Taylor drove a long one to center field for a two bagger. Conrad in turn followed suit and pushed Taylor in with a two-base hit to the same spot. Maley singled on a Texas leaguer to enable Conrad to tally number three and after was caught off second base by a fast throw from the plate. After this inning DeMerritt very efficiently tightened up and until the last half of the ninth the Catamount activity was mainly concerned with limiting the Terriers' lead.

Terriers Start Slugfest

The Bean City boys chalked up their first run in the first inning when Erikson, who made first on a wild throw, ambled to second on a passed ball and came in when Healy threw short of the base in attempting to put out the next hitter, O'Connell. In the third inning the Terriers bunched three singles and a triple by third baseman Cummings to make the slate read 4-3. Belardinelli was firmly supported for the next two innings until the sixth inning, when a clean single to left field by Erikson started the fireworks. O'Connell and DeMerritt followed with singles and Dattman pushed in a run with a three-base smash to right field. DiNubla returned a fast one through the box to bring Dattman in. With the score 6-3 Hart went in to retire the Terriers. A bit shaky at first, Hart steadied down and allowed but one run in the seventh.

In the ninth inning, behind by four runs, the Vermonters made a desperate attempt and three singles by Taylor, Utley and Lawrence brought Taylor home for Vermont's last run, making the final score 7-4. The Terrier victory was much of an upset as all comparisons showed the U. V. M. team to be the superior. Saturday's game was only the third time this season the B. U. boys have played outdoors. The B. U. stadium in Boston has been dug up for a city aqueduct project and practices were being held in the Tufts cage in Medford. The Catamounts showed a spurt of carelessness that has not been typical this season and made over seven costly errors during the game.

Today the Catamounts face the Norwich Cadets at Centennial Field. A fast game is expected as the Vermonters are doubly spurred by Saturday's debacle and the usual Norwich-Vermont rivalry.

Track Team Edges Out Union, 65-61

Javelin Throw Decides Meet for Vermont Team

It took a heave of 167 feet by Elmer Nichols in the javelin, the last event of the meet, to give Vermont a 65-61 victory over Union. Vermont was leading Union by five points up to this event and needed at least a second place in the javelin to obtain victory.

Supreme in Track Events

Out of the eight track events the Cats governed seven firsts. Only in the 440-yard run did a Union runner break the tape first.

Capt. Gordie Smith opened things up by running the 100-yard dash in 10.1 seconds. He followed this up with a second victory in the 220-yard dash. His time in this event was 22.9 seconds.

The hurdles were taken care of by the veteran Bud Allen who won both the low and high hurdles, not ever being pressed in either event.

Javelin Deciding Factor

Although Vermont grabbed all but one of the first places in the track events. Union's seconds and thirds had accumulated and it still was anyone's meet. Arnold Becker matched a 5 foot 8 inch jump by two Union men to get into a three-way tie in that event. A third by Nichols in the broad jump, Davis' and Pratt's points in the pole vault, Johnstone's second in the shot put, and Akley's win the discuss brought matters up to the javelin.

The summary follows:

Founder's Day

Among all the brave men who lived and labored on the Grants during the Revolutionary Period, no one better typified the spirit of the times than did Ira Allen. Sturdy, energetic, self-reliant and ambitious, he acquired a working knowledge of surveying which served him in gaining a more intimate knowledge of the Vermont territory than any man of his time, and qualified him later for the office of Surveyor-General of the infant state. With excellent discernment he bought of the Quaker Burling the land on Burlington Bay and chose this section as his home and the site of this University, which he founded and supported with generous donations of land and money. On the authority of Governor Chittenden, his friend and contemporary, who above all others had an intimate knowledge of Ira Allen's public services, it may be asserted with confidence that had it not been for Ira Allen, there would have been no State of Vermont.

Whenever a critical situation had to be met in these perilous years, it was the resourcefulness and the unwavering courage of this remarkable man that saved Vermont from dismemberment.

Ira Allen Helps in Crisis

When Vermont was threatened with a loss of half its territory and possible political extinction, it turned in its crisis to Ira Allen. He was sent alone to a convention "to take such measures as his prudence should dictate, and which might be conducive to the interest of the state." When Ira Allen arrived at the convention at night, the scene has been called the most critical moment in the history of Vermont. The next morning the vote was changed from a minority ot a substantial majority and it was voted that Vermont should retain jurisdiction of the territory between the Mountain Range and the Connecticut River, and that a part of New Hampshire be annexed to Vermont.

It remains to mention one other crisis in which the struggling young Republic of Vermont called upon Ira Allen to undertake a difficult diplomatic mission.

It seemed likely that the British forces could at any moment overwhelm Vermont and drive a wedge deep into the territory of the colonies. It was necessary to the very existence of the state that they should not move against Vermont. It was of vital importance also to the Continental Army.

The strategy of Ira Allen, Governor Chittenden and the other Vermont leaders was, without disclosing the plan to the people of Vermont and keeping the negotiations secret, to encourage the Governor General of Canada to believe that, because of the indifference of the Continental Congress towards Vermont's claim for admission to the Union of States, Vermont might be reconciled to the Crown. Allen continued his policies of encouragement and delay until the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown on the 19th day of October 1781. The Canadian Governor General concluded that the surrender of Cornwallis "left no hope of a successful conclusion of negotiations with Vermont!"

An Authority on Negotiations

Ira Allen himself is authority for the statement that the Vermont negotiations with the British detained in Canada one-third of the British forces in America, thus aiding in the defeat of Cornwallis and the winning of American independence.

The period out of which the state and University emerged was one of struggle against the forces of tyranny and aggression, to save from destruction individual liberty, and independent self-government in the Vermont Republic. A state and an educational institution infused with such a spirit have a priceless heritage to be preserved through the ages.

Perhaps, in such an hour as this, we may be permitted to indulge in a flight of fancy into the realm of imagination there to behold the features of Ira Allen boldly sculptured on some lofty ledge of Camel's Hump, gazing down the Valley of the Winooski in eternal contemplation of the land he loved, an immutable and indestructible tribute of a grateful people.

Tennis Team Loses in Both Week-end Matches

A disastrous opening was experienced by the 1940 edition of the University of Vermont tennis team. Six players, accompanied by their coach, Prof. F. D. Carpenter, journeyed to Trinity on Friday and Amherst on Saturday for their first intercollegiate encounters of the season, the Williams match being rained out. Both matches went against U. V. M., Trinity winning by 8-1 and Amherst taking Saturday's match to the tune of 9-0.

The fact that the matches were not only the first intercollegiate competition of the year, but that they also carried the distinction of being the first time outdoors this year for our men, may have no little effect upon the results as they now stand. Add to that inclement weather for the Trinity match.

The lone winning match of the trip was turned in by the number one doubles pair of the team, Gordie Booth and Art Wolk, who won by 6-4, 3-6, 6-3. Both of the remaining two doubles pairs lost as did all of the men playing singles. Simpson and Foti lost by 6-4, 6-1, while Clark and Pine succumbed by 6-4, 6-3.

In the singles, Capt. Gordie Booth started the parade in losing by 6-2, 8-6. Wolk followed by losing 6-3, 6-4. Foti's losing scores were 6-1, 8-6, while Simpson's were 6-2, 6-2. Clark was sunk by 8-6, 6-3, while Pine managed to retrieve a set, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4.

The next day, Saturday, Amherst was played. The team score was Vermont 0, Amherst 9. Captain Booth lost in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2. Wolk's losing scores were 6-3, 8-6, while Foti's were 6-2, 6-1. Simpson lost by 6-3, 6-2 and Clark by 6-3, 6-1. Pine carried his man into two overtime sets before bowing by 7-5, 8-6.

The doubles scores, going against Vermont, were: Booth and Wolk losing by 6-3, 6-0, Simpson and Foti by 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, and Clark and Pine by 8-6, 6-3.

Speaking Contests Coming in May

Seventeen Women and Six Men to Compete

Seventeen women at the University of Vermont are contenders for prize reading honors in the freshman-sophomore Women's Prize Reading Contest, recently revived after a lapse of a number of years and received with enthusiasm by women of the two lower classes at the University. Six men have entered the Kingsley Prize Speaking Contest, which is open to freshman and sophomore men.

The large number of entrants in the women's reading contest makes it necessary to hold eliminations to select finalists. The final contest will be held during the second week of May, according to announcement by Mr. M. D. Powers of the University of Vermont, who has charge of both the prize reading and prize speaking contests. The Kingsley Prize Speaking Contest will probably also take place during the second week of May.

The seventeen women aspiring to be winners of the three prizes of $25, $15 and $10 offered for the top three in the reading contest are Jean Stewart, Rawal Pindi, India; Huddee Zwick, Burlington; Florence Smith, Treadwell, N. Y.; Faye Lipman, Bristol, Conn.; Myrna French, Burlington; Eleanor Brody, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Natalie Spear, St. Albans; Barbara Butterfield, Manchester; Gloria Farrell, Rutland; Ruth Burnell, St. Albans; Gertrude Johnston, Barre; Nita Falby, Burlington; Jeanne Woolley, Glen Cove, N. Y.; Geraldine Annis, Barton; Jean Young, Elmhurst, L. I., N. Y.; Ruth Conner, Barton; and Janet Hackwell, Montpelier.

Prizes of $25, $15 and $10 are also offered to the winners in the Kingsley Prize Speaking Contest, and the contenders here are Samuel Levine, W. Rutland; Abraham Swartz, Boston, Mass.; Daan Zwick, Burlington; Phillip Eisenwinter, Swampscott, Mass.; Robert Steinman, Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Jack Goldman, Burlington.

Capacity Gathering Hears "Requiem" in Ira Allen Chapel

Performance Repeated Monday Evening By Special Request

Brahms' "Requiem," directed by Mr. William G. Kirby, acting head of the music department, was without question the best musical program that the University has put on: It had all the sweeping power of the world in its fold. Though the Chapel was crowded to its aisles and there were music lovers in its corridors, the Grecian structure expanded and actually took deep breaths . . . never had any animate or inanimate object been so uplifted. An observer noticed that even the buds on the elm trees about the campus burst into a tender green profusion . . . they could not contain themselves. Nobody could.

When Brahms' mother died, her son wrapped his grief into a G clef, melted the wood wind and brass; prohibiting their hardening; unswathed the strings, organ and harp and unharnessed the tympani. Brahms eradicated despair and gloomy resignation from death, placing rather a serene confidence in an ultimate triumph over death. The "Requiem" is a composition in seven movements for chorus and orchestra, a musical setting of selected passages from the German bible.

Though the Christmas concert and other musical offerings directed by Mr. Kirby have been priceless jewels, they were cement beside Sunday and Monday evenings' performances. Mr. Kirby might be called a Burlington Toscanini. He demonstrated a masterful reading of the score; used the choral and orchestral resources to the full and interpreted as only a master could.

Miss Hilda Ohlin, soprano of New York City, had a vibrant and clear voice. Paul Poulin '41, baritone and other soloist, had good diction which required a little more volume, and excellent quality and precision.

The blending of the chorus and orchestra was superb. It was sensitive, rhythmic and expressed the enjoyment of all the performers. The balance could not be improved upon. The attacks and climaxes were well developed.

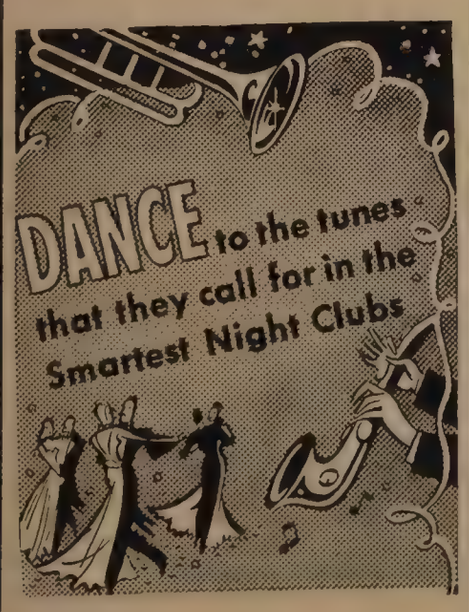
Help Wanted—Snakes

If you have any snakes around lying idle and want to show the true fraternal spirit, you could express the varmints to the drama department of City College here and win yourself a spot in this cloister's great heart forever and aye.

Only hurry.

You see the annual City College varsity show is coming up right soon and the script simply insists on snakes. The local gendarmerie has refused the impresario permission to hunt in Wall Street, and naturally the students are desperate.



They've appealed to Frank Buck who has taken the matter under advisement. The snakes they want must be "toothless and well-bred."

If you're afraid that evil days might come upon your pet rattler, be advised that if you ship him on, the campus magnificoes in charge of the show "solemnly promise not to swallow the snakes or to teach them to prattle Plato."

It is very important that this concert be well attended, for its success is the factor that will determine whether intersorority sings will become a part of U. V. M.'s tradition as are the interfraternity sings.

Many hours of practice have been spent by the various groups, so it will be well worth anyone's time to be present there at Southwick tonight. Remember that the admission is free.

Shumway to Revisit University, May 6

Will Hold Conferences With Senior Students

Mr. Shumway, president of the Boston service, William H. Shumway, Inc., Personnel Analysts and Counsellors, will return to the University of Vermont Monday, May 6, and Tuesday, May 7, for further personal conferences with seniors. This service is available to seniors in all colleges. Appointments should be made in advance and through the office of Dean Elijah Swift of the College of Arts and Sciences.

On his earlier visit this spring Mr. Shumway had interviews with some forty seniors. There were, however, many seeking appointments too late to be accommodated. In view of this overflow, Prof. A. R. Gifford, chairman of the Committee on Personnel Work, has arranged for the return visit. At this time also Mr. Shumway desires to check up on certain freshmen seen last fall, for whom he outlined certain plans for self-development.

During Mr. Shumway's visit he will also meet a faculty group to discuss informally the need of the University for a vocational counselling and placement service.

Thirteen Students Contribute Work to New "Winnowings"

Fine Photographs Elliot Merrick's Foreword Featured

A year's output from the student authors of the University of Vermont, gathered in Winnowings from the Mill, literary yearbook, has just been published and issued to the campus. Jean Brehmer of Rutland, senior literary-scientific student, who was editor of Winnowings for the second year, directed the publication. Elliott Merrick, prominent novelist who teaches in the University English department, contributed the foreword of the magazine, encouraging the beginning author.

JEAN BREHMER

War and dictatorships, prevailing in much of the world, are reflected in many of the works, both prose and poetry, while others deal with the simple pastoral life typical of a rural state like Vermont. The book is illustrated with photographs of the Vermont countryside, including such characteristic scenes as an apple orchard in blossom, a covered bridge, one of the bays of Lake Champlain, a snow scene. Pictures used were taken by Harry Stevens and George LaPierre, Burlington photographers, and John H. Couture, Burlington, University of Vermont student.

The table of contents carries short stories by Marolyn Powers, Vergennes; June Hall, Derby; Jean Saul, Fitchburg, Mass.; Fulvio Bardossi, Barre; Doris Jareckie, Madison, N. J.; Judith Perry, Barre; Angeline Ducas, Waterbury; Myrna French, Burlington. There are essays by Elizabeth Chaffee, Enosburg Falls, and Robert H. Johnson, Fair Haven.

Poems appear by these authors: Flora Fifield, Randolph; Marolyn Powers, Vergennes; Doris Jareckie, Madison, N. J.; Margaret Drum, Mendham, N. J.; Jane Lyons, New York City. Most of these poets contribute several poems each.

Y.W.C.A. to Send Members to Camp

Y. W. C. A. is hoping to send at least two girls to Camp L-At-Ka on Lake Sabago in Maine this summer. Mary Letta Root '41, who went last year, is in charge of raising funds and anyone who is interested in aiding in this enterprise should see her.

It is to be regretted that more Vermont girls cannot attend such things, for they would gain a wealth of experience and ideas which they would bring back to our campus.

The ladies of the faculty are interested in the project and are planning to do what they can in raising funds.

Cats Swamp Cadets 11-1 In Founder's Day Battle

Carlson Allows Only Five Hits As Mates Star at Plate

Behind the five-hit pitching of Bobby Carlson, sophomore hurler, the Vermont team clouted Jim Henderson, ace Norwich pitcher, for ten hits and eleven runs to come out on the long end of an 11-1 score. The Cats scored two in the first, one in the third, one in the fifth, two in the sixth, and bunched four hits with two walks in the eighth to tally five times. The lone Norwich tally came as a result of a long line drive hit by Maynard, Cadet gardener. The blow rolled along the right field foul line to the graveyard and was good for four bases. Carlson yielded only four other safeties.

No Time Lost

Vermont did not waste any time in starting off the fireworks. Johnny Spasyk, leadoff man, drew a base on balls. He advanced to second when Sig Sysko also was granted a free trip. Both runners scored a moment later when Taylor's long drive to right center was good for three bases. In the third frame Henderson's wildness once again threw him in hot water. Sysko strolled to first on the second of his four walks. Wood was hit on the leg by a Henderson heave which put men on first and second. A single to left by Conrad, after Taylor had whiffed, brought in run number three. Taylor's second triple of the day brought in the fourth run, while two more markers were the results of two hits and two walks in the sixth.

The Cats really let loose in the eighth frame. Ten men went to the plate and five runners crossed it—all after two outs. Boucher rapped a drive to center. He advanced to second on a sacrifice. Spasyk

W.A.A. Plans Stunt Night for Saturday

To Hold Initiation Of New Council Members

The W. A. A. stunt night and initiation will be Saturday, May 4, at Robinson Hall. Plans have been varied for this year's program and the schedule will start at 4.30 with the stunts which are being presented by different dorms on campus. In former years these stunts have been the drawing card, for the girls usually work out novel interpretations for well known campus truths! The initiation of the new council members, just recently elected, will take place followed by a report by Liz Gurney '41 of her trip to Ohio State University to the Northeastern Sectional conference of the Athletic Federation of College Woman. Liz was sent as a delegate to this convention, as she is next year's W. A. A. president. The Point System committee will also give a report at this time, and will review the possibilities of a new point system which will undoubtedly go into effect next year. A buffet supper will be served, with no charge to girls living in college dormitories.

Kay Holden '42 and Janet Dike '43 will be in charge of the stunts, and Bobby Gallagher '42 will be in charge of the buffet supper. This is the last big get-together for all W. A. A. members this year, and in past years has proved to be one of the most successful. It gives a chance for everyone to meet the new officers who will be in charge of sports next year.

Meeting May 7

The first meeting of the new and old council will be held on May 7 at which time the old members give reports on their duties for the past year, and give suggestions and helpful advice to the incoming members. They will also make plans together for the All Sports Banquet which will be held May 14.

Plans are already being formed for next year's sports, and the new president and vice-president are forming with Miss Crowe a tentative schedule of sports activities. This year's Green and Gold captains are helping choose next year's sports managers, which will be voted on at the joint meeting of the two councils.

Museum to Entertain

The Fleming Museum Art Association will be hostess on Friday afternoon, May 3, from three to five at the Fleming Museum, to a reception and tea given in honor of the Northern Vermont Artists. The paintings of these artists will be on exhibition at the museum for three weeks.

The Northern Vermont Artists are represented by a group of fifty from regions around Burlington. Among the exhibitors are several U. V. M. graduates.

Classical Club Meeting

The next Classical Club meeting will be held on Thursday, May 16, at 7.30 p.m. at the home of Prof. L. M. Prindle. The program will consist of the reading of Sophocles' play, "Philoctetes." Doctor Benedict is in charge of this program. Those taking part are Joyce Gilman '43, June Hoffman '43 and Walter Maurer '43.

Track Team Meets Colby Tomorrow

Daggart and Smith Rivals in Hurdles

Tomorrow the varsity track team meets Colby at Centennial Field in one of the toughest contests of the season. Although Vermont was the victor in the last encounter with Colby, the visitors are returning with quite a few veterans who last year placed high and who, if they are in good condition, will undoubtedly reburn the cinders.

Probable highlight of the meet will be the renewal of last year's duel in the dashes between Daggart and Gordie Smith. Daggert is probably the best of Colby's short distance men and beside the 100-yard dash and the 220 is entered in the pole vault and broad jump. Jumping with Daggart is Burnham, who last year took third place. Levin, who took second in the discus throw, and Thompson, who placed third in the high jump, will be on hand plus last year's experience. In the javelin, Allen, last year's winner, and McGraw, who came in third, are expected to put out with some pretty long tosses. The clicking combination of Bud Allen and Bob Kenney will be working on the hurdles to good advantage. Kenney, who has been out of practice because of recent illness, is back in the running again and should place in the high hurdles tomorrow. Outside of reports on the last year's veterans returning, it appears that many Colby freshmen will be filling in the gaps. Coach Post says: "We'll be up against several good men from last year plus some sophomores who are the unknown quantity. Our boys have certainly got a tough fight on their hands."

EDITORIALS

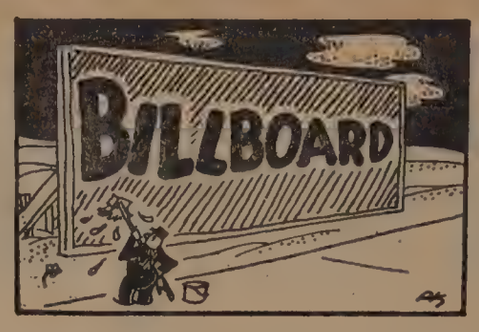
Nice Work!

Founder's Day is over once again. Congratulations are being given on campus to the many new and deserving members of the honorary societies. We feel that such recognition of service, scholarship and leadership among the students is a fine idea. During the past year many excellent projects for the students' benefit have been executed by the retiring Boulder and Mortar Board, who have been helped greatly by the undergraduate honorary societies.

We were especially pleased that Carl Schofield was rewarded the Russell O. Sunderland Trophy. Certainly such a large amount of service and fine leadership deserves the biggest award that the University might give.

The 1941 Ariel staff is also to be congratulated for getting their book out so early and for the 1941 Ariel itself, which shows many hours of work. The new yearbook's novel arrangement of the Juniors' pictures is good as are many other features of the book. The blurring of some of the photographs is obviously the fault of the printing company and not of the Ariel Board. The 1941 Ariel is a fine book and we think that a lot of credit is due its editor and all his assistants.

The only possible criticism we have about the exercises last Wednesday is that the speaker devoted too much of his address to political questions which have little to do with the founding of our University. His speech, however, clearly showed that he had an ability to speak well and was well acquainted with his subject.



Where's that Class Spirit?

"Avoid Insomnia," "Attention Voters" and many other captions are printed on various posters on campus to induce students to put four or five marks beside the names of four or five students who are running for the officers of their class. Such a resort to posters is childish but the peculiar thing about them is that they are absolutely needed. The students on our campus are so lackadaisical that they do not even know who is running for the offices. Such a state is really terrible and every student should be ashamed of such gross neglect.

The Junior Class meeting which met last week was attended by exactly one man, six women, the president of the class and Professor Carroll. Because the girls were bighearted, they decided not to nominate women for all the officers for next year which is their Senior year, as they could have done, but they agreed to have another meeting in the future. Such a poorly attended meeting is but another example of the great need of school spirit and class enthusiasm on our campus.

In previous elections complaints have frequently been made about the "combines" that function on our campus. We feel strongly that students who have such opinions should do something about the situation. Good active campaigns could be carried on in which different candidates were put up. Such activity would certainly arouse enough interest among the students so that more than SEVEN would attend the class meetings. Other campuses have this type of activity and this might be effectively used at Vermont.

Class meetings are supposed to be the expression of the opinions of all the members of each class. If the students do not attend the meetings, however, some undeserving people may be elected. We urge everyone to take an interest in their class activities and vote in the coming elections.

JUNIOR CLASS (1941) Nominating Meeting and Class Election.—So few members of the Junior Class were present at the nominating meeting held Monday, April 29, that the class voted to postpone the nominating meeting. The Committee on Elections has agreed that the nominating meeting shall be held Monday, May 6, and the election Tuesday, May 14.

The nominating meeting will be held at 4.00 p.m. in the large lecture room, Williams Science Hall; the election will be held in the Dean's Office, the polls being open from 9.00 - 12.00 and 2.00 - 4.30 p.m.—E. SWIFT, Secretary.

ENGLISH 27—Reports in senior readings for majors in English should be in by May 25.—PROFESSOR AIKEN.

Fifty cents is all you need to have a good time Tuesday night. Go to the Phi Delt bridge party at 8.00 p.m. on May 7.

Mr. William Shumway, vocational counsellor of Boston, who recently visited the University for conferences with seniors in regard to job-finding, is returning to the campus this Monday and Tuesday, May 6 and 7, in order to afford further opportunities for interviews to those who were unable to make appointments for them previously. Such interviews should be arranged for before the end of this week if possible ,through the office of Dean Swift, in order to avoid possible disappointment. A large number of requests for appointments which came in too late to be granted caused the University Committee on Personnel Work to arrange for Mr. Shumway's second visit. Prof. A. R. Gifford is chairman of this committee.

May 15 and 16 have been set as the dates for the Annual Military Inspection this year.—E. Swift, Secretary.

All suggestions for Orchid of the Week recipients should be put in a box for that purpose in the CYNIC office.

ATTENTION ALL STUDENTS—Please keep off Tennis Courts when crossing back Campus.

ATTENTION—Any small donations of money would be appreciated by the Y. W. C. A. for their drive to collect funds for European students. Such contributions can be left in the labeled boxes located in the library and book store.

Cupid vs. Capitalism

Frank J. Boylan, of the New York Boylans and a junior at Harvard believes that all show producers and immigration officers should be required to go to college and take a "Marriage and Morals" course, or at the very least be required to learn the Balcony Scene from "Romeo and Juliet."

Mr. B. was all set for a life of connubial bliss with Norma Hosken, a curvesome dancer in the Follies Bergere, now holding forth in Boston, when the meany producers reminded them that she had a run of the show contract and that they had posted bond for her entry to the country (she's an Australian). Norma decided that "perhaps she had been a bit hasty."

popped out and then a triple, a double, two bases on balls, another single, an error, and the fire department before the Cats were put out.

Carlson Superb

Carlson was never in danger, yielding only four blows and Maynard's homer. His control was good and his slow hook was untouchable. Henderson, on the other hand, was fast. He fanned six men, but passed nine. His lack of control was his downfall as his wildness figured in each Vermont tally.

In the fourth inning came the fielding gem of the day. Jim Mason, Cadet clean-up man, hit a hard liner to the right of Carlson. The latter reached out and deflected the ball with his gloved hand towards third base. Hazen Wood came tearing in and with a snap peg threw to first, to retire Mason.

Frosh Netmen Will Meet Rutland High Tomorrow

Fresh from an easy victory over the Burlington High tennis team, the freshman netsters engage the strong Rutland High team on the campus courts Saturday afternoon, May 4. Each year the downstaters present a formidable array of talent and the current team is no exception with Kennedy and Watts, two of last year's stars, leading the team. Coach Rand of the frosh will use the same lineup which proved itself so effective last week against Burlington High.

The singles will have R. L. Swift No. 1, W. A. Towne No. 2, W. A. West No. 3 and P. N. Sutton No. 4, while in the doubles Towne and Sutton No. 1 along with West and Swift No. 2 will carry the burden.

Frosh Runners Beat Burlington High

Mott Paces Squad With Five Firsts

For the first time in U. V. M. track history, the Vermont freshmen met the tracksters of Burlington High School in a regularly scheduled meet. The wearers of the green and gold clearly evinced their superiority by taking the meet 64-53.

It appears as though the pre-season optimism of Coach Roy Wietz was well warranted, as he unleashed a bundle of versatility in the personage of Bertrand Mott of Morristown, N. J. Mott was practically a one-man track team, running up 24 points by taking four first places and tying for another first place.

Mott came out victorious in the 70-yard high hurdles, the 140-yard low hurdles, the 220-yard dash, and the broad jump. He tied for first with his teammate Grosvenor in the high jump. In taking the 220, Mott defeated Dick Bouchard, who was unbeaten for Burlington High last year.

Harry Parker, of the Frosh, took two first places to aid the cause; a first in the shot put with a heave of 44 feet, 1 inch and a first in the discuss throw with 113 feet.

The Frosh made a clean sweep of the pole vault as Vreeland, Early, and Wood cleared nine feet. Buttles took a first place in the javelin toss with 157 feet, 11½ inches.

The Vermont freshmen were complete masters in the field events, but showed weaknesses in the middle and long distance runs. These gaps will have to be filled in for the Green Mountain Junior College Meet. This meet is to be held Thursday, May 2, instead of May 3 as originaly scheduled.

Well—All Right

Middlebury beat Boston University 5-4; Norwich beat ditto 20-7; the Cats lost to ditto 7-4. But please notice—U. V. M. beat the Cadets 11-1. So what? So it's very confusing. So we won't bother to figure it out. Those are the statistics but you can't bank on statistics—or you'll be bankrupt in no time. We're content to let well enough alone—"well enough" being a good deal of "all right." After all, victory is victory and one over Norwich is doubly so.

It was a beautiful day out at Centennial. The breezes were cool and soothing. The sun was bright. The grass was green and we were lazy. Not so the Cats. First inning—Spasyk walked, Sysko walked, Wood fanned out. Then Taylor strode to the plate, let one go by, and then calmly belted one pretty nearly to the flag pole for a triple. That's what we call efficiency.

And Some Walked

There was really no need to go on from there. After all—why rub it in? But Vermont spent exactly two and one-half hours proving that they were a lot better than the Cadets. We got kind of worried half way through someone else's peanuts that the game would go on forever and we envisioned ourselves growing gray and haggard as the runs trickled in.

Really there were times when we almost prayed for that Norwich pitcher to heave over a strike. It must have been one of his off days. If we counted right he allowed something like eleven walks or thereabouts. We were rather worried about Sysko. It seemed as though he would go on record as not having come to bat at all. Four consecutive walks were the sum total of his batting up to the eighth—but right then and there he got tired of the monotony and laced out a three-bagger.

Rambling Remarks

Some of the fielders were pretty careful—they weren't too rash about coming in for short flies—as a result there were several very flukey hits.

It's nice to see Frankie Taylor make triples out of doubles—the way he gets around those bases would make a dash man dizzy.

Prize decision of the day—any ball striking one of the track men practicing out past the cinder track would go for two bases. We wondered who would pick up the track men and thank them for their assists.

We guess Larry used his head when he put Carlson on the mound. Bob came through with a five-hit performance and Pesarik is on deck ready for Middlebury. Pretty good figuring.

It was a long ball game and even a home run was featured. Maynard of the Cadets whacked one down the first base line for the only round tripper and Norwich's lone tally. We even applauded—anything for a thrill.

Some of the Cadets had trouble with their shoelaces—they were constantly coming untied at crucial moments.

Seen at the plate—Frankie Taylor showing his knuckle to the umpire as a proof that the Cadet hurler hit him with the ball. The heartless umpire was not moved. . . . Henderson, Norwich pitcher, taking a big swipe at the ball and acting injured when the ump barked "strike." It seems he was merely trying to duck.

For the benefit of the record we must mention three miscues for Vermont and only one for Norwich.

That was a nice play by Wood in the fourth when he took the liner which bounced off Carlson's glove and pegged it over to Lawrence for an out.

Norwich came through with the only double play of the day when Spasyk grounded to short with Boucher on first.

And that seems to be that. Nice afternoon, baseball and spring fever.

Tribute Merited

And before lethargy and Latin ensnare us we wish to congratulate Carl Schofield for winning the Russell Sunderland trophy. If anybody deserved it he certainly did. We know what a hard worker and a swell fellow he is. And the Sunderland award is a fitting tribute to his achievements at Vermont. Somewhere we feel sure another swell fellow in whose memory the prize was established is smiling approval.

Campus Comment

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

In as much as attendance at class nominating meetings and class elections has been very poor for some time, Boulder Society makes the request that all students attend the approaching nominating meetings and class elections which will be held as follows:

Nominating meetings:
Juniors—Monday, May 6.
Seniors—Tuesday, May 7.

Class elections:
Freshmen—Thursday, May 9.
Sophomores—Wednesday, May 8.
Juniors—Monday, May 13.
Seniors—Tuesday, May 14.

All nominating meetings will take place at 4.00 p.m. in Room 27, Science Hall.

Class elections will be held in the dean's office from 9.00 to 12.00 a.m. and from 2.00 to 4.30 p.m.

CARL H. SCHOFIELD,
Retiring President of Boulder.

To the Freshman Girls:

Dear Girls: Perhaps you have heard that we, the freshman men, have military science at the unheard-of hour of 7.30 every morning in the week, except Wednesday, which necessitates our rising at 6.30. We feel that it would be good for you to rise and shine at the same time. It would be an infinite help to us to see your happy, smiling faces down at the back campus every morning. And to keep you from getting bored we have thought up a few means by which you could amuse yourselves. The three that we think would be the most helpful as well as amusing are the following: Cooking breakfast for us hungry soldiers, helping the R. O. T. C. with their rifles (as your pilgrim ancestors used to do), and knitting sweaters for the needy Chinese. Of course, we do not expect you to do all of these things—just one or two that you prefer.

In addition, we see no earthly reason why we should rise at 6.30 when you are still sleeping peacefully. We feel that, in all fairness, you should get up, and we appeal to your better nature as young women to sympathize with and assist us in our misery.

Just think how much more willingly we would train if we had a gracious and beautiful audience; how few and far between, the cuts, if each of us were to see our heart-throb every morning; and how much harder we would train so we could show off to you.

We are sure that, in view of the circumstances, you would not be averse to rising a scant hour earlier.

Hopefully yours,
THE MEN OF CONVERSE.

Varsity Netmen Defeat Clarkson

Are Off To New York Today For Two Matches

In a sharp reversal of their previous form the U. V. M. varsity tennis team obtained an impressive victory over Clarkson College of Potsdam, N. Y., winning by the score of 5-2. Vermont won four of the five singles matches and split the doubles.

The opening singles encounter proved to be the best match of the afternoon with Englander, western New York titlist and one of York State's best, eeking out a 4-6, 8-6, 6-4 victory over Vermont's Capt. G. B. Booth '40. In the other singles matches the Vermont netsters disposed of their opponents with little difficulty. A. D. Wolk '41 (V) defeated Hart (C) 6-2, 6-4, J. E. Simpson '41 (V) overwhelmed Kingsbury (C), S. J. Foti '42 (V) gained an easy 6-1, 6-0 victory over Gallagher (C), and A. D. Clark '40 (V) walked over Elliot (C) 6-2, 6-4.

Weakening in the third set, Captain Booth and Wolk lost a close decision to Englander and Gallagher (C) 6-3, 4-6, 2-6, and to complete the doubles Simpson and Foti (V) widened the gap by downing Hart and Kingsbury (C) 6-2, 8-6 after a long battle in the final set.

Dramatic Club Elects

The results of the Dramatic Club elections which took place on Monday are as follows:

President—Jane Lyons '41.
Secretary-treasurer—Myrna French '42.
Publicity—Janet Hackwell '43, Marjorie Abell '43.

On Friday, May 3, the tennis team, accompanied by Coach F. D. Carpenter, journeys to Schenectady, N. Y., to engage the Union College courtmen and on Saturday cross over to Troy, N. Y., to play the Techmen of Rensselaer. According to reports received by the graduate office, Union is exceptionally strong this year with three of last year's lettermen unable to break into the present first six. No information is available about R. P. I. but it is expected that they will afford plenty of stiff competition.

Hoping to maintain the improved form his team showed against Clarkson, Coach Carpenter will use the same lineup of Booth No. 1, Wolk No. 2, Simpson No. 3, Foti No. 4, Clark No. 5 and Pine No. 6. In the doubles Booth pairs with Wolk at No. 1, Simpson joins Foti for No. 2, followed by Clark and Pine in the No. 3 spot.

Frosh Nine Drops Game to Burlington

Playing the second game of a Founder's Day doubleheader at Centennial Field, the Vermont frosh lost a slugger's duel to the boys from Burlington High School to the tune of a 17-13 score. Both coaches substituted freely, using a total of thirty-three men all told.

The frosh got thirteen runs out of seventeen hits and five Burlington errors. Laramee was the starting hurler for Old Edmunds and was credited with the victory. Pender, Connor and Stone also chucked them in for the Blue and Paquette and Muir did the receiving.

Burlington netted seventeen runs on nineteen hits and six freshman errors. Iby started for Vermont and was relieved by Hamilton, who finished the game. Lincoln and Cain were the catchers.

The contest was a slugger's marathon, but should give Coach Fuzzy Evans a real line on his material, and should have provided valuable experience for the players.

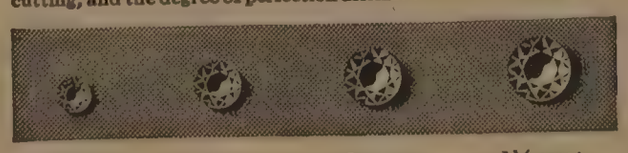
What QUALITIES measure its value?

CARAT WEIGHT is often the only consideration by which the layman judges the worth of a diamond. But if you seek real value and quality, these three other characteristics must also be considered:

CUTTING. The style and accuracy of cutting control the brilliance of a finished diamond—greatly affect its worth as an ornament and heirloom.

PERFECTION. The degree of perfection, or freedom from flaws, influences the value of any stone. Many classifications separate the flawless diamond from the visibly imperfect.



COLOR. Traditionally, a diamond is colorless and called white, or more often blue-white. Tinges of yellow or brown decrease its desirability.

We shall gladly show you stones in which these qualities are present to varying degrees . . . knowledge which will aid you in the intelligent choice of the diamond you are seeking.

Carat weight alone does not determine a diamond's value. Color, cutting, and the degree of perfection all influence the value greatly.

Campus Sing To Start Gala Junior Week

"What A Life" To Be Given Thursday Night

Cast Consists of Seventeen; Mrs. Taggart Again to Direct

The University Players are presenting "What a Life," a three-act comedy as this year's Junior Week Play at Southwick Memorial, Thursday evening at 8.15. The play is a comedy of errors of a high school student with his fun and ever-constant misdemeanors, his passionate love affairs, and jealousies of the brilliant student and football hero. Yet this presumably common theme has a unique touch, which becomes a vivid reminder to us of our fun and troubles in high school, which after all, wasn't so long ago. Roger Hunting '42, as Henry Aldrich, the student, and Janet Hackwell '43 as his first love, portray the parts with such natural skill and versatility, that they give new coloring to the everyday characters. The cast has done a remarkable piece of work under the direction of Mrs. W. S. Taggart, and "What a Life" promises to be a most descriptive and outstanding play.

The cast in the order of their appearance is as follows:

Miss Shea .....Barbara Tucker '43
Mr. Nelson .....George Noonan '40
Mr. Patterson ..... David Johnson '40
Miss Pike .....Janet Rust '42
Bill .....Paul Poulin '41
Miss Eggleston ...Marion Stoughton '43
Miss Johnson .....Anne Bottomley '42
Mr. Vecchito .....Louis Pichierri '41
Henry Aldrich .....Roger Hunting '42
Barbara Pearson ....Janet Hackwell '43
Sturdy .....Patricia Page '43
Mr. Bradley.....Henry Middleworth '40
Miss Wheeler....Barbara Butterfield '42
George Bigelow.....Copeland Marks '42
Mrs. Aldrich.....Louise Mann '41
Mr. Fergurson ....Edward Guilbert '41

Fraternity Open House to be on Saturday Night

All Frats to Hold Semi-Formal Dance; Directors Named

Saturday night from 9-12 each fraternity on the hill will entertain his fellow fraternity men and alumni of U. V. M. who have returned to Junior Week festivities by a semi-formal house dance. This is one of the most sociable nights of the college year, when the fraternities open wide their doors of welcome, and in turn visit the other houses to dance and exchange good wishes. The hill on this night is in its most beautiful spring setting with the spring air and stars, the atmosphere of friendship and sincere college life.

Committees Given

The committees in charge of the house dances are as follows:

At the A T O house, plans are being formed under the direction of A. D. MacDonald '40.

The Kappa Sigs dance will be arranged by P. Corley '41, R. Healey '41, and H. O'Toole '43.

The Lambda Iota house will welcome their guests at the dance arranged by R. F. Darling '43 and H. E. Thurber '43. The Collegians will furnish music, and Dr. and Mrs. Daggs and Dr. and Mrs. Stultz will chaperon.

J. Spasyk '42 is in charge of arrangements at the Phi Delta Theta house, at which Cliff Agnew and the New Vermonters will play, and Prof. and Mrs. Millington and Prof. and Mrs. Pond will chaperon. This dance is to be informal.

The Phi Sigma Delta fraternity will hold a dinner dance at Oakledge Manor with an orchestra from Rutland furnishing music. A. H. Becker '41 is in charge.

Plans at the S A E house are being formed by A. L. Shaw '42 and W. A. Roeder '42.

Open House Till 10.30

The Grenadiers, a Norwich band will furnish music at the Sigma Nu Lodge and J. B. Wheeler '40, and J. B. Delano, Jr., '43, will make arrangements.

At the Sigma Phi Place, N. Tucker '42 is in charge of the dance at which Red Dower's band will play, and Professor Laatsch, Prof. Florence Woodard, and Major and Mrs. Coffin will chaperon.

S. Firestone '41 is making arrangements for the Tau Epsilon Phi dance which will be held at Hotel Vermont Roof Garden. Prof. and Mrs. H. B. Bickford are chaperons.

Open house will be held until 10.30 when all the couples will return to their own fraternity to spend the remainder of the evening.

Three Initiated Into Sigma Nu Fraternity

Sigma Nu fraternity initiated three new members on Sunday afternoon, May 5. They are J. D. Neill '42, J. D. Sawyer '42, and D. L. Moran '42. Following the initiation, the new members were guests of honor at an initiation banquet held at the Black Cat café.

Professors Ladd And Millikan to Judge Peerade

Rules for Judging Are Released; to Be Held Thursday 4.15 P.M.

The annual Peerade, the beginning of U. V. M. Junior Week will be held at 4.15 Thursday afternoon. This tradition of having each sorority and fraternity advertise by a float the Junior Week Play which is held Thursday evening at Southwick is one of the most interesting features of the gala week-end. The floats are constructed and arranged by the members of the fraternities and the center of enthusiasm is placed on originality and novel expressions in advertising the theme of the play. The rules for judging the standard of the floats are as follows:

1. Advertising value—35 points.
2. Originality—25 points.
3. Workmanship—20 points.
4. General appearance—15 points.
5. Adaptability—5 points.

Two prizes will be given for the best float entered by a fraternity or a sorority. The winning fraternity and sorority will each be given a cup and a cash award of five dollars. The Peerade will start from University Row, and will proceed down Main Street, up Church Street, and Pearl. The judges, Prof. G. L. Millikan and Prof. B. Ladd will observe the floats from the City Hall steps.

Junior Week to End With Fraternity Picnics

Weather permitting, several of the fraternities are planning all-day Sunday picnics to end a gay week-end of dances, parades and plays. The Kappa Sig picnic is being planned by J. R. Royer '41, but a definite spot has not yet been decided upon.

The Sigma Nus will held their picnic on Lake Champlain about 30 miles north of Burlington. J. W. Davis '40 is in charge, and will be assisted by W. I. Shea '40 and D. R. McRell '43.

Camp Abnaki is the scene of the Sig Phi's picnic which will be arranged by M. J. Reynolds '42 and P. N. Sutton '43.

Pye and Slack Announce Pichierri '41 to Conduct

To Be Held Tomorrow At 7.30 P.M., on The Chapel Steps

As an innovation for the opening of this year's Junior Week, R. O. Slack and W. Pye, directors, have announced that a campus sing will be held on the Chapel steps, Wednesday evening, May 8, at 7.30 p.m.

A sing of this nature has never been staged on this campus, and Slack and Pye believe that it is the ideal way to initiate the climactic event of the college year.

The idea was first introduced by Cynic Editor Maywood Metcalf in an editorial printed last month, and due to interest aroused on the campus, the directors of this gala affair have made it a reality.

The task of leading a mass sing has fallen to L. Pichierri '41. Pichierri has already established himself as a campus celebrity in the field of music, for his outstanding direction of the Interfraternity Sing last month.

Prof. B. Ladd of the German Department has also been instrumental in the starting of this campus sing. He has seen to it that over one hundred mimeographed copies of songs have been printed. These are to be handed out at the sing, and will consist of the favorite songs of yesteryear, as well as today.

Campus sings have been carried out successfully at many other colleges in the East. Indications from Interfraternity and Intersorority Sings seem to point to the fact the Vermont students are interested in music. Not only undergraduate students, but also students in the Medical College and the faculty are to take part in this sing.

Bob Zurke's Band To Furnish Rhythm For Junior Prom

To Be Held at Gym Friday, 9 to 2; Ultra Decorations

The Junior Prom, the focal point of all Junior Week activities and interest will be held at the gym Friday night from 9 until 2. Bob Zurke and his well-known dance band will furnish the music at this dance which tops the list of all college dances here at U. V. M.

Bob is coming with a reputation of being one of the foremost pianists in the world of modern dance music and has a carefully picked ensemble of top notch artists to blend his style in perfect harmony. His Delta Rhythm boys have a well-developed brand of music which seldom is equalled at a campus dance; and Sterling Bose, playing the lead trumpet shows an unusual technique in rhythm and swing, perfected by his playing with Tommy Dorsey and Benny Goodman.

Talented Pianist

Zurke himself, is a man with no small background. Beginning at the age of five to become a concert pianist, and showing unusual talent, which caused Ignace Paderewski, world famous pianist and composer to assure him of a brilliant future, he has been climbing upward ever since. He broke away from classics at about the age of fifteen, and became so adept in modern music, that recently he was chosen by Paul Whiteman as pianist for Collier's All-American Orchestra. He made many successful solo appearances, and played with Bob Crosby until he struck out on his own last year. His vocalist is the lovely Evelyn Poe. The fact that his engagements at big college dances are almost continuous, and that he makes all his own arrangements shows that Bob Zurke's band is increasing in popularity and that he will give more than an ordinary dance performance Friday night.

Ultra Decorations

The gym will be dressed up in sophisticated decorations of ultra modern theme in black and white, with tables lining the walls, and refreshments will be served.

The dollar drop in the admission fee is undoubtedly of great interest to the student body. The original price of $5.50 has been lowered to $4.40. This was done with the expectation that a much larger group will be able to attend this final formal dance of the year.

The chaperons for the Prom will be Prof. and Mrs. H. A. Prentice and Prof. and Mrs. Witham.

Honor Societies Dance Held Saturday Evening

The dance honoring the new honor societies was held Saturday night, May 4, in the gym. H. A. Allen '40 and Jean Butler '40 were in general charge of the affair. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Perry were the chaperons and the Catamounts furnished the music. Refreshments were sold by Y. W. C. A. girls.

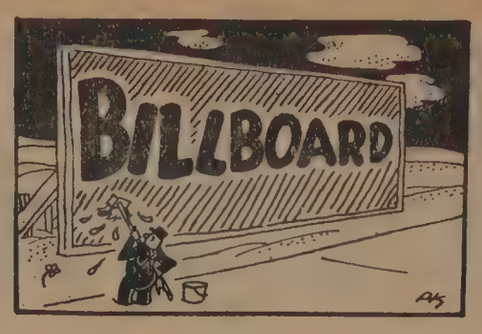
It's a First!

Tomorrow night the University of Vermont is having its first Campus Sing! The chapel steps is to be the place of this event—the first item on the Junior Week program. The sing is for everyone connected with the University—faculty, students, friends and even stray mascots. The idea for such a sing was suggested by several students but got its biggest push from a member of the faculty—Prof. B. F. Ladd—better known as "Bennie." He feels that an informal sing is just the thing to bring out that "good old campus spirit." We think so, too.

Campus Sings are popular on many campuses. Middlebury's "Step Singing" is written large on their calendar and the sing at Dartmouth was a big part of the Green Key festivities which were held last week. Why not have our sing something which will be worth putting on our University's calendar next year?

The popularity of the community singing at both the Interfraternity and Intersorority Sings indicated that people like to sing in large groups. The success of the University of Vermont's first Campus Sing will depend entirely on the response that the faculty and the students make. We feel that a Campus Sing would furnish an invaluable means of getting to know our faculty members informally. The sing should also provide a definite means of bringing together the students from off the campus with those who are fortunate enough to live in dormitories or sorority and fraternity houses.

Mimeographed copies of songs that are popular with everyone will be distributed at the sing so that each person can sing his loudest. Love songs, popular songs, college songs and other songs that are familiar to everybody have been printed on the sheets.



The Campus Sing is another "first" at the University of Vermont. Let's all turn out and sing so that this year's sing will not be another "last."

Put Your BEST Foot Forward

"One of the most tragic things in modern life in America is the widespread idea that by 'taking a course,' one can immediately solve occupational difficulties. One sees so many men and women who are sent to the best colleges and technical schools, only to come home and do just what they would have done if they had never gone anywhere. On the other hand, one sees innumerable men and women achieving distinction in occupations totally different from those for which they were originally trained. The blame for this does not lie wholly with the students or wholly with the schools. It lies in expecting from education what education cannot give."

We feel that this paragraph from Harper's Magazine, is especially applicable at this time of year when the Seniors are trying so hard to find jobs for next year. We don't like the author's pessimistic view in regard to Seniors sitting at home after they have struggled through four years of college. However, we must admit that jobs don't walk up to graduates and say, "I was just looking for someone like you. Won't you please take this job?" Frankly, this doesn't happen.

Common sense and the ability to be agreeable are two very important requirements that every employer looks for in applicants. We suggest that prospective job hunters take Harper's advice and show prospective employers that they are not hiring someone who has just "taken a course."

TO FRATERNITIES AND SORORITIES—Fraternities who plan to take part in the Junior Week Peerade must submit an outline giving the idea of the float to Prof. J. I. Lindsay some time Tuesday, May 7. These outlines may be mailed to Professor Lindsay or dropped in his box by the English office.— E. SWIFT, Dean.

E. Gurney Speaks At Stunt Night

W. A. A. Stunt Night was held at Southwick Saturday afternoon at 4.30. It was the last big meeting of its kind this year and was a most pleasant get-together. Skits by all the dorms were presented first, all of them in a humorous and clever manner. First prize went to Grassmount girls who acted out the evolution of the dance. Honorable mention went to Campus House who described the storming of their dorm in a rather prophetic manner. Initiation of the new council was held and Elizabeth Gurney '41, new president of W. A. A., gave the main points of the aims of next year's sports program and the many new ideas she gathered from the Women's Athletic Convention she attended at Ohio State University a short while ago.

About 5.30 all the girls went over to the Robinson dining room, where they were served a delicious supper, under the direction of Miss Helen Nichols.

Old Houses Photos On Tour in Vermont

The Fleming Museum's collection of photographs of old Vermont buildings has recently started a series of showings throughout the state. A group of enlargements from this collection of artistic and memorable buildings is now on exhibition at St. Michael's College. The group will later appear at Castleton Normal School, Sheldon Museum in Middlebury, and at the Currier Gallery in Manchester, N. H.

The collection has lately returned from a tour of exhibitions in the West. During the tour it was displayed in San Diego, Calif.; Sacramento, Calif., and Charleston, Ill.

A book entitled "Old Vermont Houses," which includes 150 photographs from the Fleming Museum's collection was recently published and received a full page of space in the rotogravure section of the New York Herald-Tribune. The author, Herbert Wheaton Congdon of Arlington, formerly worked for the museum in taking photographs and collecting data concerning the buildings.

23rd Psalm of an Engineer's Sweetheart

Verily, I say unto you, marry not an Engineer.
For an Engineer is a strange being, and is possessed of many evils.
Yes, he speaketh eternally in parables which he calleth formulae,
And he wieldeth a big stick which he calleth a slide rule,
And he hath only one bible, a hand book.
He thinketh only of stresses and strains, without end of thermodynamics.
He showeth always a serious aspect and seemeth not to know how to smile,
And he picketh his seat in a car by the springs therein and not by the damsels.
Neither does he know a waterfall except by its horsepower,
Nor a sunset except that he must turn on the lights,
Nor a damsel except by her live weight.
Always he carries his books with him, and he entertaineth his sweetheart with steam tables.
Verily, though the damsel expects chocolates when he calleth,
She openeth the package to disclose samples of iron ore.
Yea he holdeth her hand but to measure the friction thereof,
And he kisseth her only to test the viscosity of her lips.
For in his eyes, there shineth a far away look that is neither
Love nor longing—rather a vain attempt to recall a formula.
There is but one key to his heart and that is Cum Laude, and
When his damsel writeth of love and signs with crosses, he Taketh these symbols, not for kisses, but for unknown quantities.
Even as a boy be pulleth a girl's hair to test its elasticity,
But as a man he discovereth different devices;
For he counteth the vibrations of her heart strings; and
He seeketh ever to pursue his scientific investigation.
Even his own heart fluttering, he counteth as
A vision of beauty, and enscribeth his passion as a formula.
And his marriage is a simultaneous equation involving two unknowns
And yielding diverse results.
Verily, I say unto you, marry not an Engineer.—From Tech News, Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Worcester, Mass.

We Are Not Alone

By "POOH"

Strangely, I have been doing quite a lot of thinking lately. Being at this moment imbued in a mood of extreme generosity, to say nothing of oratorical expansion, I think I'll impart to you (: the results of my meditations: "How to become a poet in several (number undetermined) fairly easy lessons."

Naturally the first thing to obtain is an eye for color. If interested, you may be able to get hold of one of these at the Hat Bar in Reynolds'. I now wipe my hands of the taint of commerciality. . . . But, on the other hand, if there is quite a demand—which usually happens at this time of year—they may be all sold out. In which case you will have to make one for yourself. This is quite a job. Step number one: Given three colors, red, blue and yellow, you should, after much hair-tearing, hit upon one of them to major in. Step number two: having chosen—say it is yellow—you should set about finding specimens in all possible forms. These should be procured from the sky, the earth, and the water. Also, if possible, from fire. A yellow flame will do very nicely. . . . Two or three hundred specimens altogether will be enough. Just remember, though, that not more than one sample should be taken from each victim. If you find a yellow bird, don't deplume him! Likewise with a buttercup—only take one petal. Step number three: All specimens should be carefully put through a copper strainer to remove all dirt. Step number four: Boil them in two cups of vinegar and one cup of water, for a period of five hours. After which time all sediment should be removed, leaving only pure color. Step number five: (This is the most complicated step, so listen closely): You should take a butterfly net and roam the unscaled heights (the heights that haven't been scaled) of Pike's Peak until you find an albino blackbird. Catch him. Bring him back and put him in the sauce pan with your pure color. Leave him there till he has soaked it all up, thereby becoming a yellow blackbird. Now you should wait for the first thunder storm, and, at the end, when the rainbow appears, you should let him loose. He will fly straight for the rainbow, go through it, and come back with every color on him, superimposed on yellow. If you wait around a while, pretty soon he will (I mean she) lay an egg—a beautiful striped egg! If you boil it for fifteen minutes, you will have a hard-boiled egg. (Strange but true.) And if you eat the egg—you will be possessed of an Eye for Color.

Now go ahead and try it.

Please don't mistake me, and think that having an Eye for Color, you are a poet. There are other small matters that should be considered. But there isn't time to tell you about all of these now, so I'll leave you to struggle with Step Number One. Good luck.

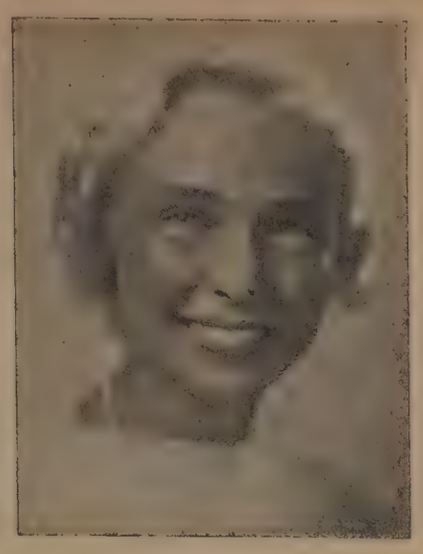
Betty Myers '40 Gets Scholarship At U. of Chicago

Plans to Study Medical Sociology, New Service Field



Betty Myers '40 has received word of a service scholarship to the University of Chicago. Betty plans to major in medical sociology, a two-year course, at the School of Social Service Administration there.

Medical sociology is a new and open field. The medical sociologist is the middleman between the doctor and the patient. He, she in this instance, would be the person to adjust the patient and family to a lengthy illness such as tuberculosis. Care for the financial end enters as well. The more progressive hospitals and private institutions regularly have a medical sociologist on their staffs.

The University of Chicago is one of the seven credited schools for medical sociology in the country. Betty, one of the Bake Walkers and probably the blondest and bluest-eyed girl on the campus, looks forward to plenty of field work along with the theory. Honoring in psychology under Prof. J. T. Metcalf here at U. V. M., she changed from a Secretarial course to the Social Science course at the end of her sophomore year. Betty is getting her Ph.B. in June.

She is a member of Alpha Chi, Mortar Board, W. A. A. Council, Y. W. C. A. Council and Bluestockings. She was Director of Freshman Camp, in the Dramatic Club and on the CYNIC staff.

Music Festival Held Over the Week-end

A. Wassell, P. Wiggins, H. Butterfield Direct

Twenty-seven hundred high school singers and instrumentalists thronged into Burlington this week-end for the thirteenth annual Vermont Music Festival. The Vermont Headmasters' Club, the Music Supervisors' Association, and Burlington Lions Club sponsored the event.

The program included a concert by the all-state band and orchestra, a colorful parade, and a final concert by a chorus of 750 and an orchestra of 170 members. The all state band was directed by Paul E. Wiggins of Pautucket, R. I., and the chorus by Dr. H. D. Butterfield of Providence, R. I.

Albert Wassell of Worcester, Mass., directed the all-state orchestra.

Osbourne McConathy well-known educator in the music field was the critic.

The rehearsals, auditions and the final concert on Saturday night marked the end of a long period of preparation on the part of all the participants. The great skill in combining all these groups into one co-operative unit was a great task, but the final concert with all its magnificence and grandeur was most effective.

Eleven bands, leading as many divisions of students in uniform featuring their respective school colors, took part in the colorful parade. The skilled high twirling majorettes were of great interest to all the spectators. The Memorial Auditorium was filled to capacity Saturday evening for the final concert. Governor Aiken was present and highly praised the skill of the high school artists. Mr. McConathy, the critic, remarked on the great improvements and growth of the Vermont Music Festival.

Vermont Artists Display Paintings

Exhibition at Museum Opened With Reception

Over fifty artists from the Northern Vermont Artists have contributed to the tenth annual exhibition at the Fleming Museum. The painters are largely from Northern Vermont and a few are only summer time Vermont residents.

On Friday afternoon, May 3, at the Museum, a reception and tea was held in honor of the Northern Vermont Artists. As president of the group and creator of the oil painting "A Vermont Cow Castle," Harold S. Knight was interviewed. Mr. Knight remarked that it takes two or three months to organize an exhibition and that it would not have been possible without his committee, consisting of the following members: Professor Prindle, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Eldred, Athel Copeland, Miss Adelaide Rawson, Mrs. Isabel Mills, Dr. H. F. Perkins, and Mrs. George Burrows.

Harold S. Knight is now assistant manager of McAuliffe's in Burlington. He does his sketching and painting as a hobby. He had comparatively little training, but he has always liked art—thus the facts of knowledge he naturally picked up. As a child, he submitted paintings to the Boston Herald Junior Newspaper for contests held for the benefit of children—as a result, he won several prizes. After this, no more painting was done during his childhood. But later during his service in the war and after the signing of the Armistice in France, since time was hanging heavy on his hands, Knight bought some paints and started his art again—he treasures these dearly. In 1917, having come to Fort Ethan Allen camp, he saw Vermont for the first time.

Mr. Knight remarked that he did much of his sketching outdoors in the summer. His oil painting "A Vermont Cow Castle," which is a scene in Cornwall, Vt., originatd from a very small pencil sketch of the farm buildings—the cows were inserted in the scene from another sketch or sketches—the trees were drawn from his imagination—the sky and the rest of the picture were painted as it seemed to suit. This painting as well as the other contributions of the Northern Vermont Artists will be on display at the Fleming Museum, May 3 to May 28.

Alpha Chi Omega is the proud winner of the Intersorority Sing held at Southwick, May 3. Pi Beta Phi and Kappa Alpha Theta were given honorable mention.

The Intersorority Sing, sponsored by Pan-Hellenic, under the direction of Janice Spear '41, and Betty Cole '41, and judged by Miss Freda Harris, W. G. Kirby and G. L. Millikan, was the first of such sings to be held at the University.

Six sororities participated in the event. Alpha Chi Omega, dressed in pastel colors, sang Brahms' "Suabian," "Our Harps Came From Paradise," and "Alpha Chi." Betty Cole '41 directed, and Judith Perry '42 accompanied.

In gowns of black and white Pi Beta Phi presented "My Pi Phi Girl," Brahms' "Lullaby," and "The Sweetheart Song." Joanna Metcalf '42 directed.

Under the direction of Helen Maeck '40, Kappa Alpha Theta rendered "Theta Lips Are Smiling," Nevin's "Winkin', Blinkin' and Nod," and "Pipe Dreams."

Sigma Gamma in varied colored gowns, sang Brahms' "In Wood Embowered," "The Keeper" and "Dear Sigma Gamma." Frances Rogers '41 directed and Jessie Swan '41 was the accompanist.

In dresses of white, Delta Delta Delta presented the "Pearl Song" and "Tri Delta True." The director was Gail Klinger '42, and Jean Brehmer '40 accompanied.

The sing closed with the combined chorus singing Sibelius' "Dear Land of Home." Janice Spear '41 was the soloist, Betty Cole '41 directed and Judith Perry '42 accompanied. Many people expressed the hope that the Intersorority Sing will henceforth be a part of the University's social calendar.

Secretarial Seniors Visit State Capitol

Obtain Practical Business Experience

A group of seniors enrolled in the Secretarial course at the University of Vermont made a trip on April 26 to Montpelier in search of practical examples of the problems they study in the classroom. The students, who are members of the Secretarial Methods course, conducted by Prof. Gennette Davis, visited the offices of the National Life Insurance Company and the State Department offices.

At the National Life Insurance Company office they were conducted through the extensive business departments. Mr. Charles E. Crane, author of "Let Me Show You Vermont," gave the visitors a short history of the company, with which he is now connected. He then interviewed them using a recording device so that the interviews will be reproduced later on a radio program. Following this, the Company coordinator explained the general organization of the company's office work. For the instruction of the visiting seniors, the operation of various mechanized office equipment was demonstrated.

Mr. L. Douglas Meredith, treasurer of the National Life Insurance Company, was formerly a professor in the U. V. M. economics department.

On their inspection trip to the State Department the seniors examined the files in the offices of the Secretary of State. Genealogical files afforded the students practical illustrations of their study of filing.

A sightseeing trip around the State buildings concluded the day pleasantly.

DON'T FORGET the Campus Sing tomorrow night. It's the first event on the Junior Week Program. Come out and sing for an hour.

Tracksters Beat Colby 68-67; Smith Ties Record

Taylor Earns Fourth Varsity Letter
Hunter Wins High Jump

A most thrilling and eventful track meet, one that any enthusiast of the sport could be proud of, was unfolded Saturday at Centennial Field when Coach Archie Post's charges eked out a slim but sweet victory over the track forces of Colby College, 68 to 67.

It was an exceptionally close meet and the result was in doubt until the final event had been run off.

The amazing Webster boys continued their unbeaten records this year when Charlie, closely followed by Stoddard of the University of Vermont broke the tape first in the mile run and a few minutes later Freddie followed suit in the two mile run when he and Frankie Livak crossed the finish line in a tie for first place.

Hunter Wins High Jump

Bill Hunter showed he has regained his championship form when he took the high jump at 5 feet 11¼ inches. Close behind was Arnie Becker who hit his nemesis at 5 feet 8¼ inches and thereby gained a tie for second with Fedorovich of Colby.

The pole vault proved the first jinx when Johnny Davis, somehow off to a bad start, hit the bar on the way up and fell to the earth badly shaken and unable to continue in the meet. He still managed to take a tie for third place. Minutes later the greatest upset of the meet occurred and this was due to a very serious spill on the part of a Colby man which gave Vermont the meet. Pratt and Anderson, the two Colby men who had taken first and second places respectively in the 120-yard high hurdles were leading in the 220-yard low hurdles by a few yards when an unfortunate (fortunate if you're from Vermont) incident occurred. Fifty yards from the finish line Pratt hit a hurdle and fell into his teammate Anderson, thereby sending both of them sprawling to the earth and leaving Allen and Kenney to battle it out alone for first and second. But the event was not over yet and a few feet from the finish line the jinx struck again. Bob Kenney stumbled and went sprawling into the cinders, only a step from the finish, leaving Allen to cross alone. Before he could arise and take the necessary step across the finish line, Anderson of Colby, now fully recovered, flashed across in second place and left Kenney to stumble across in third position.

Taylor Places Twice

Frankie Taylor did his bit to help the alma mater when he crossed over after performing brilliantly in the baseball game, donned track shoes, and proceeded to take a tie for first in the shot put with a heave of 40 feet 8¾ inches and a second in the broad jump with a leap of 20 feet 10½ inches closely following Dagget of Colby who made a jump of 21 feet 10½ inches to win the event.

In the 440 and 880-yard runs thrilling duels were put on between the runners with Roby of Vermont coming from behind to nip Warren of Colby in the stretch and go on to win the ¼ mile and Dave Stowell continuing his fine record by leading MacRae of Colby to the finish line with a fine bit of sprinting when he was hard pressed to take the half-mile run.

The high light of the meet was Capt. Gordie Smith's dashes where he took the 100-yards in 9.9, tying a University record held since 1935 by R. Delfausse, and also winning the 220-yard run in 22.6.

Johnstone Saves the Day

With all these fine races won by Vermont it was still a close meet as Colby took the weight events, the 120-yard high hurdles, and the pole vault. With the score at 65 to 61, Vermont leading, everybody waited apprehensively till the news of the hammer throw, the last event, came in. But finally apprehension turned to joy for Vermont rooters when it was learned that Bob Johnstone had taken a second, thereby giving the Green and Gold the meet, 68 to 67.

Frosh Courtmen Beat Rutland

Continuing their winning form the Frosh tennis team downed a stubborn group of Rutland High players by the score of 4-2 in a closely contested match Saturday afternoon on the University courts. The No. 1 and No. 2 single's matches proved to be the feature of the afternoon with the loser in each instance succumbing only after a grueling three set dual. In the No. 1 singles, G. Noble (Rutland) defeated R. L. Swift (Frosh) 4-6, 6-3, 7-5 and W. A. Towne (Frosh) eeked out a close decision over J. Durvin (Rutland) 6-3, 4-6, 6-4. W. A. West (Frosh), however, outdistanced the entire field by his fine play in downing T. Hawley (Rutland) 6-0, 6-4. P. N. Sutton (Frosh) widened the gap by conquering R. Provin (Rutland) 6-1, 9-7 after a tough battle in the final set.

An even split was gained in the doubles with Swift and West (Frosh), a new combination, defeating Noble and Hawley (Rutland) 7-5, 7-5 followed by Sutton and Towne (Frosh) suffering a 6-3, 6-3 defeat at the hands of Durvin and Provin (Rutland).

On Thursday, May 9, Green Mountain Junior College netsters journey to Burlington to engage the Frosh, in a match which should be won handily by the Kittens although no definite information concerning their actual strength is available at the present time.

Tennis Team Loses to R.P.I.

Capt. Booth Takes Only Singles Match

A journey to Troy, N. Y., by the University varsity tennis squad, in order to play Renssalaer Polytechnic Institute, resulted in a 6-3 match score against them. The match, the fourth of the season for our men, was played on Saturday, May 4, following a postponed Union match on the day before.

The matches were played on a windy day and extra difficulties were added to Coach Prof. F. D. Carpenter's proteges by the macadam courts on which they played and which offered unusual conditions to the University of Vermont men.

Only one of the three winning matches were in the singles, the other two being turned in at doubles. Captain Booth was the lone winner in singles, while the number one and two doubles teams, composed of Booth and Walk on the first team and Simpson and Foti on the second, recorded the other two wins.

Capt. Gordie Booth, in his singles match with G. Imore, took the long road to victory. After dropping the first set 1-6, he captured the next two sets 6-3, 7-5. Wolk, the second ranking man on the squad, put up a stiff battle before losing 7-5, 2-6, 6-4 to Pineedo. R. P. I.'s number three man, Colong, took over Ed Simpson by 6-1, 6-2. Foti's match with Strager was a peculiar one from the point of view of scores. After winning the first set by a score of 6-1, Foti dropped two straight sets 6-2, 6-4. Clark lost to Miller of R. P. I. 6-3, 6-2, while Pine succumbed to Bender 7-5, 6-4.

In the doubles, matches, Booth and Wolk took over Gilmore and Strayer of R. P. I. 1-6, 6-4, 7-5, in a bitterly fought match. Simpson and Foti followed suit by defeating Smith and Bender 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 in a well-played match. The doubles were concluded by Miller and Reider triumphing over Clark and Pine 6-1, 6-4.

Thursday, May 9, the squad travels to Middlebury for their fifth match. No information is available at this writing or to Middlebury's strength, but the noticeable improvement and gradual acquisition of experience on the part of the Catamount tennis squad will serve them in good stead.

Job-hunters Meet Job-givers at U. C.

Berkeley, Calif.—(ACP)—The big problem that comes eventually for most university students—getting a job—has been brought into the extra-curricular routine of the University of California through meetings between student job-seekers and job-givers.

One of these meetings covered the transporation fields. Invited executives of a number of transportation systems sat with the inquiring students, the groups dividing off according to types of transportation represented. The series covered seven meetings, representing many lines of industry. One of the meetings was with representatives of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

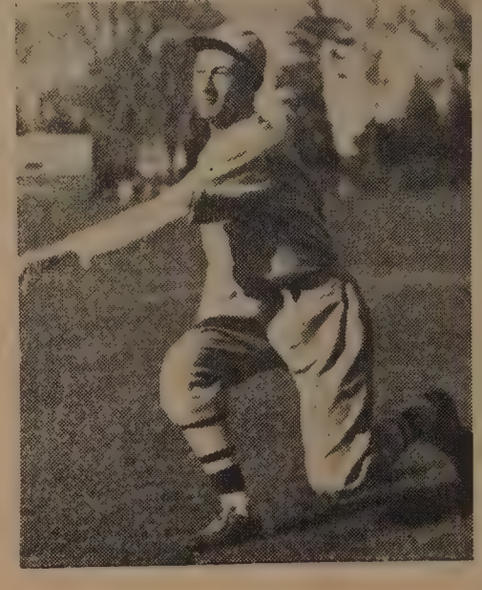
Takes Low Hurdles

BUD ALLEN

Random Shots

By the CO-EDITOR

This past week-end saw six University of Vermont athletic teams in action, all home events resulting in Cat triumphs. Over at R. P. I. the varsity tennis team lost to an inferior Tech team, while the Frosh diamond men were swamped at Green Mountain. The macadam courts and the strong wind may or may not have had something to do with the tennis team's defeat. But it was definitely the Frosh's seven miscues that resulted in their downfall.



At Centennial, the track team for the second successive week just nosed out its opponent. Once again it was the last event that decided the issue. . . . The meet was won entirely on superiority, for Lady Luck completely avoided Archibald's men. In the high jump Becker and Pratt were off form, the latter failing to clear 5 feet 6 inches. Johnny Davis, who captured a first in the Union meet, injured himself going over at 10 feet 6 inches and was unable to continue. . . . Our hats are off to Bob Kenney, Cat hurdler. Bob was recently seriously ill, was definitely out of condition yet competed in both hurdles. In the low hurdles, with victory clearly in sight, he fell from exhaustion at the tape, but managed to crawl over the finish line for a third. . . . Frankie Taylor had quite a busy day Saturday. After garnering three blows in the baseball game, he ampled over to the shot put circle, tied for first in this event, and then grabbed off a second in the broad jump by virtue of his 20 feet 10 inches leap. . . . By the way Frank earned his fourth letter of the year by his track work. Only one other man in the University of Vermont's history has been a four-letter man, Claire Cayward '25.

Pesarik pitched a masterpiece against Middlebury. The game wasn't so close as the score might infer. Three errors in the first scored the first Middlebury run. But Alex had the Panthers well under control. The victory was number four for the engineer. . . . Incidentally only one earned run has been scored off Pesarik this year. . . . If things go on, this year's baseball team will score an all high for errors. In the last three games fourteen have been committed by the Gardner men. . . . Speaking of baseball, Mickey Harris, the rookie who has been going great guns for the Boston Red Sox this year, is a first cousin and close friend of Bill Roeder '42. . . . Prize mystery of the day—why didn't Bellardinelli return to the coaching box in the fifth frame? Was it too cold? Was it his weak constitution? Or did the Kapp Sig riding have something to do with it? Anyway it was fun while it lasted.

Catamounts Overcome Midd Panthers, 5-2

Pesarik Pitches Vermont to Victory; Return Game at Middlebury Thursday

Pommels Panthers

LEFTY PESARIK

In routine style, the Catamounts a weak Middlebury nine 5-2, Satu afternoon at Centennial Field. The thers, held to five runs by the efficient hurling of Lefty Pesarik, sc one run on an error and the other by only earned run off Pesarik this sea Outside of that, the Vermonters sho without let up clear superiority over visitors.

The first Middlebury run was sco by leadoff man Mahoney who reac first by grounding to Wood and beat out a slow throw to Lawrence. A the next two men Bertuzzi and Pru fanned, Mahoney stole second and ca in when Eakeley hit to Healy who fu bled the ball. The second Panther ta was made in the sixth inning. Kru reached first on balls. Eakeley smashed to center field and Prukop ra in. While he was rounding third, Eak tried to stretch his hit to a two ba and was thrown out by a perfect throw second from the field by Taylor. Y mens and Johnson grounded on order Spasyk to end Middlebury's second only scoring period. With two out in last inning, Jacques was substituted Wright and ended the game by grou ing out to Wood. Jacques, football of last season and regular Panther ba stop, was injured in the first game season and has been benched to date.

Spasyk Scores

Spasyk tied up the score in the C first time at bat when Wood smashed right field and drove him in from seco Spasyk, first man up had reached when Shortstop Hawes booted grounder. Sysko, next up, fouled out the catcher, and when Wood drove right Spasyk completed the circuit. the end of the first inning the score tied and the Gardnermen put on the pr sure to retire the first three Panthers With Hawes reaching first on Hea error, Wright, second up, fouled out Boucher. Van Gaasbeck, losing pitc for Middlebury, then smashed a hard to the box. Pesarik lunged out, snatc it and threw to Spasyk at second tossed to first for a double play.

Vermont went ahead in the second ning by two runs with Spasyk Boucher crossing the plate. With out, Boucher singled and was brought by Pesarik's drive to right field. Spa hitting to the shortstop reached on fie er's choice, and Pesarik was out second. Spasyk stole second on a s pitch and was brought in by a hit to ter field by Sysko. While Spasyk coming in Sysko tried to stretch his base hit and was caught at second b fast throw from Prukop in center. fourth Vermont run was scored by Ta in the third inning when, having reac first in a drive to center field, and st ing second, he was brought in by rad's ground ball between first and sec rolling into short right. Eakeley to third, but seeing that Taylor was on his way, Hawes cut off the throw threw to second to get Conrad.

To Play Middlebury

After the third inning, Van Gaas settled down and although he allowed eral hits more, they were scattered didn't amount to anything. The was somewhat of a letdown as B University victorious here last week firmly trounced by the Panthers viously. Pesarik pitched his usual of ball but was accredited with fiv that were made through a sluggis that gave Middlebury an unearned and stopped the Cats from coming th several times in scoring setups. Thursday the Gardnermen travel to dlebury for a return game that will ably see Akley on the mound.

Softball Season In Full Swing

Schedule Released for This Week's Games

The Intramural soft ball league is now in full swing. Softball has proved a very able substitute for hard ball. It has permitted an extra man to participate in the contests; it has enabled the less athletically inclined fraternities and fraternity members to derive more enjoyment from the game and to make a better showing. In past years, a house, having in its membership an effective hurler of perhaps varsity caliber, but under warning could sweep the league. Now with soft ball, the hurling end has been deemphasized and hitting and clean fielding have come more or less to the fore. The games thus far played have been marked by large scores indicating more players are getting a piece of the ball than they would be able to in hard ball.

On Friday, May 3, the Delta Psi's defeated Phi Delta Theta by the score of 8-2. On the same day Sigma Nu trounced Phi Sigma Delta 24-9.

The games on top for this week are:

Increase Foreseen in Technical Employment

Austin, Texas—(ACP)—A marked pick-up in employment of technically-trailed men is seen by W. R. Woolrich, University of Texas engineering dean.

Opening of new jobs, an industrial trend to expand research activity, and a growing "personnel consciousness" on the part of employers are three factors responsible for the increasing demand of experts, Dean Woolrich believes.

He bases his assertion on an increasing stream of requests by firms, both in and out of Texas, for trained college men.

"Both the University faculty and business men of this state are becoming more 'personnel minded,'" he observed.

This Collegiate World

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

Here are some of the items cluttering up the lost and found office at Wayne University, Detroit:

A bathing suit and cap, a manual in Chinese print, a chart for church organizations, a sweater, three umbrellas, a babushka, 20 pairs of gloves and 19 single gloves and mittens. Not to mention textbooks, classroom equipment, jackets and other items of wearing apparel by the score.

Net worth of campus organizations at the University of Wichita has been set at $14,655.09.

Almost 2,000,000 students in 16 colleges and 120 schools were served last year by Boston University's visual education department.

Frosh Lose to G.M.J.C. Trackmen

E. B. Mott, Jr. Takes Five Firsts

Another field day was experienced by E B. Mott, Jr., that remarkable University of Vermont freshman, at the track meet between the Frosh and Green Mountain Junior College on Thursday, May 2. Triumphant in all five events in which he had been entered, he was easily the most outstanding man on the field. Shunting from one event to another, Mott took firsts in the 120 high hurdles, the 200 low hurdles, the 220-yard dash, the high jump, and the broad jump.

But even this display of athletic prowess was not enough to ensure the Frosh a team victory over the Green Mountain boys. Practically sweeping the events that Mott had not been entered in by Coach Roy Wietz, with several notable exceptions, the lads from Poultney garnered enough places to give them a seven point margin over Coach Wietz's proteges by the score of 62 to 55.

Just two other firsts were captured by the Frosh other than Mott's aggregation, while too few seconds and thirds were won. The two other men placing first in their events, were Milne in the 100, and Parker in the discus. Parker also placed second in the shot put.

The summary of events:

Student Opinion

By Joe Belden, Editor

Student Opinion Surveys of America

AUSTIN, Texas, March 21.—Being debated in Congress and in committees is the President's economy budget. American colleges and universities, often far removed from the hustle of national life, this time have a keen interest in at least one item: the proposed reduction of the number of National Youth Administration jobs.

Although other polls of the Student Opinion Surveys of America have shown that collegians favor cuts in governmental expenditures, in this instance an overwhelming majority is opposed to the recommended 32 per cent reduction of NYA positions for college students.

What is even more significant is that at least 12 per cent—approximately one-eighth—of the students, favor a reduction. Some of these declared that if the jobs were given only to students who were in absolute need of them, expenses could be cut.

As was perhaps to be expected, students who now hold these jobs were emphatically in favor of continuing the program, a good many telling the surveys interviewers that the number should even be increased. The poll points out, however, that students who are not NYA employes are of the same opinion by almost identical percentages. The national tabulations follow:

	A*	B*	C*
Approve of reduction	11%	9%	11%
Disapprove of reduction	71	72	71
Reduce less than 32%	3	4	3
Increase number of jobs	9	13	9
Don't know	6	2	6

(*A—All students; B—Those who hold NYA jobs; C—Those who do not have NYA jobs.)

NYA workers, who perform hundreds of tasks from floor sweeping to book writing, earn about $15 a month. President Roosevelt's recommendation calls for an appropriation of $85,000,000 (millions) for the 1940-1941 fiscal year to go to the National Youth Administration, $9,500,000 to be spent on college and graduate aid, the rest on other projects away from the campus. This would mean a college employment of 89,000 persons, as compared with 130,000 this year.

A.S.M.E. Picnic To be Held Sunday At Mt. Philo Park

Hawkins, Ramsdell, Cronin and Moore In Charge of Program

On Sunday, May 12, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Vermont Student Branch, will hold its annual picnic and election at Mt. Philo State Park, Charlotte.

The students and faculty members attending will meet in front of the Engineer Building at 10 a.m. Sunday. Transportation will be provided.

An extensive program, including a faculty-student softball game, a tug of war between the aforementioned groups, and a nail driving contest, is being prepared by S. Heath '40 assisted by W. Young '41 and E. Creed '41.

A bounteous repast is being prepared for the slide rule slaves by F. Johnson '40 and M. Newton '40, assisted by B. Hill '41 and J. Corbett '41. The refreshments will consist of hot dogs galore, plenty of hamburgs, cookies, pickels, and all the milk you can drink. The charge for this magnificant feast will be 25 cents a head.

Tickets may be purchased from the chairman of the picnic, E. Hawkins '40 and R. Ramsdall '41, J. Cronin '41 and A. Moore '42.

All faculty members and all mechanical engineers are cordially invited to attend. As there are indoor facilities on the mountain, the picnic will be held rain or shine.

Vermonters Attend Building Conference

Eminent Speakers Address Delegates

Prof. Parker B. Willis, G. S. Noonan '40, and R. L. Tracy '40 are attending the conference on "Opportunities for Youth in Building the World of Tomorrow" which, appropriately enough, is being held at General Motors Corporation's Highways and Horizons exhibit at the New York World's Fair. The Vermont representatives were guests last night at a dinner where questions on the problems of youth and industry were answered by four distinguished leaders of American thought.

The questions, which had been previously submitted by students from all over this country, were discussed extemporaneously by Dr. Karl T. Compton, President of M. I. T.; Dr. Ernest M. Hopkins, President of Dartmouth; General Hugh S. Johnson; and Charles F. Kettering, Vice-President of General Motors in charge of research. Clifton Fadiman, well-known critic and radio personality, led the question-and-answer forum.

More than 300 students from 80 universities, colleges, and training schools in the eastern half of the United States were invited to this timely conference. Following the theme of the New York World's Fair, Mr. Alfred P. Sloan, Chairman of General Motors, invited such a group because it is representative of the men who will build and populate the World of Tomorrow. It seems paradoxical; industry in other parts of the world is intent on the destruction of the world of today, while here in America industry is building for a world of tomorrow.

The University of Vermont delegation, selected by Professor Groat of the Economics Department, left Sunday night for New York, and will return to Burlington this evening.

Le Cercle Francaise

There will be a meeting of Le Cercle Français at 7.30 tonight at Southwick. The business of the meeting will consist of the election of officers. All the members are urged to pay their dues as only then will they be allowed to take part in the election.

A recent change in the constitution of Le Cercle Français requires a B average for at least one semester of French for membership in the club.

Y. W. Increase Fund

Y. W. C. A. girls sold candy and brownies at the honor societies' dance Saturday night, May 4. From the seven cents which was charged for each brownie two cents will be used to add to the fund which is being raised to send five Y. W. girls to Camp L-At-Ka on Lake Sebago in Maine this summer.

W.A.A. to Hold All-Sports Banquet

Plans are forming rapidly for the W. A. A. All-Sports Banquet, which will be held at Southwick May 14. Girls on first and second teams in sports have been invited and are asked to send in their replies by May 10. There are so many more people eligible for this invitation this year that 175 girls are being asked and it will be necessary to charge a small fee of 10 cents. This is extremely encouraging to find that so many more girls are participating in sports than in former years.

Mr. Eldred will show the moving pictures of the sports which have been taken during this winter. Miss Simpson and Mrs. Evans who has helped with the swimming at the "Y" will also be present.

Phyllis Savage '43 and Joanna Metcalf '42 will be in charge of table decorations. Hester Carver '41 is planning food arrangements and Janet Dike '43 and Gratia Pearl '42 are taking care of place cards. Nancy Goodwin '42 is in charge of the program.

Rev. Myra Borden Speaks On Rural Vermont Slums

Many Vermont families live in unbelievable conditions of ignorance, dirt, and immorality, and need the help of leaders to direct them. This was the message given to the Methodist College Group Sunday evening by Rev. Myra Borden. Miss Borden is in charge of summer work in neglected areas of Vermont. College women volunteer to take part in the project, which involves religious education, hygiene, recreational leadership, and many other activities. Cooperating with the Children's Aid and other state agencies, they are doing an excellent job in alleviating bad conditions in rural Vermont.

Quotable Quotes

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

"Half the persons put through the courses in United States schools cannot absorb instructions. Another ten per cent doesn't know what to do with the information when it is absorbed." Dr. E. A. University Players Present Gay Comedy Of School Life

Excellent Cast Under Direction of Mrs. Taggart Gains Praise

The University Players, under the excellent direction of Wilnetta Sproul Taggart, last night presented "What a Life," a comedy in three acts by Clifford Goldsmith, and added a hilarious touch to 1940's Junior Week, now well under way. With the action centering on Henry Aldrich, the student whose actions and errors create no end of trouble for him, and Barbara Pearson, upon whom Henry's first honorable intentions have fallen, the entire cast portrayed its respective parts with versatility and surprising naturalness.

Henry Aldrich, the unlucky son of a Phi Bete of Princeton, was played by Roger Hunting '42, who carried away honors for the apparent ease with which he fitted his part. Janet Hackwell '43, as Barbara Pearson, was the pretty high school girl, first love of Henry Aldrich, and a complete success in her part.

An Office Romance

The high school assistant principal Mr. Nelson, played by George Noonan '40, and the principal's secretary Miss Shea, Barbara Tucker '43, were the office couple whose actions were always being interrupted by students and faculty alike, while the principal, Mr. Bradley, Henry Middleworth '40, had a million things and people to attend to and disposed of them all in the same curt, ironic manner.

Copeland Marks '42 ably presented George Bigelow, the typical loud-mouth and school bully who was continuously quarreling with Henry and creating critical situations for the whole Central High School, the reputation of which was nearly ruined several times. Henry's mother, played by Louise Mann '41, was the doting parent who could not believe her son could do the wrong things and who continuously urged him and prodded him to be the Phi Bete he never could be and his father had been. She also added the only touch of the dowager to the scene of youth.

Able Supporting Cast

Louis Pichierri '41 played the part of the man who didn't work on Sundays, but had his six daughters working every other day of the week, and skilfully carried off the dialect of Mr. Vecchito.

Miss Wheeler, Barbara Butterfield '42, and Miss Egglestone, Marion Stoughton 43, added the touch of two fluttering instructresses who were usually in a dither over something or nothing.

Mr. Fergusson, Edward Guilbert '41; Miss Pike, Janet Rust '42; Mr. Patterson, David Johnson '40; Bill, Paul Poulin '41; Gertie, Patricia Page '43; and Mary, Patricia Pike '43, were the comical supporting cast and their contributions were invaluable to the final success of the entire cast and actions.

In charge of stage properties were J. B. Ranney '41 and Dorothea Smith '41, and the ushers were Elizabeth Cole, '41, Elizabeth Gordon '41, Marian Rice '41, R. Healy '41, D. Maley '41 and F. Taylor '41.

After organization plans were discussed, there was an evening of entertainment followed by refreshments. All neutral girls are urged to attend this meeting Monday evening and offer their suggestions.

Federal Inspection To Be May 15

Col. William A. Smith Will Inspect Company

The annual Federal inspection of the R. O. T. C., wil take place on Wednesday and Thursday, May 15 and 16. The program will be inaugurated by a review of the entire battalion and band under the command of Cadet Major R. M. Story, Jr., '40 on Wednesday morning at 8.30. Col. William A. Smith will come from Boston, the headquarters of all military activities of the New England States to make the inspection. The remainder of Wednesday morning will be spent in drills and tests based on studies of the year in military science. Wednesday afternoon from 2.00 to 5.00 there will be an inspection of property, storerooms, and records followed by competitive drills and annual awards of medals, trophies, and prizes Wednesday evening at 8.00 p.m., in the cage of the gymnasium. The events will be climaxed by a battalion parade Thursday morning at 11.30 by the R. O. T. C. and band.

Excellent Rating Sought

Colonel Smith will judge not only the military drill but also the results attained by the students in their classroom work. The larger part of a student's time is devoted to classroom work. The Freshmen can therefore be expected to be quizzed on a wide range of subjects such as marksmanship and map reading; the Sophomores, combat principles and handling the automatic rifle; the Juniors machine gun work and reading aerial photographs; and the Seniors, military law and move combat teachings and other subjects. The goal of all this is to attempt to obtain a rating of "excellent" which the battalion has had for

S. A. E.'s Float Wins First Prize in Peerade

Kappa Alpha Theta Awarded Cup; Pi Phi and T. E. P. Floats Second

The clever portrayal of "What a Life," by Sigma Alpha Epsilon won for them yesterday, for the second successive year, top rating in the Junior Week Peerade. Kappa Alpha Theta won first prize for the best sorority float, and their cups were presented to them during the intermission of the play. Second prizes went to Tau Epsilon Phi and Pi Beta Phi.

The S. A. E. float consisted of two settings—a large replica of Southwick at one end with a couple mounting the stairs to see the play, and at the other end a realistic war scene somewhere in Europe with tangled barbed wire and a wounded soldier—the two extremes of "What a Life." The scene of Theta's float was a prison cell with several convicts both in the cell and in a chain gang behind, all gazing at a sign advertising "What a Life."

The T. E. P. float also represented world affairs by showing contract between the European conflict and American peace. At one end was an erect gun, and at the other a suntanned bather at a summer resort, the two separated by an area representing the Atlantic Ocean. A desert island with a man and woman sitting under the palms was the scene of Pi Phi's float.

Other interpretations of "What a Life," by the various Fraternities and Sororities were as follows: A cover of Life Magazine with Hitler, Mussolini, and Chamberlain stepping off, by the Alpha Chi's; a diversified group depicting different walks of life, by Sigma Nu; an Indian prince seated on pillows surrounded by a harem of beautiful girls by Alpha Xi; another international scene by the Phi Sigma Deltas, showing, on one side of

Gold Key Installs New Members in Colorful Rite

Banquet Held at Van Ness; H. C. Parker, President-Elect

Marking the climax of Gold Key's initiation of next year's members, fifteen honored men of the freshman class were seen Wednesday evening to strip to running pants and shoes on the City Hall front steps and then run up and down Church Street, loudly yelling "To Hell with the Freshmen." This outdoor exhibition followed a colorful banquet and initiation ceremony for next year's members of the men's sophomore honorary society, held in the private dining hall of the Van Ness Hotel.

Freshmen Elect Officers

J. S. Burgess '42, retiring president of Gold Key, presided at the banquet and explained to the new group what their duties for the coming year will be, and at the conclusion of the ceremony the freshmen elected their own officers for the first semester of next year. As a finale to the initiation, the initiates were seen on campus all during Thursday morning dressed in different kinds of shoes, with pants, shirts and ties worn back in front and jackets worn inside out.

The new officers for the first semester of next year will be: President, H. C. Parker, Jr.; vice-president, J. E. Corbett; secretary, W. A. Pierce; treasurer, H. C. Vreeland.

The treasurer's position is permanent and does not change at the mid-term. The fifth elected office, that of chairman of the committee in charge of meeting visiting teams, also held for a full year, will be filled at Tuesday evening's meeting.

Key and Serpent Holds Initiations

Incoming Members Feted at Banquet

Key and Serpent, Junior Men's Honorary Society carried on the initiation of the 1940-41 members Monday evening from 6.00 to 12.00 a.m. The initiates assembled at the Kappa Sigma house at 6 o'clock attired in "top hats, white ties and tails." From there they dispersed to the various girls' dormitories where they provided entertainment during the dinner hour. Singing, dancing, and imitations were cheerfully provided at the request of the ladies. On assembling after the meal the "Top-hatters" formed in squad formation and marched down street, where they marched up and down Church Street doing squad movements and singing songs.

The group then adjourned to the Hotel Vermont where a banquet was served (and consumed). Speeches by the initiates were then given with President Bill Pye acting as toastmaster.

The squad reformed after the banquet and marched around to the various dormitories where speeches, singing and impromptu marriage ceremonies were performed. The initiates wish to express their particular thanks to the girls of Campus house and Gates house for the fine receptions extended by those houses.

After the initiation a meeting was held at the Kappa Sigma house where the new members were sworn in and the following officers elected. Clarence Akley, president; David Sawyer, vice-president; Robert Carlson, treasurer; and Roger Hunting, secretary.

Orchids to You!

All Vermonters will be happy to know that S. Burton Heath '26 was awarded this week the Pulitzer Prize of $1,000 for a distinguished example of a reporter's work domestically. Mr. Heath, who is on the staff of the World Telegram of New York, won the large, coveted prize for his investigation and his exclusive articles which led to the exposure of United States Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton, who is now in prison for accepting bribes.

While at the University, Burt was known as a rather serious fellow who liked to do tough jobs. When he was an undergraduate Burt distinguished himself as a fine debater and those who remember him say that he would have undoubtedly made a fine lawyer. At that time he showed an ability for careful and thorough investigation of all his points for the arguments of his debates. In addition to reporting for the Free Press while in college, Burt Heath was one of the finest editors that the CYNIC has ever had.

After his graduation in 1926, Burt joined the Associated Press in New Haven, Conn., where he "learned the ropes" in the newspaper world. Burt didn't like the routine office beat very well so he went to New York where he found a job on the staff of the World Telegram in 1928. Fortunate enough to have the city hall beat, Burt met some of the city's officials who came to know Heath as an able, steady, trustworthy and honest reporter. He left the Telegram in 1930 to become the temporary secretary of the St. Lawrence Development Commission.

When this job ended in 1932, Burt was out of a job. He came back to Vermont for a brief time to direct the campaign of W. Arthur Simpson who at that time was running for the Republican nomination for governor. At that time Heath applied for a job on the staff of a local paper but was turned down because he lacked experience!

Returning to New York, Burt Heath soon had a reporter's job on the World Telegram again. In the past eight years Heath has won a name for himself for his many excellent and thorough investigations in public matters aside from the Manton case.

In a February issue of the Telegram was printed the following statement about Burton Heath:

"Back of the story of the resignation of Judge Martin T. Manton, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, there is the story of a newspaper man who put in six months of intensive investigation in the file rooms of court houses and public offices to gather information on Judge Manton's conduct."

Thanks a Million!

The first Campus Sing at Vermont was a decided success and we wish to thank all the students who came for their cooperation. Professor Ladd to whom the majority of the credit is due for this new innovation on our campus said, "The students' response was wonderful. It even surpassed my biggest hopes."

We feel that the University of Vermont students really do have some of that "old college spirit" after the large turnout for the sing. The success of this innovation should lead to the introduction of other new campus activities. Bill Pye and Ransome Slack, Louie Pichierri, Professor Ladd and all the singers who attended the Sing are to be thanked for their splendid cooperation in making the Campus Sing the success that we feel it definitely was.

BLUESTOCKINGS MEMBERS.—Nominations for officers for next year have been made. Will you please vote in the Y Room by Saturday noon? This is important.

The Band Wagon

By Bob Johnson

More About Zurke

Bob after a brief fight with illness is reported back with the band. The crew is encountering the changes in personnel which all young bands go through—a necessary step if the band is to improve. Sterling Bose, trumpeter who leaves this listener with a question mark, is out as is Fud Livingstone, arranger. However, Zurke should have little trouble replacing them.

College Poll

Billboard's College poll to find collegians favorite dance band has been completed. Glenn Miller is the premier rave by a great majority thereby leaving us in quandry as to whether swing or sweet leads in popularity. Their recent release of "Stardust" is a fine combination. Beneke's chorus is probably the wisest choice of notes these ears have witnessed.

Throwing It Back

In regard and answer to several questioners: as to vocalizing—we agree with Billie Holliday. The voice should be used as an instrument—to improvise to best express the feelings and ideas of the singer.

We rather dislike the "sweet vs. swing" differentiation. Swing can be sweet, hot, melancholic, etc.. It can be anything that any kind of music can.

Dubbin' Around the Dial

Harry James and his most danceable music—and A-band which continually improves.

John Kirby, who on his commercials can play as he pleases but not on the stand—because of the repeatedly stupid public.

Charlie Spivak, his mellow trumpet, and his band is definitely on the up-grade. Arrangements by pianist Buddy Weed are fine and excellently suited to Charlie's style and needs.

Cinder-Ella Fitzgerald and her consistently fine work—which is always a treat to raise enthusiasm about. One almost feels the presence of diminutive Chick Webb, guiding star, who is now hitting hides for Bix's Celestial Serenaders.

Ben Webster's tenor the only thing Duke Ellington needed—making the greatest of all bands even greater.

That great Charlie Christian guitar with the Sextette on Benny G's West Coast broadcasts.

Watching the Wax

Ellington's "Solitude" and "Mood Indigo" his best version of these two originals: "Morning Glory"—"Jack the Bear" all typical Ellington, which is, however, usually refreshing each time we hear it—we mean it.

Bradley-McKinley side show definite improvement.

Teagarden's best couplings to date—"If I Could Be With You" and "Melancholy Baby."

Sonny Dunham exhibitionism colors his "Little White Lies" and "Dark Eyes."

James "Carnival of Venice" is better passed up—ditto the Henry Wells-Sepian Sammy Kaye offerings.

Oh Well!

Norvo and The Ink Spots reported on favorably as having pleased the Norwich Horsemen and their current crushes.

Miller reported great at Green Key.

Wilson (Teddy) figuring whether to keep his band together or not—truly his bookers fault if he folds—'cause he's got the goods.

Philbert hears of a girl singer here—abouts so us'n is off—in a mizz.

Looking At Vermont

Thirteen Years Ago

Fritz Kreisler, the world's greatest violinist, played at the University gymnasium in a recent concert. He was assisted by Reinhold Warlech, baritone. This is his fifth consecutive season in touring the United States.

There has been much discussion on the subject of a new athletic field to replace Centennial Field. However, after hearing advice it was decided that a new field would be too expensive and inferior to the present one. Therefore, the money will be spent in building concrete grandstands at Centennial Field.

Student Union goes on record as strongly opposed to open saloons within five miles of the University.

Fifteen Years Ago

There is a strong movement on foot to form a collegiate anti-militarism League.

The sophomore women recently held their annual banquet at the Hotel Vermont. The decorations were purple and gold and toasts were given. Afterwards there was a serenade of college songs outside Grassmount, Howard Hall, and the Annex.

The baseball game between the sophomore and freshman girls resulted in a victory for the sophomores, 22-30.

May 8, 1915

On Friday morning at 11 a.m., Church Street will witness the most stupendous peerade ever attempted. Floats, organizations, bands, and individual stunts will wend their way down upon the townspeople who gather every year to see the creations so characteristic of college ingenuity. History, this day, will repeat itself. Floats, symbolic of historical events will vie with those representing college life. Several individuals have already signified their intention of entering the peerade, to say nothing of the fraternities and various organizations which will be represented. In short the juniors say "P. T. Barnum and Ringling Brothers will have nothing on us."

"Pomander Walk," the junior play, was given a successful start recently at Plattsburg. It promises to be the biggest success in years with its initial appearance in Burlington at the Strong Theater. Junior week will close with the big boatride as scheduled.

There are ways and more ways of enforcing chapel attendance. The following is the plan being used at Whitman. If a student cuts 10 chapel exercises, he will be required to take a one-hour course in Philosophy the following semester. If the absences are 20 or more, a two-hour course in the same subject will be required, and so on up! This, of course, was in the time of daily chapel service.

Collegians Choose Waring and Miller

Fred Waring's "Chesterfield Pleasure Time" and Glenn Miller's "Moonlight Serenade" are the programs best liked by college students today. "Pleasure Time" has been selected as the best quarter hour on the air by the radio editors of United States and Canada. In response to petitions signed by thousands of students from many American colleges, Fred Waring writes new school songs to order. One song is dedicated over the air each week on "Pleasure Time."

The Glenn Miller program represents an average age under 25 years including Glenn himself and Larry Bruff, the announcer. Voted America's foremost dance band, Glenn is probably America's busiest band leader today having just one day open in the next six months, and that day a Sunday.

Catamounts To Play Two Games With W. And M.

Carlson and Akley Slated To Hurl Friday and Saturday

An improved Catamount nine looks forward to this week-end when they will renew acquaintances with their friends from the South in the person of the William and Mary College baseball team. Their clashes on the diamond today and tomorrow will mark the third and fourth meetings of the two teams this year. The first two games were played when the Vermont team was on its annual southern trip and resulted in a victory for each nine.

The first game, played on April 3, saw the William and Mary team on the long side of a 3-2 score. This was the game which marked the college début of "Smiling" Bob Carlson. He performed brilliantly in his first assignment and allowed his opponents only four hits and even drove in Vermont's two runs himself. His results, however, were of no avail and Vermont dropped the first game.

The second meeting of the teams provided an entirely different story. Perhaps in hopes of repaying Carlson for his brilliant defeat of the day before, the Catamount ball team, behind the six-hit pitching mastery of Lefty Pesarik, slammed hits to all corners of the ball park that day and left William and Mary smarting under a 16-1 beating.

The leading hitters that day were Spasyk, Wood, Taylor and Pesarik. Vermont also completed two double plays in this game, one by Boots Lawrence unassisted.

If any conclusions can be gained from these two early meetings of the ball teams, it certainly will give Vermont an edge. The Green and Gold outhit and outpitched the southern boys even though they lost the first encounter.

Coach Larry Gardner will probably field the same team that made the trip to William and Mary, with the exception of Utley, who has been in a hitting slump.

The probable pitchers for these two Junior Week games will be two sophomores, Akley and Carlson, the latter getting a chance to revenge himself for his first college defeat, and the old master, Lefty Pesarik, will probably be held in reserve.

Rugby Game

Immediately after Saturday's encounter the Vermont Rugby Club will play a return match with the Harvard J. V.'s. The game will be played on the football field. This marks the first home game of the Vermont team.

GEORGE HART

Women in Sports

Came Wednesday, May 8, and fortune smiled upon us—for a long while we had been waiting for our first day upon the courts and at last it came. How grand the feeling of the firm court under foot, the sight of the taut net across the middle of the court, the breeze playfully tossing loose locks in our eyes, and the feeling of space, plenty of elbow room and a chance to let go those whizzing serves and sizzling slams. Really there's nothing as thrilling to the tennis enthusiast as the first day back on the sunny courts after a long winter cooped up in a gym. A chance to limber up, to use up that excess energy and give vent to that feeling of joy that you're alive; a chance to brush up the old strokes, slams, service, and cuts and a chance to try to perfect new ones—all these are offered the ones familiar with the courts. To those who are exploring heretofore untried grounds a chance to try out all those things they so painstakingly practiced in the Gym under the guidance of Miss Crowe, Miss Hazard and the various student coaches.

Now that the courts are again playable, hope is held that the tennis tournament started last fall will be brought to its rightful conclusion. Many of the girls have entered the third round and some still have to finish the second round. Whichever you are in, will you please play your match as soon as possible (before finals again take over) so that the doubles matches can be started. All those who are interested in playing doubles may sign up for that purpose in the "Y" room.

By the way, girls, don't forget that corecreational softball game of mixed teams to be held on Thursday the 16th (if the weather man permits)—change that movie date to a softball one, put on some old clothes and tell "him" to too and then start for Southwick. (Be sure and get some liniment first though!)

Jitterbug Disease Finally Diagnosed

HACKENSACK, N. J.—(ACP)—The disease of the jitterbug has at last been diagnosed by a college biologist and has been declared "spectacular but not fatal" and a definite detriment to learning.

After considerable research on the "disease," Clifford H. Coles of Bergen Junior College here, has issued the following report:

"The poison may cause a sudden reaction in the body, in which case the individual, without any warning symptoms, is thrown abruptly into the throes of the disease, or the reaction may slowly build up to full vigor, requiring a month or more completely to possess the victim.

"The poison apparently is carried to all parts of the body by the bloodstream and seems to affect certain of the endocrine glands, notably the adrenal and parathyroid.

"The stimulation of the adrenals results in unusual strength, daring and endurance, characteristic of the symptoms of this malady. The stimulation of the parathyroid gland results in excessive nervous activity as is shown by the jittery convulsions and paroxysms of the body. This condition bears some resemblance to the advanced stages of the disease commonly known as St. Vitus Dance.

"One hopeful observation I have made is that the disease is rarely fatal. Most victims seem able gradually to throw off the poison, although this may take several years.

"During the height of the disturbances, however, the effects generally are detrimental. Most afflicted individuals seem entirely unable to concentrate for any appreciable length of time on their studies. As a result these folks grow to maturity with pitifully undeveloped mentalities. Peculiarly enough, the bodily development seems none the worse for this toxic condition. On the contrary, the muscles, especially in the back, legs and arms, usually are firm and well developed.

"The agonizing contortions and unintelligible exclamations, the latter being evidently secondary effects, produce a heart-rendering effect upon the victims' parents and elderly relatives."

I. R. C. Meeting Cancelled

Due to the fact that Dr. Pennington Haile of New York City was unable to be here last Wednesday evening, as guest speaker at the International Relations Club meeting, the meeting was cancelled.

There will be no more meetings of the club this year.

Frosh Track Squad To Hold Dual Meet

Springfield High and B. F. A. Are Opponents

Striving to break into the winning side of the ledger after absorbing a 62-55 defeat at the hands of Green Mountain Junior College, the frosh tracksters engage the combined force of Springfield High School and Bellows Falls High School on Saturday, May 11, at Centennial Field directly following the varsity baseball game, or approximately at 4.30 p.m.

The visitors will present an array of well-known scholastic talent who should give the freshmen plenty of stiff competition. Outstanding among them are LaChappele of Springfield, winner of javelin throw in 1939 Vermont interscholastic meet and a consistent 170-foot heaver, Asonevich also of Springfield, a star high hurdler and high jump winner in 1939 Vermont interscholastic meet, and O'Dette of Bellows Falls, a regular place winner in the 88 along with numerous other performers whose ability is as yet unknown.

Coach Roy Wietz has been driving his charges hard throughout the entire week in an effort to determine his best lineup. E. B. Mott, Jr., will again attempt to garner his quota of first places by entering five events, the high and low hurdles, 220-yard dash and the high and broad jump. If he maintains his present form he should encounter little difficulty. In the weights the burden will fall on the capable shoulders of H. C. Parker and J. L. Buttles, the former in the shotput and discus, the latter in the javelin, an event which should result in a close battle between Buttles and LaChappele of Springfield. The entries in their respective events are: 120-yard high hurdles, E. B. Mott, J. P. Goss; 100-yard dash, H. C. Parker, W. H. Milne, G. E. Little; mile run, L. Harrington, E. F. St. Mary, D. S. M. Corliss, J. L. Buttles; 440-yard dash, R. P. Grosvenor, E. J. O'Connell, W. B. Nestler; 200-yard low hurdles, E. B. Mott, J. P. Goss, G. E. Little; 880-yard run, J. W. Williams, D. M. Zwick, M. W. Crown, R. S. White; 220-yard dash, E. B. Mott, W. H. Milne, M. A. Cozzolino, E. J. O'Connell; high jump, E. B. Mott, R. P. Grosvenor, J. P. Goss, H. P. Wood; shotput, H. C. Parker, U. W. Otto, R. M. Caccavo; pole vault, H. C. Vreeland, R. W. Earley, H. P. Wood; discus, H. C. Parker, U. W. Otto; broad jump, E. B. Mott, J. P. Goss, M. A. Cozzolino; javelin, J. L. Buttles, W. T. Elliott, F. R. Swift, Jr.

500-Year-Old Milk May Be Fresh

SYRACUSE, N. Y. (ACP)—How would you like a glass of 500-year-old milk for breakfast? Several centuries hence some lucky individual may have the opportunity of enjoying that very thing, and he may thank the ghost of Dr. C. W. Root, head of Syracuse University's bacteriology department.

It was nearly eleven years ago when Dr. Root placed in the cornerstone of Hendricks Chapel a hermetically sealed flask of cow's milk, along with a flask of nutrient agar, both purified of all bacteria before sealing.

"Five hundred or a thousand years from now some one will be able to drink that milk, which will be as sweet as it was the day it was placed there," said Dr. Root in a recent lecture.

The purpose of Dr. Root's experiment is simply to demonstrate that, with the absence of bacteria, foodstuffs can indefinitely retain their nutrient value and edibility.

"The only thing that can spoil the demonstration is the breaking of the flask by extreme temperature change," said Dr. Root.

The flasks of Dr. Root have as company in the cornerstone a copy of the Daily Orange, student newspaper, published in 1929, along with various other articles not on record. A few days preceding the laying of the cornerstone by Chancellor Charles W. Flint, June 9, 1929, Dr. Burgess Johnson, director of public relations, suggested that samples of boarding house food be placed into the small vault in order that future observers may inspect the quality of our present-day hot-dogs, milk shakes, and barbecue sandwiches.

Deadline Dithers

This business of setting Thursday morning as the deadline for a Friday issue is necessary if the paper is to get off the presses at all, but it certainly runs us ragged. To all intents and purposes we don't even know Vermont played Middlebury Thursday. Here it is Friday and, according to this column, the reports haven't come in yet. Egad, odds bodkins and all that.

Forgetting about Middlebury, therefore, we'll turn to that pair of games with Williams and Mary scheduled for today and tomorrow. If all goes well Vermont should make a double killing or at best split the series. You remember the Catamounts did the latter on the Southern trip and according to all reports should have won both of those contests. So if William and Mary haven't improved any faster than Larry Gardner's crew, the latter definitely have the edge.

Anticipatory

Looking ahead quite a ways to the last part of the current baseball schedule we find two contests with St. Michael coming just before the Dartmouth fracas which will close the season. That spells action in capital letters. Those Mikemen have been bowling over all opposition, and there seems to be no doubt that they're the ones the Catamounts will have to beat for the State title. In other words, all chances for a successful season rest on those last three contests of the year. A victory over Dartmouth would be the logical way to celebrate the capture of the State championship. Or is this but an idle dream, a phantom of a groggy mind?

Gifts and Prophecy

This, by the way, is a very tracky (pardon the word-coining) week-end. Both the Frosh and Varsity have meets scheduled—the former with Middlebury, the latter with a combined Bellows Falls-Springfield High team. Archie's squad seems to be headed for a very successful season—undefeated thus far the Varsity we hope will come through with a win. According to all reports the Panthers are strong in the field events. There's a good chance that Vermont can win if the runners are up to form and some of the weight hurlers and jumpers toss in some points.

As for the Frosh their only hope is that Mott will keep walking away with firsts. We have consulted the stars for an explanation of this phenomena and we have been told that Mott is a gift to the track squad in commemoration of the approaching Sesquicentennial Anniversary of the University of the Green Mountains. Maybe that's so, but anyhow if we were Roy Wietz we'd put a halter on him and see that no one stole him.

Watson—The Aspirin!

There was a time when readers got a headache reading this column, now we're getting a headache writing it. This can't go on. Before we depart in search of an aspirin we would like to congratulate Gordie Smith on his appointment to West Point. Too bad Gordie's years of competition at U. V. M. make him ineligible for sports at the Academy. Sprinters like him are plenty useful on any track squad. F. B.

Tennis Squad Plays Middlebury

Will Face Springfield Tomorrow Afternoon

With the engagement of the Middlebury tennis team on Thursday, May 9, and that of Springfield College's squad Friday, the University of Vermont tennis team will endeavor to vindicate its three defeats and duplicate the lone win on its record.

Thursday's match with Middlebury, at this writing not yet played, looks like a toss-up affair. But one common opponent, to this writer's knowledge, appears on the schedules of Middlebury and Vermont. This opponent is Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. R. P. I. emerged victorious in both matches, taking U. V. M. 6-3 and Middlebury 5-4. One fact, which may or may not be of significance, is that Middlebury won its points on singles and not doubles, while Vermont won but one singles match and paid dividends on two doubles matches.

Too much stress should not be placed on comparative scores, but the opinion of the men who have played both teams may mean something. The men of R. P. I. have committed themselves to Coach Professor F. D. Carpenter to the effect that Vermont rates a more than even chance.

Practically no line at all is available as to Springfield's individual strength. The team, however, as a unit is reputed to be quite strong. Their number one and two men of last year's team, which took over Vermont, were not present this year. The number one man this year, it is known, is a strong player. One of his assets is his ambidextry.

The Vermont match is Springfield's fourth match of the season, to be followed by a fifth with Middlebury at Middlebury.

Vermont will travel to Middlebury to meet the Panthers and will meet Springfield at home.

Latest available figures give a total of 1,709 institutions of higher learning in the nation.

Horseshoe Tournament To Continue This Week

Horseshoe tournament can now go on, as the Physical Education Department has acquired horseshoes.

Will those fraternities or individuals who borrowed horseshoes last spring please return them?

Varsity Track Team To Face Panthers

Cats Have Advantage In Running Events

With two wins under their belt, the University of Vermont's undefeated track squad will be out for Middlebury's scalp Saturday. Middlebury was completely outclassed in its last start which was against Williams, being snowed under 91 to 44. The Panthers were submerged in the running events which are the Catamount's best point-getters.

Besides the running events, the University of Vermont appears to have an advantage in the high jump. Hunter hit 5 feet 11¼ inches in the Colby meet which is far superior to the height cleared by Lundigan of Middlebury. Arnie Becker was not far behind.

Vermont's vulnerable points appear to be the 440-yard dash and the field events. With Frankie Taylor unable to heave the shot or broadjump due to a ball game, the University of Vermont stock might take a slight dip.

Another tender spot for Vermont will be the hurdles. "Bud" Allen is our only consistent low hurdler and Allen teamed up with "Bob" Kenney are the best we have in the highs. Middlebury has Wood and Berry running the lows and Posmussen and Bates in the highs. In the Middlebury vs. Williams meet, these events were the Panthers strongest, all four lads garnering points.

It appears though that Vermont has enough balance of team power to punch out their third consecutive victory to the tune of "Bury Middlebury."

Old Gives Way to New on Campus

113-Year-Old Campus House to Be Torn Down

With the coming of Commencement this June, Campus House, U. V. M. dormitory for women, will take its place among the buildings of yesterday. Giving way to progress and improvement, the red brick structure will be torn down to make room for the new Waterman building.

Campus House was built in 1827 and for many years was a private residence. In 1919 the house was acquired by the University and was remodeled for use as a girls' dormitory. Sinc that time, Campus Houes has not only furnished a home for many girls, but is also a scource of pride and affection to those girls.

The house is large enough to hold eighteen girls in single and double rooms, and these rooms themselves are large and spacious. A large basement, location of many parties; a cupola, which is furnished as a small study room and also affords a view of Lake Champlain and the Adirondacks; are only part of her advantages. A large lawn slopes from the side of the house down to the tennis court. The lawn has several trees and it offers itself as an outdoor study hall, sun-bathing porch, and picnic grounds; to say nothing of a softball diamond and practice ski slope.

The girls that live in Campus House consider themselves as a family and have tried to bring to the campus the spirit of cooperation and good clean fun that has always been their motto and desire. No girl who has ever been a part of this family can ever forget the happiness and fun that she experienced there. The pranks that were always retaliated, the picnic suppers before the fireplace, the sings around the piano, the house meetings, the bull sessions; even the fire drills.

Pet Refuge

Last Kake Walk, Campus House built one of the finest ice statues on campus. Using the theme of "Gone With the Wind," the girls carved a Scarlett O'Hara standing on the steps of Tara. A series of snow forts have added to hazardous passing, and many have joined in the zestful snowball fights that took place after any good snowfall. A garden was planted by some of the girls, who even help mow the lawn and keep the tennis court in shape. The Campus House softball team has progressed, but even though it loses, it is none the less spiritedly played. Bicycles are another hobby there, and every girl skis and skates in the winter. Some even slide to church on the sleds if Sunday evening turns out to be icy. The girls give a Hallowe'en party every October and at Christmas time the children from the Settlement House are given a party and entertained. Last year Campus House won the W. A. A. Stunt Night with a comic take-off on Romeo and Juliet. Everything from a red-flanneled-underwear-garbed Romeo to a gruff voiced Juliet in pigtails, sent the play on its way to fame.

Pets have also found refuge there. A duck and two chickens were kept and tenderly care for, and a puppy and a cat at different times were given temporary lodging. Only college rules forbidding pets restrained Campus House from becoming a pet menagerie.

Great Fun

The girls have drilled as R. O. T. C. members, played football with a pillow and decorated Ira Allen for the pep rallys. Last year a hot-dog roast was in progress when the fire department arrived. They were invited to stay, but couldn't because it was raining anyway.

Mr. Fitzsimonds, the janitor, and Mr. Watkins, the night watchman, are lifelong allies to the inmates of the dorm. They help with everything from fixing broken windows to helping wax skiis. Recently the removal of the old house was celebrated by a "tearing down" party which was so realistic that several people stopped to ask what was wrong.

Every girl hopes in some way to bring glory to her dorm, and in no less manner did the girls of Campus House work to make the name of "Campus House" always a memory of what U. V. M. stands for.

She served as a home and source of happiness, and may her good name never be erased or forgotten from the history of this university. Long May She Live! —in our hearts—Campus House.

Dean Simpson to Attend Conference

Will Discuss Guidance For High School Pupils

Tomorrow, May 11, Miss Simpson and Miss Harris will attend the First Vermont Conference of Deans of Women and Advisors of Girls, to be held at St. Johnsbury Academy in St. Johnsbury, Vt.

A preliminary meeting was held here in Burlington in March and at this time Miss Mary H. Bailey, dean of girls at St. Johnsbury Academy, invited the group to hold their first meeting there. The Deans of Women of Vermont, Middlebury, Green Mountain and Vermont Junior College, as well as advisors of girls and representatives from about thirty high schools have been asked to attend.

Student Needs

The purpose of this group is to improve the quality of preparation and to enlarge the guidance service in Vermont high schools so that the students going on to college may find the adjustment less difficult and those not going to college may be better prepared for finding and holding a job.

To find what the needs are, questionnaires have been sent to the freshman and sophomore women from this State in college at Middlebury and here at Vermont. These were to discover what the students themselves felt they needed and what is being done at present for girls in high school. Dean Simpson will present these facts before the meeting. The desire of the group is to have an advisor of girls in every high school or to have one of the faculty sufficiently relieved of other duties to fill such a position.

In preparation for this meeting Dean Simpson and Miss Harris attended a meeting of the New England Association of Dean of Women, held two weeks ago, at which this problem of high school guidance was discussed.

Miss Davies, Chairman

Miss Elsie Davies, former assistant principal in the Glenville High School, Cleveland, Ohio, is chairman of the meeting. While in Cleveland, Miss Davies had a great deal of experience in guidance, and since being here in Vermont she has done much toward improving the guidance in Vermont high schools.

Organizations which are affiliating are the Vermont Guidance and Personnel Association, Vermont State Employment Service, National Youth Administration, National Association of Deans of Women, Children's Aid Society, State Department of Education and the American Association of University Women.

Award of the Month

E. Gilbert '41 has been chosen by the CYNIC staff to receive the award of the month for his outstanding work in directing this year's Interfraternity Sing.

Employment Outlook Brighter for Graduates

New York City—(ACP)—Employment prospects in the fields of engineering and business administration are brighter for this year's college graduates than for any class in recent years.

That is the report of Lawrence W. Zimmer, director of the New York University Bureau of Employment.

A 100 per cent job placement of the 1940 graduates in the university's college of engineering by early fall was predicted by Mr. Zimmer after interviews with seniors by personnel officers of basic industries. Last year 233 men were graduated with engineering degrees.

Business trained groups and graduates of liberal arts colleges also are being sought on an increased sale, Mr. Zimmer said.

Champlain Shores Scene of Picnics

Five Fraternities To Hold Parties

At 10 p.m., Sunday morning, Sigma Phi Fraternity and guests will journey to Camp Abnaki on Lake Champlain for the annual picnic which ends Junior Week festivities. Prior to the picnic proper the brothers and their guests plan to play softball as has been their custom for many years. After partaking of an open-air buffet luncheon, the facilities of Camp Abnaki will be available for further recreation. Chaperoning the affair will be Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Austin of Burlington. A number of Vermont Sig graduates will be present at the all-day gathering, which is being planned by M. J. Reynolds '42 and P. Sutton '43.

The Kappa Sig Fraternity will hold their picnic at Camp Skylark in South Hero. The picnic will be held at 3 o'clock and plans for a large steak fry on an open-fire sound inviting. John Royer '40 is in charge and Mr. and Mrs. Dalton are chaperoning. Peter Snardus of Dartmouth Gamma Chapter and Larry Simpson of St. Albans will be guests for the day.

Plattsburg Point in Vergennes will be the scene of the SAE's picnic, which will begin at 9 o'clock in the morning. The gathering will be unusually large for guests are expected from the Dartmouth, St. Lawrence and Norwich chapters. George Kirby, an Ohio State SAE brother of the class of '33 is visiting the Vermont Chapter now, and will also accompany them on the party. The chaperons will be Mr. and Mrs. Proctor Page and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Congdon. Roger Hunting '42, Bill Roeder '42 and Donald Dunn '42 are making the arrangements.

Sigma Nu Fraternity will hold their gala picnic at Highgate, Vt., up near the Canadian border on Lake Champlain. John Davis '40, assisted by W. I. Shea '40 and D. A. McRell '43 are planning a full program for the entertainment of their guests and visiting alumni.

A. D. MacDonald '40 will be in charge of the ATO picnic to be held Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, at Red Rocks on Lake Champlain.

Senior Week Souvenir Programs Available

This year special souvenir programs, containing the activities of the entire Senior Week, are available. These programs, which may be obtained in either leather or cardboard covers, have a picture of the chapel on the front. They also contain pictures of the campus, members of the Senior Week committee, and the complete roll of the graduating class, including the graduates of the Medical College.

The leather-bound copies are selling for seventy-five cents, and the cardboard-covered copies for fifty cents. Orders should be placed within the next ten days, with either Eleanor Brody, Campus House; Jean Brehmer, Grassmount; R. W. Robinson, Sigma Nu Lodge; or Carl Schofield, Kappa Sigma House. There is no limit as to the number of copies one person may order, but it is desired that the orders be placed ahead of time, as the copies will be out two weeks after they are ordered. This is to avoid confusion.

Independents Elect Livak As President

Colehamer is Secretary; Tatro New Treasurer

F. H. Livak '41 was honored at the annual election meeting of the Vermont Independents, Wednesday night, by being elected president for the ensuing year. This past year, Livak has been treasurer and has done a splendid job by always keeping a neat little balance in the bank. This dynamo of human energy has also been active in the Aggie Club and on the cross-country and track teams. In his sophomore year, he was an active member of Gold Key. The Independents look forward to an ever bigger and better year with Livak at the helm.

W. M. Colehammer '41 was elected secretary, and H. C. Tatro '43 will take Livak's place as treasurer. K. W. Johnson '41 remains in the chair of presiding justice which will make three years for him as the judicial head of the organization. B. Dunn '41 was reappointed athletic chairman as a reward for the fine work he has done this past year in managing the athletic teams of the Independents. Elections of vice-presidents will take place in the fall, at which time one is elected from each of the four classes. After the elections, the new officers were installed into their new offices by the presiding justice.

The Independents now look forward to a better year in which more constructive work will be accomplished with the sincere wish to make U. V. M. a finer university.

$100 Award Offered For Original Play

To Be Presented by Berkeley Playmakers

The George Pierce Baker Award of $100 in cash is offered by the Berkeley Playmakers for the best original play submitted in their current one-act play-writing competition.

Additional cash and other prizes will be awarded for the best of the other plays entered. A special award is offered for the best comedy.

These awards are given for plays of merit written for mature, intelligent audiences responsive to the standards of thought and craftsmanship developed in the American Little Theatre. While there is no restriction as to subject, theme, form or treatment, The Berkeley Playmakers particularly invite American folk plays in modern colloquial idiom, expressive of our own times, and other plays reflecting the contemporary scene. All else being equal, plays with small casts and minimum stage requisites, economically achieved, will be given preference.

Title to the plays will remain with the authors at all times, but The Berkeley Playmakers reserve the right to give any prize-winning play its first production, which right will relate to a limited period only. Judges will include Mr. Edwin Duerr, Director of the University of California Little Theatre, and Mr. Gordon Lange, former director of dramatics at Stanford University.

The rules governing the competition should be written for prior to submitting a play. All inquiries should be addressed to: Plays Committee, The Berkeley Playmakers, 1814 Blake Street, Berkeley, California.

Campus Comment

Last fall the Interfraternity Council announced its praiseworthy intention to put an end to combines or, at least, to nullify their effect. What happened?

If the Interfraternity Council cannot solve the problem of combines and fraternity politics, why not abolish the class offices outright?

That class elections are ridden by fraternity politics and combines is a well-known fact. It is not altogether strange that non-fraternity men and women should oppose such a situation. How often is one of their number elected? The striking thing is that even fraternities have protested through their delegates to the Council. The popularity of class elections may well be questioned.

The usefulness of class offices may likewise be viewed skeptically; the infrequency of class meetings no doubt plays a large part in this respect. Whatever measure of student government there is at this University is pretty well handled by a combination of Student Union, the Faculty-Student Conucil, the various honorary societies, Pan Hellenic and the Interfraternity Council. In this field class officers clearly seem unnecessary.

Interest in these class elections is certainly not at fever pitch; for example, take the junior class nomination for next year's senior officers. At the first meeting exactly seven students attended; this was properly elaborated on in a CYNIC editorial, Boulder made it a subject of a Campus Comment, and posters appeared in all the main University buildings. Net result? Hardly twenty juniors present at the next meeting!

In view of all these facts, why should we continue to spend time and money electing class officers? Will anyone else break with tradition and raise his or her voice in favor of the abolition of class officers? Will you? Or will this proposal, too, flounder in the morass of human inertia.

J. M. EVANS '41.

To the Men of Converse:

Gentlemen: Are we to understand that you are envious of the hours of leisure the girls on this campus enjoy? Perhaps you just don't understand! In all probability we arise at approximately the same time you do, but our hours after that are spent in a different way. It takes a girl a certain amount of time to make herself fit for presentation to the gazes of the audience forever present in Coffee Corner and around the "Y" Room. Were we to arrive on back campus to "brighten up" your military science class, or whatever it is, we would no doubt produce an effect other than that desired, what with no make-up on, stocking seams crooked, and curlers afloat on our waves of seaweed. If we were in our usual beautiful condition it would necessitate our waking up practically an hour earlier and then, in the evening, we would be too tired for our dates with you budding military leaders. As to your helpful (?) suggestions as to what we would do when (or mostly if) we did appear on the scene, here are our answers: Knitting sweaters for the needy Chinese—at the present, many of us feel plenty needy ourselves so we're afraid we couldn't be that big-hearted; helping with the rifles—with the knowledge we have of rifles the enrollment of the school would be in danger of suffering somewhat of a decrease; our cooking?—just a more subtle and tortuous way of accomplishing the same effect!

Do you still insist?

THE FRESHMAN GIRLS.

Burr Brothers Have No Fear of Third Term

Amherst, Mass.—(ACP)—The "third term" bogie has no terrors for brothers Clement F. and Frederick H. Burr, Jr., members of the junior and freshman classes, respectively, at Massachusetts State College.

Clement has been elected president of his class for the third time in succession and then Frederick crashed through and was elected president of the freshman class.

Neither brother is a green hand at the president business. While Clement has held three presidencies at State College, Frederick held the post of president for two years at Williston Academy before entering State and taking over the leadership of the freshman class.

many years, and will attempt to obtain again this year to the credit of the University. It was a Vermont Senator, Senator Morrill for whom Morrill Hall is named, who first secured passage of legislation which placed military training in hundreds of colleges and universities throughout the United States.

The program Wednesday evening at 8.00 p.m., will be devoted as usual to special drills and announcement of rewards. The entire battalion and band will participate under the command of Cadet Major Story assisted by Cadet Captain and Adjutant C. W. Utter, '41. Eight drill squads from eight fraternities are expected to compete for the Reserve Officer's cup. This cup goes permanently to the fraternity winning it three times. The Sigma Nu's have won it for two years. The cup was placed in competition by the Reserve Officers' Association of Northern Vermont.

Parade Thursday

Plans have been made to have Mr. H. G. Kern, representing the Hearst newspapers, to award the William Randolph Hearst trophy to the rifle team. This competition covers the colleges of the New England States and is designed to be almost exacting test in marksmanship. A team can hope to attain the trophy only by each man of his team placing his shots on the bull's eye.

Another feature of Wednesday night's program will be the competition conducted by members of Champlain Sabers, the honorary military society, to determine the best drilled individual in the manual of arms in both Freshman and Sophomore classes. In addition, the Sons of the American Revolution medals will be awarded to a member of each of the four classes who is outstanding in character, conduct, leadership, and in the theoretical and practical knowledge of the year's course. At the end of the year the one best judged of the six different companies will receive the American Legion Trophy.

Owing to the limited seating capacity of the cage, admission to the evening military program will be by ticket. In addition to the tickets for the faculty, one ticket will be made at the disposal of each member of the R. O. T. C.

This year the battalion parade will be held at 11.30 Thursday morning on the back campus. In past years the parade has been held at an early hour in the morning and this new change of 11.30 should accommodate those who never see the battalion because they either sleep late or cannot be concerned at 7.30 a.m., to notice the R. O. T. C. drill. It will be a fine opportunity to witness the parade as the climax to annual military inspection and enthusiasm for it runs high in student circles.

Alpha Chi to Hold Annual Flower Show

Alpha Chi Omega's annual spring flower show will be held at the house on Friday afternoon, May 17, from two to four.

Sororities, fraternities, dormitories, and individuals are asked to contribute displays. Judges will be chosen and prizes given in each of three classes.

The Methodist College Group will meet at 3.00 p.m., Sunday, at the parsonage to go for a picnic at Ethan Allen Park. Bring 10 cents to pay for refreshments.

U.V.M. Delegation Hear Eminent Men

Fadiman and Compton Speak to 400 Guests

Prof. Parker B. Willis of the Economics Department, G. S. Noonan '40 and R. L. Tracy '40 were the guests of General Motors in a preview of their Highways and Horizons exhibition at New York on May 6.

The problems of youth in industry was the keynote of the conference. The program represented the first attempt by any large business group to sponsor a comprehensive consideration of the much discussed youth problem. In an "Information Please" type of program conducted by Clifton Fadiman, Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of M. I. T., Dr. Ernest M. Hopkins, president of Dartmouth, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, columnist and Mr. Charles Kettering, vice-president of General Motors in charge of Research answered questions posed by the students themselves.

About 400 students, and professors, industrialists, newspaper men and national political figures attended the banquet after a tour of the fair grounds and the General Motors exhibit. The general tone of the answers to questions indicated that the speakers were in favor of less governmental interference so that industry would feel free to undertake research which would result in an expansion of industry to take care of the surplus of labor.

An outstanding feature of the whole program was the atmosphere of informality. Highly paid businessmen, executives, deans and presidents of universities were everywhere chatting with the various college men. The seating plan was so arranged so that one mixed with men from different colleges and also sat with two or more leading figures. It was rare opportunity for college students to talk with men of national importance in a casual manner.

The University of Vermont group left Sunday night and returned Wednesday morning.

Robinson Society To Meet May 14

"Billy" Phelps Among Association's Members

The fourth annual meeting of the Rowland E. Robinson Memorial Association will be held Tuesday, May 14, the anniversary of Mr. Robinson's birth, at the family homestead in Ferrisburg. It will be an all-day meeting.

During the morning an opportunity will be given to look over the many memorials of the author and his work, and the numerous other items of interest with which the house abounds. It is reported by the Society that there has been a steady increase during the last few years in Robinson interest and what a large number are expected at this year's meeting.

One ardent Robinson enthusiast, a Chicagoan, spreads the fame of the Vermont author by talks in the Illinois city. Another member of the Association is Virgil Markham, Port Richmond, N. Y., son of Edwin Markham, the famous poet. William Lyon Phelps, known to hundreds of Yale graduates and many who never saw Yale as "Billy" Phelps, joined the Association during the past year. Paul Harris of Chicago, founder of Rotary International, is another member.

The program in the afternoon, following a business meeting, will consist of a series of three talks. Rowland T. Robinson, son of the author, will speak on some aspect of his father's life or works. Mrs. Rowland T. Robinson will talk about the home. Mrs. Bertha Oppenheim, who knew Mrs. Rowland E. Robinson, wife of the author, will tell about her and her contribution to Mr. Robinson's work.

Members of the Association and others interested are invited to the gathering. Those who come in the morning will bring box luncheons.

Notice to all Bluestockings members—Please vote for next year's officers in the "Y" room anytime before Saturday noon, May 11.—PHYLLIS WILLIAMS.

Junior Prom Will Feature Bob Zurke And Evelyn Poe

Price Lowered for Year's Standout Dance; Slack and Pye in Charge

(EDITOR'S NOTE—Co-chairmen Bill Pye and Ransome Stack in a statement to the editor yesterday announced that Bob Zurke and his entire band will positively be at Vermont for the Junior Prom.)

The long-awaited Junior Prom, high spot of the week-end will be at the Gym, transformed into an ultra-sophisticated night spot, with Bob Zurke and his Delta Rhythm boys on the bandstand. Despite groundless rumors which have been floating around, Zurke's complete band and his lovely soloist, Evelyn Poe, will be present. If any further proof of these facts need be given, this popular swing master played recently in the prominent night clubs of Boston. Zurke comes to Burlington with the reputation of being one of the foremost pianists in the world of modern dance music and the unique arrangements his smooth Delta Band presents gives that added dash of what it takes to put the newest numbers in the unforgettable Zurke manner. Coupled with this pianist-leader, whom Paul Whiteman chose as pianist for Collier's All-American Orchestra, is Sterling Bose, whose hot leads on his trumpet thrills the most bored swing devotee.

The Junior Prom, one of the most colorful dances of the year, is open to all who have $4.40 for cover charge.

Prof. and Mrs. H. A. Prentice and Professor and Mrs. Witham are chaperoning the gala dance which promises to be a high light of this year's U. V. M. social calendar.

First Campus Sing A Grand Success

Under the able direction of L. Pichierri '41, the Campus Sing was held Wednesday night on the Chapel Steps. Accompanied by a piano on a truck played by Betty Cole '41, the singers used their repertoire of many old favorites; among them both school and well-known selections.

Many of the fraternities turned out en masse, and the spirit of the whole get-together made this an ideal innovation for Junior Week. As this is the first time that a sing of this nature has ever been staged on this campus, the directors should be well congratulated. It was heard from many, that this Campus Sing should take its place annually among the traditions of the University of Vermont.

The idea was first introduced by Maywood Metcalf, editor-in-chief of the CYNIC. Also instrumental in its promotion were Professor Ladd of the German department, and R. O. Slack and W. Pye, directors.

Frosh Nine Loses To G. M. J. G. 12-5

The Frosh diamond men returned from their Poultney excursion where they suffered a 12 to 5 defeat at the hands of Green Mountain Junior College. The Greenies hopped off to a four run lead in the third inning and hit consistently for scores in every succeeding inning, but the lucky seventh.

Dick Fairbanks and Hughes led the Green attack with three blows apiece. Alberghini did the heavy sticking for the Frosh with two hits in four trips to the plate.

Museum Notes

The recent Sportsman's Show has yielded several interesting exhibits now on display at the Fleming Museum. The diagram including two small models of dinosaurs with the figure of a man to show comparative size, and the exhibit of fossilized sea animals, both prepared by Prof. C. G. Doll, acting head of the Department of Geology, for the show are now on display in the Primitive Room of the museum. In about three weeks the mural of the Neanderthal Man, painted by Marion Guild, of Essex Junction, for the Sportsman's Show will be added to the collection in the Primitive Room. Miss Guild has just returned from New York where she has been studying the painting in the National Museum of Natural History by Charles R. Knight from which the mural was copied, and she is now working on its completion for display in the museum.

Another interesting exhibit is the one of old telegraph instruments now showing in the Early Vermont Room. To those owned by the museum are added many instruments loaned by the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Works of distinguished contemporary poets are being recorded by the poets themselves for the phonographic library at City College, New York.

INTRODUCING

A thousand trees bought to enlarge a high school vocational agricultural project may be used some day to help defray college expenses, at least that is what Robert L. Bickford, Jr., '43, the owner, hopes. For the trees make up a maple sugar orchard that should sometime be worked profitably.

This ambitious young man who was president of his local chapter at Newport Center for three successive years before coming to the University last fall as a freshman went one step up the ladder last year as he was elected president of the Vermont Association of the Future Farmers of America. Recently, the fourth F. F. A., president in its eight years of existence to continue his education in agriculture at the University was elected a member of the Vermont collegiate chapter of the F. F. A. Another honor that he has just received is his selection as a member of Gold Key, sophomore honorary society.

Never satisfied unless active, Robert was occupied during high school entering poultry judging and speaking contests in addition to playing sports and working on his crop projects. When a sophomore the Newport Center Poultry Judging team, of which he was one of the two members, was chosen at a state contest to represent Vermont at the Eastern States Exposition, Springfield, Mass. Placing first among eight teams that fall in the Poultry Judging contest their next destination was to represent Vermont at the tenth National Convention of the F. F. A. in Kansas City, Mo. Out of a group of about 100 individuals Vermont's representatives came out fourth in National contests. In the public speaking contests conducted by the F. F. A. he won first place for two successive years in his own district and a high place in the state contest.

But Robert doesn't spend all of his time accumulating records and honors for he is also an enthusiastic baseball fan and he would rather attend a ball game than do anything else, he believes, although he does not play.

As for college, Bob thinks it is wonderful and wants to continue here until he finishes three years from this June, and then, perhaps, onto Cornell for a master's degree; for, his main ambition and intention at present is to acquire a college education and become an instructor in some branch of vocational agriculture.

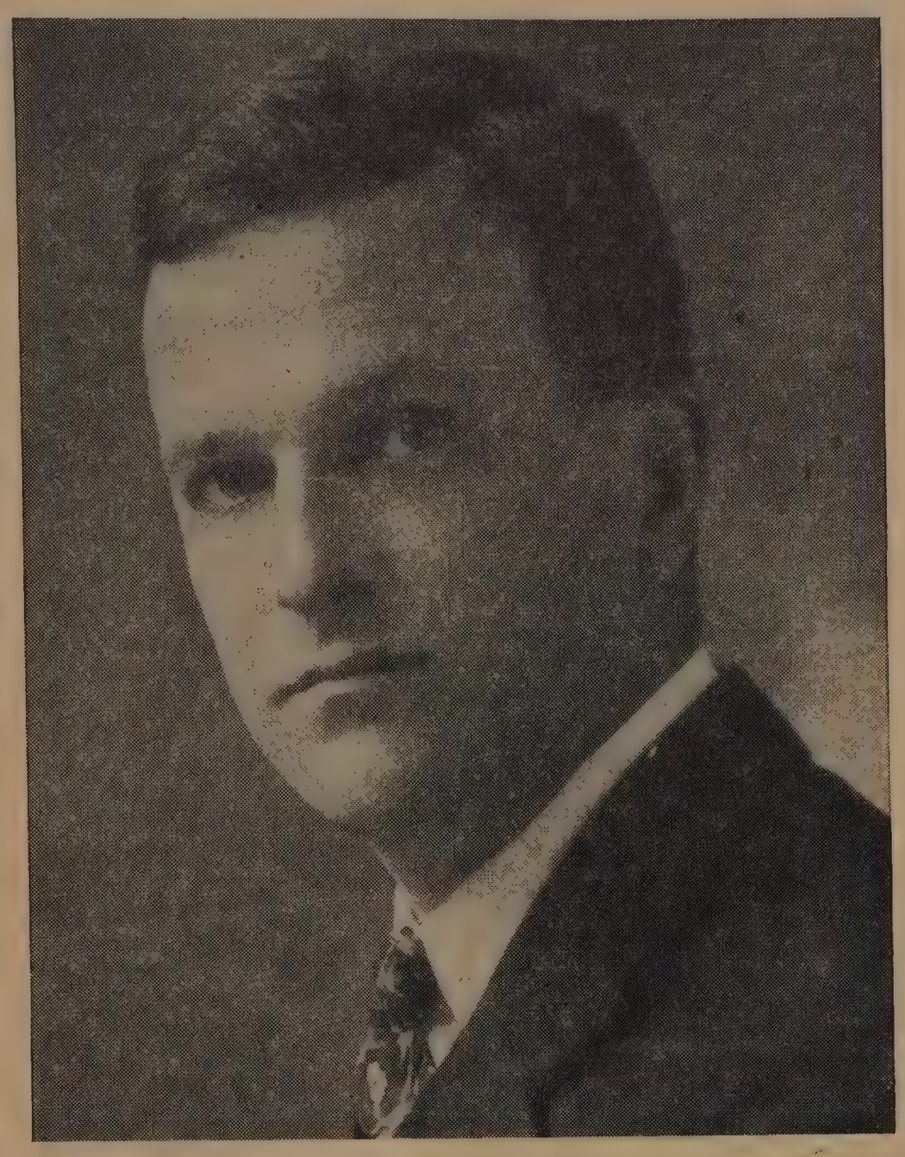
Gala Prom Climaxes Junior Week

Bob Zurke's Rhythm Delights Capacity Crowd

Under a myriad of stars and soft lights Joe College and Betty Co-ed stepped out to the soft strains and swinging jive of Bob Zurke and his Delta rhythm boys in the sophisticated setting of black and white at the gym Friday night. It was the high spot of the much-anticipated and now much-remembered Junior Week, climaxed with the man himself, Zurke, "in the groove."



The theme of a Manhattan night club was carried out with the wall decorations of black silhouettes on white, the black and white rail guards and the outstanding setting for the band, with Zurke's piano out in front where every eye could witness his, the real thing, the nation's best.

Evelyn Poe, lovely soloist, and Sterling Bose gave of their vocal and trumpet talents with such rhythm that thrilled every listener's ear.

Prof. and Mrs. H. A. Prentice and Prof. and Mrs. Witham were the chaperones of this gala event which fulfilled its promises of being the highlight on U. V. M.'s social calendar.

Sunday, May 19, the last coffee hour of the year will be held, sponsored by the Sophomore Aides. J. N. Houpis '41 will play.

Museum Features Chinese Display

On special display in the Fleming Museum is a book entitled Calls Sounds and Merchandise of the Peking Street Peddlers. This book was written by Lieutenant-Colonel Constant and printed in Peking, China.

Lieutenant-Colonel Constant explains in his book that because of the bound feet of the Chinese women and all the customs and traditions of that country, the Chinese women can not go shopping as easily as the American and European women. Therefore there are a countless number of peddlers who play an important part in Chinese life. These peddlers carry their wares on their shoulders in boxes divided into shelves. Such notions as combs, toothbrushes, face powder, needle and thread are arranged on these shelves. Several of the combs are on display with the book. There is also a thimble and a small ivory backscratcher.

It is hoped that sororities and dormitories will have each at least two entries and that many individuals will contribute displays.

All Sports Banquet Scheduled Tonight

Elizabeth Gurney, '41 To Make W.A.A. Awards

The W. A. A. all-sports banquet, which will formally close W. A. A. activities for this year, will be held this evening at Southwick at 6.00 o'clock. The banquet will be unusually large this year and at least 150 guests are expected. The all-sports team will be announced and the honorary teams will be awarded certificates. Elizabeth Gurney '41, the new W. A. A. president, will make these awards. Short talks will be given by Dean Simpson, Miss Cummings and Mary Howe.

The main feature of the program will be moving pictures shown by Mr. Eldred of U. V. M. girls demonstrating winter sports games. These pictures have been taken during the winter season and have caused a great deal of interest in the physical education classes.

Joanna Metcalf '42 will be toastmistress at the banquet; Phyllis Savage '43 and Joanna will be in charge of table decorations; Hester Carver '41 of food; Janet Dike '43 and Gratia Pearl '42 of place cards; and Nancy Goodwin '42 of the program.

Staff and Sandal To Sponsor Lilac Day Pageant May 18

J. Finney, J. Harshbarger And E. Millington to Interpret Major Roles

The annual Lilac Day pageant, sponsored by Staff and Sandal, will take place this year on next Saturday, May 18, at 8.00 p.m. in the gym at Southwick. As always, this is expected to be a very colorful and beautiful affair.

The program will begin with the introduction of the Lilac Day Queen and her court, followed by music selections by the University Orchestra. The dance, the chief feature of the pageant, and directed by Miss Rosemary Hazard of the physical education department, is entitled "Endymion." Its theme is taken from Greek mythology. The story is a very beautiful one. Endymion, a shepherd boy, played by Jean Finney '41, falls in love with the goddess Diana (Jean Harshbarger '40), thereby arousing the jealousy of Venus (Betty Millington '40), who is incensed at the idea of a mere mortal in love with a goddess. She rallies all of the gods to the cause, and they condemn Endymion to either death or eternal sleep. He chooses sleep, and Diana mourns over him.

Many to Participate

The other chief characters are as follows: The priest, Abbie Fritche '43; shepherd boy, June Swanson '42; Diana's shadow, Harriet Nelson '42; death, Jane Lyons '41; sleep, Phyllis Lake '42. Marjorie Southworth '43 will sing a solo.

The shepherds are: Elisabeth Kulka '43, Patricia Pike '43, Marjorie Abell '43, Joyce Bone '43, Margaret Wishart '43, Marguerite Benoit '43, Elizabeth Linn '42, Mary Lyle '43, and Anne Olmstead '42. The nymphs are: Hortense Leduc '43, Margaret Charles '43, Claire LaFray '43, Mignon Warner '43, Alma Levens '43, Lois Douglas '43, Helen McLean '43, Norma Lang '43, Agatha Keelan '43, and Elizabeth Deming '43.

The following girls take the parts of the gods: Mary Beth Davis '43, Alice Needham '43, Barbara Browne '43, Phyllis Savage '43, Virginia Mitchell '43 and Martha Stearns '42. The maidens are: Cynthia Bailey '43, Joan Eldredge '43, Jean Russell '43, June Hoffman '43, Betty Kennedy '43, Nora Hill '42 and Pauline Niles '43. The piano accompaniment will be played by G. R. McKee '41.

Based on Keats' "Endymion"

The theme of this year's pageant is based on Keats' poem, "Endymion." Music for "Endymion" was written by Dorothy C. Kornhauser, dance instructor at Dana Hall School in Wellesley, Mass. Miss Hazard of our own physical education department has made up all the dances for the pageant. Selections from Keats' poem will be read during the performance by Barbara Butterfield '42. Miss Sullivan of the English department has adapted the poem for presentation.

Because of the large expense involved in this year's presentation a small admission of twenty-five cents will be charged.

Tau Epsilon Phi Holds Formal Initiation

Tau Epsilon Phi held a formal initiation Saturday, May 11, at which Milton Borofsky '43, Clifford Joseph '43 and Herbert Robinson '43 were made members of the T E P fraternity. Borofsky hails from Keene, N. H.; Joseph is a product of New York City, and Robinson of Brockton, Mass.

A banquet was held after the initiation at the Black Cat, at which many alumni were present.

The Tune the Prom Died On! !

Junior Week, the long-awaited social event of the college year was well executed and the social events of the week certainly were tremendously enjoyed by all who attended them. The Junior play, "What a Life," was extremely well performed and was one of the funniest plays that we have ever seen. The floats in the parade, however, with the exception of a few showed little originality and a lot of hasty construction.

The Junior Prom is another tale of woe. With one of the finest orchestras that has visited our campus in recent years and decorations that were novel and attractive, the attendance was approximately ONE-THIRD as large as it was last year. The fault is obviously not that of the directors who did a fine job of planning and executing the large task of making the preparations for the Prom. The fault rests solely on the students of our University who were gullible enough to listen to some very unsportsmenlike students on the campus who started a false rumor about the Prom band. We feel strongly that no amount of adverse criticism is too much to throw at the heads of the offenders. The fact that the entire Zurke band came to the Prom and was very well liked by all the students who went is evidence of the falseness of the malicious rumor that some students were guilty of starting.

The price of this year's Prom was reduced $1.10 over the price of last year's Prom. The students who went other places to dance last Friday undoubtedly spent as much or more then the Prom would have cost them. The poor attendance at this year's Prom may lead the University to discontinue the affair next year. Certainly when the cost of the orchestra alone is several hundred dollars more than the total gate receipts, the administrator of the University's funds will be very reluctant to dole out enough money for this affair in the future.

It doesn't do us any good to cry over what has happened but we hope that in the future (if we have another prom) that the first student who starts a false rumor about the orchestra that is to play will be promptly squelched and put in a place where he can do no harm.

We congratulate the co-directors of the Prom and all their many helpers for making the Prom a really gala affair. We also hope that those students who did not attend the Prom but went to some other "Prom," will feel very guilty next year if the University has no Prom.

Youth Is Answered—

At the recent "Forum of Youth and Industry," which was held at the General Motors Building at the World's Fair, eminent scholars and business men answered many of the questions that are troubling college students today.

When General Hugh S. Johnson was asked the question "Which counts more in getting a job—a letter on your sweater or the letters on a Phi Beta Kappa Key?" he gave a very sensible answer. He said, "Any employer who hasn't any more sense than to look at either is not worth working for. For God's sake, leave your sweaters home and stop fiddling with your keys when you look for a job."

"Would there be more jobs for youth if industrial activity were planned under government supervision?" was another question that a student asked General Johnson. The witty politician replied "That is a tricky question. If it raises the point that we're going to have government supervision, why then the answer is yes. If we are going to substitute government regulating I think that we have eight year's experience for an emphatic no."

A Perspective on Human Interest

by

VIRGINIA AMIDON

It matters not how long you have been a member of the University of Vermont, nor how much you may know or have learned about its history, customs or ideals; you have not really seen our fair school until you have done a little research. To explain myself, take a few hours off sometime and delve into the Vermont room of the Billings Library. You will be well rewarded, for there is tucked away on those shelves a wealth of amusement and interesting reading.

Most important to the University itself are the college publications represented there. The CYNICS go back as far as 1883, and the Ariels to 1889. When reading matter becomes dull, the pictures certainly don't, and some of those old Ariels are masterpieces of the art.

To go back to 1889: Such organizations as the "Sigma Phi Quartette," the "A. T. O. Sextette," the "Phi Delt Orchestra," and the "Sigma Phi Banjo Club" flourished. Most of the fraternities had Lawn Tennis Teams and Kappa Alpha Theta was the only woman's sorority. The Freshman class numbered 42 (counting 4 females) and the History of the junior class for the yearbook was so long that it would have been necessary to raise extra funds to be able to print it all.

In 1903, somebody wrote a poem about "What the Ladies' Glee Club Did." It was accompanied by an authentic photograph, and some of the epic ran as follows:

Behold the Co-eds Dressingroom!
Behold upon the table
A bottle and an empty glass!
Behold the bottle's label!

'Twas found exactly as above,
The kodak cannot lie,
Our Ladies' Glee Club has rehearsed,
Their throats have gone quite dry.

Oh! Thank the Gods, and ever pray
That Faculty ne'er know
What happened in the Dressing-room.
Co-eds are not so slow!

In that year there flourished a "University of Vermont Salvation Army" and the "United Order of Feline Warblers." The latter combined the following former independent societies: Roosters, Sparrows, Cukoos, Tree Toads, Glee clubs and Chapel Choir. Their annual Bawl was held in the Gym basement on St. Patrick's Day.

You have seen nothing until you have viewed the picture of LaFayette (statue of course) lecturing in freshman Math after Hallowe'en or cartoons of some of the college pranks. They bemoaned the fact that none could think up a prank to beat the one of 50 years before when some bright student put a cow up in the belfry of the Old Mill and they had to kill the poor beast and cut it up in pieces before they coud get it down. They say that in those days, everyone rose at 5 a.m., for compulsory chapel, but you can take that with a grain of salt.

The pictures are the best and who said that candid cameras were recent inventions—they just don't know the half of it!

I could go on indefinitely, but that would spoil my purpose. "Because we believe in Vermont," we should discover some of her past. All in Vermont room you know!

The editors of the Ariels in years past should be well proud of their accomplishments in producing the human interest side of the history of the University of Vermont.

"Sit quiet friends, and think it o'er,
Aye, think how sweet the old days were!
Seek not, weep not, take memory;
Let's have a loving cup with her,
And a sitting still and long with her,
For the old days, for the old, care-free days!"

U. V. M. to Offer Vocal Scholarships

High school vocalists of Vermont will soon be meeting in district competitions which offer to the winners scholarships to the University of Vermont and a chance to compete in the finals, where more scholarships await the winners. The finals will be Saturday, June 1, starting at 8.00 p.m. at the Fleming Museum of the University of Vermont. Scholarships totalling $2,150 in value will go to vocal winners.

The State is divided into three districts, each conducting its own district competition. May 18 is the date for the contest of the first district, which includes Orange, Orleans, Essex, Caledonia and Lamoille Counties. The second district covers Rutland, Bennington, Windham and Windsor Counties, and holds its contest May 25. In District number three, taking in Grand Isle, Chittenden, Addison, Franklin and Washington Counties, the contest is scheduled for May 22. Contestants of the first district will meet at Fuller Hall, St. Johnsbury Academy; in the second district, at Burr and Burton Seminary in Manchester; and in the third district, in the Burlington High School assembly hall in Burlington.

The vocal solo tournament is sponsored jointly by the University of Vermont music department and the Headmasters' Club of Vermont. A $150 scholarship to the University of Vermont is offered to the boy and the girl winning first places in each district contest; second place winners, boy and girl, take $100 scholarships. Three scholarships for boys and three for girls are offered in the final contest, first prize winners taking $150 scholarships, second, $100 scholarships, and third, $75 scholarships.

Points considered in judging will be tone, accuracy of pitch, rhythm, interpretation, stage deportment and diction. Two boys and two girls will be chosen in each district contest to compete in the finals. Judges for the finals are Mrs. Elizabeth Bradish of the University music department, Miss Dorothy Hunt, Trinity College, and Prof. L. J. Hathaway of Middlebury College.

Gordie Smith Sets New Record in the Century

Cats Beat Panthers 69-66; Cats Take State Title

In one of the closet meets seen on the Porter Field cinders in several years, the University of Vermont outlasted the Middlebury trackmen 69-66, Saturday, to annex the State championship for 1940.

From the Vermonter's point of view, the outstanding man of the day was dashman Gordie Smith, who blazed to a new State and college track record in the 100 of 9.8 seconds, and then followed this up with a 22 seconds 220-yard dash, tying both the State and college track records. Smith's first in the 220, the next to the last event on the program, assured the Cats of the victory, giving them a point total of 68. In the last event, the broad jump, the Panthers swept the first two spots, but Becker of Vermont edged out Bates for third.

Bob Johnstone started the Cats on the right path with wins in the shot and hammer, both of which he hurled for good distances. Brad Poole, Panther frosh, took the discus and Johnny Zydik the javelin to equalize the weights. The pole vault saw Dick Barclay tie Pratt of Vermont for the top honors, while Hunter had an easy time in the high jump.

Webster Wins Mile

Capt. Bobby Post of the Panthers went down to defeat at the hands of Charlie Webster in a 4:40.1 mile in the last race of his career. Post trailed the little Catamount through three fast quarters, but he did not have his usual stretch drive left and Webster was going away from him at the tape. Vermont swept the two-mile with Fred Webster winning and C. Webster, Livak and Clark tying for second.

The Cats had the edge in firsts on the Middmen eight events to six with the pole vault being split. However, the home forces added consistently to their total by means of seconds and thirds with the exception of the two-mile run which resulted in the only clean sweep of the day and went to the visitors. The Panthers closed with a rush, but they were unable to quite overcome the early lead built up by the Vermonters.

Mott Takes 5 Firsts As Kittens Win

Led by E. B. Mott, Jr. and H. C. Parker, Jr., the Freshman track team scored an easy 81½-35½ victory over the combined force of Springfield High and Bellows Falls High. As usual, Mott took five first places, being victorious in the 120-yard high hurdles, 200-yard low hurdles, 220-yard dash, high jump and broad jump. Following closely at his heels was Parker, who won the shot put, discus throw and 100-yard dash. Other Green and Gold first-place winners were E. F. St. Mary, Jr., who unleashed a terrific stretch drive which nipped Morse of Bellows Falls at the tape in the mile run and J. L. Buttles who had little difficulty in winning the javelin with a throw of 154 feet. The downstaters were weakened from the outset by the loss of one of their stars, LaChappele, 1939 Vermont Interscholastic javelin champion, who did not make the trip to Burlington.

Springfield and Bellows Falls failed to exhibit any strength in the field events and only in the middle distances did they outscore the Kittens. The Frosh made a clean sweep of both sprints, the shot put and also took first and second in the discus and broad jump.

The summary of events:

W. & M. Take Cats in First Game of Series

7-6 Is Score of First; Nightcap 0-0 in 7 Innings

A perfect strike, thrown from center field by Frankie Taylor, saved the Cats from a double defeat at the hands of William and Mary. His peg came in the sixth inning of the second day and stopped an Indian runner from crossing the plate.

Errors, Errors

The first game was marked by eight errors, five by Vermont. After the Cats scored three in the first, the Indians put across two in the second on a single and two miscues by Whizzer White at third.

The score was 6-3, Cats' favor, going into the first of the seventh. A couple of walks issued by Akley, a wild peg, bunched with two bingles, put across four visitor runs. There was no other scoring that day and the score remained 7-6.

Flawless Fielding

The second game was a direct contrast of the first. The weather conditions made the field slippery and, for once, errors were understandable. Yet both teams gave an exhibition of flawless fielding. Bobby Carlson in the meanwhile was engaged in a pitching duel with Tommy Crane, visiting southpaw. Neither hurler allowed a single run and the game was called in the seventh.

Tennis Team Loses To Springfield 7-2

Rain Robs Frosh of Victory Over Rutland

The varsity tennis team slumped further into the depths of defeat when they absorbed a 7-2 shellacking from a good Springfield College aggregation last Friday.

The only player to offer a ray of hope to Coach Carpenter was Capt. G. Booth, who won his singles match and then teamed with Art Wolk, No. 2, to win the doubles match.

The singles match between Booth and Condon (S) presented a beautiful exhibition. In the person of this Springfield boy Booth met an ambidexterous player, one of the few in the game, but playing a wonderful placement game and rushing the net time after time to put away a number of shots, Gordie took the match 6-4, 6-3.

The battle of the second ranking men went to three sets before Art Wolk dropped the match to Robey of Springfield, 6-2, 7-9, 6-1. Vermont then lost the remaining five singles matches when Schuman (S) took Simpson (V) 6-1, 6-3; Brown (S) beat Foti (V) 8-6, 6-1; Rogers (S) punished Clark (V) 6-2, 6-2; and Pine (V) absorbed a beating from Sholes (S) 6-1, 6-2.

In the doubles matches, Booth and Wolk, the number one team, beat Kelly and Roby of the visitors in a bitterly fought three-set match, 7-5, 4-6, 8-6.

The other doubles matches went the way of the singles. Schuman and Brown (S) beat Foti and Simpson in a hard-fought match 8-6, 7-5, and Rogers and Sholes (S) whitewashed Clark and Pine, 6-2, 6-3, thereby giving Springfield the match 7-2.

The freshman tennis team's bid for another victory was stemmed by the weather man at Rutland Saturday. Leading 2-1 as a result of victories by Dick Swift and Bill West, Nos. 1 and 3, respectively, they were prevented from continuing when a heavy rain prevented further play.

The varsity tennis team plays a heavy schedule of three matches this week. Today they play Colgate here, Thursday they tackle St. Lawrence on the back campus, and Saturday they will be host to a Middlebury team which beat them previously 5-4.

In the meantime, a winning freshman tennis squad travels to St. Albans today and Poultney Saturday, where they engage Bellows Free Academy and a Green Mountain Junior College team whom they tied in their last meeting, respectively.

Recently we received from an alumnus of U. V. M. a letter in which he expressed his indignation of the non-renewal of John Sabo's contract. Although this column neither agrees nor dissents with any of the points of the letter, we find it pertinent to publish it. It has been the policy of this paper to publish each and every "Campus Comment" submitted by any undergraduate of this University. True, the author of the following letter is not an undergraduate, but since he is a very recent graduate, since he has been in close contact with the University events, and as he is a man who has played under Sabo, we feel justified in placing him in the preceding category and think that his sentiments should be printed.

An Open Letter

Reading my local paper, I came across the following article: "Head-coach John P. Sabo, who has been directing University of Vermont varsity football for the past six years, has been notified that his contract will not be renewed. Most of the rival coaches that Sabo has met agree he made the most of the material he found at the Burlington institution. But the school's failure to renew his contract didn't surprise many who follow the Catamount grid activity. He has had an alumni pack snapping at his heels for some time."

This little sports slant brings back to me something I heard when I first entered U. V. M. Vermont is a grave-yard for coaches.

I believe that I am more qualified to pass judgment on Johnny Sabo's ability as a coach than the average Vermont alumnus. If the failure of the powers that be to renew Sabo's contract means that his coaching ability is rather doubtful, then my only recourse is to use the vernacular "They're all wet." As a matter of fact, Vermont has no incentive for any athlete of any ability to matriculate therein. If I am not mistaken, upon entering the University of Vermont in the capacity of a coach, Sabo was given reason to believe that he would at least have enough men to comprise two full teams. Instead, Coach Sabo found it necessary to go among the student body to find enough material in order to have scrimmage. It is my contention that before being too critical about "the house that Jack built" we must first scrutinize the materials and tools used by Jack. Consequently, if Sabo had material, comparable to that found in most universities, his teams would have been undoubtedly more successful.

The object of this letter is not to denounce the University of Vermont, its athletic program or its athletes, nor is it to encourage the subsidizing of athletic material. Its purpose is to give credit where credit is due. In my opinion, and I am speaking for many others with whom I have played, and who have played under Sabo, his coaching record is certainly unblemished. Being an alumnus of the University, and being vitally interested in all its activities, particularly athletics, I cannot possibly see how the policy of changing coaches every time a certain few alumni who probably are capable of such suggestions or criticisms feel that such change is desirable, can be an asset to the University. I believe that if unrest among the various alumni is caused by failure of athletic teams of the University to finish every season with an enviable record, then steps in another direction are necessary. Vermont can only accomplish the aforementioned by the subsidizing of athletes.

It seems too bad that a man like Johnny Sabo, who's sole objective for the past six years has been for the betterment of the University and its athletic department, must apparently leave his task unfinished unvoluntarily. But at any rate, that's Vermont!—And to you, Johnny Sabo—the many friends that you have made during the past six years, those who have played on your teams and those whom you have had occasion to meet otherwise, will long remember you as a man whose character is unquestionable, whose ability as a coach is unsurpassed, and whose past record does not warrant the failure of the Athletic Council to renew your contract. As a parting statement from one who has played under you, admired you, and profited by your tutelage, may I say—Good luck and may your next deal not be so raw.

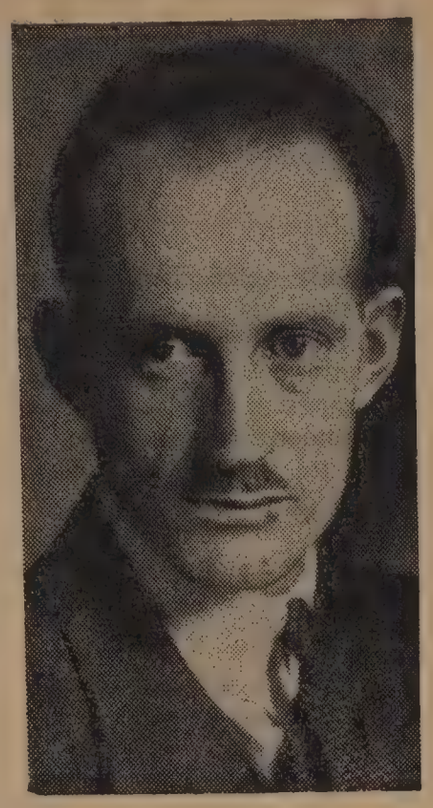
U. V. M. Graduate Wins $1000 Pulitzer Reporting Prize

S. Burton Heath '36 Former Cynic Editor, Assoc. Ariel Editor

S. Burton Heath, U. V. M. '26, awarded the $1,000 Pulitzer prize for outstanding reporter's work—specifically his exclusive articles which led to the exposure of former U. S. Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton, who was eventually sent up for accepting bribes, is a former editor of the CYNIC.

It is very interesting to note what his fellow students thought of him in his college days. "Burt," as he was known, entered U. V. M. at an older age than the average student, having edited the Groton Times after graduating from Bradford, Vt., High School and fighting in the first World War before enrolling at the University. He was neither a letter man nor elected to Phi Beta Kappa, but he was looked up to and highly respected for his diligent work. While on the CYNIC he served as reporter, news editor and finally editor-in-chief. His editorials showed careful thought and covered a wide field of subject matter. It was Burton Heath who first dreamed of having a bi-weekly edition of the CYNIC; the editor who followed him put it into action. It was Burton Heath who instigated the changing of the CYNIC staff immediately following mid-year exams, so that the seniors on the paper could be relieved for half of their last year and so the new members could gain from the more experienced before the latter's graduation in June. It was Burton Heath who was chosen from the student body to represent the college at the Student Conference on the World Court held at Princeton. He was a member of the varsity debating squad.

Conducts Student Poll



An interesting high light in one of Burton Heath's publications was a poll asking the students if they favored America entering the World Court. There was a unanimous assental. At the same poll the political affiliations of the campus were brought out. Of those participating, there were 72 Republicans, 13 Democrats, 18 non-partisans, 1 Socialist and 1 Progressive. One campus cut-up gave his party as "Sinn Fein" and sex as Irish.

On Heath's retirement from the CYNIC board, the paper made this comment: ". . . . CYNIC has had the benefit of a man with a comparatively large background of newspaper experience."

Ariel Grind

The following was said of him in the Ariel, of which he was associate editor: "At exactly 8.14 a.m. daily except Sunday a strange figure may be seen crossing the south end of the campus . . . . our Burton surmounted by a Key and Serpent hat, following the unerring lead of his pipe, and trailing behind him enormous clouds of smoke. Burton is a man who runs by a stop watch. He can always, and does frequently, tell you exactly what he is going to be doing every hour during the next week. And there is plenty to tell, for this man is one of those who keep our complex college activities going, and there is reason to believe that some of them, including this publication, would fare but poorly without his assistance." He was enrolled in the literary-scientific course.

Former Cynic Editor

While in college he was a member of Sigma Alpha Chi, being one of the founders of S A E at this college; a member of Key and Serpent, Tau Kappa Alpha and Pi Delta Rho; he was on the debating team for the full four years; editor-in-chief of the CYNIC and associate editor of the Ariel; was on Junior Week and Kake Walk Committees; and had an honor scholarship.

Fraternity house presidents at Oregon State College recently voted overwhelmingly to continue the current ban on corsages at their formal dances.

THIS WEEK AT SOUTHWICK

Friday, May 17, a dancing party will be held. All those who have ever attended dancing classes during the past two years are cordially invited. It will be a semi-formal affair—long dresses for the girls and business suits for the boys. There will be a charge of twenty-five cents per person to cover the expenses of the party. Everyone is requested to come stag.

Two-Day Inspection Of R.O.T.C. Ends With Dress Parade

Delta Psi Wins Cup; Sigma Phi Is Second; Individual Awards Made

The annual R. O. T. C. inspection was initiated by a battalion review held on the back campus Wednesday morning at 8.30 with Col. William A. Smith making the inspection. However, the review was rained out and the R. O. T. C. and onlookers adjourned to the cage of the gymnasium. After a full day of theoretical and practical tests in military science, events were climaxed by an evening program of competitive drills and presentation of awards held in the cage.

The evening program opened with the formation of the battalion, Cadet Major R. M. Story, Jr., '40 in command. After the playing of the national anthem by the R. O. T. C. Band, Col. Merrill E. Spaulding gave an address of welcome. A competition of drilling was held between a freshman and a sophomore drill team. Members of Champlain Sabres Society conducted the competition. The sophomores won out six to one in the end. A. A. Duque, Jr., '43, of Panama City, Panama, was the winner of the freshman drill cup, and R. D. Thayer '42 of the sophomore drill cup.

The competition of the fraternity squad drills received the enthusiastic attention of the audience, seven fraternities participating. The judges were Lieut. Robert E. McCabe, 3rd Cavalry, U. S. A.; Lieut. Tracy B. Harrington, 3rd Cavalry, U. S. A.; and Lieut. William A. Sussmann, 3rd Cavalry, U. S. A.

Band Presents Clever Drill

The R. O. T. C. Band presented a clever drilling formation and made a fine appearance in their band uniforms. Between events on the program the band played a number of selections and one in particular, "On the Mall," in which the band members sing and whistle, was received enthusiastically by the audience. "Joe" Lechnyr led the band with his usual skill.

A demonstration drill of volunteer freshmen was another clever presentation. The boys making up this drill section were honored by being presented Fourragère. They included the following freshmen: G. F. Daly, J. P. Goss, C. F. Bicoules, J. S. Noble, J. R. Landry, H. C. Tatro, R. F. Darling, J. W. Williams, J. W. Niemi, R. W. Soule, H. E. Howe, M. W. Kenfield, A. N. Chamberlain, D. Marshall, A. T. Editors Awarded U.V.M. Scholarships

"Dial" and "Greenhorn" Are Best Publications

Six schools have been awarded editorial scholarships at the University of Vermont on the basis of the work done by their school publications.

The two winners among the larger schools of the State, taking a scholarship of $175 each, are The Dial of Brattleboro High School in the literary class and The Green Horn of Springfield High School in the newspaper class. Both publications have previously taken scholarships, The Dial being a notable winner of long standing.

Breaking into the winning group this year is the Skool Nooz of Randolph High School, taking a $150 scholarship for the best publication, irrespective of kind, from the medium-sized schools of the State. The Nooz is a literary publication.

The Mirror of Wilmington High School, another literary publication, repeated its triumph of last year by taking the $125 scholarship for the best small school publication of the State, irrespective of kind. The Mirror, with its attractive format and good literary content, has several times captured a scholarship.

A $100 scholarship is given annually to the paper which is distinguished by some outstanding feature. The judges awarded the scholarship this year, as last year, to the Campus Yankee of Canaan High School for the ingenuity and attractiveness of its news, literary and advertising display.

To the Tri-High, a combine literary magazine published by Benson, Orwell and Shoreham High Schools, goes the scholarship of $100 for the periodical showing the most improvement. The publication is also distinctive in being the only combination publication in the State.

The scholarships go to the editor-in-chief of the respective publications. If the editor-in-chief does not wish to use the scholarship it may go to the business manager. Otherwise, it is awarded to some outstanding member of the staff, preferably a senior.

The judges in the contest were Prof. Phillips D. Carleton, Prof. Elliott T. Merrick and Prof. Leon W. Dean, all of the English department of the University.

Prof. L. M. Prindle Attends Conference

Prof. L. M. Prindle of the Latin and Greek department represented U. V. M. at the annual meeting of the Managing Committee of the American School of Classical Studies at Athens. The conference was held Saturday at Columbia University in New York City and was attended by many prominent professors of the classical languages. The purpose of the conference was to determine the policy of the school for the next year.

Theta Alumnae Visit

Barbara Sussdorff Lawton '38 and Martha Rist '38 visited at the Theta House last Monday night. Both girls will be in the city for the next few days. Martha Rist has accepted a position as assistant home economics instructor at Burlington Junior High School next fall.

All-Sports Banquet Held at Southwick; Ends W.A.A. Season

New Membership System Announced; Members Of Teams Rewarded

The W. A. A. all-sports banquet held at Southwick, Tuesday evening, May 14, at 6.00 o'clock, brought to a close the activities for this year. With approximately 150 girls present this was one of the largest and most successful banquets ever to be held in W. A. A. history.

At the head table the physical education directors, the new council and guests sat, and Mrs. Evans, who has taken great interest and been very helpful with the swimming at the Y, was present. After the dinner was served under the capable direction of Miss Nichols and Hester Carver '41, Joanna Metcalf '42, the toastmistress, welcomed the girls and gave a very clever review of the sports activities during the year. Charlotte Hall '40 presented the new point system, a topic which has been in constant discussion this past year, and outlined the rules as follows:

a. Discontinuation of the present point system.

b. W. A. A. activities are to be run on a club basis.

c. Eligibility to membership in W. A. A. based on one season's participation in club activities, either by attendance at three-fourths of the regular meetings or membership on an honorary varsity squad.

d. Emphasis is on participation in club activities rather than the number of hours of exercise which is recorded.

All-Sports Club

The highest award is election to the All-Sports Club. The Green and Gold competition will be held as usual next year under the leadership of Phyllis Savage and Janet Dike.

Elizabeth Gurney '41, new president of W. A. A., gave out the following awards:

1. Interzone basketball cup to Town Team No. 2, whose manager is Kay Holden '42. Runner-up for the cup was Robinson Hall, with Catherine Peterson '42 as manager.

2. Interzone badminton cup to Allen House, won by Jean Stewart '41 and Doris Kinsley '40.

Staff And Sandal Will Present "Endymion"

Annual Lilac Day Festivities To Take Place at Southwick

The annual Lilac Day dance drama, held in memory of Dean Wasson, will take place at Southwick, Saturday night, May 18, at 8.15. The colorful and beautiful affair is sponsored by Staff and Sandal, the junior women's honor society.

The dance drama this year is an adaptation of Keats' beautiful poem, "Endymion." The drama form was made at Wellesley College by Miss Dorothy C. Kornhauser, who instructs dancing at Dana Hall, and the girls here in the U. V. M. Dance Workshop have created routines under the direction of Miss Rosemary Hazard of the physical education department, to picture this theme taken from Greek mythology. Miss Sullivan of the English department has arranged selections from Keats' "Endymion" to be read throughout the presentation by Barbara Butterfield '42. The University orchestra, conducted by Prof. William G. Kirby, will furnish the music.

Charming Mytology

The story of "Endymion" is one of the most charming of classical mythology. A shepherd boy falls in love with Diana, goddess of the moon. Their happiness arouses the jealousy of Venus, who brings Endymion in chains before the gods. The gods condemn him for having dared to love a goddess and force him to choose between the punishment of death or eternal sleep. Diana's pleas fail to bring about his release. Endymion chooses sleep. As the years pass, Diana comes to him at night, and she and her maidens mourn his sleeping.

The principal parts of the drama are played by Jean Finney '41, who portrays Endymion; Jean Harshbarger '40, Diana; Betty Millington '40, Venus; Abbie Fritchie '43, the priest; June Swanson '42, a shepherd boy; Harriet Nelson '42, Diana's shadow; Jane Lyons '41, death; and Phyllis Lake '42, sleep.

Shepherds: Elisabeth Kulka '43, Patricia Pike '43, Marjorie Abell '43, Joyce Bone '43, Margaret Wishart '43, Marguerite Benoit '43, Elizabeth Linn '42, Mary Lyle '43, Anne Olmsted '42, Marion Stoughton '43.

Nymphs: Hortense Leduc '43, Margaret Charles '43, Claire LaFray '43, Mignon Warner '43, Alma Levens '43, Lois Douglass '43, Helen McLean '43, Morna Lang '43, Agatha Keelan '43 and Elizabeth Deming '43.

Exchange Editor Leads Busy Life

In order to keep in contact with the colleges and universities all over the United States and to know of all the interesting and exciting happenings and events so like our own which are going on in other educational institutions, the CYNIC has on its staff an exchange editor. The exchange editor has an interesting as well as a hard job; she communicates with other colleges from all sides of the Union and receives a surprising amount of news and eventful letters.

In the Billings Library there is a special table reserved for papers which are traded and exchanged with all the colleges, universities, junior colleges and high schools on our list, which numbers more than fifty. These papers are up to date, some bi-weekly, weekly and some daily, for instance, the paper from the University of Southern California, and no paper is dated farther back than the preceding week. These are for the benefit of the students and faculty alike.

Not only are the papers exchanged and placed in our student library for special use, but also excerpts are taken directly from these papers of some interesting notations and put in our own CYNIC, so that those who either do not know of the special table or who are too busy to use it may also be up on intercollegiate news of the present via exchange editors.

V. C. A. to Hold Annual Banquet

Partridge; historian, L. M. Jones '43; and treasurer, S. R. Pike, Jr., '42.

The V. C. A. renders a number of services to the college. Its members carry on deputation programs, conduct Saturday night entertainments, prepare the Freshman Handbook in cooperation with the Y. W. C. A., take charge of and make plans for Freshman Camp, and handle rooming and employment for men.

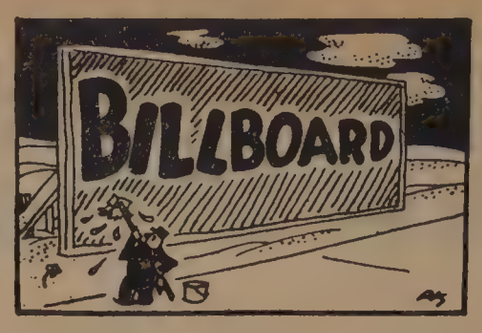
Finals Are Coming!

"American college students are different from all other people on this planet; they are the only people who try to get as little as possible for their money. They will spend the most valuable years of their lives, thousands of dollars of their parents' money and some of their own if they can get any, in trying to derive as little as possible out of their college courses, provided only that they will receive their coveted diploma at the end of four years of such efforts." These are the observations of Edwin F. Carpenter of the University of Alabama. They are something to think about at this time of year when all of us are faced with the big task of once again taking three-hour examinations on what we have or have not learned the past semester.

College finals are so comprehensive that they demand a great deal of conscientious study. Students who have not done their work day by day throughout the past semester will undoubtedly "meet their Waterloo" in the approaching exams unless they exert a lot of actual effort. Experts tell us that the best way to prepare for exams is to make outlines covering the course material. Once an outline has been well grasped, the subject matter should be gone over again carefully so that the details may be learned.

No person, of course, can tell a man how to study best. He can only point out certain methods that students have used for centuries. We feel that every student must work out the best way that he knows of learning the facts of a subject.

The sins of cramming have many times been repeated but they still are disastrous. A student who sits up all night before an exam is handicapped before he starts, for, by the time that he has to take his exam his brain will be so tired that it will not remember all the mass of details he has so painfully put into it.



Examinations are unavoidable so we all should "buckle down" and do our very best to warrant all the time, as well as the money, that we have spent this past semester in attending and preparing for our classes. Let's HIT those exams with a bang!

Keats' "Endymion"

Over sixty of the University women have for many weeks been making extensive preparations for this year's Lilac Day observance in honor of Vermont's first Dean of Women, Pearl Wasson. This year, a dance drama based on Keats' poem Endymion will be presented. The music for the drama was written by a rising young student of modern dance, Dorothy Kornhauser, of the Dana Hall School of Dance. Our University's own dance director, Rosemary Hazard has arranged some striking modern dances for the drama.

Lilac Day is a tradition at Vermont which becomes more impressive each year. This year's pageant has required much planning and is expected to be an unusual and beautiful performance. The pageant is being presented not only for the women of the college but for all the students and friends of the University.

Such an observance is not peculiar to our campus but is found on many campuses throughout the country. At Mount Holyoke the women annually observe a May Day which has gained fame for its beauty and its significance. Lilac Day is not merely a superficial dancing recital but an attempt on the part of the women of Vermont to portray the high ideals of college womanhood which were first exemplified to Vermont women by Pearl Wasson in whose memory Lilac Day is held.

Queen and Her Court

The program will begin with the procession of the Lilac Day Queen, whose identity is still unknown, and which will be kept a mysterious secret until that time, and her attendants to the throne. The lovely queen's court will be composed of girls in next year's honorary societies, Sophomore Aides, Staff and Sandal, and Mortar Board.

Staff and Sandal has sponsored this program, and Mary Letta Root '41 has been in charge of the arrangements. The procession has been directed by Mrs. H. Bickford and Laura Hawley '41. Dorothy Emerson is head of the costume committee. More work has been put on them than ever before and they promise to be very unique. Several have been loaned to the girls by Dana Hall of Wellesley. Marjorie Southworth '43 will be the vocal soloist and G. Robert McKee '42 will be the accompanist.

An admission of twenty-five cents will be charged because of the large expense involved in this year's presentation.

Important Awards

1. The Green and Gold competition. Last year the competition was won by the Golds, but the honors this year were captured by the Greens, with a score of 25-17. Next year the green candle will rest in the candlestick.

2. Miss Cummings made a very special announcement. Recognition was given to the two students who, during the entire year, showed the greatest progress in sports and dancing. This is the first year this type of recognition has been given.

Marjorie Carbino '43 had had no archery before she came to college. In the fall she made the honorary varsity with one of the highest scores. In the indoor season she was chosen to shoot as a member of the U. V. M. archery team and in the three weeks' competition had the highest total score of the team. This spring, although she came out as an extra activity, she had the highest average of all those taking archery, and her score was consistent by 10-15 points higher than her competitors.

Jean Finney '41 showed the greatest progress in the dance this year. Her interest, cooperation, regular participation and improvement have been rewarded as she is playing one of the leading rôles in the Lilac Day dance drama.

3. The highest award of W. A. A. is the election into the Vermont All-Sports Club. The present members are Mary Howe, Eleanor Bayley and Gerry Waldo. The honorary members are Miss Cummings, Miss Janice Carkin (who first conceived of this idea), Miss Hazard and Miss Crowe. The bases for eligibility are: Sportsmanship, leadership, cooperation, service to U. V. M. sports, interest and active participation in W. A. A. activities while in college. This year the club has been making its constitution and with the new system of W. A. A. awards have been considering the recommended requirements for "active participation," which would probably include membership in:

a. 3 team sports clubs,

b. 4 individual sports clubs,

c. 2 honorary varsities (in 2 different sports).

The club is proud to have the following girls as members: Elizabeth Gurney '41, new W. A. A. president; Laura Hawley '41, Elizabeth Doton '41, Dawn Nichols '41 and Barbara Gallagher '42.

Eleanor Bayley presented W. A. A. emblems to the girls and to Miss Cummings and Miss Hazard. The new members will receive their green V pins very soon.

Gifts were presented to Mary Howe, retiring W. A. A. president, and Miss Hazard, who is leaving U. V. M. this year, as small tokens of appreciation for all they've done this past year. Mary has led the W. A. A. program through one of its most successful and progressive years, as can be shown by the installation of a new point system, several new entertainments, and a noticeable increase in the membership of W. A. A. Miss Hazard, who has spent two years in the

Undefeated Track Team Leaving For Worcester

Will Participate in Intercollegiate Meet

Tomorrow the undefeated cohorts of Coach Archie Post will take part in the E. I. C. A. A. meet at Worcester, Mass. Victors in their previous meets, the Catamounts will meet their stiffest competition of the year at this annual New England track get-together. Coach Post is counting on his running stars for victory.

Capt. Gordie Smith is Vermont's outstanding entry. He has been consistently decreasing his time in the 100- and 220-yard dashes. Last week he set a new state record in the former event. Running the final races of his college track career tomorrow, Smith will probably come through with a win for Vermont.

Charlie Webster, diminutive miler, will have a chance to show what he can do under the strain of stiff opposition. Unbeaten since his entry to the University Webster has been a consistent point garnerer for the varsity this year. Fred Webster, his brother, has a good chance to win in the two-mile event. He has yet to taste defeat this year.

In the middle distances, Stowell, a senior, looks like a winner in the 880. So far this year he has been a consistent winner in both the 440- and 880-yard runs. It is likely that at Worcester he will run only in his specialty.

In the field events there is not such an abundance of individual stars but some of the Catamounts should be able to muster additional points to bolster the runners' scores. Hunter proved himself capable of a 5 foot 11¼ inch jump in the first test against Union. Davis has vaulted 11 feet and placed in this event at last year's E. I. C. A. A. meet. Becker may possibly place in the broad or high jump. In the weights Johnstone is Vermont's best bet. Akley if he can be excused from baseball is a potential winner in the discus throw.

All in all Archie Post will field a well-balanced team for intercollegiate competition, studded with individual stars. This outfit may hope to gain many points through first or second places.

Frosh Leave for Triangular Meet

Will Compete Against Lyndon, at St. Johnsbury

Hoping to duplicate their recent victory over Bellows Falls and Springfield High School, the University of Vermont freshman track team travels to Lyndon Center to engage Lyndon Institute and St. Johnsbury Academy in a triangular meet. Twenty-three men will make the trip.

Approximately the same line-up will be utilized by Coach Roy Wietz that showed so well in the last meet. Held to a maximum entry of three men per event, Coach Wietz intends to enter but two men in the 100, 220, and low hurdles while filling his quota in the remaining events.

In the 100, Milne and Parker will start with Mott possibly substituting. So far, Mott is alone in the 220. The high hurdles will be taken care of by Mott, Goss, and White, while Mott and Little fill in the low hurdles.

The 440, a weak spot, is to have Nestler, Grosvenor and White. Zwick, Crown and Williams are to be entered in the half-mile run while Harrington, Buttles, and St. Mary will run the mile.

The field events have Earley, Wood and Vreeland in the pole vault; Mott, Grosvenor, Goss and Wood as an alternate in the high jump; Parker, Otto and Caccavo in the shot-put; Parker and Otto in the discus; Mott, Cozzolino, and Goss in the broad jump; Buttles, Swift, and Elliott in the javelin.

If Mott can come through with his customary five first places and Parker duplicates his three of last week, an excellent start will be had by the squad. Otto, out for a good deal of the season, is all right now. O'Connell, however, was spiked in the last meet and therefore will not be in condition to compete Saturday.

St. Johnsbury defeated Lyndon Institute earlier in the year. Competing for St. Johnsbury, in the hurdles, pole vault, and high jump, is Lavine, who no doubt, will offer tough competition.

Since the meet is a triangular affair, more chance is offered to the Frosh to win.

G.M.J.C. Edges Out Kitten Team 12-10

Three Overtimes Break Deadlock

The Frosh baseballers went down to a 12-10 defeat in extra innings at the hands of Green Mountain Junior College. This was the second time this season that the Greenies tagged the Kittens.

The Junior College boys opened up the first inning with a four run burst and added another in the third. In their half of the third, the Kittens tallied five runs to tie the score. The Greenies then collected five runs in the eighth to resume the lead. In the eighth, Vermont pushed two runs across the plate, and in the ninth Dick Lincoln tripled with two aboard and two out to knot up the count at 10 all.

It was not until the third overtime inning that the Poultney boys pushed over two runs on a walk, two singles, and a three-base error.

Art Fairbanks, Blanchard, and Hall chucked them in for Green Mountain with Fairbanks getting credit for the Greenies' seventh straight win. Bush was the catcher.

For the Evans charges Krupp went the route with the exception of the last batter to whom Hamilton pitched. Errors, eight in all, on the part of his teammates let Krupp down. Lincoln did the receiving.

Catamount Nine Trounces Cadets In 12-5 Victory

Wood Paces Vermont To Victory in Game At Sabine Field

Returning to the line-up for the first time in a week following recovery from an injury, third baseman Hazen Wood hit a homer, a triple and two singles to pace Vermont to a 12 to 5 victory over Norwich on Sabine Field last Tuesday.

Land on Jackson

Leading by only one run, 6 to 5, as the ninth inning opened, the visitors landed hard on the offerings of pitcher Ed Jackson in this final frame, scoring six times on two singles, two doubles and a home run. The losing Cadets had looked dangerous in the eighth when they made three runs and missed tying the count by one.

Wood's Triple Starts It

It was Wood's triple in the first inning that gave Vermont two runs, his homer in the third that brought two more and finally his two singles in the ninth that started and ended the big Catamount rally with its victory—clinching six runs.

The Fateful Ninth

First to bat in the ninth, Wood singled. He was out at second on Maley's bunt, but the latter made first. Then Dick Healy poled a home run clear above the stands between center and right fields, driving Maley across ahead of him. Corbett was hit by a pitched ball, and pitcher Hart brought him home with a double. Spasyk reached first on an outfield error, with Hart scoring. Broutsas fanned to make it two outs, but Sysko doubled and brought home Spasyk. Taylor went to first after being hit by a pitched ball. With two men on the sacks, Wood came to bat for the second time in the same inning. Again he singled and scored Sysko. Maley, the eleventh batter, was the third out with a fly to left field.

Sports Cast

By the CO-EDITORS

Under the Wire

This is the Sports Cast that almost didn't get written. What with Federal Inspection and hour exams we woke up to the fact that a little editorial comment was due from us almost too late. But we did sneak in under the wire and here we are. (Don't ask "why.")

About the Easterns

Having dispensed with our introductio let us proceed to the main body of this tardy disquisition. Big event this week in sports is the varsity track squad's participation in the E. I. C. A. A. meet at Worcester. Archie will probably take along a good-sized squad to meet the fast steppers of New England. Big point in question—Charlie Webster's performance in the mile event. Ever since his entry to the University he has been winning races. Saturday will be the stiffest test of his track career. He will be running against some pretty slick distance men. Will he be able to come through? This department is banking on him to show his full strength on Saturday. We're pulling for him to come through.

Last Appearance

Another Vermont hope is Gordie Smith. His recent record-breaking performance in the hundred at Middlebury marks him as one of the best if not the best sprinter ever to appear at Vermont. The E. I. C. A. A. meet will be Gordie's last appearance for the Green and Gold. We can't help feeling that he's due for a great performance. As for the team taking the games that seems rather doubtful. Although the Cats have won all their matches it was by considerably narrow margins. The stiffer competition at the meet will probably make a Vermont victory impossible but that they will place high up we have no doubt.

The Frosh also wind up their track season Saturday with a triangular meet against St. Johnsbury Academy and Lyndon Institute. Last year the Frosh lost this one. This year if Mott and Parker come through with firsts the Frosh will probably win easily. It will be interesting to see whether Mott will finish the season with five more firsts. We do feel sorry for Parker—he only made three firsts in the last meet. How in the world is anyone to make headlines with Mott around.

Diamond Dust

It's going to be a big let-down if the baseball team fails to take the state title this year. With St. Michael's the only other contender the Cats have a good opportunity. Those Winooski boys are plenty hot and if we remember rightly they took the basketball crown just a few months back. We've got our fingers crossed. Today the Cats meet Wesleyan before a two game celebration with St. Michael's.

As for the Frosh it seems that they can't get going—they certainly make a lot of runs but the other teams seem to make more. But we're willing to be surprised. Any time the Frosh win a game we'll be all for it.

For Lack of Writing Surface

Victor Hugo, they say, once finished the last word of a novel he was writing with the last drop of ink in the bottle. Well we aren't quite that bad off—we've got about five drops left but this is our last sheet of paper —so we'll be seeing you.

Interfraternity Softball Approaches Finals

Saturday will see the finish of the 1939-40 intramural calendar. On that day, the last game in softball will be played. Kappa Sigma will oppose the winner of the Alpha Tau Omega, Delta Psi game which was played Thursday. The game is scheduled for 1.30.

The horseshoe tournament has been postponed until next fall.

Frosh Netsters Tie B. F. A., 3-3

Last Tuesday the Frosh racquet wielders journeyed to St. Albans where they tied the Bellows Free Academy team with a 3-all score.

In the singles Swift (V) went down to defeat at the hands of little "Ham" Livingston in straight sets, 6-1, 6-3; "Bill" Towne (V) took Gay in stride, 6-3, 7-5; West (V) was extended to three sets in defeating Costes 6-4, 4-6, 6-3; while Sutton (V) lost to McGarry 5-7, 6-2, 6-3.

The doubles saw Livingston and McGarry (B. F. A.) best Swift and West in the longest match of the afternoon 7-9, 6-3, 7-5; followed by Towne and Sutton (V) winding up the match by taking Costes and Gay 6-4, 6-2.

Tomorrow (Saturday) the Freshmen will travel to Poultney and meet Green Mountain Junior College in a return engagement. In the previous encounter the two teams battled to a tie and Coach Paul Rand plans a change in the line-up in an effort to strengthen the team.

On Monday the B. F. A. squad will come here for the final match of the Frosh season.

Louisiana State University authorities recently had to publish the names of thirty-five students who had neglected to collect wages due them for NYA work.

Tennis Team Yields To Colgate Group

Strong Team Downs Vermont Completely

The University of Vermont tennis team lengthened its losing streak last Tuesday by succumbing to Colgate 9 to 0 on the campus courts. The victors won 18 of the 19 sets, J. E. Simpson '41 winning the first set in his match before losing to Adams of Colgate 3-6, 6-3, 6-1. The Colgate netsters presented a well-balanced array whose outstanding performer was Gene Bowler No. 1 who had little difficulty in disposing of Capt. G. B. Booth '40 6-0, 6-4. In his victory Bowler exhibited a faultless backhand and an exceptionally strong second serve which continually kept Booth back on his heels. In the other singles matches Borkhuis (C) downed A. D. Wolk '41 (V) 6-4, 6-0; Andrews (C) eeked out a close victory over S. J. Foti '42 (V) 6-4, 6-3; Barrett (C) pommelled A. D. Clark '40 6-0, 6-0 and Miller (C) defeated L. F. Pine '41 (V) 6-2, 6-4.

In the doubles the Maroon humbled the Catamounts with ease except in one match in which Borkhuis and Barrett (C) were extended to defeat Booth and Wolk (V) 6-4, 10-8. In the remaining doubles Reid and Andrews (C) snatched victory from Simpson and Foti (V) 6-1, 6-1, followed by Adams teamed with Miller besting Clark and Pine 6-2, 6-2, to complete the rout.

Sergeant Conner Concludes 19 Years Of Service at U.V.M.

Receives Ovation And Testimonial for Distinguished Service

"The heathen in his blindness bows down to wood and stone,
He don't obey no orders unless they is his own,
The heathen in his blindness must end where he began,
But the back bone of the army is the non-commissioned man."

For the past nineteen years the students of the University of Vermont have made one step in upward progress under Master Sergeant Raymond T. Conner. Sergeant Conner is retiring from active service in the army after more than thirty years of service. If the sergeant could help it, no one escaped to acquire some perception of how to take an order, and many progressed to the stage where they could give them.

The feeling held for Sergeant Conner was evidenced by the testimonial given him on Wednesday night at the military ceremonies by those under whom he served. A signed testimonial encased in leather and embossed in gold and colors was presented in acknowledgement of his long and distinguished service. President Bailey has been here during the entire period of his service and his signature tops the list of those signing the testimonial. The officers of the army signing it have been the successive professors of military science and tactics for the entire period. Between three and four thousand students, not mentioning the women's rifle team which Sergeant Conner instructed for many years, have passed under his tutelage.

Col. George J. Holden, U. S. Army, retired, University of Vermont 1899 and now a resident of Burlington and professor of military science and tactics for 1919 to 1927, claims the distinction of having found Sergeant Conner, then a corporal in the ranks of the cavalrymen and of having placed his services to the benefit of the University. The testimonial is also signed by Colonel Holden.

The testimonial reads as follows:

Whereas, Raymond Thomas Conner, Master Sergeant, United States Army, is retiring from active service after more than thirty years' service, and whereas, for nineteen years he has served as Instructor of Military Science and Tactics in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at the University of Vermont, and whereas, his service has been distinguished by professional military interest, by untiring energy in daily work, by consistent effort in developing the character and manly qualities of those he taught, and above all by loyalty to those in authority; Therefore be it Resolved, That we, the President of the University of Vermont and the successive military Commanding Officers for the entire period of nineteen years, as a token of our esteem and appreciation do hereby tender to Sergeant Raymond Thomas Conner this token with best wishes for his future happiness and with confidence that to us and to others his soldierly qualities will continue to be an example and an inspiration.

The testimonial is signed by President Bailey; F. W. Rowell, Major General, U. S. Army; George J. Holden, Colonel, U. S. Army, retired; Frederick F. Black, Colonel, U. S. Army; and Merrill E. Spaulding, Colonel, U. S. Army.

Eisenwinter Wins Speaking Contest

The annual Kingsley speaking contest was held in the Fleming Museum on Tuesday evening, May 14. Professor Powers coached and directed the participants, who may be freshman or sophomore men. They select their own piece of oratorical prose and must memorize it for the contest.

First prize of $25 went to Philip Eisenwinter, who spoke Daniel Webster's "On the Eloquence of John Adams." Samuel Levine won the second prize of $15 with Stamford Clinton's "Ropes," and Abraham Swartz won third prize of $10 with John M. Thurston's "Plea for Cuba." Other contestants were Daan Zwick, who gave Lincoln's first inaugural address, and Allen Jones, who chose Harold D. Schaft's "The College Man's Creed."

Company F Most Proficient

Company F, under the command of Cadet H. V. Middleworth '40, received the American Legion plaque for being the company most proficient in neatness, military bearing and drill. Lieutenant Colonel Wakefield made the award.

Tribute was paid to Master Sergeant Raymond T. Conner, who has retired after nineteen years of meritorious service in the military department in U. V. M. A testimonial was given him encased in leather, embossed in gold and colors and signed by those under whom he served. Everyone rose in tribute to Sergeant Conner while the award was made, and applauding and cheering filled the cage for the sergeant.

As a climax to the evening, the Reserve Officers' cup was presented to Delta Psi fraternity. Delta Psi also won the cup in 1937. Sigma Phi placed second in this event. Capt. Raymond L. Flint, state president, R. O. A., awarded the cup to the winners and the individual members of Delta Psi's drill team received green ribbons with a gold metal "V." The Sigma Phi's were given plain green ribbons, and all the other members of the fraternities competing in the drill silver stripe ribbons. The program closed with the dismissal of the colors.

On Thursday morning a battalion parade was held on the back campus at 11.40 which closed another successful military inspection at U. V. M.

300 Witness "Endymion"; Mim Guttormsen, Queen

Keat's Endymion is Pageant Theme; Pageant Queen is a New Feature

JEAN HARSHBARGER '40

MILDRED GUTTORMSEN '40

Lilac Day, which was presented Saturday night in the Gym at Southwick in memory of Dean Wasson, was one of the most beautiful programs ever presented on this campus.

The surprise theme, the procession of the unknown queen and her court, began at 8 o'clock. The secret queen was lovely Mildred Guttormsen, '40 dressed in a long white gown with a flowing lavender cape over it and a halo of deep purple flowers on her head. She carried forsythia as did all her court. Her attendants were Avis Cobb '40, Mary DeYoe '42, Mildred Creamer '41 and Irene Beattie '43. The procession was formed by honor society girls, dressed in pastel shades, carrying bouquets of forsythia. They were Mary Howe, Betsey Marlowe, Betty Myers, Mary Nelson, Jean Butler, Florence Wade (class of '40); Maywood Metcalf, Jeannette Whipple (class of '41); Miriam Fiske, Joanna Metcalf, Louise Davis, Frances Abel, Jane Judd, Nancy Goodwin, Judith Perry (class of '42); and Mary Tuckerman, Lola Hawley, Janet Hackwell, Joyce Gilman, Mary Germain, Janet Dike, and Jane Burns (class of '43).

Excellent Dancing

The dance interpretations for Keats' "Endymion" were given at one end of the hall, where there were placed small fir trees and a white altar as a background. Preceding each routine, there was a small tableau around the speaker, Barbara Butterfield '42, who gave selections arranged from Keats' "Endymion" by Miss Sullivan of the English Department. These selections gave an outline of the story of Endymion, played by Jean Finney '41 and his love affair with Diana, the moon goddess, played by Jean Harshbarger '40. Betty Millington '40 filled the part of jealous Venus, and Abbie Fritche '43 the high priest. The many nymphs, gods, maidens and shepherds were girls of modern dancing gym classes. The lighting effect was most unusual, and gave the charming interpretations a smooth finishing touch.

Sponsored by Staff and Sandal

Staff and Sandal, junior women's honorary society, sponsored the affair, which showed a great deal of work and interest, both on the part of the girls who were in charge, and their advisors, Miss Simpson, Mrs. Bickford and Miss Hazard, who directed the dance routines. Mary Letta Root '40 was chairman and Dorothy Emerson '41 had charge of the costumes, which were very fine. Laura Hawley '41 directed arrangements for the queen and her court, and Louise Mann '41 for the ushers. Mr. Turnbull at Southwick was an unestimable help with the scenery and ingenious lighting, and Robert McKee '42, the accompanist, spent many hours on arranging music for the drama. Staff and Sandall wishes to thank all the people who made this Lilac Day such a success.

Prof. Clara Wheeler To Leave U. V. M.

Teaches Education For Fifteen Years

After fifteen years of excellent service to the Department of Education in the University of Vermont, Prof. Clara M. Wheeler is preparing to retire at the end the present college year. It is indeed remarkable to note that more than 500 of Vermont's elementary school teachers have done their student teaching under her fine direction. Besides having charge of the observation and student teaching, she has also given numerous courses in the techniques of teaching.

Not only was Professor Wheeler well fitted for her position because of her fine personal qualities and understanding, but also because of her rich educational experience. She is a graduate of the State Normal School at Bridgewater, Mass., and holds the degrees, Bachelor of Science in education and Master of Arts in normal school supervision from Teachers College, Columbia University.

Taught In Twelve Schools

Miss Wheeler has also had unusually wide teaching experience. It includes seven years in the elementary schools of Massachusetts and New Hampshire, three years as critic teacher in the State Normal School at Providence, R. I., three years as critic teacher in the State Normal School at Hyannis, Mass., eleven years as teacher in the Horace Mann School, Columbia University, two years as principal of a private school at Spuyten Duyvil, N. Y., two years as critic teacher in the State Teachers College at Greeley, Colo., four years as critic teacher in the State Teachers College at Flagstaff, Ariz., and fifteen years as supervisor of elementary student teaching at the University of Vermont. She has taught in the summer sessions at the State University at Morgantown, W. Va., at Winthrop College in South Carolina, at Baylor University in Texas, at the Horace Mann School at Columbia University, and at the University of Vermont.

Inspiring Personality

To the many teachers, students, and other associates who have come in contact with her inspiring personality, her retirement will cause sincere regret.

Miss Wheeler says, "I have found working with the teachers and students of the University of Vermont to be a very enjoyable task." When asked if she intended to take a rest after school closed, she replied emphatically, "No indeed. There's plenty of time for rest in the hereafter. There are a great many things that I intend to do, but I am not ready to disclose any of my plans."

The Class Outing will take place on Thursday afternoon, probably at Basin Harbor, although the scene of the picnic is not yet definite.

At 8.45 on Friday morning the senior class will assemble in front of President Bailey's house, where the President will give a short talk. From there the Class Pilgrimage will proceed to the statues of Ira Allen and Lafayette, where the traditional gowning will take place. Middleworth is to give the Campus oration, and Jean Butler will give the Address to the Undergraduates.

In the evening at eight o'clock, the President's Reception is being given at Southwick, to be followed by a gala Senior Prom at nine o'clock. Wayne Barrows and his Catamounts will play. The chaperons will be Professor and Mrs. Carroll, Professor and Mrs. Herreid and Prof. and Mrs. Millington.

Famous U. V. M. Alumnus Announces Essay Contest

Dr. John Dewey Offers Prizes For Best Essays on "Jobs and Freedom"

A national essay contest for college students has been announced by Dr. John Dewey, president of the League for Industrial Democracy, and distinguished American philosopher who graduated from the University of Vermont. The essay subject is to be, "Jobs and Freedom." This is a subject to which college students have given much consideration lately.

"I know of no topic more timely than the one proposed in this essay contest," said Doctor Dewey in making this announcement. "This subject comes home to youth with personal significance; absence of jobs and of the security that goes wtih them has been one great cause of the growth of totalitarian states. Continued denial to the young of the chance to work will tend also in this country to make the young welcome almost any régime that promises them a way out of idleness and demoralization. Undergraduates in our colleges face an actual situation. Many of them have already given thought to the question as to how they and other young people are to have jobs with freedom instead of freedom from jobs or jobs without freedom in a regimented society.

"This contest will call the express attention of others to the subject. The results reached will, I am confident, be a genuine contribution to the solution of a problem urgently presented by existing tragic conditions. Let us hear from the youth of the country!"

Added to this fine inspiration to help in solving the problems of youth, the League offers prizes of $100, $75, and $50. The contest is open to all undergraduates attending colleges in the United States at any time between April 15 and November 1, 1940. Essays must be not less than 3,000 words and not more than 6,000 words in length.

The judges in the contest will be prominent Americans: Willard Atkins, professor of economics, New York University; John Chamberlain, editor, Fortune Magazine; Louis Hacker, lecturer in history, Columbia University; Harry W. Laidler, economist, executive director of the League for Industrial Democracy; and Max Lerner, professor of economics, Williams College.

Friend of Youth

A great loss came to the University of Vermont and to youth throughout the state last week in the death of Professor Kenneth J. Sheldon after a brief illness. Professor Sheldon, who had been an invaluable member of the University faculty since 1929, was known as the "Friend of Vermont Youth." Aptly does this title befit this inspiring leader of boys and young men, many of whom have been inspired, counseled and aided, often financially, by Professor Sheldon in securing a college education.

The Future Farmers Association for Vermont high school boys received its impetus ten years ago when Prof. Sheldon started the society in Vermont. Many delegates from more than thirty chapters in Vermont high schools met this past weekend on our campus for the semi-annual convention of the F. F. A. These young farmers undoubtedly missed a great deal the cheery greetings of their late adviser and inspirational leader.

Dean J. L. Hills of the College of Agriculture in a letter to the editor of the Free Press said of his associate, "His was a worthwhile job. He was at it and never rested. Teacher, supervising principal, deputy commissioner of education and, during the past dozen years, associate professor at the University of Vermont and State supervisor of the agricultural education, his was a full life. During his incumbency of the latter dual position he saw the teaching of vocational agriculture in Vermont high schools increase more than twice in terms of departments and twice thrice in terms of numbers of high school students enrolled in the courses, an increment due largely to his activities."

"Quiet, unassuming, genial, hardworking, with a good word for everybody and hards words for none, Kenneth Sheldon did his job as he saw it and to the best of his ability while his strength lasted. His work on earth is done, but perhaps he has been called to a larger task for which he was ready," is the fine tribute of Editor Crane of the Free Press.

The passing of this unselfish, understanding, and progressive counsellor of youth and men leaves a large gap in the University's faculty which will be felt not only by University students but by scores of men and boys throughout our state. We believe that Dean Hills' tribute to his friend and associate expresses the thoughts of many. He said, "His memory will be cherished in the hearts of his associates who valued his counsel, of his students who admired his teachings, and of the thousand of lads who, through his leadership, have gained inspiration for life's work. They are his monument."

An Excellent Performance!

The audience of nearly three hundred who attended the presentation of Keats' "Endymion" last Saturday evening saw one of the most beautiful and finest pageants ever presented at Vermont. The Queen and her attendants made a very attractive court and the dance drama was so well executed that many were heard to say that their dancing compared very favorably to that of professionals.

The set and the lighting for the performance added much to the effect of the pageant. The costumes and the modern music were also well liked. The entire pageant reflected a great amount of effort on the part of the many women taking part in the performance and also on the part of the faculty women who supervised the presentation.

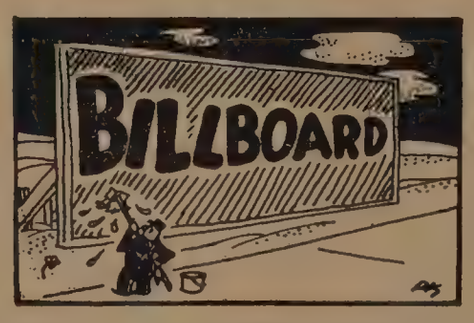
Professor Sheldon Dies Suddenly

Great Loss To Agricultural Students



Kenneth J. Sheldon, associate professor of agricultural education at the University of Vermont, died suddenly at his home last Monday after a brief illness. Professor Sheldon graduated from the University in 1915, receiving a Bachelor of Science degree and since 1929 he has held an important position on the Vermont faculty.

Born in Fair Haven, May 18, 1891, Professor Sheldon graduated from the Fair Haven High School. After attending the University he acted as principal of high schools in Jeffersonville, Orleans and Proctor.

From 1924 to 1927 he was state commissioner of education for the southern part of Vermont. In 1924 the degree of Master of Arts was conferred upon him by the Teachers College, Columbia University. In 1927-28 and 1928-29 he was graduate assistant in the department of education at Yale University, while he was working for his doctorate.

In recent years the late professor has been assistant director of the University's Summer Session in charge of recreational activities. He has also acted as an advisor to the Vermont Association of Future Farmers, of which he was very instrumental in its beginnings. In this work he had been of great service to many boys of the State. He had also been a very active member of the Rural Service Committee of the Parent-Teachers' Association.

Funeral services for Professor Sheldon were held last Wednesday at his home in Fair Haven.

CHOIR MEMBERS—The Choir will sing at a Pre-Memorial Day service, Sunday, May 26, in the Fleming Museum at 4.00 p.m. Members will get their gowns at the Chapel before 4.00 and return them immediately following the service. The Choir may leave directly after their part of the service.

Student Opinion

By JOE BELDEN, Editor

Student Opinion Surveys of America

AUSTIN, Texas, May 21.—With the approach of summer, one of college America's nightmares, final examinations, again makes its appearance. For the first time in a national scientific survey representing all the United States college and university students, opinions are expressed on finals and the grading system. They say:

NO—Final examinations are not a fair test of a student's knowledge in a course.

YES—We'd rather be graded by the usual ABC system than be just passed or failed.

Long a matter of controversy in both undergraduate bull sessions and faculty meetings, the final examination as a gauge of learning gets a low rating from those who have to take it.

They reverse themselves, however, by almost identical percentages, on the matter of grading these examinations or courses as a whole. Some schools have adopted the method of merely approving or disapproving of a student's work. Most collegians, 62 per cent, do not like this system, prefer the old one of a graduated scale with A as top mark.

These are the results of the sampling, based on a carefully-selected cross-section of the nation:

Do you think final examinations are a fair test of a student's knowledge in a course?

Yes	34%
No	53%
Don't know	3%

Would you rather be graded in your courses by the ABC system or just be either passed or failed?

	All Students	Men	Women
ABC System	62%	60%	63%
Passed or failed	36%	37%	33%
Don't know	2%	3%	2%

Introductory Note

It was on an icy night in January 1939 that six girls met in the lounge of Southwick Memorial to discuss the organization of "the Scribes," which was to be a literary society for freshman women. The first flame of its life had been carried to it from a crowded New York High School, which offered to a chosen few a brief respite—an hour a week—when in the dim quiet of the Garretson Memorial Library the Garretson Scribes met and read their manuscript, and criticized those of their friends with remarkable enthusiasm.

Early last fall the survivors of the Vermont Scribes rebelled at the idea of disbanding because they were no longer Freshmen. The meetings kept up. They became an organization for the women of both of the two lower classes. In January of this year a revolution occurred—Scribes became co-educational. A petition for recognition as an organization of the University was duly written, signed, and presented. Scribes is now an informal club for men and women of all four classes, who are interested in writing, discussing, criticizing, or simply listening. There are no restrictions, and new members are welcome at any time. The meetings, since reorganization, often run on for as long as four hours, and the membership has swelled tremendously.

This page is presented by the Scribes, a visual proof of their existence, and the short stories, poetry, and essays which appear on it all come from the Scribblers' pen.

Peter the Strong

(Except where women were concerned)

By JEAN YOUNG

When Pete developed the roll, that one attracted him; a new angle, unique, different, and so was the girl. Looked like a square-shooter, he mused, and wondered who she was, and where and why. It all began with going to college on a shoestring. There were other things besides tuition and board, and there was Sally to complicate matters. She'd been expensive, and then Pete found that a hobby can sometimes reap money returns. Everyone who had pictures to develop sent them over. They got a better job, and a little cheaper, they knew, when they gave Pete the business.

Pete looked at the picture. He'd make an enlargement. Purely experimental, all for art, of course, he explained to his grinning roommate. A faint smile touched her lips and the gray eyes looked deep and far away. Perhaps there was some trace of sadness, something haunting, lovely, even though he could not tell just what.

That night of the spring house dance, he dashed up the stairs two at a time to look at it again. There she was, down there. Yes, the same shaped face, oval with the square stubborn chin. But when he looked over Sally's fluffy blonde head as they danced, those eyes were green and icy. He had lived with it for so long, it was inconceivable that she could be so different. But, of course, you could never tell from a snapshot. Sally was sweet, the way she laughed, and flirted with him when they danced. Made a fellow feel appreciated but Sally was for dancing, nothing more. Books, politics, anything like that was a bore, so they never really talked. It had been easy, with the photo on his desk, to look into the eyes and shaking his book, say, "This is full of beans. Why, if they did it this way—" and soon he would be solving the world problems for her. Pete laughed, a short, harsh laugh. Imagine saying things like that to that ultra-sophisticate. Suddenly he was tired . . . . terribly tired of people, of the whole human race. He'd take Sally home and get some rest. Tomorrow they'd be starting up the trail early. From now on he was off women for life. He was going to be a regular guy with the fellows, a man's man, with a pipe and a shell of self-sufficiency that no woman could

It Pays To Be Honest

By FULVIO BARDOSSI

I've always said that honesty is the best policy, when nothing else works. Also I maintain that a man with brains and culture is noticeable anywhere. Take me for instance. I ain't had no college education, but it ain't hardly noticeable. That's why when I went down to Harvard—but let me tell this from the beginning.

It seems I'm walking down Fifth Avenue one day, giving the uppercrust the once-over. I always likes to promenade between jobs and sort of hunt up new prospects. Anyhow, just as I take my peepers off a gorgeous windowful of ice, who should I lamp but "The Baron" waddling up the street.

"Greetings, my dear fellow," he says in a voice that makes me think of hot molasses. "It gives me great pleasure to greet you. Come, my friend, let us go and pledge anew our friendship in the nectar of the gods."

"If you mean by nectar, a double scotch, and if by pledge you mean the drink's on you, it's O.K. with me." I comes back at him. "Ah, my friend," he purrs, "yours is the brevity of wit, the astonishing faculty for getting at the core of things. Certainly the drinks are on me, as you so quaintly put it."

At which statement my mind registers the thought, "There's something fishy here. 'The Baron' is one of these gladhand boys only when he wants something." All the while we're walking along I'm trying to figger out what that something can be, this time. The last time 'The Baron' bought me a drink we ended up in the cooler.

"Oh well," I says to myself, as we walks into Joe's, "I'll get a couple of drinks out of this anyway." Joe brings us a couple double scotches, and we sit there batting the breeze for a couple of minutes. All of a sudden the Baron says—"How'd you like to make $10,000, Dude?"

For a minute I think the guy is slaphappy. But I look closer and I see the guy is serious.

"Do you feel all right, Baron, I says, sarcastic-like, or shall I call the doctor?"

"Alas, incredulity is writ in every line of thy countenance," says my friend, mournful-like.

"Cut the small talk," I says, "and get to the point sonny boy."

"Patience," says the Baron with silk in his voice, "patience." To begin, you know that Harvard and Yale are having their annual football game Saturday."

"Sure," says I, "and I also know that this is a free country, that pigs don't fly, and that talk is cheap. So what?"

Ignoring my brilliant comeback, the Baron continues: "The Harvard team has a swell quarterback called MacDougall who is a sure All-American. Right?"

"Right," I says.

"Very well. Now my plan is this. Tomorrow morning we go down to Harvard, grab friend MacDougall and hide him away. Then a friend here in New York lays all the dough he can on Harvard to win."

"Wait a minute," I breaks in. "If MacDougall is the best man they got and we kidnap him, the Harvards will be right behind the eight ball. What's the idea of betting on them?"

"This," chuckles the Baron, "is the beauty of my plan. Just before game time we let MacDougall loose and he gets in the game just the same. Meantime, however, the odds will have reached dizzy heights and we will be sitting pretty."

Frankly, I admit, I ain't got a word to say. The whole set-up is too, too beautiful. "Baron," I whispers, "You're a genius. Let's have another drink on you."

That night we hop a sleeper for Cambridge. The Baron's stooge, "Happy" Schultze, is left in New York with instructions to lay the dough on the line for Harvard just as soon as the news of the kidnapping breaks in the papers. Early in the morning we hits Cambridge, and a slower burg I have never seen in all my life. However, as a man of culture, I appreciate the college atmosphere.

After breakfast the Baron says, "Let us then be up and doing." I merely looks at him and says, "What do we do?—move into a classroom with a tommy-gun and yank MacDougall out, or should we seranade him."

"It's all very simple," answers the Baron, when all of a sudden some kid out in the street yells—"Extra, extra—Harvard quarterback kidnapped." The Baron turns a beautiful mauve color, then sickly green. Mechanical-like I goes to the door and buys a paper. Yup, there it is in black and white.

"On the eve of the annual Harvard-Yale fracas in the Yale Bowl, George MacDougall, sensational Crimson quarterback and certain all-American, mysteriously disappeared from his room, college authorities reported early this morning. It is suspected that this is the work of some betting ring. Just then "the Baron" clamps onto my arm and says, "Don't look now, but I see a wolf." Turning slowly I'm confronted with the sight of "Moose" Kline going down the street.

"Everything is clear," chortles "the Baron," in ecstacy. "Moose" Kline is "Dutch" Boyle's trigger-man. And what could those two be doing in Cambridge, I ask you?" All the while he's talking we're both of us walking down the street after "Moose."

"Maybe they're down here to take a course in Bible Literature," quips I in my humoristic style.

"Ah, my jokester, you know full well that where the vultures gather there is a corpse. So now what we proceed to do is follow 'Moose' and rescue our poor MacDougall."

By this time we have reached a dead end street. "Moose" turns the corner and goes into a large apartment house. "Fine," says that accomplished companion of mine, "the setting is perfect. You will notice that fire escape at the back and that apartment with the curtains drawn. Well, I will bet you a cookie that in yon den dwell the wolves we seek."

Going up to the door "The Baron" rings the bell and when the landlady appears, says, "Forgive the intrusion, Madame, but I heard you had an apartment to rent?"

"Oh I am sorry, but I rented it just last night to three gentlemen."

"You see," he says triumphant-like, once we are down in the street again.

"What do we do now," says I, impressed.

"Now we call the police," responds he without even batting an eyelash.

"Holy Smokes," I squeek, "what do you want to call the bulls in for?"

"There are occasions, Dude, when even the long arm of the law is useful. This is one of them. If we enlist their aid, Dutch and his henchmen will be overwhelmed. Also there will be no chance of suspicion being diverted to us if we are on the side of the law.

I'll have to hand it to the Baron; he's a smooth worker and knows every angle. So right then and there I let him carry on. While I stay behind and guard the house, he goes off to find a cop. Two hours pass and I'm beginning to get fidgety. Another half hour goes by and I begins to get the creeps. What if just by accident "the Baron" has been arrested? I start to kiss my hard-stolen dough goodbye again when "the Baron" appears with three coppers in tow.

"What did you do, go and dig them out of their burrows?" mutters I in an undertone.

It seems that he and the bulls have got it all worked out. I am to go to the door and knock, meantime "the Baron" and the law are to creep up the fire-escape and get through a window. That's fine, but I don't relish this business of being a decoy. After a little persuasion, however, I heads for the house and pushes the door bell. The lady shows me up to the door of the apartment where I knock. Somebody inside swears softly. I can't say I feel entirely nonchalant. Slowly the door opens and I take a firmer grip on my rod. Somebody says come in, and I do. Three cannons look me right in the eye.

"Why, fellas," says I in a jovial manner while my heart gives a nerve-jerking rendition of the Beer-Barrel Polka, "aren't you glad to see me?"

"Moose" and his pal, "Trigger" closed in on me and frisked me. At that moment a window went crash behind them and the heavenly voice of the Baron was music in my ears.

"Drop those toys, children, or else I shall be forced to splash your viscera all over your spinal column." Those words just about floored Dutch and his mugs.

"The party is over, boys," I said. "Now will you please conduct us to the guest of honor." That was me putting in my two bits. After that it didn't take

If those who have known happiness
Cannot describe it,
Then how can I who have not, even Imagine it?
And yet I know that I can say
Just what it seems like
To me: Here am I in darkness,
And from over there
You are coming near, and bringing
A glowing lantern.

How Green Was My Valley

By RICHARD LLEWELLYN

It may well be that the Celtic Renaissance which was petering out twenty years ago is coming to the fore again. This time not in the Irish boots but in those of the Welsh. Mr. Llewellyn's "How Green Was My Valley," is a book that compels comment to grope for crutches.

Fifty years ago the South Wales valley in which the Morgans laughed and lived was not yet buried by the slipping slag from the coal mines . . . . the mines in which the valley folk earned their bread, and at times their dead. How now, in his sixties, recalls as the youngest of the Morgan boys, the tale of his tender but unyielding father, Gwilym, his astute and fervent mother, Beth, of his many brothers and sisters who were stout sieves toward the rush of the new age with its unions and talk of revolution. Those who would not follow didn't and those who would did; but every family in the valley felt the clamp of steel and ramp of new methods for carrying on old tasks.

Richard Llewellyn races a tang of Welsh humor through the pathos, fume and flame, frays and fortitude and compromise which are a part of his book. Though Huw is looking back with a close-felt warmth as he recalls the bygone days, the people he speaks of are always looking ahead. He remembers his own development, starting from the simple state of merely looking on to the very complex stage of partaking. Llewellyn invites the reader to enjoy every sense with the characters . . . . from feeling the grain of wood to kissing.

The lightness and the throb of the pages came from the everyday toil, home life and much emanates from Huw's love for Bronwen, his eldest brother's wife. The darkness of the pages roll in from the slag that is steadily covering all living growth and driving out all that can be driven from the valley; and from those who need reason with patience instead of force to wrought necessary economic changes, those who will not tighten the belt any longer.

Even to read the book silently is to listen to music. For each sentence has a tilt and the Welsh names, for Mr. Llewellyn has supplied a pronunciation key, are fugues in themselves.

The author is not another Steinbeck or Synge; he is young Richard Llewellyn who has written a novel of towering and unutterable magnitude. The book, rather than setting the world on fire for a definite length of time, will probably glow for many, many years.

How to Read a Book

The Art of Getting a Liberal Education

By MORTIMER J. ADLER

398 pp. New York: Simon and Schuster. $2.50.

"I have tried to write a light book about heavy reading," explains Mr. Adler. "Those who take no pleasure in knowing and understanding should not bother to read it. Those who believe that all their leisure time should be devoted to the effortless pleasures of the movies, the radio, and light romances should not bother to read it.

"I am talking to the rest of us."

The least we can say is that we are thoroughly warned of what is forthcoming, before we even attempt to embark upon this new voyage of discovery and Adler gets right down to business without any further introduction, prologue, or preface.

It is indeed a "light book about heavy reading." The style flows easily, lucidly, so transparently that we fail to notice it. Mr. Adler is talking to us, telling us what he thinks about reading, about education, about how we can get the most out of books. He offers us an uphill, rocky road, and at the same time makes it quite clear that this is the only trail. Anything really worth possessing is worth working for, sweating over. The formula he prescribes is anything but easy. We are convinced of its necessity, without the slightest doubt. Mr. Adler had to learn this lesson for himself, through rather bewildering and discouraging experience. The first point he must and does drum home to us, and which is in itself enough to make us give up and run back to our movies, is simply this: that we don't really know how to read. This is not our fault, as individuals. The educational system is sorely lacking in some provision for teaching us how to read. Reading is not something that is simply learned rudimentally in grammar school, and then forgotten. Reading is as important a subject as History and English and Mathematics; it should be carried through the whole process of education. Knowing how to read is an absolute essential to our education.

Having proved the need of training in reading, he sets forth the rules, warning us that they were not easy. We must read a book three times: analytically, interpretatively, and critically. (By a

You are an American. You love America, don't you? You would be willing to fight for her in case of invasion, wouldn't you? And in times of crisis you would show your loyalty immediately and do something with it? Well, this is a time of crisis. Loyal Americans are an imperative. If you are not one, this article is not directed to you.

In the first place, is it necessary to spend billions to protect ourself from Hitler and invasion? How would Germany go about attacking us anyway? Surely it would be useless for her to attempt such an invasion from the point of view of gain, position, and practicability. Then turn from the need of protection to a supposition.

Let us suppose that Germany does win this war. And assume that in so doing she acquires Norway and Belgium and Holland and Switzerland and Luxembourg and Poland and Czechoslovakia. How will she be able to keep them? Germany would soon find herself with rebellion on every hand. Hitler would lose prestige and Europe would finally break up into something like its pre-war division. Then in actuality Germany loses the war even if she wins it.

Let us turn back to America and look at our position in the light of the above. If invasion is an improbability—nay, an impossibility—there must be something else behind the demand for American armament. The cries for a billion dollars to build up the army; clamors that there are not enough airplane bombers; mumblings that we'll get into the war within the year.

We don't any of us want to get into the war, yet that is exactly what we're working for. And don't you see how stupid that is? Instead of letting Hitler bring doom upon his own head, we plan to help him to glory by fighting against him. Hitler cannot subjugate half of Europe for long. Let him try. Let him dig his own grave. It is only then that the Germans will see wherein Hitler is wrong. Not by opposing him do we show the Germans this. That only makes Hitler more of a hero. For a more ultimate and lasting good it is essential that we stay out of this war even if Hitler wins it—which he in actuality cannot do.

So let us make sure that Hitler will not win. Take this billion dollars, gotten from no-one-knows-where, and build up America. You future doctors, demand your share for the cure of cancer, pneumonia, disease. You future teachers of American government, show your students what America is and needs. You teachers of music, art, literature, give to children an appreciation of the nobility and beauty of life. To every one of us is born the responsibility of progress—not destruction.

American, what are you doing for your country?

pierce. There, that was the answer. That was the solution.

When Pete's roommate came in, happy, Pete was snoring, and it was a comparatively quiet rest, disturbed only once or twice by the fleeting memory of a picture that aroused in him the deepest of emotions, a picture which he would tear up in the morning. That thought startled him into wakefulness, and he sat up to reason out the neat, logical little argument that it would be better to leave it where it was, as an eternal reminder of how a man can get fooled.

Pete was in the groove, and the way he took those runs in the morning was a sight to remember. Skiing for the school was one thing that put all other matters into a realm of oblivion. At the final jump, when he felt like a diver and a flier, all at once, had put them in the lead, and they stayed there. It helped to put up the impervious shell. Masculinity stuck out on him the way precious stuff bulges out of a little boy's pockets.

Then the crowd went cross country. Pete kept modestly behind, dodging off into some side trail that looked promising, and coming into the group a little further on. It was then they came to the hill with the running brook that Pete first noticed the girl who was standing next to him. She was laughing. "I'll bet I fall in." It was a musical voice, and they were nice gray eyes that smiled at you frankly. Pete staggered mentally. This was the same one that he'd seen last night, but this way, she was just like her picture. "I'll fish you out when I come up for trout," he promised with an engaging grin, and poled off, feeling the cracks of his armour deepen. And when she bent forward, digging her poles in to shove off, he was watching.

Perhaps that's why he was there, clearing the stream, flying the last two yards, before the rest had realized what had happened. Lola, that was her name, he thought, as he untangled her. Then she sat up and laughed. No, she'd just sit here for a minute, thank you, it rather left one breathless.

Ruefully her gray eyes travelled over the slope down which she'd come, to such a spectacular finish. "I didn't think that I'd ever get to the bottom, and then, to think that I had to spill when everything was over."

"You straightened up too quickly that's all," he said soothingly. "Are you sure you're all right?" The whiteness was beginning to fade before the pink glow that came creeping back under her skin. And to prove that she was, began to maneuver the skiis, shakily, to rise. "I don't believe in this ordinarily, but here, I'll give you a hand." And with a strong, gentle arm around her, Pete helped the girl to her feet. For a minute she rested on her poles, and then they slogged along in silence. It was a companionable silence, like talking to her in his room, she looking at him from the frame, quiet and understanding.

The next time he saw her, she was changed back into the Lola of the icy green eyes. To his utter amazement, when they were formally introduced, she never so much as flickered an eyelash, never mentioned yesterday, and until she did, he would not, he resolved. Last night when he considered the picture, he had told himself that that wasn't an abstract ideal, but a beautiful reality. Now all of it was smashed into a thousand pieces. This was utter folly, a grand farce. He trembled with anger. He would tear up that lying deceitful picture into a million shreds. But when the image of it came between him and the bright shiny day, he argued that he would keep it and be constantly reminded of the fickleness of women. "By the way, I have a message for you," Lola was saying brightly. My sister was very worried that she hadn't properly thanked you for your kindness yesterday, and as she's leaving on the noon train, she thought she probably wouldn't see you, and I was given strictest instructions to say thanks and hello."

Pete looked like a surprised fish, with his mouth open and his eyes popping. He stuttered. The mighty man among men had deserted his citadel of bachelordom. "Y—you mean th—that that girl is your sister?" Lola laughed at him again. "Twins, in fact." Then the full implication of that began to impress itself on Pete. Still fifteen minutes to remedy what was almost the most fatal mistake of a lifetime. It would only take fourteen and a half if he used Rusty's jallopy that stood outside the house.

With one bound he cleared the fence, another leap and he was in the seat, with his foot on the accelerator; Hannibal leaped ahead and jalopied down the street. The conductor was yelling "ALL ABOARD" when Pete turned the corner on the one good wheel, and before the echo of those words died, he was racing along the station, looking for a girl with gray eyes and a stubborn chin. She was stepping up onto the platform when he caught her down. "You can't go yet. I've got to talk to you. Everything got mixed up." There was a light in his eyes, that was the unmistakable gleam of love, but she murmured determinedly, "Really, I'm not interested; I'm off men for li—." But she never finished it, not ever, because right then Pete kissed her, and afterwards, there was no necessity for finishing it. She was on again, and for life, without a doubt.

"book" it should be explained that he is speaking here of the "great books," those which convey knowledge.) Only when we have read a book thoroughly all of these three ways, and only then, do we have a right to pass judgment on it. It should make us rather afraid to speak too enthusiastically or too detrimentally of any book which we have just finished reading; it should pound home to us the fact that we are slightly deficient in our educational training. It should make us rise up, if we have any leaning toward the light, and take battle, regardless of how bloody the consequences may be. We certainly can't lose anything by it. It is humanly impossible for us to grow less intelligent from the exercise of our higher faculties.

The book is a challenge; a challenge of endeavor and expansion.
